"Play to commence at 10 a.m., competitors to sign for the correctness of each other's scores. Partners to be drawn for. Entries will be received up to Sept. 10, 1915, by Messrs. A. D. Dunbar, T. G. Ferguson and S. T. Harris Smith."

The following players have signified their intention of taking part: Messrs. Dunbar, Ferguson, Lewis, Babb, Brigstocke, Schultz, Struthers, Harris Smith, and Ditlevesen.

Hurricane in Cordoba.

This city was visited on Saturday night by one of the most violent wind storms ever experienced here. At 7.35 p.m. the storm started, and the fire department was called out to extinguish several small fires. A stove of the 4th Engineers was blown over on to a galpon containing fodder which took fire; but the members of the battalion put out the flames by forming a hand bucket brigade. The tent of the Jockey Club circus was torn in half and also caught fire in several places, the performers extinguishing the fire before it obtained a hold. The animals became frightened and strained at the bars of their cages which were strong enough to withstand the pressure. An almacén at Barrio Inglés called the "Porto Rico," situated at the road to Jesús Maria, in front of the Central Cordoba crossing, caught on fire; but was put out before any serious damage occurred. The property of Señor N. Posadas on Calle San Martín between Libertad and Rinsón was the scene of a small blaze which was put out before the arrival of the Fire Department. An extensive camp fire was started at San Teodoro, department of Rio Primero, which damaged the crops and caused the death of one man from burns, while three more victims are confined at the San Roque Hospital all suffering from severe burns. In the Department of Santa Maria near the estancia of Sr. Escolástico R. Mayorga still another fire took place, a number of buildings and property being burned to the ground and several people badly injured from burns. The estancias of Pedro Vivas and Pazarro were also sufferers from fire, and a serious amount of damage being done to the buildings and crops.

BRITAIN'S NEW OFFICERS

Commissions Gained in 4 Months

Former B.A. Schoolmaster's Message to the "Herald"

"I hope that any young men of British birth now residing in the Argentine Republic will now make up their minds at once to sail for England . . . they should be 2nd lieutenants in less than four months."

This striking passage occurs in an entertaining letter addressed to THE HERALD by Mr. J. Robinson, founder and for some time head master of the English Higher Grade School, Villa Urquiza, F.C.C.A. Mr. Robinson is now a Second Lieutenant in the 7th Batt. Northumberland Fusiliers, better known as the "Fighting Fifth."

With his letter—the remainder of which appears below—Mr. Robinson encloses a photograph of a number of volunteers from Argentina who were qualifying for commissions. The photograph was taken on July 9—Argentina's Independence Day—and a copy has been sent to THE HERALD at the request of the men whom it portrays. It is reproduced on this page.

"I herewith enclose photo of a group of Cadets serving in the Inns of Court Officers' Training Corps, who have come over from the Argentine Republic to assist the Homeland and the British Empire in the endeavour to beat down the formidable enemies who aspire to overrun and conquer Central Europe. Accompanying this photo you will find an account of the Inspection of this Corps by Field-Marshal Sir Evelyn Wood, V.C., on Friday, June 25th, when 1050 Infantry Cadets and 150 Cavalry Cadets marched past the inspecting officer in review order—a brilliant sight no doubt for those who had the pleasure of seeing the manoeuvres executed so smartly, but a trying time for the Cadets, carrying their rifles at the slope with fixed bayonets for about an hour, only relieved by the "Present" and "Order" at specified intervals.

The Cadets have drifted in from every corner of the globe, and are with few exceptions, University and Public School men. The remainder are men who have had a college education—technical or general, according to the professions they belong to—Barristers, Solicitors, Doctors, Clergymen, Schoolmasters, Engineers, Estate Agents, Architects and Surveyors, Commercial Men, Agricultural Experts, Ranchers, Journalists, Actors, Civil Service men, etc., are to be found in the ranks intermingled with the leisured man of means who never did a stroke of work in his life before. Men who have left their business or profession securing them from £2000 to £5000 a year, together with the silver spoon man with his income of £10,000 a year hobnob with the University Undergraduate (who has come down to join the colours and received an occasional £5 from "Mama") and the sugar, rubber or tea planter from somewhere in the tropics, together with the rancher who brings a breeze of the prairie with him, and the journalist, whose sparkling conversation beguiles the tedium of a long route march, or the actor who cracks his joke or starts up a rattling music-hall rag-time which helps the weary budding officer with his sore feet and 45lbs. pack, rifle and equipment, weighing him to the earth, to buck up, and forget his troubles. It is a remarkable thing but yet perhaps to be expected among such a body of men that during the four months I spent with the corps, I have never heard of the slightest resemblance to a quarrel or any attempt to be "snobbish." "Never grouse" is the motto of the "Devil's Own," and the good fellowship to be found among officers, N.C.O.'s and men helps to make the severe training less irksome. The new Cadet on being sent down, feels like the proverbial fish out of water for about a week, but his section commander takes him by the hand and makes him as happy as possible, tells him who to specially respect, and fear, and especially the Battalion Sergeant-Major Burns, the Adjutant Captain Ironmonger, who put the fear of death into all from the private to the Lieutenant. These men are past-masters in the art of gentlemanly cursing and cutting sarcasm, and seem to find out the weak spots in our armour of make-believe, and makes us all damt uncomfortable. A day's programme of work with this Corps is a revelation to the new recruit, and he finds himself groaning under orders from 6 a.m. until 12 p.m. at night. No shirking or shamming is allowed, and the officers set the men a fine example in cheerful obedience and endurance. Besides the usual squad, platoon, company, and who perhaps are used to public speaking, there are few cases of actual "funk," but many cases of what is termed "packing." There are heaps of funny incidents, and we bring as much humour into our work as is consistent with strict discipline. The whole idea is to make the Cadets efficient officers, and the intricate subjects of provisions, billeting, mess accounts and pay accounts are fully dealt with by experts. In peace times the training we receive now would be extended over three years instead of 3 to 6 months. All officers are not brilliant or even efficient, but very few "Crate eggs" leave this Corps, as they are compelled to pass their exams, and satisfy the authorities as to the extent and accuracy of their knowledge. Every day applications come in from the hundreds of battalions in training all over the country for officers, and on an average 10 of our Cadets are commissioned per day. It is hard to lose old pals who have worked side by side with you for months, as you will probably never see them again. Directly the Cadets receive the War Office Notification of acceptance and their names appear in the Gazette, as Commissioned Officers, there are congratulations all round for the lucky one, and he joyfully throws down his pack, rifle and uniform of the "Tommy" and two days later you will meet him in the Strand or Piccadilly in the full glory of an officer's uniform, and returning the salutes of the soldiers he meets with a supercilious air, as if he had done nothing else all his life.

With regard to the Argentinos serving in the British Army, I believe some 5000 have left your shores to enlist. The group of 23 men figuring on this photograph will all become officers in the course of the next two or three months should they

FLAGS FOR PLEASURE CRAFT

H.B.M. CONSUL GENERAL AND THE NEW REGULATIONS

The British members of the various local sailing clubs are endeavouring to comply with the Argentine regulations that are about to come into force regarding the flying of national colours.

There are no British regulations in force requiring the registration of craft under 15 tons burden. On the other hand, although the use of the British colours is understood to apply to vessels of British register only, authorities agree that, in practice, no unregistered British owned ship of less than 15 tons would be prevented from hoisting, at all times, a plain red ensign.

Notice is given that British owners of pleasure craft of under 15 tons should obtain from H.B.M. Consul-General a certificate of nationality and permit to fly the Red Ensign. Should there be any yachts of over 15 tons, provisional British registration may be effected at the Consulate-General in accordance with the regulations in force in the United Kingdom.

It must of course be understood that no person, other than a British subject, may own a share in a yacht flying the British flag.

in the corps five weeks when I was transferred to another platoon, and placed under the command of a Lance Corporal Bideleux, who proceeded to enter details with regard to me on his army note book, and afterwards told me my duties and informed me that I should be his mess orderly and wait upon him at meals. One or two Spanish expressions mutually dropped gave me a suspicion as to Bideleux's identity, and he was surprised to find that Private Robinson was the late Principal and founder of the English Higher Grade School, Villa Urquiza, F.C.C.A. and that his brother was one of my pupils for about two years. Farrant is from the architects dept. of F.C.C.A.; Baynes Smith and Baillie are from the F.C.O.; Powell and Jones are from the F.C.S., also A. G. Hall. Lance Corporal Clarke is from Estancia La Germania. Troughton, from the London and Brazilian Bank, is a member of the Belgrano Cricket Club and past captain of the Belgrano Hockey Club.

This photo was taken on 9 de Julio and it was agreed upon that a copy should be sent to THE HERALD, together with a description of the work of the I.C.O.T.C. I have endeavoured to give some idea of the importance of this Training School for Officers, and hope that any young men of British birth now resident in the Argentine Republic will make up their minds at once to sail for England and make their way to the Inns of Court Officers Training Corps headquarters at Stone Buildings, Lincoln's Inn Fields, Temple Gardens, and see the recruiting officers, who, if satisfied that their education has been well cared for, they will pass them on to the C.O., who will interview them, and if satisfied will pass them on to the medical officer, who will in turn pass them to be sworn in as a member of the I.C.O.T.C. on payment of one guinea subscription, and by hard work and a fair amount of study they should be 2nd Lieutenants in less than four months. I myself joined on April 14, three days after landing from the Argentine, and was gazetted on July 27th.

Well hoping that the BUENOS AIRES HERALD is still making its influence felt and continuing its straightforward policy with regard to the war, I greet you in the name of the Buenos Aires members of the I.C.O.T.C., who all hope to meet again in sunny Argentina.

Yours very sincerely,
(2nd Lt.) J. ROBINSON,
7th Northumberland Fusiliers,
Alnwick, Northumberland.

TAKEN ON NUEVE DE JULIO, 1915.

Group of Cadets who are serving in the Military School for Officers: ("Devils' Own") Inns of Court Officers Training School, Berkhamstead, Herts, England.

Top Row: J. Robinson, l.cpl., (late Principal and Founder of the English Higher Grade School, Villa Urquiza, F.C.C.A.); D. Mello; Coppeck; Pye; Wilson; Baillie, l.cpl.; Clarke; Powell; MacCausland.

Middle Row: Plant; MacRae; Brockwell; Jacobs, Sergt.; Bideleux, Sergt. Hall; Tarrant; Smythies.

Bottom Row: Troughton; Ryder; Jones; Sowinki; Baynes-Smith; Bennett.

battalion drill, the men are instructed in all kinds of field operations by night and by day. Trench digging and trench warfare are exhaustively dealt with in the most up-to-date manner, aided by "Notes from the Front," and musketry receives due attention. The bayonet is considered of little importance, and although we receive instruction in bayonet fighting, our Colonel places little importance on this class of warfare. The Cadets are expected to study and attend lectures daily in every branch of military work, and must take copious notes and commit them to memory. A Cadet may be called upon at any moment to give a lecture on any subject which has been previously dealt with, and he must go ahead and say something even if he does talk rot. With such a body of educated men, satisfy the authorities and successfully pass through the Instruction Class. Some of these men are well known to the Buenos Aires community. Sergeant Jacobs is a member of the Quilmes family of that name and an efficient N.C.O. Sergeant Bideleux is a son of Mr. F. E. Bideleux, of Vicente Lopez, and was in the employ of Messrs. Herriot, Commission Agents. Sergeant Bideleux is one of the best Non Commissioned Officers in the I.C.O.T.C. and has risen rapidly owing to his exceptional abilities and the ease with which he handles men. He could have been commissioned several weeks ago, but he has been asked to remain with the corps and will afterwards be probably made a 1st Lieutenant to make up for loss of time. My meeting with Bideleux was rather strange. I had been

Mainly for Women

Conducted by "Egeria"

PICNICS

Some people are born to make of life a picnic: and others have picnics thrust upon them. The latter people have never had a real picnic I am sure! A lady with whom I once spent a few days in the country, said to me "I do hope you don't expect any picnics, I hate them!" Of course I declared I did not expect any such hateful things; because I was quite sure, a picnic under the auspices of that lady would be a hateful experience.

Another lady once defined a picnic as a thing which spoils good food and good tempers. She said "you break your back sitting tailor-wise or otherwise on the grass, which is full of ants and other creepy things which get into your food. You get all messy when you try to eat, and you get smoky tea and pretend to enjoy it, because you have to please the promoters of a diversion only suitable for Sunday Schools or nurse-maids."

People who talk like the above have, I feel sure, left youth far behind them, even the youth of old age, which is over the forty boundary fence, I believe. That these people are many must be true, for the word "picnic" is beginning to acquire a new meaning through the attitude adopted by them. When anything disagreeable upsets the usual tenor of their way, they exclaim, "what a picnic!" Inferring, I imagine, that everything was topsy-turvy like a picnic. A picnic is meant to be more or less topsy-turvy all the same, for it is a divergence from the general routine of life.

Lately I have met people who, unlike those mentioned, were born to make life a happy picnic and to make others happy too. They know the joys of the true picnic, and see to it that others shall—if they do not know them—be initiated into their freemasonry. There have been no creepy intruders, for the season forbids such; no broken backs, for the spots chosen have been ideal places whereon to make comfortable seats, coach and carriage cushions and rugs lending their aids to ease; and only "messy" people need make themselves messy at a real and well-regulated picnic. And the amount of comestibles devoured would probably mean the death of some of those dyspeptic haters of picnics; and the "billy" tea has been a drink of fragrance, and a joy for many moments. The last picnic I shared in was one promoted by a lady who knows the picnic alphabet from A. to Z. Most of the picnickers were juveniles, certainly; but the few "grown-ups" who were admitted to the joys of the afternoon pastime forgot the years that had accumulated; they rolled from them as they wended their way through the most wonderful "Monte," which was a maze in which avenues had been cut; and the leafy "darknesses" of which added to the enchantment. The young green on the wild bushes was threaded with gossamer webs, the weavers of which, however, did not interfere with the picnic arrangements. Their work but added to the magic of the "paseo." Wild flowers, just preparing to deck the bushes shed their faint perfume on the Spring-laden air; and presently the party emerged on to the sands of the Uruguayan Tigre river which ends its journey at the foot of Martin Chico Estancia into the Plate River; and the miniature delta thus formed makes an ideal picnic spot. And never were such sandpiles made or Castles built, as here; for the sand is just as fine as the finest sugar; and one of the adults slipping back into those garments of years, became cynical enough to suggest that the spot would be a convenient one for an almacén! And then shells were gathered, not very fine specimens of conchology but alluring enough to please the party; and ferns were plucked, until that lady promoter who knew so much about picnics, called the scattered party to tea. And there was no sign of smoke about the fragrant herb brewed in the open, and the English scones and butter, the sponge and chocolate cakes were the lightest and most delicious ever turned from an oven. And there were no "bichos" of any description. Everything was gloriously fresh in the clear sunshine of an early Spring day; and the magical beauty of everything was part of the picnic. The moments passed among the eternal verities, with a cool breeze from the river softening the warm rays of the sun, caused artificiality to go and join the years that had been shed, and one felt that the University of the Universe was the only place in which to graduate; that Nature's art (if I may be permitted the paradox) was the only art worth revelling in. The pathos of life lies indeed, in the fact that we have to grow up; that we have to leave childhood behind us; and doing so, we become oppressed by our own years, and cannot be the free, happy, spontaneous creatures, we were before that accumulation of summers, and winters was heaped upon us. We are afraid to be natural because it is the fashion for grown-ups to be artificial, and, alas, superficial! And Time too is inexorable! His fingers are unfaltering, even if, in some instances, they be light, and the penalty we must pay for the lightness of his touch is, that the character too must suffer the effacement made by the fingers. Better the marks of his fingers than the effacement thereof.

And these thoughts too were part of the picnic for does not the immortal poet tell us that the thoughts of youth are long, long thoughts; and they may stretch from the borrowed childhood, to the discarded youth of old age, whence we return at the end of the picnic! We spend minutes with Nature, we live years with Art, for it is the art of man to take the gifts showered on his kind by the good old Dame, and from the raw material as it were, produce the finished article. The good mother knows her children must work out their own salvation—work is the gospel of man—and she, thereof passes along the ingredients of the bread of life and the spirit thereof, (for we are told man may not live by bread alone) and her children have to mix them and bake them; and live by them, according to their mixing and their baking. But those minutes are the yeasts which leaven the bread, as picnics lighten the burden or heaviness of the passing years.

And so wending our way from Nature's beauty spots, passing again through the mazy "Monte," we come to the "quinta" of Martin Chico Estancia, and admire man's handiwork amongst Nature. Plum and other fruit trees are laden with white or pink blossom, strawberry beds are snowy with the white petals of the flowers, which are the heralds of the red berries to come; and all the Spring vegetables look tempting even to the least Epicurean among us. The flower beds are blooming with violets, hyacinths, and the dear old-fashioned polyanthus, which latter alone would suffice to carry us back to childhood's days and flowerbeds. Wild roses cover the hedges and further afield are big trees of mimosa beginning to make yellow the grass amongst which the midnight fairies must surely hold their revels.

Nature cannot blame her children for their love of gold, for they have learnt the lesson from herself. Golden mimosa in the fields on high, golden dandelions in the fields below,

SOME WOMEN AND MANY THINGS

Last month a deputation from the British colony in Paris laid a wreath on the pedestal of the statue of Joan of Arc in the Rue des Pyramides. Many other wreaths were offered in honour of the maid of Orleans, whose festival it was; but French feeling was especially touched by this offering. The wreath, which took the form of the Lorraine cross in white flowers, and bore the inscription on a blue and white ribbon, "To Jeanne d'Arc, from the members of the British colony" was laid on the pedestal by an English Red Cross man in khaki. The Rev. Stanley Blunt, the Embassy chaplain, read a short discourse in honour of Jeanne d'Arc and the Allied armies. His cry of "Vive le France!" evoked a whole-hearted and mighty-mouthed response from the crowd of "Vive l'Angleterre!"

The deputation from the British colony has sent the following telegram to the President of the Republic: "In the name of the delegates of the British colony of Paris, who have laid a wreath on the monument of Jeanne d'Arc, the heroine of Lorraine, we, the undersigned, request the President of the Republic to deign to accept the expression of their respectful homage and of their complete confidence that Lorraine and her sister province will shortly be French soil once more." Miss Christabel Pankhurst also laid an offering of flowers on the monument in the name of the Social and Political Union of Women of Great Britain. It goes without saying that numerous patriotic societies in Paris brought their tributes, so that the pedestal of the equestrian statue in the Rue des Pyramides was a mass of bloom.

Nat C. Goodwin reproached, at an after-theatre supper in New York, a bachelor for his bachelorhood. "The idea," Goodwin said. "A rich, handsome chap like you a bachelor! Why, don't you know that a bachelor's only half a man?" "No, I don't," was the reply. "Only! half a man, indeed. Give me any logical reason for calling a bachelor only half a man, and I'll go and get married to-morrow." "A bachelor, my dear boy," Goodwin said, "is only half a man because it's impossible, till he weds, for him to lead a double life."

Serbian women are rapidly falling into line with the activities of women in Western Europe, as far as circumstances have permitted them hitherto. The Serbian Sisterhood we learn from "Jus Suffragii," has equipped and organised several well-conducted hospitals, and are proving excellent business managers.

golden lemons thick on the trees in the gardens, and when the lady is growing old, she covers herself with the golden leaves of Autumn, in the hope doubtless, that they will make up for the past beauties of Spring and Summer. And everywhere, everywhere, long avenues of the beloved eucalyptus trees, broken only at the brook where weeping-willow trees wend their necks in the effort to see their reflections in the water, and a few straight poplars just beside, which in contradistinction, disdain the earth, and water and tower towards the sky as if beseeching old Father Sol to favour his more aspiring offspring!

And the same old Father Sol, telling the party that the picnic was over, the "grown-ups" had reluctantly to take up the discarded years, and assume the responsibilities they had brought; and so "adios" being said to the charming lady-in-chief of picnics, also of Martin Chico Estancia, our party returned to "Recreo" with a promise of another such picnic in the near future. Who wouldn't or couldn't enjoy such picnics? Who would not like such a one thrust upon them?

WOMAN'S PLACE IN GERMANY

Do you know that the engineer who planned the newest bridge over the river Neva in Russia is a woman? This is one of the interesting facts that the Countess of Warwick tells us in the "Fortnightly Review."

"I have been trying to trace the German 'frightfulness' to its source," writes the Countess, "not through the medium of books or papers, but in the light of my own knowledge of the country and my past acquaintance with some of its leading men, and I think that the philosophic historian will hasten to declare that the worst and saddest features of war as waged by the Germans are due to the fact that in their country women were kept more in the background than in the country of any other great Power."

"Look around Europe for a moment. Russia is a backward Empire, and the spirit of progress moves over it with slow feet, but Russia is making vast strides, and the plough that will trace deep furrows in the virgin soil of its social life is drawn by man and woman together. All the professions are open to women, even those in which women are not found here. The Russian engineer who planned the newest bridge over the Neva was a woman. Men and women students work side by side on terms of absolute equality, and compete for honours that often fall to the gentler sex. Russian women of the educated classes are more than merely well informed, they are brilliant. Linguists, women of affairs, they have a grip of the actualities of the Empire of which they form a significant part. In spite of autocratic rule and limited freedom, there is such a full life for the Russian woman as her German sister has never known, except in dreams of emancipation."

"Turn to France, and it may be declared emphatically that woman rules. Women are doctors, barristers, and scientists; they are members of the Goncourt Academy; they are the heads of some of the most important business institutions; they give the most exclusive salons their distinction. Public opinion is moulded by them, their influence makes and breaks Cabinets. 'Feminism' is one of the strongest forces in France; quiescent to-day or working in quietness, this force will dominate a France released from war."

"Alone of the great Powers, Germany has elected to forget, or to disregard as a negligible quantity, the opinion of woman, and the reason is not far to seek. For years past the German has forgotten the respect and reverence he owes to his own womenfolk. I do not know the country in Europe where women are treated as they are in Germany. In tens of thousands of German homes the wife and daughters are loved and honoured, but in the rank and file of military circles, even among the men who hold official positions and boast a certain standing, woman has been dethroned; she is regarded as an encumbrance necessary for the production of further generations of supermen who shall subdue the earth."

"This attitude of mind reveals itself in the action that speaks louder than words. The toleration and the contempt to which I refer are everywhere apparent. No good-looking woman is safe in Germany from the ill-bred stares and comments of the men with whom she must travel in train or tram, if women enter a theatre or a restaurant, their own friends and relatives do not rise to receive them; they are liable to be allowed into the road if men walking abreast can occupy the whole of the pavement."

"The country is governed by men for men; and woman, according to the marriage rule, is actually man's servant. The effect of these conditions upon the morals of the country is deplorable. Who can measure the responsibility of those guides and teachers who taught the German to develop along material lines, and to forget that woman is the proper spiritual guide, and that as man loves and reverences her he sees farther and deeper into the heart of things, sees life sanely and sees it whole?"

Land of Lilliput.

Conducted by Egeria

"Recreo," Martin Chico.

My dear Lilliputians,

I told you last week that I might be able to show you by picture what a lovely place this is. I am able to keep my promise for my friend who took many views of so many lovely spots here has sent me some which I think you will like. First, here is the pretty homestead. Don't you think it is an ideal place for staying, for amidst all the pleasures of an outdoors life the 'home' pleasures are not neglected. "Recreo" house is more like a town house than a country one, with all its comforts and conveniences.

Then I am sure you will like to see the different places attached, where so much of the work of the estancia is done. I cannot show the pretty waterfall which is not 15 minutes' walk from the house, because the picture could not be reproduced in the paper. There is an ideal place for bathing if one desired it, and ferns and wild things grow in abundance all around.

I think perhaps the picture showing our compulsory halt in Juan Gonzales and, of course, the bridge at Carmelo will make two nice pictures. And now although I would like to show you another couple of dozen of the various beauty spots, I am forbidden by Mr. Editor, who says, "Enough is as good as a feast!"

I am sure you will be pleased to know that we are having ideal weather for the enjoyment of the country. Only two storms in three weeks! But when they come there is nothing cheap about them. We get hail-stones, thunder, lightning and wind all from the most expensive department the best of their kind, and therefore we speak of the weather as the worst we can get. Afterwards everything is more beautiful than before, as if Nature had had a good cleaning-up day. All the refuse and dirt blown away, and all the plants, and flowers, and grass, and trees, and the dear old earth washed clean and fresh again. This week your story is called "The Prince and the Gypsy."

With love from

EGERIA.

THE PRINCE AND THE GYPSY.

(By Jessie Maclean)

The little Prince threw down his racquet, for it is not amusing to toss balls about all day long, quite by yourself. How he hated the grim castle, with its high stone walls, and close-barred gates. How different from the rose garden, when he used to play with his sisters, was the evil-smelling courtyard, where coarse-tongued men-at-arms lounged and spat, polished their weapons, or groomed their horses. But he was not afraid of the men-at-arms, who mostly treated him with rough good nature, as he was of the Lord Warden. For he could not forget how hard the Lord Warden's grip had been when he tore him from the clasp of his weeping mother, or how, as he flung him up in front of his saddle, he had looked back and laughed to see his mother fall fainting into the arms of her waiting women.

When he heard that laugh, the little Prince stopped crying, and he had never cried since. That was also why he always straightened his back, clenched his fists, and looked the Lord Warden very square in the eyes whenever he happened to glance at him, which was not often, for as a rule the Lord Warden took no more notice of the little Prince than if he had been a stray puppy.

How hot it was in the stone-flagged courtyard, and how cool and beautiful gleamed the waters of the moat, What delicious depths of green shade lurked in the recesses of the great forest. If he could only get out. Near him stood a cart, that had just been emptied of its load of horse fodder for the castle stables. The driver the reins gathered in one hand, was busily engaged in drinking a parting mug of beer. A loose leather cover lay in the bottom of the cart—there was no one watching. Next moment, when the wheels creaked and jolted their heavy way across the drawbridge, the little Prince lay under the leather bumping painfully against the hard boards, half stifled, but entirely exultant. It was not difficult to slip out unnoticed, and once in the green depths of the forest, he forgot, for a time, the dreary monotony, the daily terrors of his captivity. He forgot that he was an unhappy princeling, whose life stood between his crafty uncle and the possession of a throne. He only remembered that he was a boy, and that there were trees to climb, and nuts to gather. The fact that night was coming on, and that he had no home, other than the grim fortress, from which he had escaped, did not trouble him in the least.

Cabaña "Recreo," Martin Chico.

At length his wandering footsteps drew him to a cleared space, on which stood a cottage of comfortable dimensions, with neat thatched roof, and white-washed walls.

Near by was a lad, some five or six years older than himself, busily engaged in hewing down trees; swinging his great axe with such tremendous force, and weight, as might have been expected from a giant rather than a stripling without a hair on his face.

The granary and machine house.

A very queer looking chap he was, too short and broad, with huge hands and feet, a hunched shoulder, and a crooked knee, one eye that looked east, and the other west, a nose that appeared to have been flattened by a blow, and a wide mouth that seemed made for grinning.

While the Prince stood watching, his amazement divided between the fellow's extraordinary looks and the astounding force of the blows that drove his axe through the tough tree trunks, as if they had been nothing harder than cheese. An old woman came rushing out of the cottage, and shrieking with passion, fell upon the lad like a whirlwind; beating him about the body with her clenched fists, pulling out handfuls of his hair, scratching him face with her long crooked nails so viciously, that it seemed to the horrified unlooker, as if, at any minute, she might tear the very eyes out of his head.

"For shame," he cried indignantly, let the lad alone! Then, as the infuriated old wretch only continued her attack with even greater violence, he brought a stout sapling he carried down across her back in a sounding whack.

Instantly the hag loosed her hold of the woodchopper, and flew at the Prince, with all the fierceness of a bird of prey. But, even as her long skinny fingers clutched his golden curls, a couple of burly men-at-arms came running from between the trees, and, each seizing one of her wrists, shook her, till the teeth rattled in her wicked old head.

"Nay, nay, masters," cried the lad she had so maltreated, raising his head, "let her be. 'Tis only the old mistress having her bit of fun with me!" And, to their astonishment, they saw that, although his clothes were torn to ribbons, his hair scattered about, and his face bleeding, he was laughing so that his sides shook.

"She is a wicked old wretch," cried the Prince. "I would like to kill her."

"Nay, nay," replied the other lad, "sure 'tis only her right, since she bought me for a silver sixpence. A sixpence is a rare lot of money, my little master."

"She has no right to treat you like that," said the Prince hotly, "and, so that she won't be able to do it again, I shall buy you for a golden guinea."

"But I won't sell him, you young jackanapes," shrieked the old hag, "and I shall beat him as often as I like. He shall work for me till his heart bursts."

The bridge over "Las Vacas," at Carmelo.

"Best keep a civil tongue in your headmistress," said one of the soldiers, giving her another shake, "for if it came to the Lord Warden's ears that you had raised your hand to the Prince, whom some call the King, it might go ill with you."

"The Prince! The Lord Warden!" cried the woman, her terror-stricken gaze ranging from the soldiers to the boy. Then changing her tone to a cringing whine, she cried, "Give me the money, kind sir, and you can have the lout and welcome. A fine plague you will find him." And, as the Prince threw the coin on the "That I won't tell you," answered the boy stoutly.

"Indeed, my young cockerel," retorted the fellow insolently, "but methinks, while there are thumb-screws in the dungeon, my Lord Warden will soon find a way to make you speak."

"Tush, Fritz!" said the other man impatiently, "it is more like you or I will get a taste of the thumb-screw, or even the gallows, seeing we were given charge of the brat. It will be well for all of us if we can get back

A halt in the river Juan Gonzalez.

"WAKE UP, ENGLAND"

BY ROBERT BRIDGES.

Poet Laureate.

(In The Times).

Thou careless, awake!

Thou peace-maker, fight!
Stand, England, for honour,
And God guard the Right!

Thy mirth lay aside,
Thy cavil and play:
The foe is upon thee,
And grave is the day.

The monarch Ambition
Hath harnessed his slaves;
But the folk of the Ocean
Are free as the waves.

For Peace thou art armed Thy Freedom to hold:
Thy Courage as iron,
Thy Good-faith as gold.

Through Fire, Air, and Water
Thy trial must be:
But they that love life best
Die gladly for thee.

The Love of their mothers
Is strong to command;
The fame of their fathers
Is might to their hand.

Much suffering shall cleanse thee;
But thou through the flood
Shalt win to Salvation,
To Beauty through blood.

Up, careless, awake!

Ye peacemakers, Fight!
England Stands for Honour
God Defend the Right! to the castle before he is missed. As for the lout," he added, "he can go where he pleases."

"I follow my master," replied the woodchopper sturdily, "and he who would say me nay will get a clout on the head with this." And, with a cheerful grin, he brandished a club he had picked up from the ground of such formidable size as made the soldiers, armed though they were fall back aghast.

"I cannot pay you any wages now," said the little Prince, "for that was my last guinea I gave the old woman. But when my mother's soldiers have killed my uncle, and I am King, I will make you rich."

"Nay," replied the older lad, "my King you cannot be, for I am a gipsy, and a gipsy owns no king but Pharaoh. But I will take you for a blood brother, and none shall harm you while I live. Is it a bargain little Prince?" And he stretched out his hand.

"Yes, brother," replied the other, laying his small, delicate fingers in the great paw, and feeling, poor lonely little lad, warmed and comforted by their rough clasp. "Are all gipsies as strong as you?" he asked curiously.

"Nay, brother," replied the other, "but when I was born, my grandmother, who was the wise woman of the tribe, seeing how misshapen I was, her heart was sore grieved for me, for well she knew I should be despised by both man and maid. So, to lift me above the common, by her deep wisdom and strong enchantments, she gave me sight, hearing, and strength beyond any six men. But she could do no more, so she warned me not to try myself further, or my heart would burst, and I should die."

"But, if you are so strong, why did you not kill that wicked old woman when she ill-treated you so?" asked the Prince.

"I was vowed to serve her, brother, replied the gipsy, "for when I was but five years old the tribe sold me to her for sixpence, for my strength was even the more than the biggest man's and they were afraid that when I grew older there would be no holding me, but that I would make myself master. At first they were minded to put me to death, but when I agreed to serve the old mistress faithfully they let me go. Well, I did my best to earn that sixpence, but no matter how hard I worked she never reckoned she had her money's worth, and many is the time I've heard her cry out about her bad bargain."

ST. JOSEPH'S SOCIETY BAZAAR

AT THE KEATING INSTITUTE

The eagerly awaited St. Joseph's Society Bazaar was inaugurated on Sept. 3, at the Keating Institute, when a considerable number of people were present to hear the opening remarks of Dr. Santiago O'Farrell and those of the Archbishop. The bazaar will continue through to-day, and will conclude with a grand concert on Sunday night.

The purpose for which it has been arranged by the Ladies of St. Joseph's Society, is the benefit of the Fahy Institute and its upkeep, and judging by the success achieved on the opening day the organisers should be well pleased with the result of their efforts.

The Institute presented a pretty and animated scene. St. Patrick's Stall, most attractively decorated, filled one corner of the hall and was the centre of much attraction on account of the numberless variety of beautiful things displayed.

Toys of all kinds filled St. Joseph's Stall, and a brisk business commenced there, immediately after the formal opening. The Argentine Stall was another centre of animation, and in fact only the central part of the floor of the Institute, where there were no stalls, shewed a vacant patch, because all present were gathered around the many attractions displayed. Bevy of lovely young ladies dressed in every imaginable kind of pretty frock, floated about disposing of their flowers and bon-bons, their tickets for raffles, and a hundred and one other things which go to make such an undertaking as a bazaar a success.

Downstairs, daintily arranged tea tables were spread and attended to by fairy figures in green and white which made the tea all the more tempting and refreshing. Shortly after three o'clock a hundred little voices burst forth with the National Anthem, and then Dr. Santiago O'Farrell, in a few remarks explained the purposes of the bazaar.

He told with what a worthy object it had been organised and spoke of the great value of the Boys' Orphanage at Capilla, which now contained some 200 little ones, who were dependant on charity and kind works. Dr. O'Farrell spoke of the work of the Ladies of St. Joseph's Society and of the great work of the Passionist Fathers. He thanked those ladies who had so generously come forward to organise and assist at the bazaar, and who were making it a success. He then called upon the Archbishop for his blessing.

Monseigneur Espinosa in a few brief words said that he agreed with all that Dr. O'Farrell had said. He also referred to the great good work that was being done and blessed their efforts in the name of charity.

Accompanied by Dr. O'Farrell and the Passionist Fathers, the Archbishop paid a visit to each stall and spoke some gentle and kind words to the hundred little ones of the Institute.

The band of the Children's Asylum in Calle Mexico, assisted with lively music, and the strenuous business of the bazaar commenced. All the leaders of Irish-Argentine society were present, assisted at the stalls by their daughters and their friends, and the scene was one of immense animation and gaiety.

As the afternoon wore away St. Joseph was steadily divested of all the good things on the stall to which he gave his name, and by the late evening not an article was left. Other stalls too were depleted and the aspect of the Keating Institute at 3 p.m., when it was bright, joyous, and full of beautiful things, was at 11 p.m. almost denuded. But to-day

BRITISH CEMETERY CORPORATION

BUYING-OUT OF GERMAN RIGHTS

(To the Editor).

Sir,—In view of the interest that the information has for the British community, I would feel much obliged if you would publish this letter in your next issue.

After a long and difficult negotiation, a separation of the interests of the British and German communities in the Chacarita has been arranged. The British community is paying the sum of $20,000 to buy out all the rights of the German community in the Chapel and caretaker's house. The Germans retain the right to use the Chapel for three years, and to occupy a portion of the caretaker's house up to the end of the present year.

Since the 1st inst. an Englishman, Mr. Furber, has been put in charge of the Corporation's Section and a decided improvement in the condition of the Cemetery may be expected very shortly. For the present, all grave owners who desire to have the graves specially attended to are requested to arrange with the Committee, applying to Mr. Watson, at No. 536 Calle Cangallo. Those who had arranged to pay extra to the caretaker for this service are advised that the previous caretaker has only the right to charge up to the end of August, and that future payments must be made to the Committee.

Yours etc.,

JAMES BEGG,

Chairman of the Corporation.

Buenos Aires, Sept. 4, 1915.

will see the good work commenced again with similar success.

During last evening Messrs. Juap Paris and Jaime Morell's orchestra considerably assisted the function with dance music.

The ladies in charge of St. Joseph's Stall were Mesdames Edward Morgan, Daniel Morgan, Tormey, Duffey and Kidd, and they were assisted by the four Misses Morgan, and Miss Doyle. All thanks were offered to the helpers who had contributed to the utility of this stall.

Mesdames S. G. O'Farrell, A. P. O'Farrell and Feenery, were the ladies in charge of St. Patrick's Stall, and with them were the Misses Mary O'Farrell, Juanita Hutchinson, Nita and Ruth O'Farrell, Angelica Stanfield, Mary Ballesty and Olive Nelson. St. Patrick's Stall are raffling a Ford motor car. Tickets are four dollars each, and amongst other places as well as the bazaar tickets can be obtained at Messrs. F. R. O'Farrell's, Feeneys, 545 Cangallo, Messrs. Watson Hutton and 645 Corrientes. Mrs. Tormey, Mrs. Ham, Mrs. Gachan, Mrs. Murphy, Mrs. Michael Murray, Mrs. Walsh and Mrs. Eugene Mold, assisted by the Misses Harrington, Murray, Biggs, Maguire, Simpson, Tormey, Byrne and Dillon, made the success of the Argentine Stall.

All the fish in the pond were caught during the afternoon, but a plentiful supply will again be in evidence to-day. The flower and sweet stall was in charge of Mesdames John Macdonald, J. J. Mackay, George Kenny, and the Misses Edith and Lillie Macdonald and Elena and Mary Kenny. Miss MacKay and Miss Flossy Macdonald were responsible for the closing of the fish pond at an early hour owing to their own prodigious energy earlier in the day.

The refreshments downstairs were attended to by Mesdames G. Cavanagh Cunningham, T. P. Kavanagh and Gallagher, and these ladies were helped by the two Misses Chaillon, the two Misses Gallagher, Miss McLean, Miss Wilson, the two Misses Harrington, Miss Pierce, Miss Smart, the two Misses O'Brien, and Miss Alazar.

SHELLED FOR 14 DAYS

"HERALD" READER'S THRILLING EXPERIENCE

THE HERALD continues to receive appreciative letters from its many readers at the front. Another of these communications was received on Sept. 3, from Lieut. G. J. V. Haddock, who writes as follows:—

25th Brigade Ammunition Column.

R. F. A.

First Division

B. E. Force.

Somewhere in France.

August 6th. 1915.

The Editor

BUENOS AIRES HERALD,

Dear Sir,

Yesterday I received a BUENOS AIRES HERALD out here, sent by some kind friend or relation and it was welcome to see all the Argentine news. I came over from the Argentine, at least from up country in Chubut in February and received a commission in the Royal Artillery. I came over to France a month ago and after a few days stay at the Base was sent up to the firing line. I was with a Battery for a fortnight and we had it pretty hot, the Huns shelling our position each day. From our observation station we had a splendid view of the Huns' lines and trenches. They put eight shells "coal boxes" round where I was observing from but did no damage. I have come across several Argentine fellows up to now, and in this branch of the Service there are a good few. I am back some three miles from the firing line now, with the Column, and this place has been shelled periodically.

Best wishes for the success of your paper.

I remain

Yours truly

G. J. V. HADDOCK.

(The copy of the paper referred to by Lieut. Haddock is being sent to him at the request of his uncle, Mr. Fred. C. Haddock, of Camerones, under the conditions mentioned in our coupon issued some time ago to those desirous of sending copies of the paper to friends or relatives at the Front. It was our original intention to have the name of the sender of the paper printed on the wrapper, but for some extraordinary reason the postal authorities would not permit this information to be given on the wrappers.—Ed. "B.A.H.")

VICTORIA SAILORS' HOME

SATURDAY NIGHT'S CONCERT.

Arranged by Miss Vera Shaw, the concert which was given at the Sailors' Home last evening, was an immense success. Encore followed encore, from a full hall, and the appreciation of those present was expressed in this manner.

Miss Shaw herself was untiring in her effectual efforts to please, her songs, violin playing and piano playing was loudly encored. Miss Beryl Lovejoy, in both parts of the programme was recalled for singing, and Miss Lillian Gamble's reception was immense. Three times in the second half of the programme she was recalled and obliged on each occasion. Other artists were Mr. Lynn Hazelton with his songs, Mr. J. W. Adderley with recitations. Mr. Stanley Parker with more songs and Mr. P. Scott and "Jack" were exceedingly comic. Each one of these artists had to appear again and again, which testifies to their excellence, and the success of Miss Vera Shaw's arrangements.

THE IRISH SOCIETY

NEW CLUB ROOMS.

The Irish Society of Argentina have moved to more central premises at 425 Cangallo, (The Cabin). Members are requested to note the new address.

OUR ILLUSTRATIONS

The war is responsible for the return to medieval military conditions, and for the extraordinary appearance of men equipped for trench fighting as shown in our first picture this week. Hand grenades and catapults have been spoken of before. Here we have men provided with respirators, steel helmets and breastplates, liberally hung about with bombs and grenades, and using short heavy cutting swords for hand-to-hand fighting. Church service at the Dardanelles is nearly always conducted under fire. On battleships like the mighty Queen Elizabeth it takes place, as shown, beneath the shadow of her great guns. The Allies on Gallipoli peninsula may have regretted that the Turkish fortresses were not utterly destroyed in the bombardment by the fleet, but there are compensations. One is that the fortresses make useful prisons for the Turks taken in battle. The picture of Warsaw shows the Alexandrovsk Bridge which connects the capital city of Russian Poland (now in German hands) with the fashionable suburb of Praga. General Botha's task in conquering German South West Africa was no light one, and the appreciation of this fact increases when we realise the nature of the country over which his men made such splendid marches. The Kalahari Desert is practically waterless, and an idea of its barren nature may be gained from the picture, which shows some of the German military posts. A handsome gift to the heroic Belgian Army was made recently by the Belgian workers resident in England, who raised the funds to purchase a fleet of motor ambulances, and presented them to their Queen. "V" Beach, on the peninsula of Gallipoli, was the scene of the most terrible of the landings of the British troops. It was secured only after a ghastly sacrifice of brave lives. The picture showing the British in possession, with all their equipment landed, was taken from the bows of the transport River Clyde, which was deliberately run ashore to assist the success of the difficult operation.

GERMAN TURKISH CONSUL GENERAL

PURSUES EMIR EMIN AIRSLAN IN SUPREME COURT.

Señor Rodolfo Bobrik, who is the German Consul General, is still bent on being a Providence and guide to the Turkish community in the city who do—not want him, his works nor his ways nor anything that is his.

On Sept. 4 Herr Bobrik applied to the Supreme Court, stating that the Government of Turkey had placed him in charge of the Ottoman Consulate General in Argentina, formerly under the management of Emir Emin Arslan.

In order that he may discharge his duty, and his official German conscience, he requires that the ex-Consul General shall hand over to him all the seals, ledgers, dictionaries, guides, timetables, pamphlets, magazines, books, note paper, blotting paper, nibs, pen holders, pencils, documents, archives, and papers of any and every description whatsoever formerly in his care, or delivered unto him for his use and behoof for purposes connected with the Consulate General of the Turkish Empire on pain of having the same and aforesaid articles violently and by force taken away and removed, from his custody and possession. Emir Arslan politely says, he will not. According to Art 100 of the Argentine Constitution, the Supreme Court is authorised to exercise jurisdiction in all cases concerning Ambassadors, representative Ministers and Foreign Consuls, and the conclusion of the affair will be watched with interest in the fortunes of the illustrious Bobrik and with sympathy towards the Emir Emir Arslan.

WHAT MODERN WARFARE MEANS. BRITISH SOLDIERS EQUIPPED FOR TRENCH FIGHTING.

CHURCH SERVICE ON THE "QUEEN ELIZABETH," UNDER HER GREAT GUNS.

TURKISH PRISONERS AT THE BATTERED FORTRESS OF SEDDUL-BAHR.

A VIEW OF WARSAW NOW IN GERMAN HANDS.

GERMAN SOUTH AFRICA. THE FRINGE OF THE KALAHARI DESERT WITH ENEMY FORTS.

MOTOR AMBULANCES PRESENTED BY BELGIANS IN ENGLAND TO THEIR QUEEN.

THE SCENE ON "V" BEACH, THE MOST TERRIBLE OF THE LANDING PLACES ON GALLIPOLI.

THE SHADIER SIDE

HUN FINANCE AND THE WAR

GERMAN BANKS IN S. AMERICA

(Exclusive to the HERALD.)

One of the most interesting economic phases of the great conflict deals with the maintenance of the mechanism of credit and exchange both in the area of operations and in the several belligerent countries. It is difficult to obtain accurate data as to Germany's real financial position, but the same may be said of practically all the belligerents in so far as values are concerned. Old standards of value have been completely overturned, and in popular parlance no one can say to-day what he is worth. What one does know is that Germany has found that her high handed methods in the occupied zones are not conducive to further her immediate interests, and there is very conclusive evidence to prove that the commercial element in that country has at last been able to beat down the absurdities of the military and political caste. Bank robbery, such as characterised the invasion of Belgium, is no longer practised, and efforts are even being made to restore public confidence and re-establish trade.

The French Banks in Lille.

Particularly is this noticeable in the great coal and iron district that has its headquarters in the city of Lille. There the leading bank was the Crédit Lyonnais, and this bank, together with the Comptoir National d'Escompte de Paris, the Crédit Nord, and other smaller establishments, are all working. Their business, as far as can be gathered from neutral sources, is a purely local one, their staffs are naturally very much reduced, being largely composed of women, but the outstanding fact is that they are running, and thus enabling the ordinary everyday routine of buying and selling and manufacturing to be carried on with a little less inconvenience than was the case in the early days of the war. In each bank is an official of the German Kommandantur, who prevents any operations with the rest of France or with countries now at war with Germany. Gold there is none, payments being in paper. The gold was practically all removed before the war arrived, but it is understood that this has had small influence on local transactions, whilst the safe deposits have not been interfered with, private individuals being free to come and go to them at their will.

Banking in Germany.

Here the multiplication of paper credit goes on apace. The latest bank to be founded is the Deutsche-Russische Kriegskreditbank, designed to finance merchants who have debts due to them in Russia. Its seat is in the cutlery town of Remscheid, and however much Germany may try to disguise the fact it is but an amplification of the system of War Loan currency that is flooding the whole of Germany with inconvertible paper. Then the Rhenische Bank, with a capital of 28,000,000 marks, disappears from the list being taken over by the Disconto Gesellschaft. Its figures—taken from German sources—are interesting. It carried some 10,000,000 marks in bills in portfolio, was creditor with other banking firms for 1,000,000, had 60,000,000 outstanding debts to collect, 11,000,000 deposits, and owed to its customers some 7,000,000. These figures are given by Dr. Haas to an American financial paper, and to the ordinary mind convey the impression that in normal times the Rhenische Bank would not be taken over by anyone, but would be declared bankrupt. Indeed Dr. Haas almost hints as much when he states that "the bank had engaged in real estate transactions which, on account of the unfavourable situation of this market already before the war, turned out not very satisfactory." This mild criticism is very illuminative and suggests that many of the other German amalgamations have also been due to business being "not very satisfactory," a fore-runner, one trusts, of the eventual report on Germany's financial arrangements when the final balance is struck.

Bank fur Chile und Deutschland.

Coming nearer home one finds that the above bank have decided to pass their dividend, putting profits to reserve, which even then does not reach any very great sum, being 103,410 marks against 52,174 for last year. It declares that it has maintained its deposits at their customary level—no figures are given—puts down the bad results of the year's trade to the stoppage of saltpetre exports, and roundly declares that the "largest difficulties," again Dr. Haas is our authority, "were caused by what the report calls the 'down-break' of the London money market." Downbreak of the London money market is particularly rich under the circumstances.

German Banks Abroad.

In conclusion one arrives at the conviction that commercial Germany is fully persuaded that she is fighting a losing battle, and that the best course for her to pursue is to try and get as much salvage as possible from the wreck. Hence the evident desire to de-centralize German finance; to leave each little nucleus of trade intact in order that when the war is over it may be able to foment new business and proudly point to the fact that German interests in Argentina, in Chile, in Brazil, in any country indeed that was not under the German flag before the war began, have weathered the storm and are stronger than they were before. This is the policy that has been initiated locally, and with some measure of success among the less-instructed Argentines. The great drop in bank deposits that marked the two German institutions here during the first few months of war has practically ceased. The deposits of the Banco Aleman and the Banco Germanico are also "normal." They have consolidated the interests of the German and Austrian trading community here, and, by means that are not likely to become public property for many months yet, if indeed they ever become public at all, they have welded together a trading community of German-Argentines, all engaged in marking time until connection with Germany can be re-established. It is not a profitable business; it can scarcely be a pleasant business. But there is no denying that it is effective in holding the door open for future German operations. The chameleon-like nature of the German banker and trader, his complete disregard for the trifling impediments to unfettered action known as "truth," "honesty," and "good-faith," his parasitic adaptability which enables him to assume any nationality that suits his immediate needs, is not confined to the individual; it extends equally to the institutions that the individual has created. Thus the German banks abroad are no longer German banks; their fortunes are at one with the countries wherein they work. Circumstances over which they had no control prevented them from helping their country of origin openly, but it must be admitted that they have done all that was possible underhand, in many ways entirely unconnected with ordinary banking. The recent exposé of the Banco Aleman in Perú, whence authentic "letters from Berlin" were distributed weekly to the Peruvian press, is but one instance of the ingenious

UNITED GERMAN EFFORTS

HOLDING ARGENTINE TRADE

PRESENT LOSS FOR FUTURE PROFIT

(Exclusive to THE HERALD.)

Between nine and ten at night residents in the urban district are frequently disturbed by newsboys cursed with leather lungs of unusual potency, bawling forth notices of German triumphs or other matter calculated to make any pro-Ally pass a very uncomfortable night. A couple of nights ago the southern parts of the town were thus disturbed by cries of "Great German Triumph; England and France ask United States to seek peace with Germany."

Utterly false though the statement might be, it was nevertheless not pleasant hearing. A policeman, blessed with commonsense, stopped the shouter and told him to moderate his voice. Then the whole story came out. The loafer, for he was nothing better, fearing a night in the Comisaria, said that he had been told to cry the news, which needless to say, was not in the few papers he held under his arm. A trifling example of the exasperating nature of Teutonic annoyance but very instructive, in view of the evident recrudescence of Herr Dernburg's policy of "using the Press to the fullest extent."

In this connection it is interesting to note that the leading Teuto-Spanish paper, La Unión, is now seconded by a second periodical the Gazeta de España. These are openly in the field for Germany, but they only represent a tithe of German activity.

THE COMMERCIAL PROPAGANDA

German import houses are standing the strain remarkably well, thanks to large stocks in hand and a comparatively small demand on the part of buyers. Recently however there has been evidence of shortage in one or two departments, rubber and metal goods of American precedence being supplied in lieu of the articles formerly "Made in Germany." And if anyone is interested enough to study the manifests of boats coming hither with general cargo from the States he will find that the bulk of the stuff is shipped either "to order" or to names that appear of Teutonic origin. Now one cannot blame the Americans. It is not their business to refrain from supplying German firms in Argentina, merely on account of the war. But it is the business of the British trader to follow this movement very closely, even although he cannot check it. For as far as one can see the German import firms here are now banded together for two main ends. They have to all intents and purposes pooled their stocks, thereby helping each other. Secondly, they have determined to hold their trade connections even by trading at a loss, and are doing so by buying in neutral markets at current rates, whilst Teutonic campaign that has been carried on all the world over. It now remains to be seen whether, when war is over and trade returns to its normal lines, they will be able to carry popular confidence with them in the neutral lands as they did before. It is more than probable that when the final balance of Germany's period of "frenzied finance" is struck, and her assets duly weighed in the balance, the phrase "German Bank" will have much the same significance in commercial circles as that equally euphonious and most expressive trade nomenclature, "German silver."

selling here on terms that are as good as their French and British competitors, and at times a trifle better.

GERMAN "BUSINESS AS USUAL."

Go into any of the large German houses and ask for quotations for fencing wire. Prices are higher than they were eighteen months ago, but there is not the suggestion of any shortage of supplies being likely to interfere with the business. And even the increased quotation does not compare unfavourably with that of a British house. True, new clients are not run after, but careful enquiry appears to show that old customers of the leading German firms can re-stock from them without difficulty.

UNLIMITED CREDIT.

Where the greatest surprise comes in is in the question of credit. As far as one can see new orders are being filled on a basis of 20 to 30 per cent cash down and unlimited credit for the balance. One thing is very evident namely that however hard up the poorer section of the German community may be to-day and there is great distress, beyond all doubt—the traders have ample funds wherewith to keep afloat. Naturally one cannot get any details of value. Generalities galore, even a patently British individual will be attended to in these Germano-Argentine establishments in a studiously courteous manner and informed that business is distinctly brighter than it has been for a year or so, but hard facts are not obtainable. This attitude is impressing the small Spanish or Argentine trader in a manner that must be seen to be appreciated. As far as one can see, only in fancy goods does the German importer find it hard to keep his clients stock renewed. In everything else—save heavy machinery—he has, to use his own phrase, "made arrangements." How long these arrangements will keep him afloat it is hard to say. Certainly business at a loss cannot go on for ever. But in the meantime all trade treaties regarding short terms of credit, cash payment for small orders, discounts and similar safeguards agreed upon in the first half of 1914 by the leading import firms, have gone by the board. "Codlin's the Friend, not Short," is the maxim that every German firm is trying to bring home to the Argentine trader, often, one fears, with considerable success.

DO BRITONS REALISE IT?

The more one studies the general trade situation, the more one feels that the reply to this query is in the negative. Some firms certainly wonder how it is that their German rivals can still outquote them and deliver the goods, fourteen months after war began. Few of them have taken steps to find out how this is done. Certainly the outsider fails to trace any cohesion, any united endeavour to break the back of German trade at a moment when, despite its bold face, it must be weaker than it has been for many a long year. Some are waiting for things to improve in the camp, and in the meantime insist on nett cash for all transactions. Others put down diminished returns to the fault of the Government and the cessation of all public works. Good reasons doubtless, but the remarkable thing is that they do not seem to apply to the German traders. In short if Germany is broken utterly in Europe, it looks very much as though she would be mended by the efforts of her trading agents abroad. No action is too petty or too great for the German in South America to employ in the furtherance of his cause. There is a far cry from the pitiful paid liar with which this article opens to the head of a great house which erstwhile was reckoned one of the leading signatures in this wealthy and cosmopolitan commercial community, but the same purpose links them both, and the old tag fas est ab hostis doceri, which may be literally translated "take a leaf out of the enemy's book," is very applicable at the present juncture.

Sports and Pastimes

THE TURF

PALERMO

Racing at Palermo on Sunday was completely ruined by the weather. A cold strong wind, a sodden track, innumerable scratchings resulted from the general breakdown and principal of all was the postponement of the Premio Jockey Club. With the general upset in form, or more accurately, the withdrawal of the prominent book candidates it can be labelled as a poor day, almost the poorest of the season.

Notices of the postponement of the classic were expected and occasioned no surprise, and indeed the powers that be were more than justified in their action.

The first event provided only three runners, and on the withdrawal of Ermita was rightly regarded as a gift for Tejuela. It must be said that even had Ermita ran, her chances of winning on such a track were small, and for this reason she was withdrawn. Officially, however, other reasons were given.

Ermita was not withdrawn until a few moments before the race, and had been backed to the extent of some 2000 tickets, before a convenient "vet." came along and declared her unfit to run on account of a bad leg. If there is a racing man at Palermo who can accuse the Don Gonzalo stable of entering a horse for a race in an unfit condition, let him express his opinion to the convenient "vet." The public convenience in such matters as this is, of course, quite a secondary consideration, and not one of them would care to see an unfit horse run. However it may be taken that the most careful examination of Ermita failed to reveal to his trainer and others, in fact to any one except the eagle eyed and "convenient gentleman" anything wrong. Ermita will not therefore need a long rest to recover.

Tejuela had the simplest of tasks in beating La Commune.

On Saturday the trainer of Peñas Arriba had decided not to run the filly, but under such weather conditions as prevailed, he altered his mind and Peñas Arriba romped home in the second event. The going was too much for Vanity, who after running prominently, gave in in a weak fashion. Matrera ran well enough in to second place.

Quite apart from the inconvenience and discomfort the weather caused, the public had still more to suffer in the long and dreary waits between the races. Even without the classic event and the time which would have been occupied by it having to be filled in with lengthened intervals between races, the actual intervals had been lengthened on the original programme. This then was another factor which made for a dreary meeting.

In the third event Repique got home at the expense of Cruel and Strap. The latter and incidentally the favourite, put up a poor exhibition. Why he was made a favourite with the going as it was it hard to say. On previous outings in heavy going Strap had run shockingly, and although so much improved, a longer public memory would have saved much money. Ducal, a brother of Pan Pan, who ran in this race is immensely like the great crack miler. Identical in build, manners and action (naturally not so developed) Ducal could never be mistaken for other than a son of Ducato. He should run well later on, as he is a nice colt and sound.

Only four runners went to the post in the Premio Volador, and the result was an easy win for Campesino. Cuatrero II. put up a strong finish, but Lema rode a very poor race if he was trying to win, laying all the time too far back, and then when he made his run, bringing his mount right out into the heaviest part of the track. Rodriguez on the winner rode with perfect judgment throughout. Validor who beat Campesino out of second place with only a kilo advantage, the other day, did not seem to be trying at all. He should reasonably have been more prominent, because he had an advantage of seven kilos. It was a weak event, and Campesino gave the public their second and last win of the afternoon.

It was not a great surprise to see Vittone get up in the sixth race, which event was the best of the afternoon. He only scored a head from Valenton, after making all the running. Gefé the favourite, was third. He could not give the weight. It is not easy to say which of the two first horses put up the best race. We incline to think that Valenton did. He seemed to shew more grit and stuck to Vittone well and strongly throughout the race, and certainly he finished more gamely. Jorge Newbery was useless in the heavy going, as was Floridora in the class she met.

Seven scratchings in the seventh event took away practically all interest in the race, but not quite all. When it was seen that San Paulo came up with a tremendous finishing rush and beat the favourite Stagno, there was some excitement, especially after the winner's exhibition the other day. That on this occasion he was a probable tryer was evidenced before the race, by the change in shoes from the heavy ones of the other day to light ones and was further shewn, alas too late, when it was seen he was backed with 8133 winning tickets. It was quite a nice little job for the stable.

Uva Negra was never seen in the race, and it almost looks as though the racing days of this once excellent mare are drawing to a close. Petite Chose ran very well, and should in future be noted over greater distances than 1400 metres.

The last event was reasonably won by Maraschino, a son of Calepino, at the expense of Prologo, although we firmly believe the order would have been different on a light course. The point about the race was the running of Walter Scott. He could have no excuse concerning a heavy track, because it suits him, but a poor last he began and remained, without making the smallest effort.

The public had themselves to blame in making him a favourite. This may have accounted for his poor exhibition, but on the other hand, when he won from Prologo last time out, he certainly did not have three kilos in hand, and therefore did not deserve so much favouritism.

The running of Duc de Fleury was good. He is a certain winner shortly.

The meeting was rather remarkable for the absence of Englander, for the fact that T. N. Fernandez didn't ride, and for the fact that 'prentice Rodriguez rode two winners and again that "Mingo" failed to score at all.

LA PLATA

Owing to the inclemency of the weather and the impossible state of the track at La Plata on Sunday, the races were postponed.

ROSARIO

Although heavy rain had fallen at Rosario on Saturday and early Sunday, the state of the going at the Hippodrome Independencia was good, although on the heavy side, and racing took place. As is generally the case under such conditions, favourites went down frequently, and the surprise of the meeting was the victory of Tric Trac in the Classic San Martin, which he won a length and a quarter from Audax, with Cocainera the favourite, third. It was an excellent and well regulated meeting, and the racing was quite good. Rivadavia got home by half a head and paid $107.90 in the selling race. The results were as follows:

PREMIO YAPEYU, 1200 metres.—1. Topacio II. 48; 2. Linger 47; 3. Narvaez 49; 4. Yankee II. 56. Also ran: Facundo IV., Gun, Sigomar, Diabolina and Colla. Won by 2½ lengths. Time 1.15. The winner paid $4.15 and $2.40; 2nd, $3.40; 3rd, $2.50.

PREMIO SAN LORENZO, 1600 metres.—1. Ormilla 44; 2. Formosa 47; 3. Gallardia 51; 4. Sopeton 51. Also ran: Everest and Afufa. Won by a length. Time 1.40 4/5. The winner paid $9.55 and $3.50; 2nd, $4.35.

PREMIO PASO DE LOS ANDES, 1300 metres.—1. Borrachio 56; 2. Galliard 56; 3. Hermetica 54; 4. Olazabal 56. Also ran: Alcazar, Profana and Rosa. Won by three-quarters of a length. Time 1.23. The winner paid $4.40 and $2.80; 2nd, $3.20.

PREMIO CHACABUCO, 1100 metres.—1. Freyre 46; 2. Poupoile 42; 3. La Gordetti 52; 4. Flashlight 52. Also ran: Suzana, Leutress, Tripailao, Vinicio II., L'Aiglon and Week Day. Won by three-quarters of a length. Time 1.9. The winner paid $20.70 and $5.40; 2nd, $6.75; 3rd, $4.

PREMIO SAN MARTIN, 2000 metres.—1. Tric Trac 55; 2. Audax 57; 3. Cocainera 55; 4. Trinchera 55. Also ran: Sandstorm, Industrial, Toupet and Socarrona. Won by 1¼ lengths. Time 2.10. The winner paid $19.30 and $10.50; 2nd, $5.80.

PREMIO REMATE, 1600 metres.—1. Rivadavia 45; 2. Gigantea 54; 3. Miruca 52; 4. Don Gabriel 52. Also ran: Volta, Galardon and Dinerat. Won by half a head. Time 1.43½. The winner paid $107.90 and $15.80; 2nd, $4.05.

PREMIO MAIPU, 2200 metres.—1. Old Sam 53; 2. Royal Nose 52; 3. Farward 60; 4. Tommy Atkins 59. Also ran: Button Hole, Sunchales, and Sinai II. Won by a length. Time 2.23. The winner paid $10.05 and $5.25; 2nd, $17.50.

BLOODSTOCK PRICES

(To the Editor.)

Sir,—To settle a bet, will you kindly oblige answering through your notes or queries column the following:—

Has a racehorse ever been sold in England for more than £40,000, and if so, how many and what names? What price was paid for Galtee More, and did he ever win the Derby?

E. P.

Cañada de Gomez, Aug. 22.

[The highest price ever paid for a race horse in England is 40,000 guineas for Prince Palatine when sold by Mr. J. B. Joel. He is at the Childwickbury stud St. Albans, Hertfordshire.

Galtee More won the Derby in 1897 by two lengths from Velasquez. History was third 8 lengths behind. He belonged to Mr. J. Gubbins. We can only speak from memory concerning the price for which he was sold and which we believe was £21,000.—Ed. "The Herald."]

LIEUT. O'LEARY, V. C.

IRISH HERO JOINS THE "FIGHTING FIFTH."

London, Sept. 6.
Sergeant Michael O'Leary, V.C., has been given a commission in the Northumberland Fusiliers.

FOOTBALL

ARGENTINE FOOTBALL ASSOCIATION (3) v. ROSARIO LEAGUE (1).

On Sunday at Palermo on the Gimnasia y Esgrima ground, an interesting match was played between the Argentine Association and the Rosario League. The visitors were beaten by 3 goals to 1.

The weather was dirty and the ground in a fearful condition of sloppiness, nevertheless play took place before a number of spectators. It was, however, not play of a high order, and the game dragged considerably from a very late start.

Throughout the first half Rosario had much the best of the game. Hayes besides playing well all through, was a scorer by a specially good effort. This was the only goal in the first half, and on resuming the Association completely reversed matters, scoring 3 times through Hospital twice and Marcovecchio once. It was the former of these who played the best game of the afternoon amongst the following, who were picked to represent their Association:

Football Association.—J. J. Rithner, A. A. Chiappe, J. D. Brown, A. Betular, C. Garcia, G. Badaracco, Z. Canaveri, A. Ohaco, A. Marcovecchio, J. Hospital and P. Polimeni.

Rosario League.—J. Airdi, Roberts, Z. Diaz, J. Johnston, Blanco, E. Faggiani, Blanco, M. P. Gonzalez, H. Hayes, E. Hayes and J. Viale.

...POSITION OF THE CLUBS....

	P.	W.	L.	D.	Pts
San Isidro	16	16	—	—	32
Estu. de La Plata	18	11	3	4	26
Platense	18	11	4	3	25
River Plate	14	11	1	2	24
Racing	12	11	—	1	23
(Independiente	18	9	5	4	22
Porteño	14	9	3	2	20
Estudiantes	18	8	8	2	18
Hispano-Argentino	20	7	9	4	18
F. C. Oeste	16	5	4	7	17
A. de Quilmes	14	8	6	—	16
S. L. de Almagro	17	7	8	2	16
Banfield	18	7	9	2	16
Belgrano	21	7	12	2	16
Estudiantil Porteño	17	7	9	1	15
Boca Juniors	17	4	7	5	15
Huracan	13	6	5	2	14
Gimnasia y Esgrima	18	5	9	4	14
Tigre	15	4	7	4	12
Kimberley	18	5	11	2	12
Atlanta	19	6	13	—	12
D. de Belgrano	19	4	12	3	11
Quilmes	13	3	6	4	10
Comercio	15	1	12	3	8
Floresta	16	1	12	3	5

FIRST DIVISION CHAMPIONSHIP.

BOCA JUNIORS (3) v. BANFIELD (0)

Played at Banfield on Sunday between the following teams:—

Banfield.—Peterson, Merigge, Rahn, Nay Folno, Moglia, Legaretta, Laneri, Chirubine, Alezzi, Mauder, and Roscoe.

Boca Juniors. — Zazevich, Lamelas, Ochoa, Capellini, Pieralini, Frattini, Calomino, Bertolini, Colla, Alvarez, and Taggino.

The weather was shocking, and the game played in a strong wind, was of a scrappy nature. Señor J. Vaccarezza was the referee. Calomino, Bertolini and Colla were responsible for the goals. In spite of the nature of the football caused through the weather conditions, the game attracted considerable attention and was voted an interesting one. The ground was in surprisingly good condition.

BELGRANO (2) v. HURACAN (1).

The ground at Belgrano on Sunday for the above match was in a very slippery condition. Although greatly assisted with the wind in the first half, Belgrano were unable to score more than once, and play was very even. Cullerne did the deed. In the second half, Belgrano played up well, and E. Brown found the net, and a moment later Salvarredi for Huracan scored their one and only. Belgrano continued the pressure, and their defence was too good to allow of the occasional attacks of Huracan being effective. The teams were as follows:

Belgrano.—Reddel, Brown, J. C. Morgan, Pena, J. Morgan, Cox, Martin, Oliva, Brown, E. Cullerne, Palmer.
Huracan.—Pazos, Alberti, Palacio, Laurenzano, Bassadone, Carabelli, Acevedo, Laguna, Abbatangelo, Salvarredi, Caldera.
Referee, Mr. F. Hasler.

SAN LORENZO (3) v. DEFENSORES DE BELGRANO (0).

On the ground of the Western Railway, at Caballito, on Sunday, the following teams met:—

San Lorenzo.—G. Coll, A. Call, J. de Campo, G. Monti, E. Morti, N. Romeo, M. Perazzo, A. Etchegarry, F. Xaran, G. Urio, L. Giavella.

Defensores de Belgrano.—G. Ridriguez, A. Sacca, J. Rosell, S. Fourcadi, G. Pascuali, E. Puricelli, E. Bisio, A. Rabio, T. Roldan, L. Fourcadi, L. Bertolini.

Referee, N. Oury.
Play resulted in a good game, marred by a caddish display on the part of Bertolini, who in a deliberate manner kicked Etchegarry when in possession of the ball, and was ordered off the field.

Mr. Oury had no easy task in refereeing the game, but did so very creditably.

The scores for San Lorenzo, who won 3 nothing, were Etchegarry, Perazzo, and Gianella. Perazzo played a good game throughout.

GENERAL RESULTS OF SUNDAY'S MATCHES.

ROSARIO CUP.
Arg. Association 3 Rosario League 1
CHAMPIONSHIP.

San Isidro..... 6	Kimberley 0
Porteño..... 6	Comercio 1
E. de La Plata.. 5	F. C. Oeste . . . 2
Boca Juniors... 3	Banfield 0
S. L. de Almarco 3	D. de Belgrano . . 0
Tigre..... 2	Hisp'o Argentino 1
Platense..... 2	Atlanta 0
Belgrano..... 2	Huracan 1

GOLF CLUB CHAMPIONSHIP.
FIRST DIVISION.
LOMAS v. SAN ISIDRO.

The weather interfered greatly with the golf at Links on Sunday. One or two of the players did not turn up, and reserves had to be called out. A late start was made, after an early lunch, and although the rain held off, the wind was not conducive to good play. Particulars of the play, which went in favour of Lomas by 10 matches to 4, were as follows:—

SINGLES.
San Isidro.	Lomas.
H. K. James.... 0	H. G. Hickey. . . 1
G. Alexander... 0	J. L. Carstairs . . 1
L. N. Thomas... ½	W. A. Cowes . . ½
J. O. MacDonald 0	E. Gibson 1
J. McGown..... 0	D. J. Bellhouse 1
C. H. Jukes..... ½	S. R. Walsh . . . ½
G. F. Rae..... 0	W. R. MacBean 1
H. Torre..... 1	G. Whyte 0
G. L. Jones..... 0	H. Woodhouse . . 1
2	7

FOURSOMES.
James and Alexander... 0	Hickey and Carstairs. . . 1
Thomas and Macdonald... 0	Cowes and Gibson . . . 1
McGown and Rae..... 1	Bellhouse and McBean 0
Torre and Jukes..... 0	Whyte and Walsh 1
Jones..... 1	Woodhouse . . . 0
2	3
Singles..... 2	7
Total..... 4	10

SECOND DIVISION.
LOMAS v. SAN ISIDRO.

While the first teams of these clubs were doing battle at Lomas, their second string met on the San Isidro links, and Lomas again ran out the winners by 11½ matches to 5½. Lomas arrived a man short, and San Isidro two short. In spite of a strong wind which made good golf impossible, Messrs. H. T. Mawson and A. H. Gibson played very well for Lomas. The details of play are as follows:—

SINGLES.
Lomas.	San Isidro.
H. T. Mawson... 1	F. Baillie 0
A. H. Gibson.... 1	J. A. Malbran . . 0
F. Johnson..... 0	W. B. Jones . . . 1
H. B. Gibson.... 1	S. G. Follett . . . 0
J. B. Campbell... 1	F. H. Jones . . . 0
J. McGaul..... 1	R. King 0
J. Duncan..... ½	S. E. Francis . . ½
G. H. Armstrong 1	W. J. Boddy . . . 0
W. A. Cowes.... 0	J. B. Sheridan . . 1
H. W. Griggs... 1	F. Bridge 0
H. L. Stevens... 1	W. Oliphant . . . 0
8½	2½

VOLUNTEERS FROM SOUTH AMERICA IN THE 2nd KING EDWARD'S HORSE.

Included in the group are Messrs. Thomas Williams, James Finkle, Alfred Dougall, and Hoare—all from Argentina.

FOURSOMES.
Mawson and A. Gibson.... 1	Baillie and F. Jones . . . 0
Johnson and McGaul..... 1	Bridge and Follett 0
Campbell and Armstrong... 0	W. B. Jones and Boddy 1
H. B. Gibson and Griggs... 1	King and Malbran . . . 0
Duncan and Stevens..... 0	Francis and Oliphant . . . 1
W. A. Cowes.... 0	J. B. Sheridan . . 1
3	3
Singles..... 8½	2½
Total..... 11½	5½

ARGENTINE GOLF CLUB.
Play postponed for the Emilio Mitre Cup.

SOME TREE: WHAT?
FOURTEEN METRES IN DIAMETER!

On the authority of the imaginative La Razón it is stated that a cedar which must be the great grand father of all cedars has been "discovered" at La Florida, Province of Tucuman, on the property of Sr. José Ignacio Araoz.
Its dimensions are—fourteen metres in diameter. Yes it really says so—that is 45 feet 6 inches thick, and according to the usual measurements 136 feet 6 inches in circumference!!! No more!

A CALL TO THE "SLACKER"

AN ANGLO-URUGUAYAN VOLUNTEER.

The following letter has been received by Mr. H. F. Bonner, Traffic Inspector in the Central Uruguay Railway, from his former assistant, Corporal F. J. D. Montgomerie:—

Signals, 5th Corps,
British Expeditionary Force France.
Dear Mr. Bonner,

Since last writing, my existence out here has been rather strange and varied. Although I am still a despatch rider, I do very little riding as I am on a special job at present and I am billeted in a town that is being constantly shelled, and the consequence is that the civilian population has been practically scared away. We had one shell into our billet one night, but beyond giving us all a shake up, very little damage was done. You will have read in the papers of the various engagements that have taken place on this front, and I can assure you that

AVELLANEDA INSPECTORS AGAIN

EXTORTION NOW FOLLOWS THEFT.

It seems high time that the Municipal Inspectors of Avellaneda (the Virtuous) had their claws cut.

Recently they were reported to have "conveyed" a large proportion of the samples of a jeweller's traveller whom they had haled into their den on some more or less frivolous pretext.

Their latest method of raising the wind is different.

It is just plain extortion, but delightfully simple.

When there are ferias francas, each stallholder is charged by the inspector who can reach him first, two pesos for the privilege of being permitted to put his stall up. The lawful charge is one peso, but the other is doubtless baksheesh.

Anon appears clothed in awful majesty the Inspector-General, and he, being a real gentleman, demands to see their receipts. If they can't produce them, and even very often if they can—pay again, double as before, and a fifty per cent. fine for keeping His Excellency waiting. Viva la Republic!

Therefore it really would be well that a little inspection should be done to the Inspectors, who are robbing the people as if this was a corrupt and arrant Monarchy, and not the abode of a free people.

Inspectors no doubt would say, "We must live," but this sort are scarcely worth preserving. They can be caught in handfuls any days.

THE VOYAGE OF THE ENDRICK

PORT PREFECTURE REFUSES DEPARTURE.

Don Emilio de Mayolas is a bold seaman for he wishes to sail from the River Plate to Barcelona, in his yacht, the Endrick, about 34 feet long, 7 feet beam and of 9 tons.

Her proprietor has sailed numerous cruises on the Uruguayan coast but now desires to sail down (or up) to "Spainland and Miklagard. That lie so far on the lee O."

He has chronometers and todas cosas de elementos needed, hoping to make a landfall in five or six months via the Strait of Gibraltar. Cargo weighs about 1500 kilos but what crew he carries is not stated.

Unfortunately for this bold emulator of the early navigators, the Prefect of the Port has heard of the projected departure to-day at 3 and, regarding Sr. Mayolas' enterprise apparently as a prolonged form of suicide and wilful casting away of himself, has forbidden his departure alleging that the vessel has not the weatherly qualities nor the necessary fittings and provision for so long and perilous a voyage.

To ensure obedience, the Prefectura has placed a watch over the adventurous craft and should the later leave a gunboat might be despatched to bring her back again. Thus is bold enterprise discouraged.

and not stay home to live on what others have given up secure in the knowledge that he has made a "soft job" for himself. People at home do not realise the importance and hugeness of this undertaking we have taken upon us, and the sooner it is driven home to them the better. The call of the Mother Country has indeed been wonderfully answered by the Colonies, and it should be an example to all us Englishmen to do, not only what they have done, but more.

I hope you will excuse this outburst on my part, but I really feel wild sometimes, knowing the number of slackers there are still at home.

Please remember me to all my friends, and believe me
Yours sincerely.

(Signed) F. J. D. MONTGOMERIE
Corp. R. E.

NOT DEAD, BUT--!

B.A. Choral Union

SUSPENDS OPERATIONS

Monday, Sept. 13.

Last night, at an extraordinary general meeting of the Buenos Aires Choral Union, it was decided by a large majority of votes to suspend the 1915 season.

Mr. Angus, the President, explained the reason for the committee's decision in calling the meeting, and said that the difficulties with which the Union had to contend at the present moment made it impossible for them to continue as they were. The war had taken many of their important members, and had so affected things in general that it had become almost an impossible thing to give a paying and successful performance, and to fulfil the purpose for which the Union was founded, and thus keep its contract with members. The committee had carefully considered the matter, and thought that the best way to deal with it was to suspend the season and count the subscriptions paid for the current year as paid for the coming one. Mr. Angus then invited expressions of opinion.

Dr. Stetson briefly agreed with what the President had said, and formally proposed the suspension.

Mr. Colpas Clarke, in rising to second the proposal, said that the Union wanted a holiday, and that, perhaps, would, after it was over, cause the members to be more energetic. He complained that they would not "buck up." Let the members who had paid their subscriptions—he supposed they had paid — (laughter) — be content with the idea of suspension.

Mr. Robert Grant agreed with the proposition in general, and explained how difficult it was to run a performance at the present moment except for charity. He was sorry that the committee had accepted the members' subscriptions before deciding on their course of action, and proposed as an amendment that the suspension should be until the end of the war, and until the committee could see their way to successful productions.

MR. GOODE'S PROTEST.

Mr. Alfred Goode agreed that there were difficulties, but why should the Union close down or suspend its functions? If this were done, it would be difficult to revive it. Financially he knew that they were not sound, but members should take the good with the bad. They would be mean if they expected all and gave nothing. Mr. Goode opposed the suspension, and suggested light entertainments, concerts, and the like for the benefit of members, not for the public. This, he claimed, would hold the Union together. The performances need cost nothing, but if the Club decided to suspend all movement for the season, then it would be found they would in future be confronted with the difficulty of revival.

Mr. G. D. Jones, the Treasurer, said that he personally would like to fall in with Mr. Goode's idea, but his experience told him that the thing was impossible. Last season because they had missed one of the four performances, which they contracted to give their members, he had received no less than 50 resignations, and so what would happen if they missed three performances. He conformed with the proposal that the season be declared suspended, and that the subscriptions paid should be carried on to include another season. Mr. Jones explained that not only was the war against the success of the Union, but that the difficulty of obtaining a theatre was also against them. People would not go to the Victoria Theatre. The Odeon dates had been impossible. Mr. Grant requested a statement of finances, and Mr. Jones continued by

THE CHORAL UNION

A Policy of Masterly Inactivity

THE COMMITTEE AND MR. GOODE

"Not dead—but jolly well near it," is probably the best way of describing the present predicament of the Buenos Aires Choral Union. And that after twenty-five years in the service of local amateur theatricals!

To some extent it is possible to sympathise with the Committee on the magnitude of the thankless task which confronted them; at the same time their attitude calls for censure, while the rank and file members are not exempt from criticism. The downfall—even though it be only temporary—of the Union is the natural sequence to lack of foresight, absence of co-operation, and the pursuit of a policy of vacillation and muddle.

It is not easy to apportion the blame for the initial mistakes which have led to the disastrous decision to suspend operations, but it would be unfair to throw the weight of the responsibility on the shoulders of the 1915 Committee. They have, at worst, merely nurtured the blunders of their predecessors. The harvest is now being reaped.

In the early days of last year, the Union held an annual general meeting at which that tale of woe so common at the assemblies of most British institutions in the Capital was recited. A loss had to be faced and the problem was how to wipe out the adverse balance. Enthusiasm was generated and "The Pink Lady" was produced. The two performances showed a profit. Then "Charley's Aunt" was given and the exchequer of the Union was considerably aided thereby. War or no war, it seemed that the sane course was to continue along the lines which had brought success. Instead, the daring experiexplaining there was an overdraft of $3300 due to the bank. Other accounts also were due, which brought up a deficit of some $4400 as against last year's deficit of $4200 odd.

Mr. Colpas Clarke in some further remarks also said he could not agree with Mr. Goode, and proposed an abeyance of the Society's functions until December, 1916. He would not second Mr. Grant's proposal of a suspension until the end of the war.

Some discussion followed, Mr. Goode again pointing out the danger of the Union going to pieces if the season was suspended. The President's opinion, however, was different as was the opinion of the majority of members. Ultimately Mr. Robert Grant reconstructed his previous proposal, and formally proposed "that the functions of the Union be in abeyance for the 1915 season, and that at the end of that time a general meeting be held to further discuss the position." Mr. Colpas Clarke having duly seconded the proposal, the President put it to the meeting, and by 16 votes to—a majority—the proposal was carried. There were 21 members present. The meeting then broke up.

ment of "Brewster's Millions" was initiated, only to be abandoned after a number of rehearsals and the expenditure of a considerable sum of money. A way out was sought, and a lavishly staged performances of "The Geisha" attempted. The Union could scarcely have made a more unhappy choice. The cost of production was high and the attraction to the general public almost nil, for the simple reason that "The Geisha" was becoming "played out" through constant hearing of the music; moreover it was possible to see the play week after week at the native theatres. The strong card of novelty which is essential if the public are to be "drawn" in times of crisis was lost, and the production was doomed to a gamble for success from the outset. The miserable failure of the artistes completed the debacle.

The rumoured death of "Brewster" was then confirmed is an intimation to the public, and the Union, with another adverse balance on its shoulders, went into retirement for the summer.

At the commencement of the present year, it was freely stated that the Choral Union would remain in obscurity until the advent of brighter days. In deference to the wishes of the majority of the members, however, another season was commenced. Various schemes were discussed; the production of light opera and small plays in local halls advocated. A newly elected committee were left to draft a programme. This they did, and, on paper, the suggestion appeared satisfactory—with the exception of the proposed production of "Hiawatha," which if sound artistic propaganda is nevertheless the surest way of courting financial disaster.

Nothing further was heard until an announcement appeared to the effect that "Hummingtop's Niece" was to be presented at the Victoria Theatre. The majority of the public were left in ignorance of what "Hummingtop's Niece" was; nothing was done to stimulate interest, beyond a displayed advertisement in the newspapers, and, to crown all, the Victoria Theatre was the selected rendezvous. It is true that the Committee were unable to obtain any other theatre, but even a concert hall would have been preferable to the Victoria, which, bad as it is on normal occasions, was "felt" to complete disadvantage on the bitterly cold evening on which the initial performance was given.

"Hummingtop's Niece" was a sorry affair. Although, artistically, a sound entertainment, it played to almost empty houses and the losses sustained were only recovered in part at subsequent performances given in the suburbs.

To add to the general break-down, "Hiawatha"—a doubtful experiment from the outset—had to be abandoned because insufficient ladies and gentlemen desired to sing in public.

Then it was decided to produce "The Judge," a farce which had been given with some success a year or two previously. The difficulty of finding sufficient artists for the male parts led to the abandonment of "The Judge" a week ago, and the Committee had no alternative but to call a meeting of members and suggest a "suspension" of operations.

Apparently, the only note of protest against the temporary closing-down of the Union was Mr. A. J.

Goode. The principal reason he adduced in support of his protest was that there would be great difficulty in again uniting the members, once a disbandment had occurred.

Mr. Goode is right. The organisation of a body is difficult; the re-organisation of a semi-moribund society is a task that closely approaches the insuperable.

Another question is that of finance. Is it proposed to throw the existent debt upon a few willing shoulders, or are members—now free—to be invited to come into the fold next year and assume responsibilities of which they have been freed? This is a point that will have to be answered in one of the two ways suggested.

The plain truth is that the Committee have omitted to read the signs of the times; they have gambled blindly and have lost; moreover, the public are barely interested in the doings of the Union. These are facts that should have been realised six months ago. That the rank and file were not oblivious to them was proved by the general attitude at the annual meeting, when it was fully understood that a policy of caution and reform was to be pursued.

In these days, the multitude of charity performances of all kinds make a heavy demand on the community, and the expenditure of ten or twenty dollars on an evening with the amateurs is begrudged whereas formerly it was never missed. The desire is for cheapness and with theatre rents and the cost of production what they are, it is impossible for any venture on a large scale to gratify that desire.

The other point that is apt to be overlooked is that the Union exist primarily as an organisation for the spread of a certain type of culture and for the entertainment of its members. Recent operations, coupled with statements made at various meetings, would suggest that with the progress of time the Union and its members have grown to regard themselves as co-operative impresarios. Unfortunately for themselves, they lack the discernment and theatrical knowledge of the magnate who produces for profit.

Out of all the chaos, one fact emerges, and that is that the Union has, for the present, ceased to exist. With the Social and Dramatic Union also resting among things forgotten, there is little possibility of any plays being given in English during the remainder of this year. Nevertheless, the disaster should be useful as a warning to those who are elected to carry on the work in the future. Until times change and membership increases, the Union must be content to do good work in the smaller halls. There would be no loss of dignity in doing that. As a matter of fact, some of the best amateur work in the London suburbs is submitted in halls and with stage fittings that would break the hearts of those who attempt—and fail with—larger productions in the Capital. The Choral Union has an excellent record; it can have an equally progressive future. But—and this is the thing to be remembered—it must not soar beyond its capacity. A small thing done well is infinitely preferable to one of the great failures that have marred local amateur theatricals during recent times. The child must learn to walk ere it can run.

FERNET-BRANCA

Tonic, bitter, appetizer and digestive

HOFER & Co., B. Aires.—Sole Agents

THE ARGENTINE RAILWAY OUTLOOK

Holders of Argentine Railway stocks have been having a bad time lately. The remark we are well aware applies to holders of nearly all classes of securities, but it applies with especial force to Argentine Rails, because the war was not the primary cause of the fall that has occurred in values, but merely served to aggravate very acutely a period of depression that began nearly two years earlier. Prior to the outbreak of war Argentina had had two bad years as the result of damaged crops caused by excessive rain, and the effects of poor crops upon the native community were the more marked in consequence of the over-speculation in land that had been indulged in as an outcome of a long previous period of prosperity. With the country's savings impaired and its exportable surplus reduced imports were restricted and general business of all sorts fell off. Such were the conditions ruling at the close of the railway companies' year on June 30, 1914, and there is no need to remind our readers how hopes of a recovery during 1914-15 have been dashed. With the outbreak of the war the import trade for a time almost ceased, shipping and exchange difficulties and the general dislocation in Europe causing all building and development work in the Argentine summarily to be shut down. Now the railway companies have suffered from the paralysis in the import trade has been seen throughout the financial year in their weekly traffic returns, and with working costs high, hopes regarding the dividends to be declared this autumn, more particularly by the weaker lines, must be kept very moderate. The strongly placed roads, thanks to past conservatism, will be able to pay fair dividends. For instance, as we mentioned a few weeks ago, there need be little doubt about the maintenance of 5 per cent dividends upon the Ordinary stocks of the Central Argentine and the Buenos Aires Western, while the chances are in favour of a similar rate being maintained by the Great Southern also.

So much for the past or for impending results based upon past results. Let us turn for a moment to what is of more importance to Argentine Railway stockholders and consider prospects for the current year. Here we can only read the portents as warranting confidence, if not enthusiasm. We have heard much lately of the prosperity that is being enjoyed by the United States as a result of heavy sales at high prices of foodstuffs and munitions of war. It seems to us that the benefits attaching to the European campaign must be still greater proportionately in the case of Argentina. The River Plate, unlike the great Northern Republic, is not an industrial country, so that she has no need to lament the falling off in the demand for many classes of manufactured goods from belligerent countries. Argentina is pre-eminently an agricultural and pastoral country. Her staple products are wheat, maize, oats and other grain, wool, hides and frozen meat. Now all these products Europe must have in times of peace or war, but just now she is a keener buyer of all of them than ever and prices have gone up to a level that must be lining the pockets of the farming and ranching classes. Incidentally it is satisfactory to remember that much of the Argentine pastoral business is in the hands of British companies. The effect of this remunerative business in Argentina's exportable products must be before long to stimulate the import trade. The volume of exports, of course, depends more upon seasons than prices, and here it may be said that the last maize crop, which is still in course of being carried, was a good one, and that although it is too early to form any definite judgment of the next wheat harvest conditions to date have been favourable.

The fear, moreover, of competing lines being built, either by the Government or by foreign companies, is disposed of for many years, if not finally. The existing lines have chiefly been constructed with money raised abroad at a time of great prosperity, when it was in abundant supply and seeking employment, at low rates of interest. The results to investors in railway construction in Argentina were for many years highly satisfactory. So much so that creations of capital for this purpose increased year by year on a continually rising scale, until, no doubt, the pace became too fast. Extensions have gone ahead of population and development in the agricultural districts, resulting in diminished mileage returns to the railways. From the present time onwards, possibly for many years, we can expect to see the opposite result. There will be a continuous and growing development of the districts already served by the railways, and new extensions, always temporarily unprofitable, will almost certainly cease, as it will not be possible to raise fresh money on any terms likely to be attractive for such purpose. Mileage returns will then grow again until another wave of prosperity attracts new money to commence a fresh period of expansion.

With a brisk export trade forecasting an early revival in the import trade, the current year ought to witness a turn in the fortunes of the railway companies. Receipts from general goods, which have lately been of a negligible character, should soon begin to grow, and the passenger business should recover as well. Whether the recovery will be accompanied immediately by any sustained rise in the prices of Argentine Railway stocks is a matter upon which it would be unwise to predict, because for the present the situation in Europe is the governing factor for all securities. We will confine any conclusions we may draw from our glance at the situation in the Argentine to a simple statement that the present is not the time for investors in the Railway group to part with their stocks. How severe the fall in prices has been may be gathered from the following table:—

Stock.	Highest	Latest
	in 1914.	price.	Fall.
Argentine Great Western Ord.	96 5/8	70*	26 5/8
Argentine North Eastern Ord.	45 1/2	20*	25 1/2
B.A. and Pacific Ord.	75	43	32
Do. 5 pc 2nd Pref.	97	72*	25
B.A. Gt. Southern Ord.	120 1/2	75 1/4	45 1/4
B.A. Western Ord.	121 1/2	82 1/4	39 1/4
Central Argentine Ord.	107 3/4	75 1/4	32 1/2
Do. 4 1/2 pc Pref.	102 1/2	78	24 1/2
Cordoba Central Ord.	49 5/8	19 1/2*	30 1/8
Do. 4 1/2 pc Sec. and Deb.	83 3/4	59	24 3/4
Entre Rios Ord.	56 1/4	20 3/4*	35 1/2
Do. Second Pref.	67	27 1/2*	39 1/2

*Nominal.

In six cases we have indicated the quoted prices as being nominal because the latest valuations tested by actual business relate to bargains done a week or more ago. As a matter of fact, prices of all stocks in the group are more or less nominal. That is to say that the recent falls have been out of all proportion to the amount of stock offered. Whereas in normal times the sale or purchase of £10,000 or £20,000 stock would not cause a movement of more than 1/4, quotations have been shifted a point or more at a time by the offering of a few hundreds of stock, the explanation being that the market for some time has been asked steadily to absorb sales and has been unable to match them with purchases owing to the exceptional financial conditions obtaining. In one sense the recent selling of Argentine Rails is a compliment to the market, because it means that it has remained one of the few channels open to investors in need of cash, such as trustees winding up deceased estates, who have been denied in other departments of the Stock Exchange, notably the Trustee group, owing to the

SOUTHERN RAILWAY FARES

INDIGNATION AT INCREASED CHARGES.

Residents in the southern suburbs express keen indignation at the increased fares to be levied by the F. C. S. Meetings are being held to discuss the best weapons with which to oppose the Company. Several committees have been formed for this purpose, and Lomas residents are especially active.

At a recent meeting it was decided that those present should travel second class in future. It was pointed out that monthly passes first class to and from Lomas cost $12.50 and would, with the extra charge, cost $12.75. Second class contracts were $10.50, and thus the railway would lose $3.25 per passenger who agreed to travel second. Even the ladies were considered as not objecting to this new proposal. Yesterday at a meeting it was unanimously accepted as a proposition "that as there was no third class on the railway, in future all present should decide to travel second class, and that on each occasion the length of the train be walked (that is through the first class carriages into the second class) so that when summer comes "our appearance and clothes" will produce their effect in the first class carriages. Such is a typical resolution to protest against the action of the railways and to "force" them into reconsidering the matter.

CRISIS IN THE MOTOR CAR BUSINESS

A GREAT REDUCTION IN IMPORTED CARS.

The crisis which was making itself seriously felt before the war has been aggravated by it in some businesses. Amongst these is especially noticeable that of the motor-car industry. Cost of purchase, cost of maintenance in these hard times, has resulted in a large number of private cars being sold and now doing duty as taxis. There are already a large amount of once privately owned cars now doing duty as public conveyances. This statement alone will be sufficient to show the position of the industry. But few people to-day are buying cars; if anything more persons are selling the cars they find they cannot maintain. The importation of the motor-car during the first six months of this year is small. The figures show that only 464 cars have arrived in the country, while in the equivalent period of 1914 the number was 1871.

This shows a falling off of 1407 cars, and it is stated that the position tends to become worse, and that future months will see an even further reduction in the number of imported cars.

THE FRATERNAL AMERICAS

CONCILIATION DELEGATE TO SOUTH AMERICA INTERVIEWS PRESIDENT WILSON.

Washington, Sept. 2.

Dr. Peter H. Goldsmith, director of the Pan-American division of the American Association of International Conciliation, accompanied by Mr. Henry E. Alexander, who is shortly going to South America, had a conference to-day with the President regarding the extensive work of the Association in drawing the Americas together.

Mr. Wilson expressed great interest and entire approval of the various enterprises described by Dr. Goldsmith.

existence of minimum prices. We mention this point because, properly understood, it will in itself tend to reassure holders who might infer from the drop in prices that there had been heavy liquidation and that something was seriously wrong with their holdings.

PROPOSED OIL TAX

INDIGNANT PROTESTS.

The proposals for taxation of imported motor and combustible oils in the Republic have called forth numerous protests.

In one day three pamphlets have been received, petitioning against the proposed imposition of an impost of 1 centavo gold on every litre of imported naphtha. It is pointed out that the additional burdens laid on consumers are excessive, and may be very mischievous to trades already harassed by innumerable exactions. Gas oil or petroleum should, it is declared, certainly be exempted from these measures, and if the present project be intended to foment an Industria Nacional, the Comodoro Rivadavia oil is not at present a fit substitute for the imported quality. It is at present used, in a very limited way, for some Diesel engines, but it will be a long time before quantity or quality will enable it to replace imported gas oil. Three large groups of influential business houses have signed these three different protests and they include firms of all nationalities who find their interests as are those of small traders and all employers of motor power, seriously menaced by this proposal which can inflict great injury on business in trade, which rather needs fostering, without bestowing any corresponding benefits on the National Treasury. The proprietors of garages also strongly and naturally object. A case of naphtha contains about 36 litres. This taxed in the new style will mean 36 cents gold or 82 cents paper on each case, and an increase of 13 per cent. It is certain that the suffering public would have to pay 25 per cent., at least, and there would be a demand for an upward revision of taxi fares. Naphtha consumption would diminish and many garages would close down, while infinite trouble of various kinds would follow the passing of this mischievous and irritating project.

TRAGEDY IN A TAXI

MURDER AND ATTEMPTED SUICIDE IN PUEYRREDON.

A shocking tragedy took place last evening at about 6 o'clock in the frequented thoroughfare of Pueyrredon.

Taxicab No. 823 had been chartered by Sr. Anibal Vanolli and his wife Sra. C. Vanolli, living at 1045 Santiago del Estero, and when in Pueyrredon the driver fancied he heard shrieks and cries of pain from the interior of the vehicle. He at once pulled up having observed that the window on one side was down and the woman's head hanging out, her throat streaming with blood. The policeman on point duty at the corner of Peña approached and opened the door of the taxi. He saw Vanolli trying to cut his throat with a large knife and at once seized and disarmed him. The unfortunate Carmen Vanolli was then seen to be in a desperate condition and both were at once carried to the German Hospital as being nearest at hand. The woman expired at the moment of being placed on the bed and the man's condition is very serious.

The dead woman was an Argentine, 28 years of age, and had been educated in Europe, whence she returned to marry Vanolli who was two years older. He was an estanciero at Coronel Pringles.

The subject of this tragic disagreement is not at present certain but for some time a condition of incessant hostility has reigned in the home.

BRITISH BANK OF S. AMERICA

The Buenos Aires branch of the British Bank of South America have received an intimation to the effect that the Directors in London have declared a dividend of ten shillings a share, on account, payable on October 1, free of Income Tax.

Agricultural & Pastoral

CAMP NOTES

(By Our Agricultural Editor).

The somewhat severe weather experienced during this winter, appears to have passed, and fields are again fresh and green with the advent of the new pasture so much required on many properties. This fresh green growth is not of much value by itself for cattle, but, I observe where a supplementary ration of dry grass is distributed over the same field, young steers are rapidly casting their old hair and during this stage rubbing posts should be conveniently placed as they save the fences from a lot of rough treatment by the rubbing of such strong animals.

Lambing is progressing most favourably on many properties and, if the weather be fairly dry a good lamb crop is likely to be recorded in the Province of Buenos Aires.

Sheep, which for some time did not participate in the rise of meat values, are again in keen request, and making most satisfactory prices; which combined with the high price and keen demand for wool, will also make this season a memorable one for the flockmaster. Sheep scab, that great scourge of the owner in South America, is rather prevalent in many flocks I have seen, which unfortunately were grazing near public highways, along which other flocks pass very frequently in poor and scabby condition which readily transmit the infection to the possibly clean animals, on some well ordered estancia. When the legislature takes some more drastic course, or appoints more competent inspectors to carry out their duties faithfully, and not be so easily blinded by the offer of a "bonus" it may be possible to travel through this Republic without seeing a whole flock rubbing against the fences, or to witness the sight of some sickly animal, through the number of parasites his blood has to nourish, unable to walk and certain to die, not even giving a skin worth taking off.

The more modern methods for handling our sheep stock have been very slow to take on, in South America. The animals are methodically shut up in the corral every night. The same system was practiced from time immemorial, by the hardy gauchos of the Pampas, and is absurd and furthermore is unfortunately responsible for the rapid spread of any such contagious disease.

Cattle values are reported to have fallen to the extent of five cents a pound since last week, which may cause many buyers of invernada steers to act with more caution in their operations. Fat cows have also suffered a decline in values, in keeping with heavy steers, while lighter class steers for local consumption, have maintained their previous value.

Mr. A. Machattie, as agent for Mr. Joseph Shepherd, has arranged for the shipment of 190 heavy draught horses by the Highland Brigade. This lot of extra quality animals have been secured in the establishments of Sres. Adolfo Luro, Rufino Luro, Alberto Castex, and R. Taures, the reputation of whose marks requires no comment. Special mention ought to be made of the consignment of Shire mares from El Dorado, which are animals of exceptional quality while many are fully pedigreed and registered here. The return of such good blood to Britain ought to incite keen competition at auction now that good quality breeding mares are so much in demand. It is to be hoped they will reach their destination in good condition and meet a firm demand such as their extra good quality fully entitles their shippers to expect.

A very important sale took place during the week at a well-known Cabaña, near the Capital, at which, the damaged condition of the stock offered, calls for more than a passing reference. One poor heifer at the extremity of the line had broken both horns near the skull, in her mild efforts to free herself when haltered to a post. When the poor beast had been haltered the steady tension on a running knot had so tightened over the nostrils, that the animal's nose was swollen to the natural width of that of a hippopotamus, to all external appearance. Several others showed at least one recently broken horn, while the mouths of many had sustained very severe cuts and disarrangement to their teeth. This property has earned far greater fame for the very frequent changes of its managers, than for any special knowledge of the bringing out of its stock; and nothing could be more conclusive of the detrimental effect of frequent changes in bringing about apparently neglected and disorderly arrangements everywhere noticeable. To criticise the catalogue would be sufficient in itself, as many intending purchasers were turning over leaf by leaf, in the hope of eventually coming across the pedigree he was interested in scanning. The cows, which formed by far the greater number of animals catalogued, were mixed up without regard to numbers or names, and caused no small amount of amusement to a certain part of the visitors. An importer and breeder, with a wide-world reputation as an expert in his business described the "Show," as unparalleled in his experience, as run-away animals were to be seen in the adjacent fields, now heated up by the harsh treatment of their would be captors, while many of the cows, which were tied up to a long chain supported on strong posts, so frequently got "tied up" in bunches that constant supervision was necessary at the hands of some attendants more accustomed to handling a spade than tying a halter rope, of a pedigree animal. To hope for success, working under such conditions and circumstances, is not to be thought of by any right thinking person; and the sooner the better the plain fact was realised by those desirous of breeding pedigree stock, that it is absolutely necessary to have a competent person in charge and allow him to train and fit his personnel for the careful handling of the valuable stock entrusted to their charge. Working under haphazard methods and without the necessary experience can only have the inevitable result of a dispersion sale, at which many of the shortcomings of the property will be instantly perceived by visiting experts.

Acting on behalf of Mr. Joseph Shepherd, Mr. Adam Machattie has sold privately during the week one of the grandest stock bulls, that has come to Argentina this season. I refer to the sale to Messrs. Samuel R. Hale (Pearson) and Co. Limited, Tatay, of the Shorthorn sire "Garbity Prince Royal (12035) calved on April 15, 1913, by that famous bull, Collynie Chieftain, out of Pride of Baley, a great level, and nicely fleshed dark roan cow that Mr. James MacWilliam is justly proud of owning. Pride of Baley, claims as her sire the Duthie bull President, one of the most successful Collynie sires, while she is a descendent through the Pride of Dairy's one of the famous Marr Princess Royal family. Garbity Prince Royal, was bred by Mr. J. MacWilliam, the gentleman who came out here as judge of the Shorthorn classes, at Palermo about three years ago, and it was only by paying a long price for the bull that Mr. Shepherd got him for this country, more so on account of Mr. MacWilliam being unfortunate in losing Collynie Chieftain, after a six months' service.

Do not wait for the last moment to treat your Horses against the STOMACH BOT
DO IT NOW

USE OUR SPECIAL CAPSULES. Write for Catalogue

CALASTREME & RATTI

Veterinary Establishment,

MAIPU 247, BUENOS AIRES.

DEPARTURE OF MR. J. MACRAE

That well-known pioneer from the southern Territory of Santa Cruz was a passenger by the s.s. Argentino for his South home, near Puerto Deseado. For the improvement of his flocks two Rambouillet rams, winners of the 2nd prize at the recent Palermo Show, were acquired and shipped by the same boat. Mr. Macrae's departure will be much missed by his large circle of acquaintances, who always counted themselves privileged to be in his company and hear his interesting and optimistic opinions about the great extent of southern lands, where he has for long made his home.

DEATH OF "AMERICUS"

THE WORLD'S RECORD PRICED BULL.

Bred at Cabaña San Juan, the property of Sr. Leonardo Pereyra, this bull marked the world's record price, being sold to his late owners, Señores Bartolomé Ginocchio, for their Cabaña Santa Aurelia, at the price of $80,000. He has fortunately left a considerable number of very promising calves, which are likely to perpetuate his memory. This valuable animal never having properly recovered from a recent attack of foot-and-mouth disease, some complications set in, and though the bull in the meantime had been transferred to the Capital and attended by three veterinary experts, he died a few days ago. He was insured by his former owner for $60,000, so his loss, though unfortunate for the breed, will fortunately not be a financial loss to his enterprising owners.

LOCUST AND GARRAPATA

DOUBLE TROUBLE FOR URUGUAY

The Press of Banda Oriental displays some anxiety regarding the large swarms of locusts which are reported destroying the pasture lands after having ruined the quintas and gardens.

An energetic campaign is to be made by the Uruguayan authorities against these plagues and against garrapatas, which are also reported, and may it be feared spread in the cattle camps.

and being rather loth to part with the bull that now goes to serve in the "Tatay" herd.

Lovers of beautiful sheep, whether they be prospective buyers or not, are reminded that next Wednesday Messrs Bullrich and Co. will put up to auction what is considered to be one of the finest lost of Lincoln rams that ever arrived from England in one boat. The animals to be sold number 50 head and include the Champion Lincoln at this year's Royal Show held at Nottingham, the reserve-Champion, and practically all the prize-winners at the Show.

BENEFICIAL RAINS

THROUGHOUT THE REPUBLIC

Reports from many parts of the Republic demonstrate that beneficial as has been the rainfall it has not been universal and more is needed. Fortunately it is likely to be forthcoming for there is a sound of abundance of rain.

This gives no pleasure to those who dislike the present damp, chilly, brumous conditions, but is a source of joy to the agriculturist and to the cattle-raiser. It is indeed fortunate that the rain arrived when it did. It entered "on its cue," and at the most opportune moment for the sowings.

In the Province of Buenos Aires, the benefits of the rain have been widespread, though not complete. Bahia Blanca district, which has suffered in the past grievously through floods, has had only showers, but is hopefully waiting for a further supply which seems actually impending.

Little has fallen also in Pampa Central, where more is hoped for.

In the north and east of the Province, the rain has been abundant and beneficial, and in some districts there have been even small inundations. This has occurred at Coronel Suarez and Guaminí, but this inconvenience is regarded with cheerful indifference for the sake of the subsequent benefits.

Santa Fe in its agricultural zone has participated in the excellent effect of the rains, and Cordoba has also greatly benefited. It will be recollected that very destructive fires in the camp of the latter province occurred last week with loss of life. Everything was exceedingly dry, and the fears of cultivators are now largely allayed.

In the last two days it has rained heavily and repeatedly about Rosario.

In the West, where cattle were beginning to lose flesh from the poverty of feed, there will be a notable improvement.

There was no actual severe drought in Corrientes or Entre Rios, but the rain has been welcome as removing any chance or fear of drought. In the last-named province, the Uruguayan side, the districts of Concordia, Gualguay and Gualguaychú have come hest off.

Cattle in Corrientes are said to be showing the effect of recent dryness, and immediate improvement is expected.

The submergible suburbs of the Capital had petty floods, but comparatively nothing to complain of. The usual minor inundations took place in Lower Belgrano, Nuñez, Saavedra, Mataderos, Villa Soldati, but drained off soon after the cessation of the rain.

ON MAKING ROADS

(To the Editor.)

Sir,—Having read in your issue of yesterday the hundredth paragraph on the roads question, would you mind letting a poor wanderer start the second century?

Re the Mitre law, not being very well read in politics, I cannot say that I know much about it, and don't feel as if I wanted to know a great deal. But the Argentine roads I take a special interest in, especially at shearing or harvest time, when I am "humping bluey," looking for a job. The first gang of road-makers that I came across in my travels in Argentina, just about took the lid off my quart-pot.

Being a "sundowner," and being in no hurry, I just sat down on my twenty years' gathering, and took observations.

In that gang there were no less than twenty-five, not counting "oficiales," and what took my fancy was the up-to-date method used in shifting the dirt, with wheelbarrows, no less. It struck me at the time that if they had been yoked into bamboos with baskets, that they would have shifted more dirt.

Now just while the damper is baking and the billy is boiling, I will explain to you an old style that the "way-backs" have in forming a road.

The equipment required is three decent horses, a single furrow plough, and a half-yard scoop, a boy to drive the horses, a man with a little hair on his wrists to handle the scoop.

With this outfit I am sure that more work could be done in one day, and done better than the twenty-five with wheelbarrows would do in three.

The weight of the scoop and the horses continually going over the formation as it is made will leave a solid job, whereas the work done by the wheelbarrow gang is left loose.

Now, Mr. Editor, while the Mitre law is being straightened out, which will be, any time between now and "when the cows come home."

If the Government or the land-owners themselves would set to work, and plant trees either on the roads or just inside their fences, they would find that in time these trees would become their best and cheapest road contractors. Not only would they improve the roads, but they would be also a shade and shelter for stock, not to mention the firewood that could be had by lopping the limbs in the proper season.—Yours, etc.,

BOOMOONOOMINAH.

Sept. 2nd.

(An authentic interpretation of the Australian vernacular employed by our correspondent may be necessary for non-Australian readers. "Humping bluey" means carrying the "swag," and the swag is the blue blanket, in which are rolled whatever wardrobe the "swagman" possesses outside what he wears. A "sundowner" in old times meant the "swagman" who arrived at the homestead of settlers, or the sheep stations, at sundown, and claimed the hospitality of the bush—a pound of meat, a pint of flour, and a shake-down, or right to sleep anywhere about the place. The reference to being yoked into "bamboos," with baskets, comes from the writer's remembering the way the Chinese coolies in Australia work, with a bamboo rod, borne across the shoulders and baskets at each end. "Damper" is the unleavened bread of the man from the bush—a paste of flour and water, baked on the coals. "The billy" is the kettle, or what serves as a kettle, and the "quart-pot," is a little cousin to the "billy-can." A solitary swagman will carry a quart-pot, and boil his tea in it, using the cup-like lid for drinking purposes. "When the cows come home" is an Australian expression for eternity, or the remote and problematic future.—Ed., HERALD).

Luis Costantini

Agriculturist & Seedsman

TREES, AGRICULTURAL, AND HORTICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS.

WE OFFER OUR LARGE STOCK OF FRUIT, FOREST AND ORNAMENTAL TREES AT VERY MODERATE PRICES.

ASK FOR OUR CATALOGUES.

Seeds from the well-known firms of:—

VALMORIN, ANDRIEUX AND CO., OF PARIS.

CHARLES SHARPE AND CO., OF SLEAFORD.

Also FROM OUR SPECIAL PLANTERS IN ITALY.

Implements for Agriculture and Horticulture from the celebrated firms of:—

C. F. SKELTON AND CO., OF SHEFFIELD; and

DITTMAR FRERES, BUENOS AIRES.

HEAD OFFICE AND WAREHOUSE AT RIVADAVIA 6717 to 25.

U. T. 919 FLORES.

OFFICES AND GARDENS AT RIVADAVIA 5956.

U.T. 196 FLORES.

LARGE GARDENS IN LUJAN, F.C.O.

Cabaña 'Lujan' y 'Las Hermanas'

= DE =

R. HERRERA VEGAS É HIJOS

LUJAN, F.C.S.

J. M. GUTIERREZ, F.C.S.

Carneros Lincoln y Oxford Down.Toros Hereford y Durham. :: ::

FLORIDA 832 - BUENOS AIRES

A PLEA FOR THE COLONIST

LOSS OF MAIZE PROFITS

AN EVIL AND ITS REMEDY

In THE HERALD of August 4 there appeared an interesting letter from a correspondent signing himself C. H. N. G., in which the exploitation of the maize-growing colonist was the subject of a protest.

To-day we publish a further communication from the same pen. In this letter, which appears below, C. H. N. G. traces maize production, from the sowing of the seed to the discharge of the crop at the consumer's port in England. The figures adduced in support of the contentions made are of considerable interest.

MAIZE; FROM CHACRERO TO CONSUMER,

(To the Editor.)

Sir,—Firstly I thank you for publishing my letter on the 4th August under the heading "The year's turnover from a colonist's point of view." I now send you further information on the same subject. In my first letter I showed the turnover of a colonist on 50 cuadras, which ran out at 1295 quintales in troja, sold at $2904.40, deducting purely the expenses incurred for harvesting and selling the same. Now turn to the local buyer's profit: he pays the colonist at the rate of $4.65 per quintal, less $1.50 for thrashing, etc., this being the price in Rosario on that date (August 4). His expenses are per quintal:—Thrashing and bags 0.35, cartage to station 0.13, movement in galpon 0.06, railway freight 90 kilos 0.39 (put in port of Rosario), making the total expenses 93 cents, plus brokerage at the rate of 1/2 % adding 0.02 cents, thus running at 0.95 cents expenses per quintal. Now deducting this from the price paid to the colonist, or better from the $1.50, one gets $0.55 clear profits per quintal, or the lump sum of $712.25 profit.

The broker makes $30.10.

Now for the exporter. The exporter receives the maize alongside the ship at $4.65 per quintal from the local buyer. He has to pay ocean freight at the rate of 65/- per ton, which equals $3.72 per quintal. A third of this sum we will presume expenses such as handling, guinche taxes, insurance; this is treating the expenses very liberally as it is nearly equal to the whole freight paid before the war, viz., 10/- to 15/- per ton. The third of $3.72 is $1.26, summing $4.98 for expenses per quintal, which, together with the cost price of $4.65 makes a total of $9.63 per quintal delivered in Liverpool, say. The price there quoted for River Plate maize is 31 1/4 per quarter of 36.35lb., or $13.45 per quintal. The difference between this and the figures given above is $3.82 per quintal, or, in other words, a clear profit for the exporter; the total of which on one colonist alone is $4832.30. So one gets the profit for each as follows:—

Colonist	$3017.35
Parasites:—
Local buyer	712.25
Broker	30.10
Exporter	4832.30

(Profit for each parasite made out of one colonist on 50 squares of land.) Added to this must go the rent of the land at 26 % of the crop in troja. In my former letter I showed this to be 455 quintales put at the same price paid to colonist, which, less the expenses of harvesting, runs out at $1433.25, representing the owner's rent on the land.

Now, Sir, from the above figures—which can be proved—does it seem fair to any just person that the colonist, working all the year round, endangering capital and risking the lottery of drought, locusts, frosts, hailstones, loss of seed, sowing twice sometimes on account of the locusts, should lose 50 per cent of his legitimate profits, purely on account of the supineness of the Government, which neither sells his crop for him in Europe (as is done by the Government of Canada) nor frees him of the cereal trust, composed of 5 or 6 big exporting houses which practically rule the country's cereal price?

Then one hears or reads of the splendid fertility of the country, and the colonist being part of its backbone. Does the Government encourage the worker by allowing him to be robbed of the profits gained by him through sheer hard work and risk? No wonder there is so much emigration!

I know personally that over 50 per cent. of the colonists round here are in debt to the provision shops from last year, and have not been able to liquidate the accounts because of the low price of maize. It has not been a bad crop either: one may term it fair, or an average year, as regards production.

The remedy is that the Government should sell all the cereals produced, charging the colonist the commission and expenses. Even though the Government did not do much business, the very fact of the colonist being able to sell his produce in Europe through the Government would be sufficient to make the intermediaries call a very different tune to the present one. I have shown that the price on the chacra is $4.65, while the price in England is $13.45, a difference of $8.80 per quintal, most of which finds its way into the pockets of some hundred people, or less, represented by the exporting houses. This is the statement of only one colonist; now multiply the exporters' profit $4832.30 of that one colonist by thousands, and you get a very respectable sum which should be in thousands of hands in place of that of a few favoured ones. If this were so, we should not hear so much about the crisis, the founding of an agricultural bank, or, after a few years, of the Government having to borrow abroad. The colonists can deal with the local buyer through competition, but the exporter seems to be too big for either, wherefore the need of Government aid. In a way, the founding of an Agricultural Bank would be a good thing as a means to an end: the colonists would borrow on the crop, pay the shops, etc., then the Bank would be the one to see that the colonists got a "fair deal" from the exporters. If they did not, the Government would soon want to know why it was out of pocket, and take measures accordingly.

Why, Mr. Editor, does not the native Press take up this vital question and write some leading articles on the subject? Are they afraid of the Powers-that-Be? Much better to write on a subject of such first importance than some of the useless articles one sees in Spanish Argentine papers.

Yours, etc.

C. H. N. G.

Casalegno, F.C.C.A.,
Aug. 28.

BAD BREAD AND DEAR

At Martinez, Olivos, San Isidro and Punta Chica there is a public revolt against the bakers, who when asked for bread give a stone (or something like a brick), and further charge excessive prices for the inedible material. For these reasons it has been decided to establish shops "under new management" in these districts, where it is hoped that bread of decent quality may be obtainable, which is said to be far from the case at present. It is not stated by whom the amelioration is to be worked.

A PLEA FOR THE COLONIST

What Are the Real Facts?

REPLIES TO C.H.N.G.

(To the Editor).

Sir.—Your correspondent C.H.N.G. may know something about the conditions obtaining in the maize trade of the country insofar as the camp is concerned, but he displays a lamentable ignorance when he starts to calculate the exporter's expenses and profit. His allowance of $1.26 per quintal for expenses is absurdly high, for leaving out of the a/c, the Ryeterms risk item, these do not amount to more than say $0.35, against which the exporter has the value of his second hand empty bags as a credit. But C. H. N. G. is still wider of the mark when he talks of the equivalent in Argentine currency of the Liverpool price of 31¼ per quarter. The quarter spoken of is one of 480 lbs, not, as C. H. N. G. states, one of 36.35lbs. Now 480 lbs. is 217.5 kilos, and 31¼ at 49d. exchange equals $17.43, and would work out to an equivalent of $8.01 paper per quintal, not $13.45 as your correspondent makes out. Deducting from $8.01 the freight as calculated by C. H. N. G., and taking no account whatever of expenses, we get the nett proceeds to the exporter down to $4.29, a vastly different proposition to that propounded by your sapient correspondent.

It may interest this gentleman to know that during the last two or three months there has not been a single day when prices in this market show any thing but a loss on the current selling prices in Liverpool coupled with current freights and exchange.

All sensible people sympathise with any genuine attempt to improve the lot of the colonist, but I suggest that such wildly incorrect statements as those made by C.H.N.G. and referred to above are calculated to do more harm than good, inasmuch as to anyone who has the most elementary knowledge of the subject, their only effect is to discredit any other, possibly better founded, assertions made by their author.

Yours, etc.,
LIVERPUDLIAN.

Rosario,
Sept. 6, 1915.

A SUGGESTION.

(To the Editor).

Sir.—In yesterday's HERALD Mr. C. H. N. G. deals with maize. Would you kindly ask him to base his calculating for the exporter, at 31¼, per quarter of 480 lbs. (217.75 ks.)? I am sure he will convince himself of his mistake. Maize sells on 480 lbs. (the quarter), and the figure 35.36 of C. H. N. G. makes the whole difference.

Yours, etc.,
ROBERTO ROIS.

Rosario, Sept. 6.

QUESTIONS FOR C.H.N.G.

(To the Editor).

Sir.—Your correspondent C.H.N.G. has supplied two very interesting articles on the maize question.

Might the writer, however, be permitted to ask why C.H.N.G. commences to study the production and sale of maize from the time the maize is in troja only. If Mr. C.H.N.G. is genuinely interested in studying the interests of the colonists is it not better that any exposition should begin at the beginning?

If anything practical is to come of the study of this class it must rest on a solid basis. Personally I have no time to waste—so before commencing would like the assurance of Mr. C.H.N.G. that our discussion shall not be limited to the so-called parasites; viz., local buyer, broker, and exporter, but shall extend to all the parasites and the causes that render colonization in this republic unsatisfactory alike to estanciero, colonist, almacenero, local buyer, broker, and exporter.

Would Mr. C.H.N.G. therefore please supply the following data as to the conditions under which the maize is grown in the Casalengo district:

(1) Rental paid by colonists or percentage of yield given for use of land.

(2) Conditions of contract, length of same and restrictions re use of the ground.

(3) Conditions re thrashing.

(4) Taxes paid by colonists on carts, maize, and other machinery. (This to include both Provincial and Municipal taxation).

(5) Conditions re division or participation of owner of soil in livestock (fowls, pigs, goats, sheep, etc.) that colonists might breed on the land.

(6) The feed on the land, after crop is removed, to whom does it belong, and has renter unreserved right to use same.

(7) Are the chacras sub-divided so that effective use is insured to the chacarero.

(8) Is the chacarero tied to any particular almacén.

(9) Do they lease direct from the land owner or are they occupying the land under sub-lease from "colonizadores." When we get these points set out by Mr. C.H.N.G. perhaps we will see if the parasites that he mentions are the real cause of the miserable conditions of the maize growers.

Perhaps we may find that the "parasites" named are but the product of conditions, and while the apparent, not the real cause of the poor results obtained by maize growers—Every man is out to do the best he can for himself, and here have the absolute right to use his faculties to best advantage.

The "local buyer" referred to by your correspondent, becomes buyer if the Colonos are free men, because he pays the best price—If the Colonos are not free men, why are they not free?

Hence the point I raise as essential and initial to the full, clear and concise understanding of the question. The broker gets $30.10 out of the sale or ½%. Well, if he pays "Patentes" he is surely entitled to get the best commission possible, in return for his work. If anyone else would do it equally well for less, the local buyer would employ that man—for the local buyers do not pay the brokers a commission "por amor el arte," but to get the best possible price out of the exporters. As to the exporters' profits of $4832.30. We'll discuss these later.

Perhaps if we had a lump less Socialism and a lump more of Liberty we'd find that the monopoly held by certain exporters would disappear—but more re this anon.

Yours, etc.

F. M. B.

PERFECT FENCING

— from the —
ONLY Factory for Wire
Moulding.

C. DELVEAUX,
Rivadavia 2247, Bs. As.

U.T. 3618 Mitre

IMPORTANT SALES OF SHORTHORN CATTLE

MESSRS. YRIONDO AND CO.

Yesterday afternoon the Messrs. Yriondo and Co. sold that select consignment of pedigree Shorthorns, imported by Mr. George Campbell. Trade throughout was quite firm and satisfactory sales were affected for the lot of bulls offered, which gave the high average of over $4,000 each. The progeny of Mr. Campbell's previous consignments have made a great reputation in this republic, which in no small way accounted for the firm demand experienced for the consignment just sold.

List of Sales.

1 Shorthorn bull, Huntley Standard, sold to Sr. Marcelino Ugarte, at $9500.

1 Shorthorn bull, Diamond Boss, sold to Sr. Marcelino Ugarte, at $7500.

1 Shorthorn bull, Butterfly Chief, sold to Sr. Miguel Pedro Saralegui, at $6000.

1 Shorthorn bull, Harthill Stamp, sold to Sr. Alexandro Gallinal, at $6000.

1 Shorthorn bull, Royal Saphock, sold to Sr. Pedro Estanguet, at $4000.

1 Shorthorn bull, Proud Brutus, sold to Sr. Enrique Baker, at $4000.

1 Shorthorn bull, Macalister, sold to Sr. Alijandro Gallinal, at $3500.

1 Shorthorn bull, Colston Red Duke 2nd, sold to Sr. Julio Solané, at $2900.

1 Shorthorn bull, Northern King, sold to Sr. Antonio Boero, at $2400.

1 Shorthorn bull, Ardlethen Augustina, sold to Sr. Alijandro Gallinal, at $3000.

1 Shorthorn bull, Red Start, sold to Sr. Enrique Baker, at $3000.

1 Shorthorn bull, Rupert, sold to Sr. Ramon Benegas, at $1800.

1 Shorthorn bull, Victor, sold to Sr. Luis Blaquier, at $2600.

1 Shorthorn bull, Deeside Thro, sold to Sr. Alijandro Gallinal, at $3400.

1 Shorthorn bull, Royal Crown's Last, sold to Sr. Pedro Estanguet, at $2100.

1 Shorthorn bull, Martinet, sold to Sr. Edmundo Perkins, at $2900.

MESSRS. A. BULLRICH AND CO.

Yesterday forenoon a most representative assemblage of Cabañeras and estancieros attended the dispersion sale of Shorthorn cattle, held at Cabaña Italica, Banfield, the property of Señor Pablo Spinola. The sale commenced with the stock bulls, Señor Arturo Bullrich officiating in the rostrum. Bidding was by no means brisk, but eventually the old bulls were sold at fairly satisfactory figures. The better quality younger bulls experienced more competition, while a number of yearlings were making near the two thousand dollar mark, and would be the dearest of any bulls sold. There was a great number of cows, and as varied in their quality, though the absence of some of the plums of the bunch were noticeable to those acquainted with the property, which suggests the possible re-formation of this herd, with the proved breeders, as a foundation. The better quality cows, or more correctly, those animals whose pedigrees captivated the fancy of interested experts, were keenly competed for, and high prices were secured. The cows were shown in very poor form, while the way many of the heifers had smashed themselves before submitting to be tied up, was very adversely commented on by buyers. The prices realised were quite satisfactory, considering the low condition and many defective udders, noticeable on a large percentage of the cows.

MR. JOSEPH SHEPHERD'S CONSIGNMENT MAKE A SATISFACTORY TRADE.

The trade opened somewhat slow, bids being difficult, and the first and second animals to enter the ring were undoubtedly bargains for their purchasers. The third bull to be put up was the fine year-old bull "Linkfield Conqueror," for which competition was somewhat more animated, he finally being knocked down at $5200 to Sr. Carlos Duggan for Cabaña Sittyton, San Ramon, the property of Duggan Bros. The remainder of the bulls experienced a somewhat firmer demand and prices on the whole were quite satisfactory. There is no hiding the fact that values have dropped somewhat from the first sales; still, for bulls shown in as good bloom as this lot undoubtedly were, appeal to the public and secure a satisfactory sale.

It is understood that at Mr. Shepherd's next sale many prize-winning bulls in Britain will be put up for auction, when their superior quality is sure to attract a large attendance of likely buyers.

Mr. Joseph Shepherd, of the firm of Messrs. J. and W. Shepherd, London, has shipped eighty-two Shorthorn bulls to Buenos Aires, and thirteen Herefords and seven Shorthorns to Montevideo, this year. Amongst these consignments are some very valuable stocks, viz.:—One bull bought from Mr. J. M. Strickland, Brandsby, Yorks, which Mr. Shepherd paid a very high figure last year. He also has the first prize and champion two-year-old bull at Penrith, bought from Mr. Barnes; the first prize yearling bull at Penrith, bought from Mr. Harrison; the first prize yearling bull at Perth, bought from Mr. Buttar; and the first prize yearling bull at Aberdeen, bought from Mr. Anderson. Mr. Shepherd secured a handsome white bull in Scotland, which was bred by Mr. MacWilliam. Amongst the Herefords he secured the first prize winner at Hereford, and he has also got four bulls from His Majesty's Royal Farms at Windsor.

SALE LIST

Messrs. A. Bullrich and Co. sold at their yard on Friday, Sept. 3, the following Shorthorn pedigree bulls imported by Mr. Joseph Shepherd:—

1 Shorthorn bull, Rosselli, sold to Messrs. Seré and Lacau at $3000.

1 Shorthorn bull, Red Rufus, sold to Messrs. J. A. Otamendi Bros. at $3200.

1 Shorthorn bull, Linkfield Conqueror, sold to Mr. C. Duggan at $5200.

1 Shorthorn bull, Gladiator, sold to Mr. V. Scala at $3600.

1 Shorthorn bull, Ronald, sold to Mr. M. B. de Anchorena at $3000.

1 Shorthorn bull, Red Prince, sold to Mr. V. J. Rodriguez at $4500.

1 Shorthorn bull, Fullyhogue Volunteer, sold to Mr. S. B. de Anchorena at $2600.

1 Shorthorn bull, Oliver, sold to Mr. C. J. Lenon at $2400.

1 Shorthorn bull, Cabraton Baronet, sold to Mr. J. S. de Anchorena at $3000.

1 Shorthorn bull, Golden Masterpiece, sold to Messrs. Seré and Lacau at $1800.

1 Shorthorn bull, Sanquhar Christmas Gift, sold to Mr. M. del Castillo at $1900.

1 Shorthorn bull, Bloomhill Master John, sold to Mr. J. S. de Anchorena at $3100.

1 Shorthorn bull, King Albert, sold to Messrs. J. A. Otamendi Bros. at $2200.

1 Shorthorn bull, May King, sold to Mr. F. B. Arzeno at $1900.

1 Shorthorn bull, Burgie King, sold to Mr. J. S. de Anchorena at $2300.

1 Shorthorn bull, Starlight, sold to Mr. B. Lynch at $2000.

1 Shorthorn bull, Captain Ramsden, sold to Mr. J. S. de Anchorena at $2800.

1 Shorthorn bull, Merrv Count, sold to Mr. G. Althabe at $2700.

1 Shorthorn bull, Menteith Pride, sold to Mr. A. Malatesta at $1900.

Average price: $2794.

26 bulls sold at from $750 to $4800, giving an average of $1738.

113 cows and heifers realised from $200 to $3050, giving an average price of $664.

92 cows with calves at foot from $220 to $1500, giving an average of $660 per head.

Total sales amounted to $181,100.

Mainly About People

Mr. M. Flynn and his daughter, Mrs. Jane Latfan, of Saladillo, are in the Capital at present.

Mr. Jack Last, from Mendoza, is going home by the Ruahine to enlist in the Royal Flying Corps.

The Western Telegraph Company have a message from Bologna to Alfredo Ventura, Paraná 232; also one from Limerick to Carmody c/o Romney, Charcas 3830.

The following guests arrived at the Phoenix Hotel: Mr. and Mrs. Walter B. Smith and family, Mrs. and Miss MacLeod, Mrs. H. H. Page and Mr. J. Kenneth Parkes.

The death is recorded of Mr. P. Byrne, brother of Mr. James Byrne, from wounds received in France, fighting in the trenches. General regret will be felt by his numerous friends.

Mr. Pancho Thompson and family are arriving by the Tubantia on Saturday morning next.

Mrs. Newton W. Cronhelm has returned to town from the camp after spending a most enjoyable holiday.

On Sunday last, Señorita Adela Del Giudici, a young pianist who won the gold medal in the Weber Musical Institute last year, gave a concert before a large and, to judge by warm applause, a well pleased audience.

Mr. George McHardy jr. and Mr. Sidney McHardy have arranged to leave for North America at an early date, with the view of acquiring a first-hand knowledge at the workshops of the Ford Motor Company.

The Rev. Dr. McLaughlin leaves for Rosario Saturday evening and will preach there on Sunday at both morning and night services in the First Methodist Episcopal Church on Boulevard Oroño. The occasion is the anniversary Sunday for which special preparations are always made and the great event of the day is always the gathering and celebration for the children and young people at night.

Mr. Joseph Robinson, late Principal and founder of the English Higher Grade School, 4965-71 Calle Monroe, Villa Urquiza, F. C. C. A., who left Buenos Aires on March 17, 1915, to join the army, has, after four months' training with the Inns of Court Officers' Training Corps, been granted a commission as 2nd Lieutenant in the 7th Northumberland Fusiliers (Fighting Fifth) stationed at Alnwick, Northumberland, and will shortly leave with his regiment for the front. He wishes to be remembered to his old pupils, their parents and all his friends in Buenos Aires.

Mr. C. Lackie, has arranged to leave by a New Zealand boat, for England, when he will offer his services to the Government. During the time he has been in this Republic, Mr. Lackie has held several important posts, and lately was acting as a horse-buyer for Mr. A. Machattie, in selecting and purchasing suitable classes of horses for export. A well built young man, possessing no mean powers as an athlete he will be an acquisition to the forces, and likely to make his presence felt, if ever he gets to close quarters with the enemy. His many friends wish him a safe return to the Argentine, when "duty has been done."

DAY BY DAY IN BAHIA BLANCA.

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

Sept. 5.

Some little while ago, Mrs. Pilling underwent a serious operation in the British Hospital, where she is still an inmate, although, according to latest reports, proceeding very satisfactorily towards recovery.

Mrs. Holt Green and family have now left Bahia Blanca in order to take up their residence in Buenos Aires.

Services will be held here next week at the Scotch Church in the morning, and at the Port in the evening, the preacher being the Rev. Mr. Nicoll, B.D.

Mr. Ferrar returned from England last Friday after an absence of five months.

News has been received of the death of Mr. Stanley David, who left the Southern Railway at the beginning of the war in order to go home, where on arrival with his brother, they both joined the Welsh Guards. It is to be a memorial.

Visitors during the last week here have been Mr. and Mrs. Reld, Mr. and Mrs. Trennock, Mr. and Mrs. J. Sewell and Messrs. Pickering, Forcet, Bower, Bolley, and Hickman.

News has been received from England of the birth of a son to Mr. and Mrs. Mackie, who left Ingeniero White a few months ago in order that the former might volunteer for active service. Mr. Mackie is now serving in the Royal Army Medical Corps.

The wedding of Miss Rosita Samuels and Mr. F. Diaz is taking place here at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Brooking, in Calle Guemes, on Thursday, the 9th. After the ceremony they are to leave for Buenos Aires the same night, and on their return will take up their residence in the town of Tres Arroyos, where Mr. Diaz is in business.

Mr. Kelly, the chief electric engineer of the Pacific Railway, has been down here this week and returned to Buenos Aires on Friday night.

DAY BY DAY IN CORDOBA.

(From Our Correspondent.)

September 6.

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Ditlevsen have returned to town from their honeymoon and are stopping at the Plaza Hotel before moving outside for the summer months.

Mr. Hugh Wilson returned to the Capital on the night train Saturday after a short stay in town.

Mr. and Mrs. V. R. Sadleir have taken a quinta at Alta Gracia for the summer season.

Still another of Cordoba's small community of Britishers left for England to join the colours when Mr. Charles Sadleir, brother of Mr. V. R. Sadleir, took the night train on Saturday for Buenos Aires where he will embark for the old country to help the Allies defeat the "Huns." Among the friends gathered at the Station to say "Good Bye," and to wish him a speedy and safe return were Mr. and Mrs. Sadleir, Miss Nellie Mayne, Mr. Arthur Hughes, Mr. and Mrs. Harris Smith, Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Babb and Mr. William O'Farrell.

Mr. Dunlap, of the Galena Oil Company, has returned to Cordoba after a holiday of four months, the majority of the time having been spent in Canada and Nova Scotia.

A former member of the Cordoba Athletic Club, Second Lieutenant Francis Arthur Sutton, has been awarded the Military Cross for bravery in the Dardanelles.

Mr. Stanley W. Lewis was a visitor in town last week on his way from Alta Gracia to Buenos Aires.

Mr. G. E. Morton has returned from a trip to the Capital.

Mr. Arthur Moroni, a young member of one of our leading families, has signified his intention of entering the cage of the lion Menelick, (of the Jockey Club Circus), who has killed two of his domadores in the past, on Monday night.

DAY BY DAY IN ROSARIO.

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

September 7.

In the latest issues of "United Empire" I note that a number of new Rosario members of the Colonial Institute have been enrolled. Amongst others are Mr. J. P. Crouch, M. Inst. C.E., Mr. Alan Hudson, Mr. W. H. W. Hine and Mr. C. H. Montgomery. There will soon be enough to justify one of those periodical luncheons which are so successful in Buenos Aires, (Mr. Warden please note).

The Roldan Tennis Club has taken on a new lease of life. The Courts have been put in good playing order, and a provisional committee elected comprising Messrs. Haeggland, Jarrett and Delamere. Mr. Marsh has resigned the presidency, and Mr. Seddon, the Secretary, has found another sphere of activity in the Epworth League. In about a month's time another meeting will be held to elect a permanent Committee.

Inspector Frank Battcock, F.C.C.A. Rosario, has been seriously ill with inflammation of the lungs and pleurisy. Under Dr. Frend's treatment he is on a fair way to recovery.

Mr. William Christopherson left for Montevideo on Monday.

Miss Searle and the ladies of the Alberdi Work Party propose to hold a sale towards the end of the year, —probably on December 8— in order to raise what is necessary to pay off the remaining debt on the High School Classrooms.

A Children's Service will be held in Talleres Hall on Sunday, September 19, at 2.30 p.m. Collection on behalf of the Prince of Wales Fund.

Mr. George McHardy, Jr., who has been for some time in the employment of the Ford Motor Company in Rosario is about to take a trip to North America in order to study at headquarters the mechanism and working of the Ford Motor Car.

Mr. W. C. Guilding, of the F.C.C.C., is to be congratulated on obtaining the post of Assistant Stores Superintendent to the Antofagasta and Bolivia Railway, with headquarters at Antofagasta. He will leave in the course of a few weeks, and New Alberdi will sadly miss not only Mr. Guilding himself, but Mrs. Guilding and the children, including the inimitable Billy.

I see in the Talleres and Alberdi Magazine that on the occasion of the Bishop's visit the other day he gave a short address to the Talleres Ladies Work party on the subject of Women's work.

Mrs. Rickards has received a letter of thanks from the Belgian Consul in response to a collection contributed by the English Sunday School, to the Belgian Relief Fund.

Miss Edith Thomas, a sister of Mr. Chas. Thomas, the well-known ship's chandler, sails to-morrow for England by the s.s. Thessaly.

A meeting of the committee of the Sailors' Home Rosario, is to be held this evening.

Mrs. A. M. Parry, wife of the late Capt. Parry, and her son Mr. H. E. Parry, leave for England by the s.s. Thessaly, which sails to-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. Mr. Parry, who has been employed as bookkeeper with the firm of Proctor, Garratt, Marston, Ltd., is offering his services to his country.

Mr. C. Chapman, who as I mentioned last week also intends volunteering for active service, left on Sunday night for Buenos Aires, and sailed for England by the Highland Rover to-day.

FLOODS IN ITALY

BARI STREETS UNDER WATER

Rome, Sept. 4.

Telegrams from Bari report a big flood in the province, the rivers being over their banks. Thirteen persons are stated to have been drowned and several houses washed away. The streets in Bari city are five feet deep in water.

IN THE OFFICE CHAIR

"And in some corner of the hubbub coucht

"Make game of that which makes as much of thee."

OMAR KHAYYAM.

The Insolent Hun.

There is daily accumulating evidence that the reckless part of the German Government has the upper hand, and that the sinking of the Hesperian and of the Arabic were deliberate acts intended as a defiance to the United States Government.

The extraordinary and impudent acknowledgment of the Austrian Ambassador Herr Dumba, that he has been guilty of intermeddling in American trade affairs, by order of his Government, seems to have taken Mr. Lansing's breath away by its coolness. Well it might. What will happen now it is difficult to say, but the immediate ejection of such an Ambassador and refusal to accept another without an apology would be the minimum reparation one would expect to see exacted.

The Wicked Empresas Extranjeras.

Railway companies are by many looked upon, like Tax Collectors, and the Customs, as being Egyptians whom it is lawful to spoil on any and every occasion. "La Razon" very heartily endorses this view, and, while slating the Railway Companies of the Republic, that is the accursed "Empresas Extranjeras," for sucking the life-blood of the nation (which would be badly off without them) and demanding that they shall make roads wherever they are wanted, at their own expense, strongly objects to their revising their tariffs in any but the downward direction. If they are losing money, Que importa? Have they not the glorious privilege of working for us? And should they not issue free passes over their entire system to everybody who is distantly related to anybody else?

The pass business has undoubtedly been much abused. Everybody who thought he had a "pull" wanted a pass. Sometimes they got it, and it was worked for all it was worth. The Companies now find that owing to increased charges of many kinds and the continual threats of further expense, that a rise in fares and freight is needed, and "La Razon," without reflecting that its own noise is probably a contributory cause, bursts forth into another series of fierce denunciations without weighing the other considerations for a moment. "La Razon's" ideal of railway management appears to be the Government State lines, where the passenger needs an insurance policy along with his ticket, where the rolling stock is holding together by the skin of its teeth, and the traffic runs and arrives as Providence thinks fit. "Chacun á son gout," but the fiery scribes who are daily unleashed on the Avenida to fix their fangs in the quarters of the Ferrocarriles, might try to be less one-sided. As it is, they support whoever is against the Companies just as they consistently attack British enterprise of any kind. In these times, the inference is obvious.

BRITON.

THAW SUES FOR DIVORCE

ALLEGED INFIDELITY OF EVELYN NESBIT.

New York, Sept. 2.

It is reported from Pittsburg that Harry Thaw, who has been released after having undergone a long sentence of confinement in a lunatic asylum for the murder of Stanford White, has commenced proceedings against his wife, Evelyn Nesbit, for divorce, on the ground that she has been unfaithful to him.

Our Point of View: "Herald" Leading Articles of the Week.

DISSATISFIED WELSH SETTLERS

FRIDAY, September 3, 1915.

Our evening contemporary "La Razon" has unnecessarily departed from what might be considered its duty, in order to deliver a gross attack on the character of the Welsh settlers of Chubut. "La Razon's" outburst is obviously one of pique or irritation. The paper happens to be a hot champion of everything Argentine. When the Welsh settlers, or some of them declared themselves disgusted or disappointed with conditions in their territory, the paper attributed the discontent to the machinations of the wicked Australians, and stated that paid emissaries of the Commonwealth were here, stirring the Welsh to revolt. This story was discredited, and the settlers repeated their grievances. Now, without attempting to disprove their charges that they have been badly treated, "La Razon" merely abuses them, and seeks to deprive them of all moral character, by hinting at a collective Welsh viciousness and incapacity, which multiply by one hundred the work of the Government and the police.

The attack on the Welsh settlers is as unwarranted, as it is in execrable taste. The Welsh people may not be exactly the chosen of the Gods. The Welsh settlers of Chubut may not all be even good Welshmen, but it is obviously ridiculous to charge the whole lot of them with unnamed vices, and human failings possessed by them in a degree beyond that which might exist in any other community, no matter from what part of the world it might be drawn. If "La Razon" had said that some of the settlers were lazy, or thriftless, or incapable, or vicious, it might be true. Probably some of them are; in fact it would be strange if it were not so, for we doubt whether there is in any part of the world any number of a given nationality, in which do not exist some possessed of the failings to which all humans are likely to fall victims. There are bad Englishmen, bad Italians, bad Germans, and even bad Argentines, but to say that all the Welsh settlers in Chubut are bad is quite clearly foolish. By such a sweeping denunciation "La Razon" easily convicts itself of being ridiculous, just as we would were we to say that all the Welsh in Chubut were angels.

There is absolutely no doubt that conditions in Chubut, so far as the young settlers are concerned, are not satisfactory. If "La Razon," instead of abusing the Welsh wholesale would only look into their grievances it might become a little more sympathetic and a lot more sensible. It might learn for instance that there are many well-to-do Welsh settlers, who are almost Argentine in sentiment, and certainly well-satisfied with their lot. They are industrious, and in every sense decent and valuable citizens of the Argentine Nation. But there are many others, particularly of the younger generation, who are land hungry, and discontented, simply because, through being situated so far from the centre of Government, their natural aspirations have been overlooked. The land question is always an acute one when there are many young men growing up and seeking opportunities to make their own fortunes, and archaic land-laws, or Governmental neglect stand between them and their desires.

There is something wrong in Chubut. That is quite clear. The Boer settlers, as well as the Welsh are dissatisfied, and the main cause of that is met with all over the Republic—the difficulty of acquiring the titles to land, and the insecurity engendered by casual administration, and broken promises. We can assure "La Razon" that the Australian

SHALL THERE BE PEACE?

SATURDAY, September 4, 1915.

Germany has approached the United States on the question of bringing about peace. We are prepared to hear denials that she has done so, but the evidence is strongly conclusive that Germany has made the first overtures, and the conditions set forth, as the basis for discussion, appear to have been made nowhere but in Germany. The United States is the one country to which desires for peace should be broached. She is the one country to bring the belligerents together when peace is to be made. Let us therefore believe that Germany has approached the United States, and let us for the moment accept Germany's desires as being sincere. Let us also recognise that the terms proposed by Germany are not her final terms, because no nation suing for peace asks the minimum of acceptable conditions at the first request. Then, lest after our discussion of the possibility of peace, we be accused of being intractable jingoes, let us assert that when war first loomed up as a probability in July, 1914, we expressed the sincere hope that it would be avoided, and that Britain would be able to keep out of it, and maintain her honour.

Nobody desires the war to continue a day longer than is necessary. Everybody would be glad to see it over. The effects of it have been world-wide and terrible. Civilization has been dethroned, and Carnage and Hatred reign as Twin-Monarchs over half of Christendom. But before they can be thrown down; before there can be an abiding peace, something more substantial than Germany's promises must be obtained, and to accede to her requests, or to even half of them, would be a crime against Civilization, and the acknowledgment of the power of the evils which have taken their place. We want peace, but we want it on better terms than Germany can be expected to accept for some time to come. If we have convinced ourselves, as we believe we have, that Germany is responsible for this war, and that Germany possesses ambitions and evil designs, how can we possibly listen to her terms? The British people have been told time and again, that the end of such a cruel war, forced upon them and their Allies, cannot be compromise with Germany. How then can we bargain with her, and take her promises in payment of her debt?

Take one item of the suggested terms of peace. The sovereignty of Belgium is to be restored, and her neutrality is to be guaranteed by Germany. Before Germany trampled upon every vestige of Belgian sovereignty and honour, she herself was one of the guarantors of Belgium's neutrality. Imbued as she undoubtedly is with the foul doctrine that might makes right, and that the end justifies the means; that treaties and guarantees may be broken, if necessity demands, or when the ob-

Government is not at the bottom of the trouble. So far as we have been able to ascertain no Australian Government emigration agents have ever operated in this country, and certainly since the outbreak of the war, immigration to Australia has been stopped. In any case it is neither wise nor effective to abuse the Australians, nor to endeavour to rob the Welsh settlers of their character. The sane and proper thing to do is to analyse their grievances. If they are foolish, then by all means demonstrate the fact. If they are sound, try and remedy them. No good is accomplished either way by simply abusing in a vulgar manner, and on a wholesale scale the community from which the grievances emanate.

servance conflicts with German ideas of national aggrandisement, how can the Allies accept her word? She talks of establishing an international court or convention to govern certain things. What respect has she ever shown for what laws already exist, and if peace be made with her now, what respect will she show in future for those things which in this war she has never respected? It is not for Germany to guarantee her conduct in the future. She can furnish no guarantee that any self-respecting nation would honour. The guarantees to Civilization for Germany's conduct must come not from her, but from the Allies. They claim to have accepted the task of putting Germany as a menace to civilization into the limbo of horrible memory. They must fulfil their task.

It must not be left to Germany to say that she will maintain the peace into which she desires to enter. It is the duty of the Allies to say that she will, and to see that she will, not because she wants to keep it, but because they will render her incapable of breaking it. To talk of crushing Germany, or conquering Germany, or causing the German Nation to disappear is ridiculous. There is room in the world for every nation, great or small, but there is no room in the world for the one nation that wants to swallow the others, until that one nation is rendered impotent for evil. It is the duty of the Allies to see that Belgium is never again threatened with national extinction. There is one way, and one way only to do this, and that is to beat Germany so decisively, that she will be content in future to be satisfied with any expansion that may be hers by natural right, and by natural growth. The sword shall not be the arbiter of the right of lesser nations to exist in peace on her frontiers.

"Germany is looking for an inconclusive peace which will give her the opportunity of preparing for future conflict; an inconclusive peace now would be almost as bad as an utter defeat." These are the words of the "Review of Reviews," the most pacific organ in the United Kingdom. The truth could not be better expressed. A peace now, would be merely an armistice favourable to Germany, and profitable to the armament manufacturers. The world is sick of war, and it is so sick that it will never want another conflict. For this very reason, there can be no peace agreement now, unless the world can be thoroughly satisfied that war will not recur between the same combatants for a century. To make that certain this war must be properly finished. The souls of the hundreds of thousands of brave men who have given their lives to win the peace that will endure, cry, not for vengeance, but that their lives shall not have been given in vain. The living should pray for the peace that will last, not for the armistice that will be merely the breathing space between two periods of sanguinary slaughter.

GERMANY'S SOUTH AMERICAN PROGRAMME

SUNDAY, September 5, 1915.

We think it would be unwise, and certainly dangerous to the influence and trading interests of Britain and her Allies, to neglect the warning conveyed in the cablegram published in our issue of yesterday with reference to the programme of the newly established "German Economic Union for South America." This organization, which may be relied upon to have the highest official backing in Germany, has been formed with the avowed object of providing that which is stated, in the following quotation from one of the speeches delivered at the inauguration, to be vital:—"The commercial interests of Germany require, and must have powerful moral support, backed up by the influence of the public powers and the financial institutions of Germany." This means nothing less than that the Union is under government auspices, and most probably is to enjoy government subsidies. Herr Dernburg, formerly Germany's Colonial Minister is the President.

It is quite clear to those who have studied German methods in Argentina since the war broke out, that the newly formed Union is to carry on the work which hitherto has been undertaken unofficially by the German merchants and private individuals here. Immediately upon the outbreak of war the Germans in Argentina came together as one solid party, and organised for action. Commercial institutions and private individuals provided unlimited funds for propaganda and defensive purposes, and presently there was complete organization and system in the method of presenting the German view-point, and influencing public thought. It was obvious that the movement had official support or patronage from the start. We described the movement as the effort to "Germanize Argentina."

With the capacity for system and organization which has characterised the Germans as a military people, the local Germans set to work to supplant British commercial influence and French culture, by German commercial and political influence and German sentiment. The lines on which they worked should be familiar to all HERALD readers. They flooded the country with German views regarding the war, its causes, its origin, and its conduct. Every German business house was a wholesale distributing agent for circular matter, prepared with a special idea to influencing Argentine thought. They established their own paper, printed in the Spanish language; they ensured its financial stability by turning into its exchequer all the money they could possibly spend on advertisements; they gave it the widest circulation. In addition they brought influence to bear on the native Argentine press wherever they could, and did not hesitate when occasion demanded to offer subsidies to certain papers in order that these organs might advance the German cause. As we have said this work, hitherto done unofficially, but nevertheless thoroughly, is now to be undertaken by a powerful organization, officially supported and doubtless a beneficiary under the German system of subsidisation, a system which gave Germany her mercantile marine.

One direction in which the German Economic Union for South America is to work is to "influence the spirit and ideals of the South American press, which is at present thoroughly impregnated with French culture." Do not let us delude ourselves that this is merely a vain hope on the part of the Germans. They are thorough—as thorough as they are unscrupulous. They can by exerting all their organized energy and their consolidated wealth, materially influence the press. Their organization can achieve other successes, and it can fail only by being countered by another organization—the marshalled forces of the British traders and their allies. The HERALD has for months striven to arouse the British people to the sense of their danger in a commercial sense. Our efforts have not always been kindly received, but we believe that we have accomplished something, and that belief leads us to urge as strongly as we can, that the British Chamber of Commerce should at once take drastic action to meet the powerful organization which has been inaugurated in Germany. The duty is also upon every British commercial man individually, to prepare to checkmate the design to oust British trade and influence from this field. Every manager or agent for British houses should bring the matter under the notice of his principals in the United Kingdom. Action is wanted. It must be immediate and vigorous. With the least possible delay an organization must be secured that will meet the German designs and defeat them. If the warning be not heeded, then as a people we shall be repeating our folly of pre-war times. We were caught unprepared for military war, are we going to remain unprepared for the commercial war?

PROGRESS OF THE WAR

TUESDAY, September 7, 1915.

Apart from the success of the German operations against Russia, the military situation has practically not changed in the last month, and only by conjecture upon the results of certain present operations, of which the cables give us merely a hint, can we foresee any important developments. In all theatres of the great war, except Russia, the armies are stationary, though by no means inactive. The "digging-in" process has gone on to such an extent that it would appear almost an impossibility for one side to "dig" the other out. This is the case in Flanders and France and at the Dardanelles, and it is also most probably true of the situation so far as it concerns the Italians. That it is not so on the Russian side is more clearly than ever attributable to the immense superiority which the Germans have over the forces of the Czar in the matter of plentiful supplies of ammunition. The Russian is one of the best fighters in the world, and proved it so late as the Russo-Japanese war. Were it possible to hold trenches with bayonets against a rain of high explosive shells, the Russians would never have been forced back as they have been.

The shortage of munitions has been almost fatal to the Russians, and in view of what the enemy has accomplished it is impossible to feel certain that the German aim to capture Petrograd will not succeed. That it will be easily accomplished no one can believe. The Russians are already making all preparations for the defence of the capital, and that possession of it will be stubbornly contested with the Germans there is no doubt. Any success they may achieve will cost them very dearly, without any commensurate gain beyond a moral one. We do not say that Petrograd will be taken, but that it is seriously menaced cannot be denied. The Germans are reported to be almost at the point of taking Riga, and there is possibly some truth in the statement that they are present in the gulf with their fleet and with transports conveying an army which is to be landed.

Should the German operations against Riga meet with success, they will be in a position to launch an attack against Petrograd. If this attack can be pressed before winter sets in, there is some possibility of it being successful. If, however, the Russians can hold their present positions, or even a good defensive line further back, until the snow comes to their aid, all Germany's hopes of further successes against Russia will be over. This opinion we base on the belief that Japan is making tremendous efforts to meet Russia's deficiency in munitions, and that during the winter, when a lull must come in the fighting, Russia will be able to accumulate a reserve of ammunition which will give her more than an equal chance with the enemy when activity is renewed in the spring.

It may be expected that if Germany finds herself unable to make further headway against Russia owing to the severity of the winter, she will turn her attention elsewhere. She may decide on making a terrific onslaught against the Allies in Flanders, but here the issue can be awaited with confidence. If in the early days of the war Germany could not break the Allied line, thin and weakly held as it was, she can never succeed now in smashing it. While she has been devoting all her energy to the task of driving the Russians back, the Allies on the western front have enjoyed comparative immunity from attack, and their lines have consequently been strengthened by fortifications, their numbers increased, and their stores of ammunition built up. It is officially stated that Britain is now in a position to conduct operations involving the expenditure of ammunition on an unprecedented scale without any fear of a shortage arising.

Within the last day or two we have read of an artillery attack having commenced all along the line, and being conducted with a fury without parallel in history. Such news would indicate that the British and French are preparing the way for a decisive move against the German lines. If this be correct, then the offensive for which the Russians have waited is now in progress. Should it be attended by any measure of success, the entire situation may be altered suddenly and violently. An appreciable advance on the part of the British and French would necessarily upset the German campaign in Russia. If the offensive cannot be taken now, then it is clear that the troops will have to spend another winter in the trenches, and we shall presently be talking of what may happen in the spring.

It is, of course, difficult to venture opinions as to the future of the war, or, rather, to venture opinions which time will prove correct. Nobody outside a select group know precisely what plans have been decided upon by the strategists responsible for the conduct of the military operations of the Allies. They may quite possibly have determined to hold fast to positions from which they can never be driven, and allow Germany to dissipate her forces by constant and fruitless attacks. It may be their policy to wait and let the war last as long as is necessary to exhaust Germany, they themselves being assured of the inexhaustibility of their own side.

SENSATIONALISM

WEDNESDAY, September 8, 1915.

This is the day of sensationalism and the sensationalist has come into his kingdom. Signs of the gradual evolution of the dry-as-dust school of journalism into the freer, brighter and better land of sensationalism had not been wanting during the late nineties and earlier years of the present century, but, so far as England was concerned, the real change was not manifest until the advent of the present war. America had awakened to human needs some years previously.

It must not be imagined that in paying homage to the love of sensation we are treading a strange path or advocating a leap into realms contemptible. We are not. Reference to the dictionary will show that "sensational" literary work is that intended to excite violent emotions. This, in effect, is merely stating that it fulfils the intention of practically every author who endeavours to pen an article. Sensationalism, therefore, is not so evil as the lack of it.

The real truth is that the public have, for many years, been living on catch-phrases and parrot-cries. They were assured by the elderly that any journal which attempted to present news in a bright and attractive form must necessarily be a "rag," and that it was "sensational." This latter word became as popular as the more blessed "Mezopotamia." It was left for the United States to approach the problem from a sane standpoint, and, although from a purely British conception of what ought to be, the North American newspaper man has gone to extreme limits in his attempt to excite the emotions, it is nevertheless true that with few exceptions British journalism of the greater sort has soon fit to adopt the majority of the methods of news-presentation and make-up which mark the journalistic progress of to-day.

With a natural respect for British conservatism, no marked change—with the exception of the publication of news on the front page—was adopted. The Great War has however furnished the opportunity for the great plunge and the London press of the year 1915 is a sea of headlines, heavy type, italics, and all that makes the perusal of the daily sheet easy and stimulating.

The change is a good one. To-day the reader is able to grasp instantly a clear conception of what is reported to be happening in the world in which he lives. He is no longer com-

TRADES UNIONISTS AND CONSCRIPTION

THURSDAY, September 9, 1915.

The Trades Union Congress at Bristol has declared against conscription, on the ground that it is contrary to the traditions of the nation, which have always been opposed to militarism. Some better excuse than this will have to be found to justify the refusal of Britain to adopt conscription, if conscription be necessary to her salvation, and we are rather surprised to read of trades unionists putting it forward. The whole history of the trades union movement is one of opposition to, and overthrowing of, conditions which were based on supposed traditional foundations, and it looks rather ridiculous for trades unionists now to be finding much virtue in what they have always fought. It was once a tradition of British trade and commerce that an employer had the right to employ whom he liked, pay what he liked, and impose what he liked in the way of working conditions on his employees. This was a tradition which the trades unionists never showed any hesitation in upsetting, and it is only one of many supposedly sacred traditions which the British people have abandoned in order to better themselves.

No one can deny the importance and value of traditions. A country without traditions is a poor sort of country, and about as poor as the country which has traditions and whose people do not respect them. We have the greatest respect for many traditions of our race and of the country of our birth. One of these traditions we most respect is the belief of the Briton that he should never be a slave, and that his country should remain ever great and free. Another tradition we admire and respect is that Britain can always be relied upon to champion the rights and the integrity of smaller countries; that she is the champion of liberty, and that she has never yet failed to win when she set out to defend a good cause. That these traditions should be maintained we believe is what every self-respecting Briton desires. If they can be maintained, and at the same time all other traditions that are good, or are believed to be good, pelled to read a column of domestic hints before he is allowed to discover that the Germans have been defeated on the Yser; he does not find the reported fall of Lemberg lost amidst a maze of stock and share market quotations. No; instead he knows instantly what is the momentous event that has occurred since he last read printed matter.

Only one type of journal can be found in these times to rail against "sensationalism," and that is the paper which is semi-moribund; the pathetic sheet which seeks to apologise to its readers for the dullness and weary appearance of its own columns by hurling the meaningless charge of "Sensational!" whereas it only asserts—did it but realise the truth—that the competitors are awake while it is still asleep.

All important changes in every sphere of life are dependent for their success upon the education of the public. Aged folk shook their heads sadly when machinery supplanted hand labour; dames in their dotage were convinced that the advent of the steam engine portended the end of the world; and the wise people of the mid-Victorian era were convinced of the absurdity of employing iron in ship construction. Similarly with the shriekers of "Sensational!" They believe they are engaged in denunciation, whereas they are acting the role of heralds and serve only to advertise that which has arrived in our midst.

Sensationalism then is that which appeals to the emotions of humanity. It is the stimulant for which the people yearn; it is evidence of life and vitality in a newspaper. To attempt to thrust it from the eminence which it now holds is a task beyond the capacity of the somnolent. Sensationalism is part of life itself.

whether they are essential or not, can also be obtained, so much the better.

Nobody wishes to destroy anything that is pleasant or harmless. In this latter category we place the British tradition against enforced military service. It is a pleasant and harmless thought that Britain has always managed to raise enough men to win her wars without recourse to compulsion. It is not exactly correct, and those who set great store by the tradition should not forget what history teaches us about the pressed gangs, or the fact that compulsory service was at one time in vogue in England. But this is immaterial. By all means let us enjoy the tradition and maintain it if we can. If we can carry the present war through to a successful issue without conscription let us do so. If we cannot, then we must not lose it, and by losing it see our other and more important traditions shattered, simply because we are not prepared to sacrifice one tradition that after all can be proved to be an historical fiction.

That is the great point about conscription, and the opposition to it on traditional grounds. What does it matter whether we break fifty such traditions, so long as we make sure of winning and living as a nation up to our traditions that do count? If there be any tradition in the maintenance of which our honour is involved, let us maintain it, even though we risk certain defeat, but what possible sense can there be in sticking to a tradition that amounts to nothing but fatuous pride? Apparently the trades unionists would have the Nation adhere to every tradition no matter how foolish such adherence might be, and no matter how terrible the results, rather than throw it aside and win the war. What satisfaction can there possibly be for the Nation, or for the trade unionist section of it, to be able to say in the event of the Nation being beaten through failure to impose conscription, "At any rate we nobly maintained the British tradition that conscription is repugnant?"

Few want conscription and no one wants defeat, but if we cannot avoid both then in the name of commonsense let us accept one to avoid the other. It is not for the trades unionists to say that conscription shall not be imposed on the British people. It is not for us to say that it shall be. The decision rests with the Government of Britain and particularly with that section of the Cabinet which is handling the war. As we have said before if the Government believes that conscription is necessary, let conscription be imposed without delay, and no sane and patriotic Briton will complain. But there must be no arguing. It is not the duty of the Government to consult the trades unionists, or the clergy, or the Lords, or the Press, or anyone else. If conscription be necessary let it come, and let tradition go.

NOISY ARGUMENTS

FROM BELLOWING TO BULLETS.

Some people cannot argue without indulging in the most pointed remarks. Others prefer shots or knife thrusts on the principle of "Parson Pete" of whom it is related that "When all talk was spent

Six shooter had he And Keen Bowie
To back his argument."

Mr. Jacinto Pintos is one of these practical persons with German ideas. Yesterday morning he had a slight disagreement of opinion, at the fonda, 356 Talcahuano with Sres. José Candara and Enrique Torres whose views differed from his on several material grounds.

Considering evidently that such crass and obstinate individuals as those who ventured to differ from him must be better either dead or gaining wisdom by reflection in an hospital bed, the annoyed José pulled out a revolver and fired two shots at them, just to get the range. A Constable of the 3rd Section however promptly seized José, despoiled him of his weapon and cast him into "a loathsome dungeon" or rather the cell for such cases at, the Comisaria.

Public Opinion as expressed in the Argentine Press.

PETROLEUM EXPLOITATION THE TRANSANDINE RAILWAYS

(La Prensa.—September 2).

A synthetic study of the mineral wealth of Argentina has been published in connection with the third Census, wherein it is stated that the exploitation of petroleum is hindered by the lack of adequate means of communication, a difficulty that private firms cannot surmount owing to the heavy expenses involved. This point, says La Prensa, is interesting, if only as drawing attention to the fact that whilst it may be true of the fields in Mendoza, Neuquen, Salta and Jujuy, it is equally undeniable that in places where this difficulty does not exist, as in Comodoro Rivadavia, exploitation is not carried out effectively owing to the economic ignorance of official direction. This despite the fact that the Comodoro Rivadavia deposits are classed as being among the most important in the world.

After eight years exploitation, production does not exceed 6,000 tons per month, 72,000 tons a year, the while the Republic imports half a million tons of oil, excluding the refined kerosene, and consumes some 5,000,000 tons of coal and firewood. Lack of energy on the part of the State is, says La Prensa, responsible for the precarious exploitation of this source of wealth, and the same reason applies to the neglect of the other oil bearing fields throughout the Republic. For, given energetic official action, the question of means of communication would have been solved already. The fact that four fifths of the nation's combustible has to be imported is a drain on local capital, and limits local industry to such an extent that the advisability of fomenting the industry needs no argument. Petroleum as fuel gives 50 per cent more caloric force than coal, and would be admirably adapted to all Argentina's industrial needs if only its production were properly handled.

A TRIUMPH OF AMERICAN DIPLOMACY

(La Nación.—September 2).

La Nación calls attention to the telegrams intimating that an agreement has been arrived at between the Governments of Germany and the United States with reference to submarine warfare. The German Ambassador in Washington signified yesterday to the Secretary of State that his Imperial Government accepts the condition laid down by the United States Government that merchant vessels be not sunk without warning, and further agrees to allow such vessels sufficient time for the disembarkation of passengers and crew. The world, says La Nación, horrified by the case of the Lusitania contemplated with particular anguish the perspective of an indefinite prolongation of the struggle under such conditions of cruelty. Thousands of innocents have succumbed to these unparalleled attacks. The fact of being on board a vessel suspected of carrying contraband, was enough not only to nullify all the privileges of neutrality, but to eliminate every consideration of human pity.

It is now reasonable to hope that the diplomatic entente arrived at between Germany and the United States will put an end to these attacks on non-combatants, and that in future the German submarines will direct their energies to the pursuit of warships flying an enemy flag. This solution of the question, says La Nación must be recognised as a triumph of American diplomacy. It embodies more over the nobility that characterises the American mind and is a fresh service to humanity rendered by the United States, establishing a precedent that one trusts will not be broken whilst civilisation lasts.

(La Prensa.—September 3).

The idea of consolidating South American unity by means of improved methods of communication gains ground daily. For a long time the fact that the Argentine railways stopped short at the frontier line of the Andes was looked on as satisfactory by the people and politicians of Chile. It was stated that by carrying the Argentine lines down to the ports of the Pacific, Chile would lose the advantages likely to accrue from the construction of the Panama Canal, and would also be flooded with Argentine produce, to the exclusion of its own goods. Careful study has however shown, says La Prensa, that this is a mistake, the idea that extension of the Trans-Andine lines would lead to a commercial conquest of Chile being absurd.

Such an idea dates rather from the colonial era, and does not represent the wishes of the two nations. The Panama Canal, whilst giving Chile an alternative route to the Old World, does not mean the abandonment of the Argentine Transandine line, which is equally beneficial to both countries. This is to-day the general feeling in Chile, continues La Prensa, at the same time pointing out that for its part it never has had any doubt about the matter, having always used its influence to this end. Progressive works unite people far more than speeches and outward courtesies. Where the future Transandine lines are to be built is not yet fixed, but both the northern and the southern passes have their advantages, and have been studied by geographical experts with a view to future expansion in the direction indicated.

PAVING IN THE PROVINCE

(La Prensa.—Sept. 7.)

Protest is growing on the part of property owners in the Province of Buenos Aires, who find themselves saddled with heavy expenditure for costly paving works which are sanctioned by the several municipalities without the slightest regard being had to the fact that the property market in general is passing through a critical period. The protest of the San Martin owners is, says La Prensa, echoed by equally important localities unduly exploited by what is dubbed "municipal progress," which in actual practice merely means political favouritism. Seldom is there a paving job put through which does not lend itself to this interpretation. It is indeed the favourite manoeuvre of the Municipalities, who seem to feel that this form of urban development alone shows progress, utterly neglecting other problems of even greater importance.

Not that paving ought to be neglected, but care should be had not to overload the charge on private property, as frequently occurs in the province. If the Municipal Law is examined, continues La Prensa, it will be noticed that whereas the Municipalities are authorised to supervise paving works, such supervision ought to be charged to revenue, they not being legally entitled to make contracts for public works that are to be paid for by the rate-payers. There has been much discussion as to the legal aspect of this matter, which ought, says La Prensa, to be submitted to the Supreme Court in order to decide whether the Municipalities have the right to order paving work to be done at the rate-payer's expense, or whether the latter may repudiate the contract if the work is too costly. At the same time, concludes La Prensa, if the rate-payers persist in their attitude of tacit consent, small wonder that the Municipal authorities take that consent for granted.

THE TIMBER TRADE

(La Nación.—September 3).

One of the national industries that has suffered most from the effects of the European war, says La Nación, is the timber trade. Germany was the chief buyer, taking some 60 per cent of the export, and this demand no longer exists. Remained the railways, but here too the suspension of new construction has reduced sales of sleepers, with no immediate hope of a recovery. Nevertheless La Nación points out that there is a very reasonable prospect of the wooden sleeper coming into favour again, owing to the high cost of iron, and even the English railways have found it pay them to send over here in search of hardwood sleepers. This new demand is bound to have a very good effect on the Argentine timber trade, which, coupled with the calls of the United States for quebracho extract, will soon get back to the palmy days when its exports totalled $15,000,000 gold.

Nor will this improvement cease with the end of the war. Many countries, such as Germany, will renew their demand on a larger scale than before, a fact that renders the outlook particularly rosy, the more so if it is remembered that the Government can easily help the export trade by arranging for cheap rates of freight on hardwoods from the interior to the ports of shipment. Once this difficulty is surmounted, the competition of other countries will be easily met, and the future of Argentine hardwoods be assured.

CORDOBA LEGISLATORS AND THEIR PAY

(La Prensa.—September 4).

"A lamentable lapse from sane judgment" is the phrase used by La Prensa to describe the recent resolution of the Cordoba legislators, whereby they raised their salaries from $100 to $700 per month. The severity of the criticism is due to the manner and circumstance under which this increase was brought about. On the very last day of the ordinary session the proposal was brought forward, being passed instantaneously, just as though this attack on the none-too-plethoric provincial treasury had been carefully thought out beforehand. That at least, is the only conclusion that La Prensa can come to in view of the evident intention to avoid all discussion, which, taken in time, would certainly have held up the measure. Things of this sort detract from political dignity, turning public functions into mere founts of private revenue.

True the unanimous sanction has shown politicians of opposing parties to be tarred with the same brush, and however, much it may be pleaded that some members were not present this does not do away with the right of public opinion to speak out in protest against the ever-increasing volume of the Budget expenses, never in accordance with revenues and now still further aggravated by the increased pay to legislators.

Abnormal economic conditions, La Prensa continues, have forced the country to pay special heed to public and private thrift. Works of general benefit have been stopped owing to lack of means and the inadvisability of imposing further taxation. In many parts of Cordoba taxes are not paid for simple reason that the taxpayer has not got the wherewithal to do so, whilst to cover the deficit there is already serious talk of an emission of treasury bonds. Under such circumstances it was the duty of the legislature to set the example of reducing rather than of adding to expenditure, and, the worst of it is that La Prensa declares this action of the Cordoba legislature to be symptomatic of much that is going on elsewhere. The people of Cordoba should show their disapproval of this action, thereby evidencing true patriotism in contradistinction to the selfish aims of their representatives.

MUSIC FOR BOCA AND BARRACAS

(La Prensa.—Sept. 6.)

The reasons that were adduced in favour of going to the expense of a Municipal Band dealt principally, says La Prensa, with the advisability of bringing culture to the masses through their artistic senses. Hence the granting of an important sum to the Municipality for the use of the band, a sum that was to be sufficient to make it the best band in the country. As a natural sequence, concerts were arranged for in public places capable of containing a large number of people, and the bandmaster was charged with the confection of the musical programmes in an ascending scale of difficulty, both as regards execution and the capacity of the popular taste to understand them. This being the praiseworthy object of the Municipal Band, it is only natural to suppose that the wider the field of influence exercised, the more likelihood is there that such an object would be attained.

Hence it is not convenient, says La Prensa, that the Municipal Band should always confine its recitals to one part of the town. In fact, everything points to the advisability of adopting quite a contrary policy. The band ought to play from time to time where the population is densest. Barracas, for instance, is blessed with many open spaces well adapted to outdoor recitals, whilst its population is made up of people who have not the wherewithal to indulge their taste for good music whenever they please. Up to the present, Barracas has been overlooked, and in view of the near approach of the season when the Municipal Band takes up its duties, La Prensa reminds the authorities that both in Boca and Barracas there are many who would hear its strains with pleasure and appreciation.

THE NEW SOCIALISM

(La Nación.—Sept. 7.)

Every movement of public opinion calculated to give rise to new political parties is of interest at the present moment, says La Nación. The country is on the verge of a great civic struggle, hence the value of every organisation that may prove helpful in the strife. Thus the creation of a new Socialist party, arising out of the recision which took place in the original sect, is bound to be of political utility, if only as a further control on the various factors of the arena; a control that is but rendered more efficacious by the lengthy distance that must perforce separate desire from actual result. For the observer of our political evolution, the new nucleus of Socialism is interesting as showing the tendency to a reaction from the original ideas of the party, and La Nación holds that it embraces more of the local spirit, and is therefore more practical.

The international spirit, which has never been congenial in this country, even in the heart of the Socialist body, dubbed local methods, "criollo politics," and latterly even went so far as to boast of having contributed in a decisive manner to the events that led to the ministerial crisis; a very clear proof, says La Nación, of the errors that have at last led to the branching off of the new party. It does not follow that because individuals are attacked that the whole course of politics is individual; it rather indicates a certain stage in the political evolution of the country which must perforce associate the policy with the man. Lack of appreciation of these elemental facts in itself proves unsuitability for the strife in the pitched battle of politics, and it is due to this fact that a new party has arisen holding aloft the national flag emblazoned on the red banner of Socialism.

RUMOURS OF PEACE

(La Nación Sept. 6.)

On the 9th of August, the German Imperial Chancellor declared, in the name of the Kaiser, that Germany hoped above all things else that the fall of Warsaw would hasten the conclusion of the war, adding, as "La Nación" pithily quotes: "I would remind you, that the Kaiser, in all his proclamations, and more especially in that of the 31st July, has declared over and over again that Germany is fighting for a permanent peace that shall guarantee to her and to the other Great Powers that are fighting by her side a sure international future. Such a peace will not only benefit Germany, but will guarantee to all nations the liberty of the seas, and will offer to all nations the possibility of co-operating in the work of progress and civilisation through free and universal trade." Latterly the cables have brought news of various other suggestions made by Germany as to the terms on which she would accept peace, but, as "La Nación" remarks, the foregoing is the latest official pronouncement on the matter.

Germany's fond hopes have been blighted. The Russians have left Warsaw and a good many other places, without the Government of Petrograd showing the least sign of retrocession from the pact made with the Allies. And this is true both of the official classes and of the Duma; indeed, as "La Nación" points out, the relations between that body and the State have never been more cordial. As for the terms that Germany offers, they are such as could only be accepted by the Allies in case of utter defeat, which as yet is very far from being the case. Had they been formally transmitted from Berlin, they would be subject to detailed comment, but being, as they are, little better than "ballons d'essai," it is preferable to look only at the terms laid down on the 9th August. What is worthy of comment is the fact that all these peace rumours are, as "La Nación" remarks, of German origin. They never come from Petrograd, London, Paris or Rome, probably because in those capitals everyone is persuaded that the time has not yet come to think of peace. Unfortunately, the war is not near its end, as the Kaiser and his Chancellor seemed to think a month ago.

THE ARGENTINE MERCANTILE MARINE

(La Prensa.—September 8.)

Referring to the speech of Sr. A. J. Coelho a couple of days ago, wherein reference was made to the advisability of forming an Argentine Mercantile Marine, La Prensa is of opinion that the moment is ripe for carrying into execution an idea that has always had its support. Sr. Coelho maintains that the enterprise is to-day perfectly feasible and above all profitable, and lays special stress on the fact that the country pays $400,000,000 a year in freights. What could not be done in 1905 may, says La Prensa, be quite possible in 1915, and is possible in this instance owing to the steady increase in trade shown by the last decade. Thus the problem can be stated in terms that render the solution easy.

Put briefly the position stands thus: here is a country exporting the bulk of its agricultural and pastoral produce, produce which is valued at over a thousand million dollars gold a year. Is this sufficient warrant for providing the requisite transport under the Argentine flag? La Prensa answers the question in the affirmative, adding thereto the importance of the population and its steady increase as a further incentive to the provision of a national mercantile marine. It continues by stating that it is evident that foreign capital will not flow hither for many a day to come, and that therefore it behoves the Republic to look to its own resources, and to economise; which latter object will be achieved by keeping in the country the money now paid abroad for freights, whilst at the same time the true economic independence of the state will be built up on the base of national capital. If, as there is every reason to believe, Government is on the verge of endowing the country with a powerful factor for increasing its production, in the shape of an Agricultural Credit Bank, why should the country not take a share in the task of helping in the distribution of its merchandise? Fast boats mean a wider field for Argentine produce, such as fruit and perishables, no more will be heard of super-production, and all this, La Prensa concludes, is fore-shadowed by the hopeful view of an early establishment of a genuinely national mercantile marine embodied in Sr Coelho's speech.

MUNICIPAL AFFAIRS

(La Nación.—September 8.)

The public, says La Nación, have no reason to congratulate themselves upon any change in the Municipal Administration. Of the few projects originated by the new Intendente the least that can be said, is that it were better they remain projects, and nothing more. The Intendente has not even had the tact to leave things as they were. His initial activities have created in the Municipality a state of confusion which increases day by day. It is reasonable to suppose that a functionary holding such an exalted position as Dr. Gramajo would be primarily interested in surrounding himself with competent counsellors and collaborators. Dr. Gramajo, however, evidently thinks otherwise. It will be remembered in what manner he practically expelled Sr. Lascano from the General Inspection where he was a guarantee of intelligence and rectitude. Other "resignations" after the style of that of Sr. Lascano are now announced. It is asserted by persons who are in the position to know, that the method of procedure in the new Intendencia is to invest subordinates with such authority that chiefs of departments have no alternative, compatible with their dignity, but to resign. It is needless to point out up to what point such a procedure may lead in destroying all sense of discipline. Several of these "resignations" it is said are about to take place in the Lighting Department. Some time ago it was decided to conduct an investigation in this Department, and it would now appear that the Intendencia do not intend to give publicity to the results thereof. Such a procedure, says La Nación is from all points of view inadmissible. Either the investigation established the culpability of some functionary, in which case he ought to be reprimanded or punished, or it established his innocence, in which case there is no reason for removing him. Moreover, says La Nación, if the latter be the case, such functionary has the right to demand that his reputation be not smirched by an unmerited suspicion.

THE SALTO FESTIVITIES

ENTHUSIASTIC DEMONSTRATIONS

Dr. Viera, President of Uruguay, who has been visiting Salto, inspected the troops of the district on Tuesday. In the afternoon, after a number of functions and receptions which passed off in the most agreeable manner, His Excellency went down to the port, accompanied by almost the entire population. He then went off in a launch to the "Ciudad de Montevideo" and left amid the acclamations of the people.

Mr. Carlisle, Manager of Liebig's Works, has arrived at Fray Bentos to assist at the reception of Dr. Viera.

At 9 a.m. yesterday the President arrived at Paysandú, where also H. E. received an enthusiastic welcome. He inaugurated the port works during the day and took part in other civil ceremonies.

IN AID OF BRITISH HOSPITAL

SUCCESSFUL CONCERT AT AMERICAN CHURCH.

Among the many successful concerts held at the American Church Hall, Corrientes, that in aid of the British Hospital last night, was one of the most brilliant successes achieved. This refers to the artistic, the financial, and the public sides of the question. Artistically a concert may be a success, even with a half filled hall, it may also please the public who are present, but add the financial success and often it is found that the successful combination is not present. There could be no doubt about these points last night.

The committee had gone to much trouble in arranging affairs, and they must feel somewhat flattered that these arrangements were so successful.

Mr. H. W. Robertson, U.S. Consul-General, had consented to preside, and in a few brief opening remarks, expressed his pleasure in being able to do so. He was especially glad that the proceeds of that entertainment were going to be devoted to the British Hospital Funds, of whose committee their Pastor was a member.

These brief remarks led to the opening item, an instrumental trio. Messrs. Oporto, Frontroth and Lavers are playing in better unison than ever. Mr. Charles Gabb, when in good voice, as he was last night, is always excellent, but he will never be heard to the same advantage in other songs than as in "I hear you calling me." His choice is varied and pleasing, and both of these were in evidence.

The instrumentalists of the evening were Miss Wilkinson on the 'cello, and Miss Woodwell with her violin.

Miss Wilkinson has somewhat overcome her nervousness, with the result that she was heard to greater advantage than before, and drew forth plenty of applause. Miss Wilkinson was as good as always. Mr. Bideleux was in good voice, which signifies his well-known excellence.

Mrs. Bowditch was preferable in her singing of "My ain Folk" than in her choice during the first half of the programme.

Mrs. Marie Eidelberg was encored whenever she sang, but she was best in Vainka's Song, a melody which exactly suits her voice.

Mr. J. W. Adderley surpassed himself; always entertaining, he was extremely good last night.

Mrs. Pilling and Mrs. Alfred Chiswell were encored for their duet playing.

A mention of the artists names was enough to ensure success, and a really successful entertainment was the outcome of the evening.

During the usual interval Mr. Robertson announced that on September 22 a cinematograph entertainment, in which would be included a special film, "A Daughter of Neptune," would be given and a collection made in aid of an apprentice room to the Victoria Sailors' Home.

The organisers of the most successful concert held at the American Church Hall are to be congratulated on the entertainment accorded to a large audience.

The programme is given below. All the artists were encored.

Part I.

Trio, "Fantasie Dramatique" (Salion), violin, clarionett, and piano Messrs. Oporto, Frontroth, and Lavers. Baritone solo, "The Lighthouse" (Nelson), Mr. F. F. Bideleux.

Soprano solo, "A Geisha's Life" (Jones), Mrs. M. Eidelberg.

Cello solo, "Songe d'Amour" (Czibulka), Miss M. Wilkinson.

Tenor solo, "My Queen" (Blumenthal), Mr. Charles Gabb.

Pianoforte duets, (a) Hungarian Dance (No. 1.) Behr; (b) Russian Dance (from Casse Noisette Suite). (Tschaikowsky); Mrs. J. A. Pilling and Mrs. Alfred Chiswell.

Contralto solo, "Somewhere a voice is calling" (Tate), Mrs. G. A. Bowditch. Monologue, "The Tale of a Dog" (by

MISSIONS TO SEAMEN

SUCCESSFUL CONCERT

So accustomed are persons becoming to excellent musical programmes being arranged and given at the Mission for Seamen's concerts, that it is a very exceptional occurrence when the best amateurs in Buenos Aires or some of them are not heard at these entertainments. It is a difficult task for the organiser to obtain the same high standard as that of the concert which preceded, but this was a task in which Mrs. J. J. Mendl admirably succeeded last evening. One or two artists whom that lady secured, had not been heard for a very long time, and their reappearance was all the more welcome. An item included in the programme, and which received most enthusiastic applause, was the original one of a whistling solo by Miss Brooks.

Capt. Boyle with his "Sea Chanties" and other songs was another new and pleasing item. Mrs. Charles Edye was better than ever. In perfect voice her choice of songs was immensely pleasing, and "The little green gate" was a gem of rendering, quite perfect in its way and furthermore an uncommon song of exceptionally delightful melody. In the accompaniment of this, Mr. Jones excelled himself, and as an item it was the most cheering of the evening.

Mrs. W. D. Gardom was just as fresh and sung as daintily as usual, and received enthusiastic applause. Mr. J. J. Mendl too was excellent, while upon Mr. Powell Jones fell the work of accompanist.

The concert as a whole was an artistic delight, and it would be hard to conceive a series of better chosen items from a melodious point of view, and thus the encores were constant and the function an equal success, with the many exceptionally fine concerts that have preceded it, and furthermore it had the merit of originality.

PROGRAMME.

Part I.

Pianoforte Solo, Mr. Powell Jones. Song, "Roumanian Mountain" encore: "Cottage Roses," Mr. J. J. Mendl.

Song, "I'll make a man of you," encore: "You made me love you," Mrs. W. D. Gardom.

Song, "Sea Chanties," encore: "Cider thro' a Straw," Capt. Boyle, R.N.

Song, "I hear you calling Me," encore: "A wearying for you," Mrs. C. S. Edye.

Whistling Solo, Miss Brooks; encore: "My little grey home in the West."

Part II.

Pianoforte Solo, Mr. Powell Jones. Song, "There's only one England," Mr. J. J. Mendl.

Song, "The Sunshine of your Smile," encore: "By the Saskatchewan," Mrs. W. D. Gardom.

Song, "Guy Fawkes," encore: "My double-breasted mansion on the Square," Capt. Boyle.

Song, "The Mountain over the Mountains," encore: "The Little Green Gate," Mrs. Ch. S. Edye.

Song, "The Trumpeter," (encored), Mr. H. W. Brady.

The National Anthem.

request), Mr. John W. Adderley.

Part II.

Pianoforte duet, "Farantella" (Rheinberger), Mrs. J. A. Pilling and Mrs. Alfred Chiswell.

Tenor solo, "My dreams" (Tostl), Mr. Charles Gabb.

Contralto solo, "My ain Folk" (Sullivan), Mrs. G. A. Bowditch.

Violin solo, "Serenata" (Pierné), Miss E. E. Woodwell.

Baritone solos: (a) "Birds in the high Hall garden"; (b) "Go not happy day" (songs from the Cycle "Maud"—Tennyson), (Somervell), Mr. F. F. Bideleux.

Soprano solo, "Vainka Song" (Whishaw), Mrs. M. Eidelberg.

Recital, "Rubenstein at the Piano," Mr. John W. Adderley.

CATTLE MARKET

ENTERED: 4,160.

Pigs 458
Prices: 18 to 30 cents per kilo.

Summary of Purchasers.

Sansinena	968
La Plata	553
La Blanca	504
Smithfield	369
Argentino	97
Armour	8

Total 2,499

Prices for Wednesday

SALES.

Juan Lalor—

From Salto: 15 steers at $200, 1 at 165; from R. Paz: 20 cows at 161; from General Arenales: 2 steers at 200, 2 bullocks at 182, 1 at 231, 2 at 229, 3 cows at 138; from Bahia Blanca: 24 steers at 150; from Junin: 3 steers at 187, 2 bullocks at 174, 1 at 160, 1 cow at 153; from Pampa Central: 5 cows at 141.50, 4 at 117, 3 steers at 100.50; from Pergamino: 7 steers at 154, 2 bullocks at 140, 2 cows at 138, 1 at 103.50, 7 at 134; from Entre Rios: 3 steers at 134, 12 at 136, 9 at 152, 1 bullock at 192, 3 cows at 145; from Santa Fe: 14 steers at 62, 16 at 68, 15 at 70; from Entre Rios: 3 steers at 144, 20 at 143, 18 at 129, 15 at 126; from Cordoba: 20 steers at 113, 6 young steers at 96.50, 1 heifer at 110, 7 at 66, 13 at 57; from Pergamino: 10 cows at 154, 1 at 131; from Chivilcoy: 6 calves at 54, 4 heifers at 71, 1 bullock at 171, 3 at 154, 1 at 133, 4 at 57; from Entre Rios: 7 young steers at 108, 12 at 120, 1 cow at 139.

Salaberry y Berecche—

From Cordoba: 60 steers at $225; from Olavarria: 51 steers at 247, 1 at 190; from Rauch: 19 steers at 190; from Pampa Central: 22 steers at 153, 14 at 100, 14 at 149.50, 40 at 179; from Mercedes: 17 steers at 167; from 9 de Julio: 21 steers at 165, 15 at 140.50; from Coronel Pringles: 10 steers at 143.50, 6 at 144.50, 1 at 190, 3 young steers at 135.50; from Entre Rios: 15 cows at 104; from Olavarria: 3 heifers at 121, 8 cows at 108, 9 at 120.50, 9 at 120, 11 at 144.50, 11 at 135, 9 young steers at 130, 2 calves at 50; from Olavarria: 15 cows at 119, 13 at 111, 2 at 77.50, 2 at 56, 2 young steers at 98.50, 6 heifers at 87.

Pedro y Antonio Lanusse—

From Santa Fe: 4 calves at $40, 2 steers at 124, 10 calves at 52.50, 1 heifer at 105.50, 3 stags at 129, 5 cows at 124.50, 4 at 87, 1 calf at 14, 13 steers at 77.

Bargo, Lascrain y Etchegaray—

From Entre Rios: 12 steers at $92, 11 heifers at 86, 7 at 72, 6 calves at 48.

Petersen y Gutierrez—

From Entre Rios: 128 steers at $185.

Bunge y Born—

From Pampa Central: 220 steers at $182, 3 cows at 132.

Mendez Hermanos y Cia.—

From Bahia Blanca: 12 cows at $125.

Carriquiry, Cascaur y Cia.—

From Bahia Blanca: 12 cows at $135; from Azul: 10 steers at 169; from Entre Rios: 5 steers at 133, 2 at 132, 31 at 115, 15 steers at 90, 8 at 83.

Videla Hermanos y Cia.—

From Santa Fe: 1 cow at $120, 18 at 100, 18 young steers at 90, 8 at 92.

Soc. Cooperativa de Hacendados—

From Pellegrini: 12 cows at $156; from Entre Rios: 32 young steers at $88.

A. Robredo y Cia.—

From Rojas: 21 steers at $177.

Delfino Hermanos—

From Rojas: 20 steers at $124.

Martinez, Grande y Saharrea—

From Navarro: 11 cows at $90, 2 heifers at 65, 11 stags at 125, 18 steers at 150; from Pehuajó: 3 stags at 110, 13 steers at 175.

Mathieu y Cia.—

from Tornquist: 21 young steers at From Pringles: 13 steers at $145; 140, 9 cows at 134, 8 steers at 105, 1 calf at 80, 2 heifers at 90.

Julio L. Peña y Cia.—

From Santa Fe: 55 steers at $123, 5 bullocks at 200; from Lincoln: 5 steers at 135, 8 cows at 80, 4 young steers at 60.

Estrugamou y Cia.—

From Lincoln: 20 steers at $225, 5 at 160, 13 cows at 115, 14 calves at 55, 8 heifers at 90.

Gioja y Etchart—

From Suipacha: 37 cows at $120, 1 young butt at 80, 8 cows at 80, 2 calves at 50; from Giles: 15 young steers at 90, 20 cows from Carlos Tejedor at 135, 3 calves from Exaltacion de la Cruz at 60; from Caseros: 2 stags at 130, 15 calves at 60.

Ayarragaray S. y Gowland—

From Olavarria: 4 steers at $210, 5 at 145.

Montel y Cia.—

From Lincoln: 10 steers at $165; from Pehuajó: 7 cows at 125, 1 steer at 130, 1 bullock at 100, 6 calves at 46.

Echeverria y Garat—

From General Pintos: 41 steers at $200, 12 heifers at 120.

Biscayart y Spangenberg—

From Pergamino: 2 steers at $165, 6 cows at 80, 9 heifers at 74, 2 calves at 70.

Tomás Devoto y Cia.—

From Pehuajó: 100 steers at $245, 40 do. from Junin at 205, 38 do. from Navarro at 174.

Miguel Ardoain—

From Bahia Blanca: 12 steers at $165, 1 cow at 120.

Belloq y Hita—

From Lincoln: 10 steers at $185; from Belgrano: 10 cows at 138.

Crotto Hermanos—

From San Vicente: 2 bulls at $120, 2 steers at 108, 2 heifers at 125, 9 calves at 56.

Enrique A. Thompson y Cia.—

From Tandil: 8 cows at $128, 4 at $108.

Banco Ganadero Argentino—

From Santa Fe: 2 stags at $110, 1 heifer at 83, 1 steer at 200.

Benitez y Murre—

From Santa Fe: 4 cows at $160, 12 heifers at 126.

Mihura Hermanos—

From Entre Rios: 52 steers at $185, 6 at 153, 9 at 135.

Fortunato B. Arzeno y Hnos.—

From Olavarria: 15 steers at $140, from Santa Fe: 1 cow at 140, 53 heifers at 112.

Lizarralde Hermanos—

From Santa Fe: 63 steers at $226, 60 at 206.

Patron, Costas y Perú—

From Lincoln: 36 steers at $128, 23 do. from Cordoba at 190.

Cucullu y Cavo—

From Giles: 36 steers at $197, 5 at $195.

Pedro Arancet y Cia.—

From Pampa Central: 20 steers at $145, 21 heifers at 88.

Unzué, Alzaga y Cia.—

From Pellegrini: 74 steers at $187, from Pampa Central: 1 cow at $132.

TRADE MARK

BACTERIOLOGICAL INSTITUTE

LIGNIERES HERMANOS

(Adolfo Marcelo & Luis Lignieres)

Vaccine & Serums for Stock

VACCINE for CARBUNCLO, MANCHA, TRISTEZA, ENTEQUE, TUBERCULINAS, LOMBRIZ - TIFUS EQUINO. Etc., Etc.

Rats Exterminated by Virus

The Vaccine, and Serums are personally and exclusively prepared by Adolfo Marcelo and Luis Lignieres, which ensures successful results.

ORDERS AND INFORMATION TO:

748 Pueyrredon 748 - Buenos Aires

Mr. Joseph Shepherd

1 HATTON GARDENS, LONDON.

Exporter of High-Class Pedigree Animals.

HEAVY DRAUGHT-HORSES SUITABLE FOR EXPORT PURCHASED

Local Representative:

Mr. A. Machattie,

San Martin 254, Buenos Aires.

SHEEP MARKET

ENTRIES: 6,132.

La Plata	2,245
Local butchers	1,529
Sansinena	1,114
La Blanca	794
Las Palmas	373
Argentino	217

Total 6,263

Prices for Wednesday

SALES.

Ayarragaray S. y Gowland—

From Laprida 56 cap. frig. at $18.50, 34 ovejas mat. at 19.

Antonio Errea é Hijo—

From Cabildo: 14 ovejas mat. at $21.50, 24 at 18.50, 40 bgos. mat. at 15.80.

Dubor y Rivera Ocantos—

From G. Belgrano: 100 cap. frig. at $13.80.

Coop. de Hacendados—

From Bocayuva: 20 cap. frig. at $21.80, 42 at 18.60, 66 bgos. frig. at 14.30.

Bargo, Lascrain y Etchegaray

From Murature: 70 ovejas pel. mat. at $13.80, 20 at 17.30, 69 bgos. frig. at 13.30, 42 bgos. mat. at 15.50.

Salaberry y Berecche—

From Santa Elena: 30 cap. mat. at $21.50, 60 at 196 from De la Canal: 33 cap. frig. at 19.30.

Juan Lalor—

From R. Biais: 20 cap. frig. at $22.20, 82 cap. mat. at 19; from French: 10 cap. frig. at 13.30, 15 ovejas mat. at 15.80, 16 bgos. frig. at 12.50, 68 bgos. mat. at 6.30.

Juan Curutchet—

From A. Dulce: 129 cap. mat. at $18.60.

Unzué Alzaga y Cia.—

From El Cantor: 24 cord. mat. at $8.70, 44 at 6.70.

Nicoias A. Calvo—

From Teodolina: 50 ovejas frig. at $12; from Vedia: 90 cap. frig. at 17.

José Etcheverry y Cia.—

From Chillar: 134 cap. frig. at $20; from Castellanos: 299 cap. frig. at 18.50; from Blandengues: 299 cap. frig. at 16.80.

Ignacio Goñi é Hijos—

From Cabildo: 29 cap. mat. at $24, 50 at 22; from Pelicurá: 158 cap. mat. at 15.50, 26 ovejas mat. at 19.

Dodds y D. D. Ramsay—

From Vedia: 204 cap. mat. at $20.

Juan Anasagasti—

From G. Belgrano: 47 cap. mat. at $21.50, 172 at 18.90, 146 at 16.70; from Corti: 49 cap. mat. at 14.30.

Palacios Hnos.—

From Uriburu: 13 ovejas mat. at $19, 69 cap. mat. at 16.70.

Mendez Hnos. y Cia.—

From Santa Luisa: 14 cap. frig. at $18, 15 ovejas mat. at 20, 52 at 17; from Corti: 31 cord. mat. at 8.10, 128 at 7.60.

Cucullu y Cavo—

158 capones at $22.

RAILWAY TRAFFICS.

The subjoined traffic returns for the week ended Aug. 26 are compared with the corresponding week of last year

Railway.	Gross Take £	Increase or Decrease £	Inc. or Dec. per mile £	Miles Open 1914	1915	Aggregate from July 1st.	Increase or Decrease £
Central Railway	105,000	+ 22,000	+ 6 6 1	3,262		$	$
Southern Railway	84,000	+ 30,000	+ 7 13 5	3,729	3,307	955,200	+128,000
Pacific Railway	83,000	+ 26,000	+ 7 5 7	3,505	3,792	683,000	+ 72,000
Western Railway	45,000	+ 13,000	+ 6 4 11	1,792	3,534	695,000	+124,000
Arg. North-Eastern Railway	7,060	+ 2,101	+ 1 19 1	667	1,867	371,000	+ 60,000
Central Cordoba	34,000	+ 5,307	+ 4 12 11	1,180	752	54,613	+ 11,400
Central Uruguay	20,664	+ 8,301	+ 8 8 9	978	1,189	310,750	+ 8,930
	$	$	$		978	146,631	+ 26,821
Province of Buenos Aires	129,765	+ 71,170	+ 90.09	790	790	1,138,135	+467,050

ARGENTINE CATTLE

Possible Exportation to Britain

VIEWS OF THE "PALL MALL GAZETTE"

London, Sept. 8.

In an article upon the decision of the British Government to permit the importation of live cattle into the United Kingdom, the "Pall Mall Gazette" says that the concession is a good one, but there will be difficulty in giving effect to the new order, so far as Argentina is concerned.

The vessels carrying meat from that republic are fitted with refrigerators and are not in any way adapted to the carriage of cattle on the hoof. It is doubtful whether the great exporting firms of Argentina will alter their methods of business because of the permission to ship cattle alive.

In England it has always been understood that no live stock is allowed to enter the country from Argentina unless accompanied by a clean bill of health, and the inference is that such a condition now prevails, and that in the event of a fresh outbreak of disease the order will be withdrawn. With this risk before them the newspaper doubts whether the Argentine firms can be tempted into the livestock business.

GRAIN MARKET

TERMINAL CEREAL MARKET.

First Ring.

No operations.

Second Ring.

No operations.

REGISTERED CONTRACTS.

(Delivered in Buenos Aires).

No operations.

Official Prices. —

Wheat.
For September Darsena. . .	12.05
Linseed.
For September Darsena. . .	10.85
For October Darsena. . .	11.05
Maize.
For September Darsena. . .	4.70
For October Darsena. . .	4.75
For November Darsena. . .	4.85

CHAMBER OF CEREALS QUOTATIONS.

Prices in the Bolsa de Comercio.

100 kilos waggon Darsena. . .	(Available).
Linseed.	10.65
Wheat for bread.	12.40
Do Barleita for Europe. . .	11.40
Do do for bread.	11.20
Do do (Export, Europe). . .	11.00
Do do (Export, Brazil). . .	12.00
Oats Bahia Blanca.	5.80
Yellow maize.	4.60

NATIONAL PRODUCE EXCHANGE.

(Rosario de Santa Fe).

First Ring.

Maize.

For November—400 tons at $4.69.

Second Ring.

Maize.

For November—200 tons at $4.69.

Linseed.

For October—100 tons at $10.50.

Official Prices. —

Wheat.

For September.	$12.50
For October.	12.55
For November.	12.45
Available.	12.50
For January.	9.90

Linseed.

For September.	10.30
For October.	10.15
For November.	10.80
Available.	10.30

Maize.

For September.	4.50
For October.	4.55
For November.	4.70
Available.	4.50

In Rosario.

Wheat No. 1.	12.55
Wheat No. 2.	nominal
Linseed.	10.30
Maize.	4.40

ARMOUR'S INDUSTRY

INSPECTED BY AMERICAN COMMERCIAL CLUB

ENTERTAINING VISIT TO LA PLATA

Anyone visiting the Constitucion Station on Sept. 4th might have been excused for imagining the entire American business community were leaving Buenos Aires en masse. But that was not so: the members of the American Commercial Club were assembling to go to La Plata in response to an invitation extended to them at their regular Friday breakfast of last week by Mr. Hanford E. Finney to be his guests at an American breakfast in the reception hall of the Frigorifico Armour de la Plata, of which he is manager.

At Dock Central the party were taken directly from the station to the entrance to the works, where they were met, and each member welcomed as a guest of the Armour Company by Mr. Finney as manager, and Mr. L. E. Macaulay as Secretary of that Company.

After an interesting trip through the mechanical departments, including the pumping, chilling, freezing and electrical plant, the guests were assembled in the dining hall where their attention was asked to a delightful breakfast by Mr. Finney, who stated that everything served had been made on the premises, excepting the bread, butter and the grape juice contained in the punch. The latter article would, however, be made in the Republic in course of time.

After the black coffee had been reached, the champagne served and the cigar lighted, Mr. Finney rose to extend the welcome of the Armour Company to his guests, and stated how glad he was to have them see the recently completed plant which was the result of the best Armour experience, and was destined to grow and become more and more important all the time. The Armour policy was one of co-operation, and every man in their works was imbued with the idea of doing his best to make the business a success. As a result they expected that the existence of the plant would be a distinct gain to Argentina.

Mr. Finney then made a stirring appeal for the same co-operation, the same team work in the American community in order that whatever was produced here as North American, or brought here from the United States, would be of the very best quality to be had. In conclusion he called on Mr. W. C. Howe, the head of the Buenos Aires business of the National Cash Register Company to speak as vice-president of the American Commercial Club.

Mr. Howe, in rising, said that he thought their host need have no fear of any lack of co-operation in the Club; he thought that abundant co-operation had just been manifested by them in their appreciation of the delicious breakfast which had been offered to them; that the Club had plans in process of formation for the great development of its work, and he hoped in time what it would develop into a strong organization. Mr. Howe then called attention to the value to the country which the new industry must inevitably bring. "The western part of America," he stated, "had been largely developed through the efforts of the great Chicago meat packers, among whom Armour and Co. had always been a leader. The increase of the production of pork means the bringing of totally new wealth to the country. It will be more profitable to the farmer to raise pigs as well as grain and sell his stock than it is, to-day to export his corn and grain." The richest farms in America," he said, "are those where pig-raising is carried to a high degree." In closing he expressed the deep appreciation of the Club for the gen-

PHILIP & CARRUTHERS

Camp and Live Stock Agents

Calle Cangallo 456

BUENOS AIRES

U.T. 3881 Avenida

WANTED: Heavy Horses
suitable for Exportation.

On Sale: Imported and Camp Bulls of all Breeds, Rams, Pigs, etc.

EXPORTATION OF HORSES

AUGUST SHIPMENTS.

The number of horses exported from the Argentine during the month of August was considerable. In spite of a certain lack of vessels for other cargoes, the shipping of horses has proceeded with regularity. During August, 12 vessels in all sailed from Argentine ports, and with the exception of one, which contained a shipment of 160 mules for North America, these vessels went to La Pallice, Bordeaux and Liverpool. They carried in all 3827 animals of superior quality. Further shipments continue at regular intervals. The next vessel for La Pallice carries a cargo of 50 horses for the French army.

CEREAL PRICES

The Centro de Acopiadores reports drought will not influence European prices but consumption in Brazil will keep prices firm for grain of good class and weight.

As to linseed, we do not believe in the drop of prices and if this weather is prolonged the crop may suffer making a considerable rise probable.

No improvement in maize prices is to be looked for in view of the difficulty of placing the article in Europe and the large stock remaining in hand.

erous hospitality extended to them.

After the singing of "My Country 'tis of Thee," and telling Mr. Finney that he was a jolly good fellow, and that nothing was the matter with him excepting that he was "all right," the Club adjourned to inspect some of the live stock awaiting killing, and at 3.30 their special train left the works for the city.

Among those present were: Mr. Hanford, E. Finney, W. C. Howe, John C. Zimmermann, John R. Stanford, L. E. Macaulay, John Milne, Lionel Hargis, Stanley D. Allchin, Richard T. Brooks, Ralph W. Huntington, H. J. Black, George C. Cobean, George B. Hussey, Charles S. Harper, Lee Prettyman, Sutherland R. Haxtun, C. P. Dickermann, Carlos R. Aldridge, Marco Rowe, R. H. Haldenbergh, John J. Story, Mr. Pylman, H. R. Storer, J. J. Pratt, Messrs. Edwards and Carrel, of the National City Bank, L. Royal Babbitt, Warren Cobean, Dr. Hubbard, H. W. Rinearson, Dr. Turnbull, Edward C. Brown, Mr. Smith, Frank J. Lynch, John L. Denton, Mr. Voelckening, Raul Leon, John B. Sullivan, Mr. Geische, Newbery Thomas, Mr. Buhler, Olney Anthony and many others.

SALE OF BREEDING STOCK

Messrs. Adolfo Bullrich and Co. sold yesterday in their Central Market imported Lincoln rams and Shorthorn Bulls from Cabaña "La Alicia," proprietor Mr. Frederick Miller, at the following prices:—

1 Lincoln ram No. 100, from the Cabaña Nicholson, two years' Royal Show Champion, at $8000, to Messrs. Hurtado Costa and Co.; 1 same No. 55, second prize in group of five at the Royal Show, at $4,600 to Sr. Martin Alzaga; 1 same, No. 23, 2nd prize in the Royal Show, $4,500 to Sres. Martin R. Puchuri and Co.; No. 36, second prize in Royal Show at $3,100 to Estancias Cecilio Lopez Ltd.; No. 152 at $2,300 to Sra. Maria J. de Pradere; No. 96 at $1500 to Sres. Peralta Alvear Hnos.; No. 99 at $1800 to Sr. Antonio Leloir; No. 88 at $2600 to Dr. Guillermo Udaondo; No. 22 at $2300 to Sra. Maria J. de Pradere; No. 26 at $1600 to Sres. Juan B. Repetto and Sons; No. 42 at $1800 to Sr. J. Enesarret; No. 152 at $2300 to Sra. Maria de Pradere; No. 85 at $1400 to Sres. J. B. Repetto and Sons; No. 156 at $2700 to Sres. Hurtado Costa and Coy.; No. 119 at $1900 to Estancias Cecilio Lopez Ltd.; No. 80 at $700 to Sr. José Newton; No. 151 at $700 to Sr. Vicenti J. Caparro; No. 21 at $1900 to Sr. Roberto Urquiza; No. 18 at $700 to Sr. Guido Gracioso; No. 76 at $900 to Sra. Maria L. de Bellocq; No. 154 at $800 to Sr. Juan Nelson; No. 167 at $600 to Sr. Vicente J. de Caparro; No. 83 at $700 to Sra. Maria J. de Pradere; No. 98 at $800 to Sr. Arturo Gomez; No. 155 at $1000 to Sra. Hortensia Aguirre de Leloir; No. 160 at $600 to Sr. Juan Durruty; No. 96 at $800 to Sres. Haldenberger and Martinez de Hoz; No. 6 at $1350 to Sr. Raul C. Etcheverry.

Sales were also made at from $650 to $250 to Sres. Rodolfo Saenz Valiente, Daniel Ortiz Basualdo, Daniel Ochoa, Federico Alvarez de Toledo, and Mariano Casares. Total: 50 rams at an average of $1,254 each.

One Shorthorn Bull to Sres. Degregory Hnos. at $300 on commission; one of same at $2200 to Dr. Degiovanangelo; one of same at $1500 to Sr. Eduardo Sherrer; one at $2100 to Sr. Julio Cabral; one at $1600 to Sres. Degregory Hnos. on commission; one at $1300 to Sr. Carlos de la Torre. Two Shorthorn bulls from Cabaña El Chaja from Sres. J. E. and A. Aguirre; one at $2000 to Sr. Santiago Carbarini; one at $1200 to Sr. José M. Miguens.

Three Polled Angus Bulls and three young Percheron Stallions from Cabaña La Luna of Sr. Benjamin Barreto: one bull at $1300 to Sr. Casimiro Gomez; one at $1400 to Sr. Guillermo Martinez Irujo, also one at $1350; one Percheron Stallion at $1600 to Sr. Becher; one at $1500 to Sra. Maria J. Pradere; one at $1400 to Sr. Antonio Leloir. Total of sales $86,150.

PASSENGER LISTS

N.S.N.C. HIGHLAND ROVER.

The Nelson Liner Highland Rover leaves La Plata to-day homeward bound for London, convenient train carrying passengers for this steamer will leave Plaza Constitución, F.C.S., at 1.45 p.m. Among the saloon passengers are: Mr. H. G. Cabrett, Miss Emily Nora MacMann, Mr. Alfred H. Bazell, Mr. Isaac Alexander, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick John Foot, Mr. C. Chapman, etc., etc.

N.S.N.C. HIGHLAND SCOT.

The above Nelson liner arrived on Sept. 3 in the North Basin from London. Among the saloon passengers were:—

Mr. Alexander Campbell, Mr. Andrew Campbell, Mrs. Anna Cullen, Master Maxwell Cullen, Miss Ellen Mabel Leane, Mr. August Henry Moller, Mr. Robert Kenneth Paton, Miss Marie Isabel Ross, Mrs. Matilda Collingham, Master Patrick Herbert Collingham, Master Dennis Francis Collingham, Mr. Alexander Ferguson, Mrs. Caroline Robinson Potter, Mr. Rivano Ravano, Mr. Giacomo Riccardi, Mr. John Rickard, Mr. George Shaw, Mrs. Florence Shaw, Master George E. Shaw, Mr. William Blaylock Woods, Mrs. Rose Ellen Woods.

R.M.S.P. DEMERARA.

The following passengers arrive to-day by the R.M.S.P. Demerara:—Mr. and Mrs. Matthew W. Bisset, F. W. Courtenay Clarke, T. F. Cousins, H. Wardle Dixon, A. L. Dickinson, Miss E. Goldman, John N. Huxter, M. Kunstenaar, Carlo Magrini, J. M. C. Montagn, Mrs. M. Morice, G. Morice, B. F. O. F. Netzer, J. Sanchez Notario, J. H. Parkes, Mrs. Page, J. M. Palmes, O. Pravia, E. M. Proctor, Mrs. de Proctor and family, David Roberts, Miss Mense Revigny, Walter B. Smith, Mrs. Smith, Miss K. B. Smith, Miss G. S. Smith, William John Simmons, Joseph H. Sherratt and H. Wesley.

EXCITEMENT AT THE DOCKS

THE "TORO" ON FIRE.

Late on Monday evening a fire broke out on the Argentine vessel Toro belonging to the Mihanovich Company, the origin of which remains a mystery. Shortly after 8 p.m. notice was given to the port authorities that a fire had broken out on the vessel in Number 1 hold and assistance was asked for. Under the command of Sr. Graneras, fifty firemen and 30 sailors were soon at work. Volumes of smoke poured out of the hold and at one time it was thought the vessel would be completely burned, but after a couple of hours work the fire was under control.

At 4.30 p.m. the same afternoon the work of loading was completed and the hatches hatted down, so that the origin of the fire is unknown. The Toro was loading a miscellaneous cargo of barley, flour, bales of paper, and general merchandise, consigned to various business houses in Rio Grande. No estimate of the damage done has yet been possible.

The Toro was the old Cruz de Malta built at Grangemouth in 1905, she is a vessel of 1142 tons register.

RISE IN RIVER PARANA

Information received from Posadas and Corrientes state that the river Parana continues to rise. The good news has brought the anxiety felt in shipping circles in Rosario to an end.

The height of the river in various places was officially stated last night as follows: In Colastine, Rosario, 13 feet 6 inches; Santa Fe, Rosario, 16 feet 6; Bajado Grande, Rosario, 15 feet, and Rosario, San Pedro, 21 feet 10 inches. Dredging operations continue in the channels Tacuari, Paraguay and other places.

SHIPPING DREAMS

An Argentine Mercantile Navy

GROSS FREIGHTS; RUNNING EXPENSES; NETT RETURNS

(Exclusive to THE HERALD)

By what was doubtless a mere coincidence, both the great Argentine dailies devoted their leading articles yesterday to the consideration of that much-desired ambition, the formation of an Argentine Mercantile Marine. Let it be stated at the very outset of this article that the writer has no intention whatsoever to scoff at what is undoubtedly a very laudable desire to uplift the national dignity by flaunting the blue and white banner throughout the Seven Seas. Hence any comment that may appear harsh must be taken as being directed solely against the practical side of the various schemes propounded. Argentina, like any other country with fine ports and a long seaboard, has a perfect right to build up a mercantile marine. The objection to the present agitation rests solely on the fact that up to date she has shown only too conclusively her utter inability to understand the very first elements of success in such an enterprise.

THE LURE OF HIGH FREIGHTS.

It is incontestable that the present rates of freight ruling between this country and Europe are the immediate cause of the recrudescence of interest in shipping affairs. Apart from the two leading journals aforesaid—and they too can nod at times—the Argentine Press display a pathetic ignorance of the most rudimentary commercial principles as applied to maritime transport, and the nation proves its equal ignorance by the methods it adopts for dealing with the little shipping that it actually possesses. Leaving this latter point for the present, and turning solely to the freight market as discussed in certain sections of the evening Press, one finds that the gross freight is almost invariably regarded as the net profit of the vessel, and is moreover calculated on the gross tonnage of the ship. Apparently the Argentine shipping expert takes the published gross tonnage of the passenger lines, a deceptive figure at the best of times, multiplies it by the costliest freight quotation available in the weekly list—on one occasion the writer saw a calculation most evidently worked out on the basis of deck space for horses at £7 10/- a head—and staggers humanity with what he terms "profits" that appear to average more or less the cost of the vessel.

CAPITAL OUTLAY AND CURRENT EXPENDITURES.

Furthermore, the several schemes that have been published, with the solitary exception of the recent project of Sr. Pedro Mihanovich, all start out with the assumption that the whole of the subscribed capital can be turned into the fleet, and that the rest of the business runs itself automatically on a profit showing basis. Granting for a moment that the capital to buy or build six steamers of 10,000 tons each can be found immediately, a very generous supposition given the notorious objection of the Argentine capitalist to Argentine investments, how are running expenses to be met until the first voyage is completed? If one were dealing with a similar proposition in Europe the answer would be easy. Debitures can be raised, and other sources of loanable capital can be tapped. It is highly doubtful whether similar sources would be on tap here, especially after the capitalists or the public had just put up the initial capital. The builders might be persuaded to help in financing the venture, on good security, but little is to be

SHIPPING NOTES.

DREDGING THE PORT AND CHANNEL.

Attention is again being drawn to the urgent necessity of dredging the North Channel to a greater depth while there is some relaxation of the shipping arrivals, and in anticipation of the large number of ships which will signalise resumption of traffic at the end of the war.

At present there is frequent trouble but recently with the exception of the Royal Holland Lloyd and a few other mail steamers, the largest boats on the South American service have been temporarily withdrawn, and the Cap Trafalgar, the largest, has perished. Two very large Italian steamers can be confidently reckoned upon, and no doubt the policy of the Royal Mail Company in view of the destruction of German shipping, will tend to even larger ships than the recent fine examples built. For 15,000 to 20,000 ton ships there is at times very great difficulty in entering and leaving the Port, and the Channel to Punta del Indio is in need of much additional dredging, and in default of the work being begun in good time, the business of the Port will in future suffer seriously.

hoped from the actual shareholders, seeing that in most Argentine concerns they expect tangible results, on a ten per cent. basis at least, ere the first year is out. Thus from a purely financial standpoint the venture presents grave difficulties, and one can only be surprised at a business man advocating what he must know to be a very chimerical enterprise.

TECHNICAL OBJECTIONS.

It is, however, still more impracticable when viewed from the technical side. In the first place, where are the ships to be built whilst the war is on? Great Britain will not let any new tonnage for other countries leave her shores save at prices that are preposterous in comparison to the ordinary cost of building. The enemy shipping cannot be transferred to a neutral flag without running risk of capture, and it is unnecessary to say that the vessels cannot be found here. Manning is another problem, and a grave one, even supposing all existing Argentine regulations to be rescinded. The existing mercantile fleets of the world are scouring the ports for men, America in especial bidding very high for their services. Coal is costlier than it has ever been, crude oil has risen in equal ratio, and Rivadavia cannot supply its own contracts, let alone furnish a new fleet with fuel. Above all this is the "Gilbertian" system of control associated with the Prefect of the Port, the innumerable rules and regulations devised for increasing the expenses of running and upkeep whilst diminishing the rapid despatch of the vessels thus affected. Space prevents detailed enumeration of these points, but in general it may be said that whilst a foreign vessel has some hope of reasonable treatment by the port authorities, the Argentine vessel must just grin and bear whatever it gets. Undoubtedly, should a scheme based on the ideas of Sr. Pedro Mihanovich become an actual fact, the manning of the ships with naval officers and conscripts, the freedom from all dues, and other advantages, not forgetting the payment of all wages by the Argentine Government, would lead to the removal of the difficulties mentioned in the foregoing paragraph. As things stand to-day, however, there seems small likelihood of the Government assuming this responsibility, and for the rest the Argentine Mercantile Marine appears no nearer becoming a definite and tangible reality than it has been any time during the past twenty years.

THE MAILS.

TO ARRIVE IN SEPTEMBER.

- 11.—Dutch by TUBANTIA.
13.—North American by VAUBAN.

TO LEAVE IN SEPTEMBER.

- 11.—Brazil, Senegal and Europe by DUCA DI GENOVA. Mails close at 8 a.m.
12.—Brazil, Australasia, South Africa, Canaries, Great Britain and Europe by MONSERRAT. Mails close at 1 p.m. Double postage till 7 p.m.
15.—London direct by HIGHLAND SCOT. Mails close at 8 a.m. Double postage till 4 p.m.
16.—West Indies and North American by VESTRIS. Mails close at 8 a.m. Double postage till 4 p.m.

BIRTH.

CHANDLER.—To Mr. and Mrs. C. Edward Chandler, a son, at "Roseville," Turdera, F.C.S., on 5th September, 257 k7

KAY.—At San Fernando, on the 3rd inst., the wife of John J. Kay, of a son. k5

MARRIAGE.

CREASE-DUNCAN.—At Saint Saviour's Church, Belgrano, on September 2, Norah, daughter of the late Wm. Crease, Las Flores, to William, son of the late Wm. Duncan, Forfar, Scotland. k4

DEATH.

DUVIGHT.—Stetson George Duvight, age 73, in Temperley, September 4, 1915.

THOMSON.—On September 2nd, Elena Francisca, daughter of Dr. John F. and Mrs. Thomson.

HIGH FREIGHTS

EXTRAORDINARY CHARGES FOR OCEAN TRANSPORT.

Each day appears to bring with it information from shipping companies of the increase in freights, until at the present moment the prices charged are without equal in the history of the mercantile marine.

There is to-day a vessel awaiting cargo in Buenos Aires, a steamer of 4000 tons, which is charging £4.2s.6d. a ton for a cargo of cereals to a Swedish port. If this cargo happens to be maize which is probable, the price of transport will be greater than the price of the cereal f.o.b. Again in the case of shipments of horses, the charge is £9.10.0 per head, which does not include forage. There is still a further tendency for prices to rise.

WARSHIPS AT VALPARAISO

VISIT OF THE KENT NEWCASTLE AND OTRANTO.

Despatches from Valparaiso report that the British warships Kent and Newcastle with the armed cruiser Otranto have called at that Port. After receiving calls from the Maritime Authorities, the commander landed and visited the Intendente and the Naval Director.

Subsequently all the officers and one hundred liberty men left by special tram for the Hippodrome at Villa del Mar, where after a solid lunch, they enjoyed Athletic Sports. The Commander of the Kent, Senior officer present, spoke warmly of the kind attentions received at Talcahuano and praised the condition and progress of the Chilean navy. The ships left within the statutory 24 hours.

Buenos Aires Herald

ILLUSTRATED WEEKLY EDITION

39th Year. New Series, No. 583

Buenos Aires, Friday, Sept. 17th, 1915

Price 30 Cents

MR. ASQUITH'S "VAGUE REFERENCES TO TREND OF EVENTS."

Premier's Promised Statement in the Commons

NEW WAR CREDIT OF 250,000,000 STERLING.

3,000,000 Volunteers Join the Colours

MR. ASQUITH MADE HIS PROMISED STATEMENT TO THE HOUSE OF COMMONS YESTERDAY.

THE PRINCIPAL PORTIONS OF HIS SPEECH WERE THOSE IN WHICH HE ANNOUNCED THE NUMBER OF RECRUITS OBTAINED SINCE HOSTILITIES OPENED, AND ASKED FOR A FURTHER WAR CREDIT.

3,000,000 MEN HAD VOLUNTEERED FOR ACTIVE SERVICE, BUT RECRUITING HAD NOW DECLINED.

THE WAR WAS COSTING 3,400,000 STERLING DAILY FROM JULY 18 TO SEPTEMBER 11.

A FURTHER CREDIT OF 250 MILLIONS WAS NECESSARY, BUT IT WAS NOT ANTICIPATED THAT THE DAILY COST OF THE WAR WOULD EXCEED 3,500,000 STERLING.

COST OF THE WAR

Wonderful Recruiting

MR. ASQUITH'S SPEECH

London, Sept. 15.

A seventh vote of credit since the opening of the war making a total of 1,262,000,000 pounds sterling, was moved to-day in the House of Commons by the Premier, Mr. Asquith. The amount asked for was £250,000,000.

In reviewing the financial and military situations as far as military exigencies would permit, the Premier said that this necessitated in many instances only vague references to the trend of events. He emphasised the growing expenditure on the war which, he said, in April averaged to the end of June daily £2,700,000; from July 1 to 17, it was £3,000,000; and from July 18 to September 11, £3,400,000. There had been repaid £50,000,000 to the Bank of England, to Foreign Governments £30,000,000 had been lent, and £28,000,000 to the Dominions.

ABNORMAL SECRET EXPENDITURE.

In comparing actual expenditure with the last vote of credit, Mr. Asquith said that there were some abnormal items. It would not be in the public interest to disclose these, but the House might take it that, these were expenditures incurred for the purpose of financing necessary operations. Part of this amount was to be repaid in a few months, and part represented advances in future expenditure.

Mr. Asquith estimated the daily gross expenditure henceforth would not exceed £3,500,000. It was his opinion that the new vote would carry the country through the third week of November. These figures throw some light on terms of contribution we are making to the war. "I do not wish," said the Premier, "to say that even now we are doing all that we can or that we ought to but as attempts are constantly being made, with whatever intentions, certainly with most mischievous effect, to belittle and discourage our efforts, I will give some comparisons between Peace and War figures.

3,000,000 RECRUITS.

"Recruiting has yielded the result that little short of 3,000,000 men have enlisted in the Army and Navy. Recruiting has on the whole kept up well, but I regret to say in the last few weeks has been falling off. Regarding the work of the Munitions Department, all needed now to complete this great task is an adequate supply of labour, both skilled and unskilled. In no field can women do more useful work." Mr. Asquith added that the Minister of Munitions had established twenty shell factories and eighteen more were in course of erection. In all 715 controlled establishments were under the Munitions Department. These factories employed 800,000 hands. The country has vastly exceeded any standard dreamt of before the war.

SITUATION IN FLANDERS AND THE EAST.

Reviewing the military situation Mr. Asquith said that in France and Flanders the British troops had been everywhere strengthened by large reinforcements of men, and stores and munitions, and there had been a considerable extension of the lines taken over from the French.

In the Dardanelles the British had made substantial gains and though they had not yet dislodged the Turks from the crests of the hills, the British now held a front of more than twelve miles.

In the East the Russian Army remained unbroken, in spite of the asserted German superiority and heavy artillery, and the Germans would find their objective far out of reach. They did succeed in forcing back the lines of our gallant allies, and taking several fortresses, but all accounts agree in showing the Russian retreat to be conducted in masterly fashion.

The Army is still unbroken and in assuming the command, the Tsar had given another significant proof of the inalterable determination to conquer which animated the Russian people from the highest to the lowest.

EXCELLENT IMPRESSION CREATED.

London, Sept. 15.

The statements of Mr. Asquith in the House to-day have made an excellent impression.

The evening editions say the situation is good and that the future may be regarded with confidence.

Reventlow's Ravings

LONDON, A FORTRESS!

New York, Sept. 15.

A Berlin despatch gives Count von Reventlow's reply in the "Tages Zeitung" to British criticisms of the German raids on London. London, he says, is a fortress. Sir Percy Scott should order the civil population of London to depart. He asserts that it is not Germany's responsibility if the Fortress of London so many times attacked, has not been evacuated. The failure of the British Government to order the people to abandon London shows its dis-civiliation and contempt for International Law. Airship attacks, he insists, are purely military in character, and are aimed at the destruction of vessels, wharves, magazines and other property serving war purposes directly or indirectly. Not one syllable can be said against such an operation. He concludes: We confidently hope that "throwing bombs on London" will soon be as trite a saying as "carrying coals to Newcastle," with the notable difference that at Newcastle there is coal enough, while in London far too few German bombs have so far exploded.

War in the Air

GERMAN GIANT AEROPLANE BROUGHT TO GROUND BY BRITISH AVIATOR.

London, Sept. 15.

A despatch from British Headquarters in France states that an officer of the Flying Corps attacked a large German aeroplane of a new type and after a desperate fight brought it down, both the German pilot and observer being killed. The German machine was first observed flying east and the British flier at once left in pursuit. The fight was long and arduous and the British soldiers in the trenches could hear the interchange of fire by the two machines.

The German avion was much larger than the British but the latter, fired very accurately piercing the Germans' petrol and water tanks. The Germans fell rapidly but managed to check their fall and fled eastward at lower levels. The British aviator pursued firing incessantly until the enemy fell again finally and fatally in some ploughed land.

ZEPPELIN DESTROYED

BY BRITISH AIRMAN.

London, Sept. 11.

The "Morning Post" prints a telegram from Amsterdam which announces that a British airman attacked and destroyed a Zeppelin in the vicinity of Brussels, all on board the dirigible being killed.

Hanging in Mid-Air

HEROIC COLONIAL'S DESPERATE VENTURE TO SAVE OVERTURNING AIRCRAFT.

London, Sept. 15.

An officer gives a thrilling account of an aviation adventure. He says: "We crossed the German lines with a lively fire directed at us. Some time after the Australian pilot observed our left wing tilting over and not responding to the controls. He swung out of the seat to the right but the plane continued to tilt and it looked as if we were going to turn over more when, the Cornstalk let himself down suddenly with nothing under him but thousands of feet of air. Holding on tight with his right hand he fumbled with the control wires where they had jammed under the body of the machine. The strain on his arm must have been terrific while he swayed with his legs dangling in space. In a minute or two it was all right and he was back in his seat, as cool as ever.

NEW YORK'S POPULATION

5,066,222 INHABITANTS.

New York, Sept. 11.

The result of the recent census of the population of New York city gives it as 5,066,222 inhabitants.

KITCHENER'S COMPLETE CONFIDENCE

In the Final Victory of the Allies

SURVEY OF THE SITUATION ON ALL FRONTS

Guarded Statements in the House of Lords

EARL KITCHENER ADDRESSED THE HOUSE OF LORDS YESTERDAY ON THE GENERAL STATE OF OPERATIONS AT THE FRONT.

LIKE MR. ASQUITH IN THE COMMONS, HE SAID LITTLE THAT WAS NOT ALREADY KNOWN TO THE PUBLIC.

OUR POSITIONS ON THE WESTERN FRONT, STATED THE WAR LORD, HAD BEEN CONSIDERABLY STRENGTHENED;

THE TURKS ON THE GALLIPOLI PENINSULA WERE BECOMING DEMORALISED.

RUSSIA'S GREAT RETREAT HAD BEEN CARRIED OUT IN ACCORDANCE WITH PERFECTLY CONCEIVED PLANS, AND THE GERMANS WERE WEAKENING IN THE EAST.

THE CALL FOR RECRUITS HAD MET WITH A WONDERFUL RESPONSE, AND ALTHOUGH THE QUESTION OF RESERVES WAS A DIFFICULT PROBLEM;

"I DO NOT FOR ONE INSTANT DOUBT," SAID HIS LORDSHIP, "THAT WHATEVER SACRIFICE MAY BE NECESSARY, WILL BE CHEERFULLY UNDERTAKEN BY OUR PEOPLE."

AT MAXIMUM OF STRENGTH

EARL KITCHENER'S ADDRESS TO THE LORDS

London, Sept. 15.

The Secretary for War, Lord Kitchener, to-day made a speech of considerable length in the House of Lords referring to the general state of operations. After analysing the advantages secured by the Allied armies in Northern France and Flanders and at the Dardanelles, he referred to the Russian retirement which, he said, had been carried out in accordance with perfectly conceived plans.

The Austro-German, he said, had reached at the very maximum of their strength and were not capable of greater effort and very shortly the succeeding weakening would be observable.

GERMANS WEAKENING IN THE EAST.

He pointed out that for a while the German advance in Russia was steadily maintained at the rate of five miles per day but now, they cannot make a single mile daily. All this proves that the German attack is weakening and that the Russian resistance is steadily and enormously increasing.

In conclusion the Noble Lord expressed his complete confidence in the final victory of the Allies.

STRENGTHENING POSITIONS IN THE WEST.

In the course of his speech, Lord Kitchener said.—

"The fact that on the West front the Allies position is practically unchanged for the last month, does not mean that there is any relaxation of active work.

"The continuous local fighting which has taken place all along the line has called for a display of incessant vigilance.

"Meanwhile our positions have been much strengthened, not only by a careful system of elaboration of trench fortification which already existed, but by large increases of the number of heavy guns placed along our lines.

"On several occasions recently the Germans have used poison gas and liquid fire.

RESPONSE TO CALL FOR RECRUITS.

"The country's response to the calls of recruiting has been little short of marvellous but the problem now is how to ensure the field force being kept continuously at full strength.

"This is engaging our close attention and will, I hope, soon receive a practical solution.

NECESSITY FOR SACRIFICE.

"I do not, for one instant, doubt that whatever sacrifice may be necessary will be cheerfully undertaken by our people.

"The measures adopted to counteract the German poisonous gases on our Western front have been ample."

Referring to the Dardanelles, the Secretary for War added that the French had been prominent in the fighting there recently. In a lull of quiet the soldiers had a much needed rest.

"There is evidence that the Turkish army is becoming thoroughly demoralised. For sixty miles the Capratos Valley and Territory has been cleared of Turks."

BELGIAN COAST BOMBARDED

BRITISH SQUADRON DESTROYS GERMAN DEFENCE WORKS.

London, Sept. 13.

It is reported from Amsterdam that a British squadron again severely bombarded the German positions on the Belgian coast, especially near Zeebrugge and Westende.

It is known that several defence works were destroyed by the fire of the British guns, and that the enemy suffered heavy losses in men.

None of the British ships were hit by the shells of the German heavy batteries.

A squadron of aeroplanes took a successful part in the action.

A HEAVY BOMBARDMENT

London, Sept. 13.

It is stated that the British squadron is intensifying its fire against the Belgian coast, cannonading German positions at a distance from the shore.

WOMEN AND THE WAR

GOVERNMENT EMPLOY ADDITIONAL MILLION

London, Sept. 10.

The number of women employed by the Government in various capacities has increased by a million as compared with July of last year.

REPRISALS DEMANDED

Britain Tiring of German Air Raids

"GLOBE" CALLS GREAT PROTEST MEETING

London, Sept. 15.

To-day's London papers devote much editorial and other space to accounts and comment on the air raids.

Generally they note with satisfaction the appointment of Admiral Sir Percy Scott to the duty of arranging defence of the city, but some sarcastically enquire why similar steps were not taken before.

The "Pall Mall Gazette" says it is getting rather hard to keep abreast of these Zeppelin visits, as they have taken place every night.

Remembering the raids that came off we are inclined to forget the failures. Probably only a little extra luck enabled the invader to slip through a week ago.

The "Globe" is arranging a great mass meeting to demand reprisals, and that every raid and bomb throwing over an English town shall be answered by one over a German town.

Count von Reventlow's hysterical outburst in the "Tages Zeitung" calling for greater violence in attacks on London, are published here.

ZEPPELIN DESTROYED

MURDERERS DIE IN BELGIUM.

London, Sept. 10.

The English newspapers publish a despatch from Amsterdam which states that a Zeppelin while travelling from Brussels towards Antwerp lost a propeller when over Stocken. An explosion ensued and the Zeppelin fell heavily to the ground enveloped in flames, being completely destroyed.

"Once a German--"

DOWAGER EMPRESS OF RUSSIA'S VIEWS ON THE MODERN HUN.

New York, Sept. 14.

The "Tribune" has an interesting cable from Turin giving an account from the "Stampa" of a conversation between the Dowager Empress of Russia and the President of the Polish Red Cross. Her Imperial Majesty said with strong feeling "Oh, how I hate those Germans! I am a Dane, and from the day those robbers seized Schleswig Holstein, I have hated them. For fifty years I have had to wear a mask at Court. Russia has been too kind, unsuspecting and confident to all those false, fawning Prussian emigrants to whom the Empire accorded undeserved favours and high position. A German once always remains a German, whatever kindness is shown him. Often I said so to the Tsar Alexander when he was alive; he would not believe it. One man only foresaw this fearful German aggression, that was the late King Edward. He was indeed a great monarch. Do you know that when I was taken by surprise on the outbreak of war and was crossing Germany, the Berlin people made hostile demonstrations against my train bawling out 'Russian pigs, they are no better than British.'"

Allan Liner in Collision

Quebec, Sept. 15.

The Allan liner Pretorian inward bound was in collision last night and is now ashore at the east end of White Island.

FRENCH FORCES ADVANCE

Successes in the Vosges

MAY LEAD TO GERMAN RETREAT

Paris, Sept. 15.

The official report to-day says: In Artois and at Neuville St. Vaast and Bretencourt there have been hand-grenade fights and artillery actions. A bomb skirmish took place near Lisons, another east of Chaulnes, another in the woods of St. Medard, and the east of Tray del Val. Much mining and counter-mining has taken place in the Argonne. In the rest of the front the night passed quietly.

HEAVY ARTILLERY FIGHTING.

Paris, Sept. 15.

An official report says:—

"To the north and south of Arras, as well as in the region of Roye, artillery actions continue with intensity.

"On the Quenneviere Plateau there has been fierce fighting with hand grenades. On the canal from Aisne to the Marne there has been much activity.

"There has been concentration at Berry-au-Bac-Neuville, where the enemy has been exerting himself for several days with the object of dislodging us from our bridge head at Saigneul.

"In Champagne, an artillery duel has been in progress, but this has moderated. In Leprêtre and in the region of St-Dié the artillery actions are also reported as being in our favour."

BELGIANS TAKE GERMAN TRENCHES

London, Sept. 15.

From Havre, the Belgian army is reported to be attacking the German positions along the Yser.

Throughout the morning there were intense artillery duels and later the Belgian infantry sallied suddenly from their entrenchments and took the enemy's outlying trenches at the point of the bayonet.

KING ALBERT IN THE FIRING LINE.

London, Sept. 15.

It is said that King Albert is on the line of fire at the Yser personally directing the movements of his troops.

The Belgians have been recently reinforced, and are in condition to undertake the initiative with good prospects.

FRENCH PROGRESS IN THE VOSGES.

Paris, Sept. 15.

In the Vosges the French have succeeded in advancing at several points after bloody encounters. The entire German line is being incessantly searched by artillery fire, and it is possible that the Germans may be obliged to make a retrograde movement throughout the region.

The French attacks have been of surprising violence. All their positions are solidly reinforced and they are advancing at several points.

Munitions for Russia

SHIPPED FROM JAPAN.

New York, Sept. 14.

Tokio cables state that large cargoes of ammunition with heavy pieces of artillery, are being despatched to Russia.

Japanese military circles say that the Government has resolved to spare no effort to assist the Russian armies.

The Japanese papers say that all the old animosities between Russians and Japanese have disappeared and the most complete cordiality now exists.

RUSSIAN OFFENSIVE IN THE SOUTH

Austrians Compelled to Cross the Dniester

MANY THOUSANDS OF PRISONERS TAKEN

Britain and France Grant Financial Aid to Russia

Petrograd, Sept. 15.

An official despatch has been issued stating:

In the region of Wyszewec we have forced the enemy to fall back precipitately, leaving 2000 prisoners in our hands.

South-east of that place we held the enemy's counter-attack, taking 7000 prisoners and seven guns.

Pursuit of the enemy in Galicia along the Sereth continues. The enemy is retiring east of Tarnopol, as also in the Zaleszciki region.

Severe fighting is going on in the neighbourhood of Yusephawka and about Dzwimacz. Last Sunday we took over 2700 prisoners there.

From August 30 to September 14 we have made 40,000 Austro-German prisoners.

RUSSIAN SUCCESSES IN THE SOUTH.

New York, Sept. 15.

The "Tribune" publishes a despatch from Czernowitz stating that the Austro-German forces have been repulsed on the line from Budzanow to Buczacz, and the heads of their columns in retreat have recrossed the Dniester in the direction of Stanislaw.

The Russians have likewise forced the enemy to fall back toward Kawa and have taken the offensive in the region of Dubno.

Dirigible Wrecked

BY RUSSIAN ARTILLERY FIRE.

London, Sept. 15.

The Press publishes a wire from Amsterdam stating that a German dirigible which had been greatly injured by Russian artillery, came down at Koenigsberg. It is supposed that this Zeppelin took part in the raid on Riga.

The Silver Bullet

ALLIES' FINANCIAL ARRANGEMENTS TO AID RUSSIA.

Petrograd, Sept. 15.

There are great hopes of the results of M. de Barck, Minister of Finance's visit to Paris and London. A financial arrangement is being made among the Allies which will assure Russia against lack of resources to carry on operations.

The Russian Press notes with satisfaction that both in Paris and London bankers are inclined to meet Russian wishes.

Rumania's Mobilisation

A PRECAUTION AGAINST AGGRESSION.

New York, Sept. 15.

It is confirmed from Bucharest that Rumania is mobilising part of her army in readiness to check any aggression by the Austro-Germans.

The reservists called up are now with their regiments. Indescribable warlike enthusiasm prevails.

Russia and the Jews

GERMAN PROPAGANDA IN THE STATES.

New York, Sept. 14.

Information from Amsterdam states that the propaganda of the Jews resident in Germany, is proceeding most vigorously.

Hundreds of letters are daily being sent to the United States in which are pointed out the necessity for the Jews in the States to work strenuously to prevent the Russian Government from again becoming rulers of the Poles.

CONCESSIONS CREATE EXCELLENT IMPRESSION.

Petrograd, Sept. 14.

The concessions held out by the Government to the Jews have created an excellent impression throughout the whole of the Empire.

Pro-Jew Campaign

TO BE OPENED BY GERMAN SOCIALISTS.

New York, Sept. 21.

Reports from Amsterdam state that the German socialists are preparing to conduct an active campaign in favour of the Jews.

The German Press indicates possibility of a great movement in all countries where the Jewish race is powerful. It is added that the German Jews give no credit to the Russian Government's promises and consider it merely means to gain the sympathy of the Poles.

The Disease Spectre

CHOLERA RAGING IN NORTHERN GERMANY.

Madrid, Sept. 14.

Official reports received by the Government state that cholera is raging in Brandenburg and other German provinces and cities; especially in Dantzig and Koeln.

German Spies Arrested

JAPANESE ACTION AT TSING-TAU.

Pekin, Sept. 14.

It is reported that the Japanese authorities at Tsing Tau have arrested several dozen Germans who have been put in prison on charges of attempting to smuggle letters out of the colony by means of Chinese couriers.

Warning of Norway

New York, Sept. 15.

The explorer Fritjof Nansen has published a book in which he advocates that Norway should arm herself for defensive purposes before it becomes too late.

Pirate Hunting

THRILLING "SPORT" FOR BRITISH DESTROYERS.

London, Sept. 15.

The "Evening News" says that the losses of German submarines have been more than formidable. They are for the time irreplaceable.

In movement, a submarine leaves a peculiar trail on the surface marked by air bubbles, and auxiliary war vessels can follow the curious wave of displaced water which seamen soon learn to distinguish, even in a rough sea.

There are at present no less than 2300 trawlers engaged in submarine hunting, constantly patrolling the waters around the British Isles. The writer relates how he stood on a rocky part of the coast watching through his binoculars three destroyers which were steaming at half-speed two abreast and one behind. Suddenly the rear destroyer increased speed and rushed forward, the foam rolling in acres from her keen bows and cascading from her fore deck, her funnels vomiting smoke. The other two moved rapidly in zig-zags, and the guns of all three broke into a crackling roar. The firing soon ceased, and then the three resumed station and steamed as before; but — when the next tide came in — the waves were coated with oil!

Pirate Sunk

BY FRENCH TORPEDO BOAT.

Paris, Sept. 14.

The "Journal" publishes a telegram from Athens that one of the French torpedo boats has sunk a German submarine between the islands of Mytilene and Tenedos.

SUBMARINES OFF GIBRALTAR.

Madrid, Sept. 14.

From Algeiras it is reported that a large flotilla of destroyers and submarines have left in pursuit of the German submarines which are now in the Mediterranean and which are believed to be actually hanging about near Gibraltar.

U Boat in Black Sea

SHOTS FIRED AT RUSSIAN COAST.

Petrograd, Sept. 14.

A submarine of the new German type has been sighted in the Black Sea by Russian post at Kertch Peninsula, Crimea. The submarine came up reconnoitring and exchanged shots with the shore before retiring at full speed. By the size and type, the vessel had evidently made its way by sea to Turkish waters.

SUNK BY THE SEA HUNS

New York, Sept. 11.

The Havas Agency has received a despatch from Algiers announcing that the small French steamer Ville de Mostaganem was sunk on Thursday by a German submarine 70 miles northwest of Mostaganem on the Algerian coast.

The crew of the vessel state that the same submarine flying the Austrian flag sank the French gunboat Aude a few hours previously.

LOSS OF A NORWEGIAN VESSEL.

London, Sept. 13.

From Christiania it is reported that a German submarine has fired upon and sunk the Norwegian steamer Presto, laden with wood.

The crew succeeded in saving themselves.

'Sunk by a Mine'

GERMANY DISCLAIMS RESPONSIBILITY FOR FOUNDERING OF HESPERIAN.

New York, Sept. 15.

A Berlin despatch states that a note was to-day delivered to Mr. Gerard, the U.S. Ambassador. The German Government disclaim responsibility for the sinking of the Hesperian. As stated by semi official sources the German opinion seems to reject almost absolutely the possibility that a German submarine could have been concerned in the foundering of the Hesperian. According to prearranged distribution no German submarine could have been in the part of the Ocean in which the Hesperian sank.

Furthermore according to the description given of the explosion from British sources, the nature of the damage indicates rather a mine than a torpedo. The affirmation that the ship was struck near the bow and that the few compartments filled go to bear this out. The note contains a paragraph to the effect that all submarines at sea on Sept. 4 have not yet returned but that there is no reason to expect that reports which they will supply will change the situation. The note is a simple recital of facts as sentiment does not enter into the German Government's view of the matter, nor is there any comment on German future submarine policy.

FEARED AN ATTACK'

SUBMARINE COMMANDER EXPLAINS

WHY HE SANK THE ARABIC

New York, Sept. 10.

The text of the German Government's reply relative to the sinking of the Arabic was telegraphed from Berlin via London under date 2.30 a.m. this morning.

The Note says that on August 20 a German submarine stopped the British steamer Finsley about sixteen nautical miles south of Kinsale Head. The crew of the steamer having abandoned her the submarine was about to sink her when a large steamer was observed bearing straight down upon the submarine. This steamer was afterwards known to have been the Arabic. She carried no flag nor anything whereby she might be known to be a neutral. As she appeared to be attacking an order was given that a torpedo should be fired at her.

The supposition that the Arabic was attacking the submarine was strengthened by the fact that on August 14 in the Irish Sea a large passenger steamer had fired upon a submarine a long distance off which had neither stopped nor attacked her.

The German Government deeply regrets the loss of American lives but cannot recognise its liability to pay compensation, even had the commander of the submarine been in error as to the intentions of the Arabic.

If the United States Government takes other views upon the question, the German Government will consent to its being settled by the arbitration court at The Hague.

A GERMAN FALSEHOOD.

Liverpool, Sept. 10.

In reply to the statement of the commander of the German submarine which sank the Arabic, the White Star Company says that the commander of the Arabic, Captain William Finch, is away for change and rest; but he stated officially that he did not see the submarine before the Arabic was torpedoed, and could not therefore have attempted to ram it. The excuse may be dismissed like others of similar worth.

NO CONSULTATION WITH BERNSTORFF.

Washington, Sept. 10.

The Department of State has begun the preparation of a reply to the German Note respecting the sinking of the Arabic.

STEADY PROGRESS ON GALLIPOLI PENINSULA.

Turkish Trenches Rushed by British Troops

BULGARIA EXPECTED TO REMAIN NEUTRAL

Greece and Rumania May Join Allies

London, Sept. 15.

Despatches from Tenedos state that the British have secured important successes on the Gallipoli Peninsula.

In the last few hours of the day they took hundreds of Turkish prisoners and carried by a rush several trenches.

CONSTANTINOPLE DESPONDENT.

London, Sept. 15.

Reports from Constantinople say that general dismay and discouragement are spreading in the Turkish capital by reason of the incessant strong reinforcement of the French and British forces on the Gallipoli Peninsula.

ALLIES' LARGE ARMY

Some papers calculate the available troops as now about 180,000 men, and prophesy a tremendous offensive movement. By means of a captive balloon attached to one of the ships, the Ottoman batteries are located on the Asia Minor side, and the allied ships at once open with salvos on the places indicated, sometimes silencing the batteries, sometimes blowing them away. The Franco-British troops are not now molested by the fire of these Turkish guns and their position is much improved.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL CASSON WOUNDED.

London, Sept. 15.

Brigadier-General Casson is reported as wounded at the Dardanelles; his name is included in the list of seventeen officers killed or wounded in the Gallipoli Peninsula and published today.

TURKISH TRANSPORT SUNK

BY RUSSIAN WARSHIPS IN THE BLACK SEA.

London, Sept. 11.

It is reported from Petrograd that the Russian warships in the Black Sea have sunk three Turkish transports which were conveying coal, the crews of the vessels perishing.

Turkish Steamer Sunk

BY RUSSIAN CRUISER IN BLACK SEA.

Petrograd, Sept. 15.

The Russian Admiralty state that the cruisers in the Black Sea have sunk a large Turkish steamer.

Turkish Cavalry Repulsed

IN ENCOUNTER WITH RUSSIANS

Petrograd, Sept. 15.

An official report states that a collision has occurred between the Russian and Turkish cavalry in which the latter were repulsed.

Towards the West in the district of Van, the Russian cavalry are pursuing the Kurds.

Greek Intervention

BELIEVED TO BE IMMINENT.

New York, Sept. 15.

An Athens despatch states that M. Venizelos has had a long interview with the Rumanian Premier. The conversation was chiefly on the Balkan question.

General opinion holds that intervention in the war on the side of the Allies is increasingly imminent.

Bulgaria Neutral

RUMANIA AND GREECE FOR THE ENTENTE!

New York, Sept. 15.

The "Evening Sun" Rome correspondent learns from Diplomatic sources that no particular change has been noted in the Balkan situation in the last few days.

There seems to be no alarm in Diplomatic circles over the possible inclination of Bulgaria to assist the Teutonic Empire.

Since Rumania's intervention is considered inevitable and Greece's attitude is friendly and favourable to the Entente, it is argued that Bulgaria will not dare to make trouble for the exclusive benefit of the Austro-Germans.

Spies in Athens

A BERLIN STORY.

New York, Sept. 14.

A Berlin wireless via Tuckerton gives a story by the "Berliner Tageblatt" that there is great excitement in Athens over the arrest of two French journalists named Papus and Marion, who are charged with being spies for Russia. Since April it is alleged that the accused have stolen hundreds of official telegrams from the German Embassy and also from King Constantine, as well as some British telegrams, sending copies to Petrograd. Both journalists and telegraph officials are implicated and have been arrested. The investigation is still proceeding.

MUNITIONS FOR THE TURKS

MANUFACTURED FROM OLD WARSHIPS.

Paris, Sept. 11.

Information has been received that the Germans in Constantinople have broken up a number of old Turkish warships in order to utilise the metal for the fabrication of munitions.

AUSTRIANS' HEAVY LOSSES

50,000 MEN SACRIFICED IN GALICIA

London, Sept. 11.

The newspapers publish despatches from Bucharest which state that the Austrians have lost 50,000 men in the recent battles in Galicia. In consequence it was found necessary to withdraw one of the Austrian army corps which was posted on the Rumanian frontier.

Bernstorff Was Implicated

DOCUMENTS FROM GERMAN EMBASSY DISCOVERED ON ARCHIBALD.

London, Sept. 15.

The Under Secretary of Foreign Affairs informed the House of Commons today that documents sent to the German and Austrian Embassies in Washington were found in the possession of Dr. Archibald.

The Thieving Hun

REMOVE BELGIAN RAILS TO POLAND.

Paris, Sept. 14.

Telegrams from Havre report that the Belgian Government is presenting a formal protest to all Neutral Governments against the acts of spoliation committed by the Germans in tearing up the metals of the Belgian Railways and transferring them to Poland.

ANTI-HATE CAMPAIGN

OPENED BY AUSTRIAN WOMEN.

Zurich, Sept. 11.

The local Socialist paper, "Volksrecht" publishes the text of a manifesto issued by Austrian women of all classes protesting against the attempt of the Austrian and German Governments to stir up a new "hate campaign."

The manifesto says: "We women have stood by the sickbeds of our heroes, but we have never heard from them a word of humiliating abuse of their enemies. We are convinced that our sisters in the countries against which we are fighting share our standpoint."

SERBIA PREPARED

FOR POSSIBLE TEUTON INVASION

London, Sept. 11.

Communications from Bucharest assert positively that there is a strong force of Germans on the Serbian frontier ready to cooperate with the Austro-Hungarian troops against Serbia.

The latter State has taken advantage of the last few months of truce to reorganise her army and is now in a position to engage the enemy under favourable circumstances. In the last week or two cargoes of ammunition have reached Nish from France and England, besides numbers of officers to handle the big guns.

DYNAMITE SEIZED

TIMELY ACTION BY RUMANIAN CUSTOMS OFFICERS.

Bucharest, Sept. 10.

The Rumanian Customs officers on the frontier have discovered and seized two cases of dynamite despatched from Austria. The police are convinced that the dynamite was intended to be used for blowing up the railway bridges in Rumania. The discovery has occasioned a good deal of excitement. An inquiry into the matter has been opened.

ARMENIANS MASSACRED

OUTRAGES BY TURKS AND KURDS.

New York, Sept. 13.

Despatches from Turin state information from Aivali announces thousands of Armenians are being deported into the interior of Asia Minor where they disappear being probably massacred by the ferocious Turkish soldiers and the Kurds.

Anarchy reigns over a great part of Turkey. The army is becoming demoralised, deserters are everywhere pillaging and looting in the cities.

Italians Stand Firm

AUSTRIAN OFFENSIVE FAILS

Rome, Sept. 15.

A telegram to the "Tribuna" from Roveretto states that on Monday the Austrians attempted an attack against the Italian positions of Toppono to the north of Zingna Torta at some eight kilometres from Roveretto.

The offensive began with an artillery preparation followed by an infantry assault.

The fire of the Italian artillery stopped the Austrians and drove them back with heavy losses.

Italian detachments are very active in the same zone, in spite of Austrian attempts to check them by artillery fire.

Heroic Alpini

PERILOUS MOUNTAIN WARFARE

Rome, Sept. 14.

The "Giornale d'Italia" reports that the Alpine troops display an astounding combination of daring and skill in their perilous mountain warfare.

Their Milan correspondent relates a notable exploit of the Alpini.

The Italian Scouts had exactly located a strong post of the enemy in an inaccessible but highly troublesome position and fifty Alpine riflemen were picked to surprise it. After four hours of incessant climbing and scrambling the fifty Italians, quiet as cats arrived in front of the enemy's position. They approached with the utmost caution as the enemy was alert and had posted among others a sentry, a man of colossal stature of the Austrian mountain Jagers and a skilled mountaineer. When close in they rushed him and despatched him with the bayonet killing also the other vedettes. The bulk of the party rushed upon the post with levelled rifles and fell on the Kaiserlichs who were awaking from sleep. So complete was the surprise and so skilful was the movement, that the assailants did not lose a single man.

Contraband for Germany

CHEMIST ARRESTED IN MILAN.

Rome, Sept. 14.

Telegrams from Milan state that the newspapers comment freely on the arrest of the chemist Parenti, who has been accused of sending contraband of war to Germany by way of Switzerland. A judicial inquiry is in progress. The journals approve the severity of the Government, but express a desire that the accused will have the opportunity of proving his innocence and good faith.

Pope's Correspondence

ANOTHER GERMAN PROTEST.

New York, Sept. 15.

A Munich telegram via Berlin states that the Church authorities charge the Italian censor with interfering in the delivery of letters addressed by the Pope to the clergy in Germany. Two letters written by the Pontiff to Cardinal Fruehwirth are known to have gone astray.

SWISS NEUTRALITY

ROME DENIES TEUTON ALLEGATIONS.

Rome, Sept. 10.

The evening papers deny the assertions of the Central Empires that Italy and France are concentrating forces on the Swiss frontier and threatening to invade Swiss territory. They point to the very cordial relations which exist between the Swiss Confederation and the Governments of Italy and France.

ANOTHER ZEPPELIN RAID

108 CASUALTIES.

London, Sept. 9.

It is officially announced that the capital was raided last night by Zeppelins, resulting in the death of 6 children, 12 men and 2 women. The wounded consisted of 48 men, 27 women and 13 children. Of these one of the killed and three of the wounded were soldiers, the rest being civilians.

PRESS WARNING TO THE PUBLIC.

London, Sept. 9.

The Zeppelin raid on London last night is described by the "Pall Mall Gazette" as the Londoners' first glimpse of war at close quarters.

The "Evening Standard" speaks of the coolness shown everywhere, but warns the public against the noticeably widespread and dangerous disposition to regard the affair as a species of spectacle.

The paper suggests that, in addition to the Zeppelin, which, within limits, is a terrible instrument of war, there is also danger from the anti-aircraft guns, and the public would therefore be well advised to take aerial visitors more seriously than they did last night.

NEWSPAPER STAFF'S SAFETY.

Chicago, Sept. 9.

A correspondent in London has telegraphed to say that the offices of the "Chicago Daily News" and the staff officers are safe and all well.

It is gathered from this that the Zeppelin raid of last night passed near or over that part of London.

(Note: The offices of the "Chicago Daily News" are, or were, in close proximity to Trafalgar Square).

RAIDING THE WHOLE FRONT

ACTIVITY OF ALLIED AIR SQUADRONS.

Paris, Sept. 10.

It is known that the aerial fleets of the Allies are ceaselessly raiding the enemy's encampment along the whole of the long line of battle throwing bombs on the fortified positions.

Very often these feats are not mentioned in the official reports for reasons of prudence, but it is known for certain that not a day passes without a squadron of forty or more Anglo-French airmen making its presence felt at various points on the enemy's lines; and this activity will be increased as the new machines are completed or those ordered from the United States arrive.

The papers say that the action of the aerial fleets at the present moment is of much importance.

FRENCH AIRMEN KILLED

TRAGIC ACCIDENT IN ALSACE

Geneva, Sept. 10.

Two French aviators have been killed at Deyingen, Alsace. Owing to trouble with the motor of the machine, they were alighting, when they collided with a wire fence, which caused the bombs they had on board to explode. The Germans buried them with military honours.

AN ENEMY'S TRIBUTE

TAUBE DROPS WREATH IN MEMORY OF PEGAUD.

Paris, Sept. 9.

A telegram from Belfort says that yesterday a German Taube flew over Chevannes and dropped a wreath bearing the following inscription:—"To the memory of Pegoud, who died like a hero. From his adversary."

INFURIATED CROWDS

ATTACK GERMAN HOUSES

INDIGNATION OF LONDON PRESS

London, Sept. 10.

The Zeppelin attack on London produced some disturbances, infuriated crowds attacking the houses of Germans.

The police had to intervene to prevent some of the Germans from being very roughly handled.

The crowd resented the interference of the police, and there was a severe struggle before the streets could be cleared.

The Press deplores these riots and declares that the Government will do all in its power to prevent a recurrence of these scenes.

SPECIAL CONSTABLES GUARDING GERMAN SHOPS.

London, Sept. 10.

Owing to the indignation aroused among the populace by the recent Zeppelin raid, the authorities, fearing tumults, have posted special constables to guard the German shops, which have been boarded up since the internment of enemy aliens has been put into practice.

The anti-German feeling has reached fever heat.

The censor passed without comment as to its accuracy the claim of Berlin that the western part of London, the factories near Norwich harbour and the iron works near Middlesbrough were attacked by the Zeppelins, and it is improbable that this statement will be either confirmed or denied, officials believing that any such action might be useful to the enemy in establishing the locality of the raid and prove of value in carrying out future raids.

UNIQUE AND THRILLING SIGHT.

The "Daily Telegraph," in an editorial expressing disappointment at the escape of the Zeppelins, protests that the Germans have gained no military advantage whatever, failing even to spread terror among the civilians. Indeed, in many places in the London district the sight of a Zeppelin high up in the heavens, with the searchlights flashing upon it and shells bursting all round it, was regarded and even enjoyed as a unique and thrilling experience.

AN OBJECT LESSON FOR LONDONERS.

Other feelings were naturally aroused in the neighbourhoods where incendiary or explosive bombs fell; but even these caused no panic. The sense of outrage was strong, but there was no sign of intimidation.

The paper concludes by saying that now that Londoners have been provided with an object lesson on a limited scale of what explosive bombs are capable in the way of destruction, they will be better able to appreciate the feeling of the Frenchmen and Belgians, whose fairest cities have been ruined by these methods.

RECRUITING SPEECHES DELIVERED FROM DEBRIS HEAPS

London, Sept. 10.

As to the results of the recent raid on London and the eastern counties, the "Spectator" says that the answer of the people of London to these exercises of "frightfulness" may be given in an episode mentioned by the "Manchester Guardian," to the effect that a recruiting sergeant has been addressing crowds from a platform made of the debris of ruined houses, with excellent results.

The "Mirror" says that the reply of London was the large number of volunteers who presented themselves at Trafalgar Square. From every part of the country men have flocked to the colours.

HOLD GERMAN AIRCRAFT CHIEF RESPONSIBLE!

The "Evening Standard" expresses

A MECHANICS' WAR

APPEAL TO BRITISH WORKMEN

BY MR. LLOYD GEORGE

Bristol, Sept. 9.

Amid uproarious applause and some confusion owing to an insistent delegate demanding the right to ask questions, Mr. Lloyd George addressed a packed hall of trade unionists this afternoon.

He at once struck the keynote with the declaration:—

"The war has resolved itself into a conflict between the mechanics of the contending nations. With you, victory is assured; without you, our cause is lost."

"I come here as the greatest employer of labour in this country. You passed a resolution yesterday pledging yourselves to assist the Government in the successful prosecution of the war; and I am here on behalf of the Government to take you at your word."

"Judging between British and German workmen, I believe that the British are the better."

The Congress adopted the following resolution:—

"This Congress, being convinced that the issues involved in the war are of transcendent importance to the democracies of this and other countries, hereby records its entire approval of the action of the Parliamentary Labour party in co-operating with the other political parties in the national recruiting campaign."

COUNTRY NOT DOING ITS BEST!

London, Sept. 9.

In his address to the Trades Union Congress at Bristol to-day Mr. Lloyd George used some very plain language. He declared that the country is not doing its best, and that the problem before it was entirely a labour one.

DARDANELLES PROBLEM

BRITAIN AND THE AEGEAN ISLANDS

New York, Sept. 9.

A telegram from Constantinople says that according to a neutral diplomat who is well versed in the affairs of Russia, when the peace negotiations commence, one of the Principal points of discussion between Britain and Russia will be the possession of the islands of Strati, Imbros, Tenedos and Lemnos. He says that the Power which possesses these will control the Dardanelles, and he doubts whether Russia will allow Britain to continue holding those points in order to construct another Gibraltar of them.

The diplomat added that he knew that on two occasions Russia has sounded Britain on this subject, but he does not know what reply was given.

the hope that the British Government will announce its determination to hold the head of the German aircraft service personally responsible for the deaths occasioned by these raids.

"HAVE DONE WITH THIS SUPER-SQUEAMISHNESS."

The "Globe" and other newspapers take the view that every air raid on London or other British cities should be followed immediately by attacks on German cities within easy reach of Belfort. The "Globe" says that "it is time to have done with this super-squeamishness."

GREAT STIMULUS TO RECRUITING.

London, Sept. 10.

The newspapers announce that the result of the recent Zeppelin raid on England has been that thousands of volunteers have enrolled.

BRITAIN'S LOST OFFICERS

1502 CASUALTIES IN A FORTNIGHT

London, Sept. 11.

The officers' casualty list for the fortnight ended August 30 indicates the severity of the recent fighting on Gallipoli peninsula, whence the bulk of the casualties are announced. The total comes to 407 killed, 959 wounded, and 136 missing. This number has been exceeded only once in any fortnight since the beginning of the war, when 1627 casualties were announced.

During the fortnight under notice Brigadier-General Baldwin was killed, and three other Brigadier-Generals were wounded. Nine Lieutenant-Colonels were killed, and two are missing.

The Australian contingent was the greatest sufferer, losing 68 officers killed, 150 wounded, and 15 missing. The New Zealand contingent lost 33 killed and 74 wounded; the Lancashire 26 killed, 46 wounded and 16 missing; the Yorkshires 6 killed, 31 wounded, and 14 missing; the Manchester 12 killed, 24 wounded and 9 missing; Sherwoods, 17 killed and 22 wounded; Staffords 11 killed, 25 wounded and 7 missing; Irish Fusiliers 12 killed, 26 wounded and 5 missing; Royal Welsh Regiment, 5 killed, 29 wounded, and 8 missing; Indians, 6 killed and 27 wounded. Many other regiments have had from 20 to 30 casualties.

MONUMENT TO THE MURDERED

OBELISK COMMEMORATING THE LUSITANIA OUTRAGE.

London, Sept. 13.

As a monument to the hapless victims of the Lusitania and a perpetual arraignment of Germany, it is proposed to erect on the Old Head of Kinsale, a lofty white obelisk, to be visible many miles out at sea. This has been planned by relatives of the lost, but contributions may be sought in France, Russia and the United States.

MARSHALS MEET

CONFERENCE BETWEEN JOFFRE AND FRENCH.

London, Sept. 13.

It is reported from Dunkirk that Marshal Joffre has been visiting the British lines and had a long interview with Marshal French.

Marshal Joffre visited the British army in its positions, making a careful inspection, and stated that he was very pleased with what he had observed. The British troops gave Marshal Joffre a rousing welcome and acclamation.

REFUSAL TO WORK OVERTIME

LEADS TO FINING OF 245 WORKMEN.

London, Sept. 10.

It is reported from Liverpool that the local Munitions Court to-day fined 245 workmen belonging to the Cammell Laird Company £1 each for refusing to work overtime.

FRENCH NATIVES FOR THE FRONT?

700,000 FIGHTING MEN FOR NEXT SPRING.

Paris, Sept. 11.

The Deputy M. Pierre Masse is about to propose a Bill in Parliament authorising the recruiting of natives of the French colonies for active service.

M. Masse says that the approval of the measure would add another 700,000 fighting men to the French army by next spring.

5,000 MILLION DOLLAR LOAN

TO BE RAISED IN THE U.S.

FINANCIAL COMMISSION WARMLY RECEIVED

New York, Sept. 11.

The commission of French and British financiers in which Lord Reading is included as chairman arrived yesterday and were met at the wharf by the American banker Morgan.

It is understood that the commission propose to negotiate a loan in New York for the amount of 5000 million dollars. A preliminary conference with Mr. Morgan and other bankers has already been celebrated.

SYMPATHY WITH THE ALLIES.

New York, Sept. 11.

The British members of the Anglo-French commission which has come to New York by the steamship Lapland to discuss financial matters are, Lord Reading, Lord Chief Justice; Sir Edward Hopkinson; Mr. Holder, President of the London, Midland and City Bank; Sir Henry Babington Smith, ex-President of the National Bank of Turkey, and Mr. Basil Blacket.

The French members of the commission are, M. Ernest Mallet, manager of the Bank of France, and M. Octave Hembert, an official of the Foreign Office.

Thousands of persons have left their cards on the visitors, whose reception resembles an informal demonstration of sympathy with the Allies.

PROBABLE INCLUSION OF RUSSIA AND ITALY.

New York, Sept. 11.

One of the British members of the Anglo-French financial commission said to-day:—

"We want a very large amount, virtually all we can get. We have abundant means of providing security for advances made. We could, if insisted upon, send a hundred million pounds in gold, but of course we do not want to have to ship such amount. However, we have it, and more. We could, if forced, pay this amount in gold, but we hope to obtain credit loans, for which we can offer ample security.

"No terms have yet been discussed, nor amounts fixed; but an interest of 5 per cent. is commonly mentioned. We shall probably include Russia and Italy in our negotiations.

"There will be no formal conference next week, our financiers insisting upon no formality and preferring to browse around at first finding out exactly how the financial land lies, how our requirements can be successfully floated and whether the huge banking credits can be made available. Short term Treasury notes may be found a feasible means of raising from one to two hundred millions."

Last night a dinner at the Biltmore Hotel was offered by Mr. Morgan, to which only the most powerful financial leaders were invited. Only 25 were present; but no more influential gathering of European and American financiers ever gathered round a table.

BUSHIRE OCCUPIED

BY BRITISH TROOPS IN PERSIAN GULF.

London, Sept. 10.

With regard to the killing of two British officers near Bushire and the failure of the Persian Government to punish the tribal chiefs concerned in the affair, a Reuter's telegram from Teheran says that it is hinted there that the murderers were assisted by the Germans.

The British occupied the city, which contains over 16,000 inhabitants, and is situated in the Persian Gulf, on August 8 last without opposition.

WILSON'S ANXIETY

"I HAVE FORFEITED MY LIBERTY"

New York, Sept. 13.

At Washington yesterday President Wilson expressed the gravity of the international situation in addressing a delegation from Virginia who asked him to make a trip to the battlefield of Manassas late in the present month.

He said:—"We are all hoping and praying that the skies may clear, but we have no control over events on this side of the water, and it is impossible to predict the course of events. Some time ago, I promised to go to Manassas to dedicate a memorial tablet, and I then said that things were just beginning. A great many events have happened since which have altered, not only the aspect of our affairs, but that of the world. My experience daily has been that questions turn up so suddenly, and have to be dealt with so promptly and sometimes with so much thoughtful discretion that I dare not let my thoughts go out to other matters. I simply feel that I have forfeited my liberty—for the present—and that my nearest duty is my most obvious and most imperative duty."

LYING HUN GOALED

FOR BEARING FALSE WITNESS IN LUSITANIA CASE.

Washington, Sept. 9.

The German subject Stahl who reported that the Lusitania carried four guns has been sentenced to imprisonment for eighteen months for false witness.

"A STUPID AND CONTEMPTIBLE LIAR."

New York, Sept. 9.

Gustav Stahl was sentenced to-day by Judge Hough of the United States District Court to one year and six months detainment in the Federal prison at Atlanta for perjury by swearing before the United States Grand Jury that he saw four guns on the deck of the Lusitania.

A nominal fine of one dollar was imposed to satisfy the punitive part of the Statute.

In passing sentence the Judge said: "You have committed an offence against the United States which is much more serious than is commonly implied in the word 'crime.' You are apparently a man of education and culture; but you have sold your honour for money through depravity and cupidity."

DR. ARCHIBALD'S PASSPORT

CANCELLED BY SECRETARY OF STATE.

Washington, Sept. 9.

The Secretary of State has cancelled the passport made out in favour of Dr. Archibald, now at Rotterdam, and has authorised the United States Minister at the Hague to give him a new one to enable him to proceed to the United States where it will have to be decided whether he violated the law by conveying correspondence for a belligerent nation.

AMERICAN AIRMAN'S SUCCESS

BRINGS DOWN A GERMAN AEROPLANE

London, Sept. 10.

The American airman Weyman (who joined the French army) while making a reconnaissance to the north of Rheims had an engagement with a German aeroplane which he brought down.

FIRE ON A LINER

CARRYING RESERVISTS AND STORES

New York, Sept. 13.

The Italian liner Sant'Anna with more than 1900 persons on board, chiefly Italian reservists from New York, has been reported on fire in mid-ocean and in grave danger. She is stated to be on the line traversed by Mediterranean bound vessels several of which should be close to her. Other vessels are going to her assistance. Her manifest includes 3000 barrels of cottonseed oil. It is relieved that the fire is the result of a plot and that before the vessel left New York incendiary bombs were placed on board, timed to burst into flame when the ship was at sea.

MAKING FOR THE AZORES.

New York, Sept. 13.

A wireless has been received from the Captain of the Sant'Anna at the offices of the Fabre Line stating that the fire was in No. 2 hold. The fire is however now out and the ship is making for the Azores under escort of the Ancona.

VESSEL NOW OUT OF DANGER.

New York, Sept. 13.

A radiogram has been received from the Sant'Anna stating that the fire which broke out on board has been extinguished and that the vessel is out of danger.

EXIT VON KLUCK!

FALLEN FAVOURITE RETIRES ON PENSION.

London, Sept. 13.

Communications from Amsterdam state that the German newspapers have published the fact that General Von Kluck has asked for and has obtained permission to retire on a pension corresponding to his rank. The papers state General Von Kluck has been superseded on account of the failure of his operations in the region of the River Severn.

GENERAL VON KLUCK.

tained permission to retire on a pension corresponding to his rank. The papers state General Von Kluck has been superseded on account of the failure of his operations in the region of the River Severn.

REVOLT IN PERSIA

STRIFE STIRRED UP BY GERMAN EMISSARIES.

London, Sept. 13.

The "Morning Post's" Petrograd correspondent says that despatches from Teheran indicate that the Germans have at last succeeded in stirring up trouble in Persia. This is an object which German incendiaries have been steadily pursuing ever since war began.

The Indo-European telegraphs are now finally interrupted.

It is stated that the British and Russian Consuls and other officials, together with all employés in Banks and other establishments, have left, but that strong and sufficient Russian forces are already on the march to reduce the trouble-makers and re-establish order.

VERDUN'S DEFENCES

DESCRIBED BY U.S. WAR CORRESPONDENT.

New York, Sept. 10.

Mr. William Simms, correspondent of the United Press Agency, who is with the French army at the front, sends the following telegram:—

"France is now putting reliance on her men, her entanglements of special barbed wire of American make, and on her series of marvellous trenches, and no longer depends primarily upon her forts.

"That this is so no better proof can be furnished than that given me by the Military Governor of Verdun, General Courtanceau, who showed me the secret organisation of the defences of the place.

"The General observed to me:— 'The Germans have announced that Verdun is at the point of falling. I want you to take a look, and then let you judge whether Verdun is in danger.'

INTO THE BOWELS OF THE EARTH.

"We visited places and saw things which no mere civilian has ever visited or been shown before. We went down a winding staircase, down until I was dizzy, into the bowels of the earth under the forts. We ventured into the deepest dungeons where miles of corridors are filled by miles of foodstuffs and ammunition piled in broad, tall rows. We saw the General Staff at work in some of these corridors which had been rigged up as offices. In short, we saw the whole plant. Lastly we were admitted into the underground retreat of the General.

"Seated here the General said to me:—'You may say that we are prepared to defend this city until the last round of ammunition is gone and the last man dead.

A SUBTERRANEAN CITY.

"The subterranean chambers of the citadel accommodate at least 50,000 people, with the supplies necessary for comparative comfort. In June last, the Germans shelled Verdun with their 380 mm. long range guns, twenty-six shells falling into the town. Not much damage was done; but, profiting by the experience of Dunkirk, the authorities are making Verdun safe.

"The corridors and chambers are almost entirely cut out of the rock, but have false walls and ceilings of brick, with spaces between the bricks for ventilation chimneys which ascend to the surface at intervals, creating a natural draught.

"There is a hospital with a spotless operation room; an independent waterworks system, with two power stations of a capacity sufficient for the needs of 50,000 people; there is an immense store of grain packed in airtight metal casks, a large grist mill and a bakery. There are canned meats in enormous quantities; also stores of lard, canned milk, and many other requisites. None of these are being drawn upon at present, as they are to be used only in case Verdun is invested.

"A narrow gauge railway runs through the corridors to haul food supplies and ammunition. There are five electric light plants, and two more are being built by way of extra precaution for the officers' quarters.

"One of the subterranean passages consists simply of small rooms built of thin boarding to provide a modicum of privacy."

"On the door of a little room constructed of upright planks I noticed the words 'Military Governor'."

FRENCH ALTITUDE RECORD

Paris, Sept. 9.

The French aviator, Damars, has reached an altitude of 6,600 metres (21,650 feet), which constitutes a French record. M. Damars is shortly going to the front.

RED CROSS FUND

Dance at the Plaza Hotel

Wednesday, Sept 15

Last evening's dance, arranged in aid of the Red Cross Fund, which was held at the Plaza Hotel was an immense success. The Committee of gentlemen which consisted of the following: Dr. E. O'Farrell, Dr. A. Ham, V. Kenny, M. Kenny, J. Cavanagh, M. Hearne, S. Doyle, J. Lalor (Jr.), J. Tormey, A. P. W. Hutton, and G. A. Young are to be congratulated on their energetic work, which was one of the factors in the success achieved.

Among some 320 persons present were the following:—

Mesdames—James Smart, John Torney, Edward P. Maquire, W. W. Dillon, J. P. Harrington, Adolfin V. de Gonzalez Bonorino, Patricio Kilmurry, Martin Murphy, Robert Halahan, Guerrico, J. S. de Aginto, Rolff, James J. Byrne, Cecilia C. de Araoz, Judson, Baillie, Cabo, Lizowsky, Edward Morgan, H. P. de Simons, Gordon Hay, James Hardie, John Macdonald, Daniel Duggan, John Macdonald, Saravi, Castro, John P. Kavanagh, Tité Fernandez, E. MacLoughlin de Torney, Toya Fernandez and J. H. Kidd.

The Misses—Marion Casey, Nelly Boote, Ruth O'Farrell, Margarita O'Farrell, Angelica Stanfield, Norah Kenny, May Kenny, Clarita Sarmiento Laspiur, Nata Villanueva, Georgina Villanueva, Elba Saravi, Lily Gahan, Bella Mackern, Angelica Castro Almeyra, Stella MacLoughlin, Tiny Pearle, Alicia Garnor, Beatriz Facon, Adelina MacGregor, Angelica del Campo, Pincrah Aguilo, Margaret Tormey, Adelina Maguire, Peró, Bella Kilmurray, Jessie Kilmurray, Lucy Kilmurray, Katie Kilmurray, Katie Rodman, Eleonora Macdonald, Lily Macdonald, Sosa, Lidia Cabo, Dorothy Judson, Ealine Denton, Zulema Rivadavia, Elena Kenny, Nancy Finney, Dorothy Finney, Gladys Jacobs, J. G. Young, Guerrico, Clotilde Falcon, Maima MacGregor, Cecilia Rooney, Bella Morgan, Emma Lizowsky, Maria E. Sosa, Gladys Baillie, the Misses Sosa, May Ballesty, Rosa Franklin, Luisa Morgan, Bella Murphy, Teresa Gonzalez Bonorino, Rosa Lennon, Lily Dillon, Lilian Drabble, Esther Gonzalez Bonorino, Blanca O. Gonzalez, Carmen Wulff, Fanny Wolff, Dolly Simons, M. C. Byrne, Mariana Mahon, Lily Harrington, E. Niven, Sarah Cregg and Manuclita Miro.

Messrs. Adolfo Cobo, Jermyn Brooks, Gordon Hay, Dr. Leandro Curutchet, Jorge E. Morgan, Ricardo Sabouyle, Arthur Boote, Leslie A. Clark, Juan McDonald, Dr. Robert Halahan, Frederick Green, Bustos Moron, C. G. Simons, Valentin Alvarez, J. E. Sloan, Martin Murphy, Santiago Doyle, Elson Finney, L. E. McCauley, F. Boote, José O'Farrell, Santiago Henry, Robert Gallagher, Robert Murphy, J. Morgan, Arthur Henry, J. B. Denton, Dr. E. Comotti, Alberto Begue, Daniel Duggan, Alfred Coulter, Robert Hardie, C. Lamon, M. Zapiola, Luis Hughes, Rodolfo Maschwitz, Justo Urquiza, David Miles, Alberto Kenny, Alf. Carey, Miguel Thormey, Jorge M. Morgan, J. M. Acevedo, M. M. Nougues, Charles A. Arias, Dr. Judson, Julio Mulhall, H. C. Bustos Moron Jr., Eugene Moore, J. J. Hughes, Federico Kenny, Rafael Jimenez, Carlos Coslo, Guillermo W. Dillon, Capt. Victor Campos R. N. R. Pero, Ivan Mohr Bell, Juan P. Tormey, G. S. Hardie, D. del Campo, A. Gramajo Jr., H. W. Rinearson, J. H. Kidd, Albert Fernandez, M. A. Candina, Ed. Maguire Jr., Maurice Kenny, Edward Morgan, Alfred Ham, Arthur Cook, Alex. Siquero, Eduardo Lalor, Thomas Cullen Jr., John Cavanagh, Juan Lalor Jr., Vicente Kenny, E. M. Hearne, G. A. Young, S. G. Olivares, J. G. Garrett Kavanagh, Albert Doyle, Leo Gahan, Alberto Warner, M. L. G. Segura, E. C. Gahan, A. Simpson, Hector Colmegna, Edward Farrell, R. S. Trillia, R. N. Trillia, Frederick Kenny, Rafael Jimenez, Martin Murphy, Pat. Kilmurray, W. N. Dillon, Ed. Maguire, John Tormey, James Smart.

ANOTHER AEROPLANE

From the River Plate

THE FIRST GRATEFULLY ACCEPTED

It has been decided that another aeroplane shall be presented to H.M.'s Government from the River Plate. There was such a splendid response to the first appeal that the money needed was oversubscribed and signs are not wanting that the extra sum necessary for Aeroplane "River Plate" No. 2 will be forthcoming quite as quickly.

The British Society have recently received the following telegram:—

"Aeroplane River Plate gratefully accepted. Please cable two thousand two hundred and fifty pounds this League and name lady to christen. Early delivery expected. Government cable follows."

This telegram was received from the League of the Empire which body kindly acts as the Agents for the British Society, and the stipulated amount is being forwarded.

Many suggestions were received by the Committee of the British Society as to what should be done with the surplus which amounts roughly to $5500. These suggestions were carefully considered at the meeting of the Committee on Monday evening, but it was agreed that as the money had been subscribed for an aeroplane it should be expended for such a purpose and no other. The Committee were absolutely unanimous in coming to this decision and they think, in adopting such a course, they are correctly interpreting the feeling of the majority of their compatriots. It only remains now for the members of the British Community to show, by a quick and generous response to this second appeal that a mistake has not been made.

It has been urged that there must be a finality to enterprises of this character and that, having attained the object for which it first set out, the British Society might rest content. But to rest is impossible at this stage. Whilst the war lasts there can be no finality to patriotic efforts of any kind, which are calculated to help the Allies' cause. On the contrary, whilst necessary, greater and still greater sacrifices on the part of all must be made.

From certain patriotic organisations in Great Britain has come the reproach that British subjects in Argentina have not taken their share with their compatriots the world over in bearing the burdens caused by the war. Such a reproach is unmerited. A great deal has already been accomplished but it is certainly true that there still remains much to be done. In providing the British Government with aeroplanes the hands of the Authorities are strengthened, and those resident here have the satisfaction of feeling that they are striking a direct blow at the enemy.

On every ground, therefore, it is hoped that within a few weeks time it will be possible to send home another cable informing the Government that loyal subjects here can place the funds necessary for "River Plate Aeroplane No. 2" at their disposition.

Subscriptions will be received and acknowledged by the Hon. Treasurer of the British Society, Mr. W. Watson, 536 Cangallo, to whom also all cheques should be made payable. Those who would be willing to collect for this object may obtain subscription lists on application.

Subscriptions to the Aeroplane Fund which have not, up to the present, been publicly acknowledged, are as follows:—

Amount previously acknowledged $29011.03
Pupils at Conservatorio Prince George 38.00

Collected in Huinca Renanco:—H. Dobbs $10, W. Brunt $5, J. Martin $3, J.

Polyblank $5, W. Drain $5, B. Brown $5, J. Rogers $5, T. Woodward $5, F. Ben net $5, F. Hilton $10, N. A. Haigh $5, A. Hill $5. 68.00
Robert B. Reiss 100.00
Mario Tirone 20.00
Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Jackson Via y Obras, F.C.S. 35.00
Collected by D. Cameron:—
J. J. Macmillan $10, D. Cameron $10, F. H. Bryant $10, H. J. Schiele $10 40.00
Anonymous 25.00
Collected by Mrs. McKerrrow, 2nd list:—R. Clutton $10, H. Hilliwell $5, Samaria $10. 25.00
Anonymous 5.00
Miss G. M. Woellwarth 10.00
C. Maashant 10.00
D. Castle 5.00
J. C. Porte 5.00
E. A. Coleman 3.00
J. Mulhall 2.00
N. J. Bauc 10.00
J. Moffatt 5.00
W. F. Johnson 3.00
P. Murray 5.00
D. E. Marr 3.00
Staff of Messrs. Lacey and Sons 33.00
Traffic Dept., F.C.S.:—

E. Adey $1, C. Barrow $5, L. A. Battistoni $1, W. B. $5, G. Belk $5, A. V. Bennett $5, A. Bereith $20, D. J. B. $5, A. Borri $1, A. V. Bouson $10, H. W. Brown $20, E. Burton $10, J. D. Cicco $1, N. C. $5, A. H. Coleman $20, G. W. R. Coleman $20, F. Coupe $1, J. Clark $10, J. de los Santos $1, C. Devitt $1, C. H. Doherty $20, T. Egan $10, F. Erlin $2, R. F. $5, E. W. Fritchie $5, D. Geddes $20, N. Geddes $20, W. George $5, T. Gouk $20, L. Goñi $1, W. B. Grant $5, T. Gregory $20, C. A. Hall $10, P. Hardcastle $20, E. Hardcastle $10, H. E. Hopson $5, H. W. Hopson $5, D. Jennings $5, H. Johnstone $5, E. Lane $5, C. A. Land $5, Guy Lewis $10, J. F. McHutchinson $1, J. McKee $10, J. McGaw $1, A. Mackintosh $5, H. MacLuskie $20, E. B. Mawson $10, Marshall $1, B. W. Mitchell $1, A. Moore $10, W. J. Morris $5, C. Page $5, Roht. Pattison $5, P. T. Philp $20, W. J. Porter $5, F. Q. $1, J. B. S. $1, S. Simonetti $5, D. Sinclair $5, L. C. Tregonning $10, W. P. Wilson $5. 486.00

Mrs. R. Nugent 5.00
L. Nugent 5.00
Collected by H. B. Harding Green 144.70

Concordia Concert and Dance Committee 33.10
Miss C. Crossley 20.00
L. J. Lowe 100.00

Collected by Mrs. Fawcett, 4th list:—Gerald Juff $10, Mrs. Donner $5 15.00

Collected by Geo. Woollidge, Rosario:—Edward M. Shaw $50, A. Macdonald $50, A. Watson $10, Proctor, Garratt, Marston, Ltd. $100, William I. Christie $25, J. E. Traill $50, William Barnett $50, Rosario Water Works Co. $50, A. T. Karck $25, Ricardo le Bas $25, J. H. Marshall $10, Vivian Milner $20, Geo. A. Middleton $10, A. C. Barnes $5, E. V. H. $25, Sanday and Co. $50 555.00
Miss Searle 10.00
J. A. Rickards 5.00

Collected by Mrs. P. A. McKerrrow, 3rd list:—J. Barker $5, J. Robertson $5, R. M. Shrewsbury $10, W. Bullock $5, W. Finnegan $5, F. W. Tappen $5, A. Ferrari $2, M. Villanueva $1, J. Slossia $2. 40.00
Stanley Buckley 25.00
Accountants Office, F.C.S. E. Cox, (per A. N. Gny) 16.00 Received at the London and Brazilian Bank:—A. B. Clarke $5, C. Hitchman $10, Schona, Moise and

BENEVOLENT AMERICANS

ORGANISE SUCCESSFUL ENTERTAINMENT AT PALACE THEATRE.

Provided an entertainment be sound and the cause a deserving one, there will rarely be any difficulty in obtaining an audience. This statement is almost axiomatic, and its truth was again emphasised last evening when, although the weather was sufficiently depressing to militate against the success of most functions, the Palace Theatre was well-filled by an audience eager to witness the attractive programme presented in aid of the British and American Benevolent Society.

The Society is one of the most deserving in the Capital, and although it frequently benefits as the result of entertainments organised by various charitably-disposed members of the community, the call upon its resources is so great that its income is none too large for the vast amount of work which it is called upon to accomplish.

Last night's "benefit" was a distinctly American one; held under the auspices of the American Society of the River Plate, the entertainment was patronised largely by citizens of the Northern Republic, and the programme was almost exclusively American in character.

A lengthy and interesting cinema film, "Little Sunset," filled the first portion of the evening, and another long picture, "The Caprices of Kitty," concluded the entertainment. The middle portion of the programme was devoted to vaudeville acts, and was, in consequence, the principal centre of attraction.

Quite "the" turn of the evening was that given by Miss Nancy Finney and Mr. Edson Finney, whose modern dances ("Pavlova" and "Maxixe") were among the cleverest things of their kind seen in the Capital for many a long day. Miss Finney was especially good and it is a matter for regret that her art is not seen on many other occasions for the delectation of the public. Miss Seville Mandeville Towne, too, contributed classical dances to the programme. The "Dance of Mystification" has been seen before, but it is an artistic little work that well stood repetition. "Peek-a-Boo," also was quite enjoyable. This was Miss Towne's first appearance this season, but it confirmed original impressions that she possesses distinct artistic ability and is one of the most promising of the younger entertainers in the Capital. The Spanish dances by Miss C. Ada Shaw added variety to a section of the programme that was greatly appreciated by the audience.

The Yankee Glee and Mandoline Clubs in selected melodies were loudly applauded. The "turn" was a popular one; moreover, it was unique. These clubs, together with Mr. G. H. Huft (in "Imitations") and Mr. J. J. Storey (in "Casey at the Bat") occupied the remainder of a period.

Although the financial result of the venture has not yet been announced, there can be little doubt of the success achieved. This is a tribute to the energies of the American Society, and of the ladies responsible for the organisation of the entertainment, Mesdames B. T. Brooks, J. L. Denton, R. W. Huntington, W. C. Howe, H. L. Prettyman, Albert Hale, and Charles Towne, are, therefore, to be sincerely congratulated.

Leito $5, A. Bensabat $5, Jonsen and Eaton $20, G. Steabben $10, F. W. Watson $20, A. N. S. R. Nurse $10, C. W. Hope $10, J. N. Hirst $200, D. H. Johnston $10, F. Ham $20, W. E. Macfarlane $5, A. K. Macfarlane $5. 335.00
Staff of the London and Brazilian Bank 146.00
H. Matcham Davies 5.00
C. T. R. 5.00
H. Dixon 10.00
G. Wayman 10.00
R. J. Stirling 10.00
C. S. Stirling 10.00
G. J. Hamond 10.00
W. Maben 10.00

Total $31488.83

MAINLY ABOUT PEOPLE

The Western Telegraph Company have a message from New York to Otobemo.

Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Goodmansson, formerly of Rio Gallegos, leave for New York to-day, en route to Chicago, by the s.s. Vestris.

Mr. J. Llorca Marty, President of the Moragues Lumber Company of Mobile, Alabama, and Mr. A. M. Frown are at present in Rosario on a business trip.

There is general regret at the serious illness of Mr. Charles Boutell, eldest son of Mr. Arthur Branden Boutell, who is suffering from a severe attack of pneumonia.

Mr. C. Geoffrey Bulman, of the staff of the London and River Plate Bank, left last night by the River steamer to join the s.s. Tainui at Montevideo for England to offer his services to his country.

The numerous friends of Mr. H. H. Thomas, who underwent an operation under the treatment of Dr. Castaño at the "Sanatorio Podestá," will be glad to hear he is progressing favourably.

The many friends of Miss E. Mulville will be interested to know that she is on the nurse staff of the Hospital Militaire Anglais at Limoges, France, which appointment she obtained immediately on her arrival in England.

Mr. F. A. Goodmansson, of the Frigorifico Rio Gallegos, is at present in Buenos Aires en route to New York. Mr. Goodmansson has been in Argentina for about eleven years and is now being transferred by the Swift Co. to Chicago. He will leave for New York on September 16 by the steamer "Vestris," and will be accompanied by Mrs. Goodmansson.

Mr. J. Llorca Marty, President of the Moragues Lumber Company of Mobile, Alabama, who has been on a visit to this country for the past three weeks, and Mr. Arthur Murray Brown, representative of the Company in the River Plate, entertained a number of prominent merchants and friends on Tuesday evening at the "Petit Salon," on the termination of Mr. Marty's visit to this city. Among those present were Messrs. José Viña Llamas, Juan Chiaramonte, John Wright, Fernandez Oviedo, Alejandro Crestin, José Battaglia, Esteban Rizzi, Enrique Barberán, Owen L. Thomas, R. H. N. Brown, Santiago Carraro, Martin Etchart, etc. A very pleasant evening was passed, and the party broke up about midnight. Mr. Marty returns to the U.S. by the "Vestris" to-day.

DAY BY DAY IN BAHIA BLANCA.

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT].

September 12.

To-morrow night (Sept. 13) a general meeting of the Bahia Blanca Lawn Tennis and Croquet Club is to be held at the Hotel South America in order to elect the committee of management for the coming year.

The annual meeting of the Port of Bahia Blanca Athletic Club was held last night in the club room in order to elect the Committee for the coming year. As a result of the voting Mr. H. G. Bennett was re-elected President; Mr. Nelson, Vice-President; Mr. N. Mortimer, Secretary; Sr. Girado, Treasurer. The committee elected consisted of Messrs. Anker, Simpson, Lane, Earts, Mosatague and Vieytes.

Mr. C. Stuart is in town for a few days.

Messrs. Liddle and Stubbs are expected to arrive here to-morrow from Buenos Aires.

Among the visitors this last week have been Messrs. E. Frank, T. J. Kennady, G. J. Warterbury, D. Davis and T. Wilson.

Mr. Ferrari, the Manager of the South American Hotel, returned with Mrs. Ferrari from Buenos Aires on Friday.

WEDDING AT BELGRANO

EVERILL—MARTINEZ.

The marriage was celebrated at St. Saviour's, Belgrano, yesterday, of Miss Emma Maria Martinez, daughter of Señora Elena Rossa, of Belgrano, and Reginald Cooper Everill, son of Mrs. H. D. Mannington, of Las Palmas. The church was filled by friends and relatives of the bride and bridegroom when the Rev. F. O. Spanton officiated at the ceremony.

Dressed in white charmeuse with a veil of Brussels lace, an heirloom of happiness, the bride, who looked charming, was accompanied by Miss Elena Smith and Miss Dorothy Clutterbuck in the capacity of bridesmaids. Pink taffeta with great big black hats added to the charm of these little ladies. The best man was Mr. Harold Everill, brother of the bridegroom, while Mr. Otto Wulfi gave the bride away. A most valuable assistant was Mr. Donavon Reuter, who officiated as groomsmen.

A reception was held after the ceremony at 3639 Juramento, Belgrano, from whence to-morrow the happy couple depart for Entre Rios for their honeymoon.

The bride's present to the bridegroom was a beautiful dressing case, while the present of the bridegroom to the bride was a gold wristlet watch.

OBITUARY

DEATH OF MR. F. E. FAITHFULL.

Cables from London announce the death of Mr. Frank Eustace Faithfull, well-known in railway circles of the River Plate.

The late Mr. Faithfull was a director of the Western and Midland Railways, and had made several visits to Argentina on railway business. Mr. Faithfull had intended to make another trip to South America in the near future.

FOR THE ALLIES

A SPANISH AMERICAN PAPER.

Through the courtesy of Mr. J. W. Colquhoun THE HERALD has received several numbers of America-Latina a monthly paper printed in London in the Spanish language, and distributed gratis for propaganda purposes by the editor and publisher, Dr. Benjamin Barrios.

America-Latina is just the sort of publication the cause of the Allies requires. It is well written and excellently printed, and has the cordial support of influential people in France and the United Kingdom. An interesting feature of the July number is an illustrated article on the manufacture of munitions in England in response to the appeal of the British Government. One of the illustrations shows the Rev. Percival McKenzie of St. James's Scottish Church at work on munitions. Mr. McKenzie was formerly assistant at St. Andrew's Scotch Church, Buenos Aires.

CORDOBA LEGISLATORS

GOVERNOR VETOES PROPOSED INCREASE IN SALARIES.

Dr. Cárcano, Governor of Córdoba, has applied his veto to the Bill sanctioned by the Provincial Legislature last week increasing the salary drawn by members of the local Chamber to $700 monthly.

Public opinion, not only in Córdoba but also all over the country, was highly indignant at the ruling of the Córdoba Legislature, and the Governor's action in avoiding the extra strain on an already overburdened budget has been universally applauded.

Together with this law, Dr. Cárcano has vetoed several others passed by the Legislature and which would, if carried out, cost the Province the sum of $800,000 which cannot be spared.

IN THE OFFICE CHAIR

"And in some corner of the hubbub caught
Make game of that which makes as much of thee."

OMAR KHAYYAM.

Noblesse Oblige.

Her Imperial Majesty the Czarina has been cured of neurasthenia by her actual service as a nurse in the war hospitals. The weariness of life, the repining at crumpled rose leaves are no more. She has experienced, she says, a complete physical and moral change. All around her she saw terrible sufferings bravely endured; men who were marred for life, yet maintaining a cheerful aspect. "We," said the Empress, "who have so much material good and yet are not happy, have much to learn from the poor and from these poor fellows. It is, however, evidence of a noble disposition, that she has learned it, as there are many whose natures are incapable of assimilating such a lesson either in a hospital or anywhere else owing to their intense selfishness and indifference to others.

"Thou that stonest the Prophets."

In attacking Mr. Robert Blatchford for advocating Compulsory Service, the Liberal Radical Socialist Rump and the Blind Pacifists are merely giving an exhibition of their stupidly immobile state of mind. Mr. Blatchford is a Socialist, and a much sounder one too than the screeching tub thumpers or the earnest but impractical fanatics who denounced him years ago in unmeasured terms for predicting the very war that has come to pass, and urging that we should prepare to meet it. Those were the times—may they never return—when the earnest volunteer was told that he "liked playing at soldiers"; if he were a noted shot, the insult took the form of saying that he was a "pot-hunter" after prize money, cups and medals. The fact that 250,000 men every year gave their time, their money, and their holidays to the patriotic task of learning as much as they could how to defend their country, did not entitle them even to verbal thanks, and when Government gave them a 35s. capitation grant, they were expected to be, and were, too, full of gratitude, for they then got overcoats, haversacks, water-bottles, and a few other small items lacking in the previous 35 years of their existence. The slackers now, as then, dislike seeing themselves shown up, and take refuge in abuse. Mr. Robert Blatchford deserves particularly well of his country. He had been a soldier, and anyone who has had the King's coat on his back sees things with a different and clearer vision from that of the windy phrasemongers who have so long fed the nation with soothing syrup. The awful word "Conscription," supposed to be even more dead and damned than "Protection," has actually been spoken in the House, yet the Heavens did not open in flame on the speaker of it, nor did the roof fall. Lord Roberts, honour to his name, is more than justified in the campaign which he pursued in the last years of his life, in the face of vulgar abuse and ignorant calumny, from the sole desire to see his country strong and girded for the conflict which he, like King Edward, knew was at hand. Only the Byleses and the holders on at any price to the Peace tradition and Shibboleth people, preferred to slumber on, and only ceased snoring to curse those who sought to awaken them. The people love those who prophesy smooth things, but one believes that the People (with a Capital) prefer the truth and will be prepared for the sacrifice of Obligatory Service when it is boldly presented to them with "Do this and live free and valiant." The alternative is unpleasant and unthinkable.

It is time that all these diatribes and partisan polemics were laid aside. One would have supposed that even the brains of Trades Union Leaders would by now have appreciated the fact that "ca canny" is an infamy, and worse, endangers them personally. Colonel Lee, M.P., Mr. Amery, M.P.,

DR. VIERA'S TOUR

CALLS ALONG URUGUAYAN COAST

Dr. Viera, President of Uruguay, gave a ball on board the s.s. Ciudad de Montevideo, while lying off Paysandu and the affair was very brilliant, enjoyable and largely attended.

Subsequently the steamer left for Fray Bentos and, on arrival there the President was welcomed by a deputation at the head of which was Dr. Atilio Brignoli. A procession of the civil authorities and of school children, afterwards passed before the Chief Magistrate, who expressed great pleasure on receiving bouquets from the latter, and affirmed his satisfaction with all that he had seen. Dr. Viera's next visit was Colonia, where fêtes had been organised in honour of his arrival.

On September 10th the Luna left the South Basin on a special trip with a large number of visitors for Colonia to the Presidential fêtes.

CANADA'S AID

New York, Sept. 13.

A despatch from Montreal says the Canadian regiments recently trained are ready to leave for Britain. Numerous forces are still arriving ready to embark, together with quantities of munitions and all kinds of stores. The Government is pushing forward its preparations, and it is believed that 80,000 troops will be en route in a few weeks.

Mr. Josiah Wedgwood, M.P., all officers who have looked on the face of War, and the latter formerly a strong Pacifist, recommend Compulsion. The man who can change his opinion when good reasons are adduced, deserves credit, not abuse. He who cannot is simply an obstinate ass, or worse. Colonel Arthur Lee said that under our present haphazard system each soldier cost as much as three Germans, an injustice which we cannot afford. The voluntary system is squeezed dry, besides it often takes the wrong men. Colonel Lee further said

"There was the hoary but foolish delusion that one volunteer was worth four or five conscripts, and that compulsory service produced inferior or unwilling soldiers. That widespread but stupid libel was merely the shirkers' charter. (Hear, hear.) We could not afford to continue the voluntary system. At present each British soldier cost three times as much as a German. Owing to the necessity of bribing men to enlist, we were squandering money at a rate which could lead us only to bankruptcy. (Hear, hear.) The moral effect of our adopting compulsory service would be instant and incalculable. It would hearten our Allies, dishearten our enemies, impress all wavering neutrals, and restore self-respect to ourselves. (Cheers.)"

These lessons had been burned, branded into his soul, he said, at the front. Against this we have the recurring excuse that the voluntary system is traditional, that it is satisfactory. The latter is not true any longer, and the former must go overboard. The people who say these things are those who for years tried to cut down the Army and Navy, who see Militarism and Tyranny in every attempt to keep their own silly throats from the Prussian knife which they well deserve to feel.

Tennyson knew the breed sixty years ago. In "Maud" he says:

"Last week came one to the County Town,

To preach our poor little Army down
(Though the State has done it and thrice as well)

This broad-brimmed Hawker of Holy Things,

Whose ear is stuffed with his cotton, and rings,

Even in dreams to the chink of his pence,

He put down war. Can he tell
Whether war be a cause or a consequence?

BRITON.

"INFLUENCE THE PRESS"B.A. Spaniards Protest*AGAINST GERMAN PROPAGANDIST METHODS

After more than a year of war, it is not necessary to state that one of the most powerful weapons of offence in the hands of the Germans has been their subsidised press in neutral countries. The value of the propaganda has been apparent; so much so that a new sheet—named, we believe, the "Gaceta de España"—has been launched in the capital to advocate the German cause. This latter journal is supposed to present the case from the Spanish point of view. Naturally it does not; and, in this connection, a number of Spaniards in Buenos Aires have forwarded a letter of protest to THE HERALD. We append a copy of the letter, together with a translation in English.—

B. Aires. Septiembre 13, 1915.
Sr. Director del THE HERALD,
Presente.

Le agradeceríamos quisiera dar cabida en las columnas de su acreditado y popular diario a estas líneas que sirvan de desagravio a las opiniones vertidas en ciertas publicaciones que quieren abrogarse el título de ser representantes de una colectividad y que no son más que Zeitungs disfrazados con el oro alemán.

Los alemanes, con las mismas artimañas con que trataron de cubrir el barbarismo cruel de la devastación de la heroica y desgraciada Bélgica, del hundimiento del "Lusitania" y otros miles de hechos dignos de los Hunos de quienes descienden, tratan de servirse de la prensa española para denigrar y echar manchas sobre naciones que para nosotros, los que amamos la libertad y la democracia, representan su más alta concepción.

Al efecto han fundado o subvencionado determinadas publicaciones en las que se hacen aparecer las opiniones de algunos que están muy lejos de representar el verdadero espíritu de la España nueva, como ellos pretenden.

Los españoles debemos pues protestar por esta forma desleal y rastro en la que se nos quiere hacer pasar por enemigos de la democrática Francia y de la liberal Inglaterra hoy en lucha por sostener los sagrados derechos que tanta sangre costaron para su conquista y que amenazan ser pisoteados por el tacón de la bota del militarismo alemán, soberbio y bárbaro.

NICANOR PEREYRA, FRANCISCO LOPEZ, M. IPAR, R. CASTRO, JESUS VASQUEZ, A. AZCARATE.
Tucuman 1511.

(Translation.)

"We shall be glad if you will allow space in the columns of your influential and popular journal for these lines which serve to apologise for the opinions published in certain newspapers which claim to be representative of our community, but which are nothing more than "Zeitungs," bought with German gold. The Germans, with the same artifice with which they have attempted to cover the cruel barbarism of the devastation of heroic and unhappy Belgium, the sinking of the "Lusitania," and other horrors of which only Huns could be proud, wish to use the Spanish press to calumniate the nation which for us has always stood as the lover of liberty and democracy of the highest order. To this purpose the Germans have founded, or have supported certain publications in which opinions are expressed and made to appear as representative of the true spirit of Spain. Spaniards should protest against this disloyal and caddish conduct which endeavours to make us Spaniards appear as the enemies of democratic France and liberal England, who are to-day fighting to defend those sacred rights to establish which so much blood has been shed and which are now menaced and trodden under heel by the cynical German militarism, haughty and brutal."

THE VICTORIA CEMETERYImpudent German Proposal*TO SELL A BRITISH PROPERTY

The question of the preservation of the old British cemetery in Calle Victoria, Buenos Aires, has again arisen, as the result of a proposal that the site should be expropriated by the Municipality.

Only a few years ago the matter was thoroughly threshed out by two parties in the British community. One party favoured the sale of the site which had become of considerable commercial value, and the other vigorously opposed the idea and fought the matter through the law courts which supported the contention that the site could not be disposed of, and must ever remain what it had originally been, and that the ashes of many of the old British pioneers, reposing in the little piece of consecrated ground should rest undisturbed.

Now the proposition has again been made that the Municipality should expropriate the site and utilise it for public purposes, or dispose of it for commercial needs. The extraordinary thing is that the proposition has emanated from German sources, the idea having been put forward by "La Union." Exactly what purpose the Germans have for making such a proposal cannot be clearly understood, but it is believed that they see in the acceptance of their suggestion by the Municipality, a means whereby other ends at which they are aiming may be secured. The coolness of the proposal may be gauged from the fact that the Germans have no legal right or title in the property in question. The old Victoria Cemetery was purchased early in the last century, and presented to the British community in perpetuity as a site for a cemetery, and for no other purpose. A condition of the deed of gift was that it should never be sold, but should be maintained for ever as a resting-place for the remains of the British people buried there. The security of the site was also ensured under Art. 12, of the first treaty ever made by Argentina with a foreign country. The inviolableness of the site was clearly established when the former proposal for sale was disposed of. The British pioneers set aside a portion of the old cemetery for the use of Germans, but the title to the ground was never ceded. For the Germans to step in now and calmly propose that the Municipality shall take from the British that which cannot morally or legally be disturbed is on a par with the extraordinary views of right and wrong which German conduct in the present war have shown us to be characteristic of their nation.

The following letter from the son of one of the earliest of the British pioneers in Argentina sets out the legal aspect of the German proposal:

(To the Editor).

Sir.—The Teutonic evening newspaper "La Union" of the 7th inst. has an article commenting on the expropriation of the old Victoria Cemetery.

One does not know what to admire most, the lightness with which some newspapers treat the most important themes, or the ignorance of the authors who write about them.

We are led to believe that in this country the express constitutional disposition "la propiedad es inviolable" means just what it says, and no one can be deprived of property except by virtue of a law, or a sentence founded on law. This is sufficient to prove that there cannot be any expropriation of a public utility that has been authorised by law, by a simple order of the Municipality.

The writer of the article in "La Union" ignores that the "Cementerio

PUBLIC AID FOR PRIVATE INTERESTSLegislative Panaceas for Speculative Ills*THE MEETING IN THE PLAZA CONGRESO

The stars in their courses appear to fight against the earnest endeavours of the gentlemen who are trying to get government to shoulder the responsibility for the present stagnation in the real estate market; a responsibility that as a matter of fact lies heavily on many of the individuals who are new foremost in the outcry for government interference whereby they are to be saved, in part at any rate, from the consequences of their own folly. Sunday's meeting in the Plaza Congreso was to have been an imposing demonstration, winding up with a petition to government. But the rain brought it to a premature close, one of the leading spirits in the inception of the scheme was unable to be present, and the petition was eventually handed in at the side door of Government House, where the Minister of Finance awaited it with the customary salute of platitudinous generalities, which was all that it deserved.

This may seem to be a rather bitter commentary on an apparently plausible endeavour to get the government to do something for the common good, but closer inspection shows that axe-grindery was the only real end sought by the various promoters of this would-be monster meeting. The land situation in Argentina is righting itself slowly but surely, and the fever of speculation having died down, such properties as are in the market are being valued on their ability to produce rent. Camps are improving when they are immediately available for cattle; tillage has been sought to a greater extent than was ever known before; urban property suitable for immediate occupation still changes hands at a price. Hence one is bound to look below the surface when one finds strong pressure being brought to bear on a government already short of funds, in order that it may advance money to help private individuals out of the pits that they have dug for themselves. Public memory is short, but it has not yet forgotten that the attempt to force a moratorium for mortgages on the government was not only a failure, but also displayed very considerable ignorance of the true state of the local mortgage market. Nor has the country been very favourably impressed by the proposals made for the creation of an Agricultural Bank whose sole capital in esse will be derivable from a loan of $20,000,000 at 4 per cent granted by the Banco de la Na-

Britanico" was bought for the said purpose with perfect title deeds, and that the graves are held in perpetuity. It is also protected by the first treaty that Argentina signed with a foreign nation, in its 12th article.

Lastly, putting aside the final part of the question, he speaks of expropriating a most valuable piece of land at the very moment at which all the press of the city publish articles condemning expropriations by the Municipality which lead to judicial decisions and appeals. This means that beside being illegal the expropriation would be impossible, unless the "huns" who are so prompt in their ways, as in Belgium, put aside the treaty, considering it a "scrap of paper," and provide the $100,000 that would be required for said purpose. The Municipality cannot find the money.

Yours, etc.

VICTORIAN.

"TRADING WITH THE ENEMY"German Coal Trade in Buenos Aires*OFFICIAL CAUTION TO BRITISH SHIPOWNERS

The "Times of Argentina" keeps its searchlight carefully focussed on the dark intricacies of the path followed by those whose conscience is unduly elastic when profit and patriotism are in conflict. In its last issue it reproduces a cutting from the "Shipping Gazette" of August 13, embodying a notice posted on the board of the Baltic. It calls for no explanations, and comment is apparently useless.

"A considerable amount of coal is finding its way from the United States to the Deutsches Kohlen Depot at Buenos Aires, and there is reason to believe that some of it is being carried in British ships. The coal is shipped to agents, and ultimately delivered to the D. K. D. or other concerns controlled by German interests.

"Owners are required to take all measures possible to prevent their ships being used by charterers as a means for carrying coal to agents who will hand the coal on to German depots or companies, and it is suggested that special care should be taken to cover this point in all charters entered into after this date.

"Coal consigned to well-known British firms established in neutral ports or to neutral Governments or municipalities can safely be carried, but owners should take measures to prevent coal being merely consigned to order, or being consigned to the order of any consignee other than those specified above, unless he is known to be well affected or has been approved by the Board of Trade."

Murderer Congratulated

BY HIS IMPERIAL MASTER.

Amsterdam, Sept. 14.

Cables from Berlin state that the Emperor William has sent a wire of congratulation to Count Zeppelin on the results of the last raid on British cities.

In plain English it looks too much like a job, and as being more calculated to create salaried posts for subaltern politicians who would prove useful during next year's elections, than likely to prove of any real service to the farmer and stock raiser. To compare, as did one speaker, the movement of trade in Argentina, with that in the United States, is absolutely beside the point, and to criticise the immobile attitude of the Argentine Government, is but to show oneself unable to co-relate cause and effect. The difficulties incidental to a heavy liquidation following a prolonged boom of unusual magnitude have been complicated by the European war, as everyone will admit. At the same time all traders are agreed that no government measures will serve to restore the lavish expenditure indulged in by all classes a couple of years ago. Trade in general is re-building its various edifices on firmer bases than before, and the speculator is severely taboo in all classes of commercial society. This the government realises, and one can only applaud its determination not to be led astray by panic measures that are not in accordance with sound commerce or prudent administration. Apparently there is no means of preventing the time of the legislators being taken up with fantastic "projectos," but it is equally apparent that the commonsense of the government sees to it that they are sterilized, and in the majority of cases entirely suppressed by being passed to the effective euthanasia of the official archives.

PATRIOTIC FUNDS

BRITISH PATRIOTIC COMMITTEE

56th LIST OF SUBSCRIPTIONS.

GENERAL FUND.

Previously acknowledged	$142,863.91
Staff of Messrs. Houlder Brothers and Co., Ltd.: Capt. H. Harrison $10, E. T. Bell 5, W. E. Oates 5, W. L. Wright 5, A. H. Harris 5, J. R. Wilson 5, T. H. Braithwaite 5, A. Scucimarre 5	45.00
Fablon	30.00
E. S.	5.00
F. A. Kane	5.00
Proceeds of Mixed Foursomes Golf Competition, held at San Andrés on 28th August, per B. W. Gardom, Esq.	607.60
Anonymous	25.00
Anonymous	51.55
James Dey	100.00
H. E. Sims	5.00
B. S. Webb	10.00
Zarate Staff, Smithfield and Argentine Meat Co., Ltd.: G. Middleditch $10, N. N. 5, C. Willemhous 5, J. Robson 5, J. J. Ryan 5, F. L. Lawson 5, L. Chaman 5, J. Doelman 5, G. S. Philp 5, J. P. O'Connor 5, W. O. Pearse 5, T. Dowling 5, L. Jaenseh 5, W. F. Chard 5, J. D. Stewart 5, A. Butterfield 3, R. Drew 3, J. Yuul 3, R. C. Deadman 2, G. Lawrence 2, P. Gainey 2, W. Porter 2, J. Hayward 2, J. L. Ward 5	106.00
F. H. Jones	250.00
All Saints' Church, Quilmes	31.40
Scott and Hume	200.00
A. Scott	100.00
A. S. Hume	500.00
A. E. A. Gostling	80.00
John Lloyd	20.00
Traction Dept., Southern Rly. (see list below):—
General Fund	$602.00
Reservists	57.00
	659.00
J. Shaw é hijos	20.00
E. F. Vint	10.00
W. I. Cassels	100.00
Staff Messrs. Neild and Co.	40.00
Mechanical Staff Western Railway (Liniers) as per list below	93.50
David Hogg	100.00
"A"	10.00
General Manager's Office, Southern Rly.: B. G. M. $5, C. E. S. 10, A. G. L. 12, R. L. 10, G. W. S. H. 5	42.00
A. Macdonald	50.00
C. Webster	10.00
W. R. Schiele	10.00
W. H. Earl	5.00
J. and M. Linton	15.00
A. Blaxell	5.00
J. Grant	3.00
Per London and River Plate Bank:—
J. Williams	5.00
Harry Scott	100.00
C. H. P. Dashwood	1,000.00
Per British Bank of South America:—
L. J. Ward	5.00
N. Walch	10.00
A. Ferrari, Olazabal	5.00
Per Anglo South American Bank:—
P. Furlong	5.00
	$146,887.96

NATIONAL RELIEF FUND.

PRINCE OF WALES'S FUND.

Previously acknowledged	$133,068.48
A. A.	10.00
Anonymous	5.00
Anonymous	40.00
Alfred W. Towse 5.04 o/s	11.45
Stores Superintendent and Staff, Southern Railway	68.00
Staff of W. T. Henley's Telegraph Works Co., Ltd.: E. Timms $20, T. Jane 10, E. Burke 10, H. Dowse 5, A. Smith 5, J. Liddle 5, E. Ezra 5	60.00

Traction Dept., Southern Rly. (see list below)	64.00
David Hogg	50.00
A.	10.00
Accountant's Dept., Southern Rly. (11th Monthly Contribution):— Bookkeeper's Office: Books Section $8, Traffic Section 18, Workshops Section 8, Stores Section 19, Cash Section 8, P. Way 16. Audit Office: General Section $68, Goods Section 45.40, Passenger Section 24.40, Parcels Section 15.40, Mileage Section 10.40	298.60
	$133,685.53

RED CROSS FUND.

Previously acknowledged	$18,458.30
J. L. Q.	10.00
Mr. and Mrs. Wyatt Hayward	100.00
Anonymous	30.00
H. E. Sims	5.00
Traction Dept., Southern Rly. (see list below)	25.00
C. Manifold	200.00
Mrs. Harold G. Brown	10.00
David Hogg	30.00
A.	10.00
Quebec Bridge	5.00
	$18,883.30

BELGIAN RELIEF FUND.

Previously acknowledged	$4,376.10
Fablon	10.00
Traction Dept., Southern Rly. (see list below)	10.00
David Hogg	20.00
A.	10.00
	$4,426.10

Subscriptions should be sent to the Hon. Treasurer, Mr. Thomas Lloyd, Calle Sarmiento 459, or paid in to the accounts opened in the:—

London and River Plate Bank.
British Bank of South America.
London and Brazilian Bank.
Anglo-South American Bank.

For general information, subscription forms, etc., application should be made to the Honorary Secretary, Calle Sarmiento 643.

COLLECTIONS TRACTION DEPT., SOUTHERN RAILWAY.

Las Flores.—W. S. Matthews $2, J. Machutchinson 5, S. Smith 1, J. Woodcatt 2, M. McGaw 5, A. Farnworth 5, E. Adey 1.
Olavarría.—R. McCall 5, G. Meads 5, P. Rossiter 5.
Bolivar.—A. Hale 2, R. Saliger 2.
Empalme Lobos.—A. Benedetti 2, A. England 7.50, T. Elliman 5, E. Bowkett 2, A. Marsh 5, W. Aitkens 5, J. Mayze 2, A. C. Dix 4, G. W. Howden 1, R. Love 2, S. Bowkett 2, R. Macdonald 1, J. Millar 2.
Ayacucho.—G. H. Belk 5, F. Phillips 5, G. Hillyer 5.
Sevigne.—G. Butler 10, H. Whitehouse 5, H. West 5, W. Allen 5, W. Hamlin 5, J. Kennedy 5, J. Lamb 5.
Burzaco.—J. Slavin 3, E. Davis 2, S. Slavin 2, H. E. Challen 3, T. Williams 3, T. Cliffe 5, W. Beauchamp 2, A. Buchanan 2, A. H. Tanner 5.
Talleres.—W. Bayley 5, L. Bassigalupe 5, J. Ward 2, D. E. Rivas 1, W. E. White 2, C. G. Loveless 1, A. Peñas 1, W. Mountjoy 2, R. Beattie 1, W. Edwin 1, M. J. Smith 1, J. Coggan 1, J. Ciliberti 1, G. H. Maddox 2, E. Roveta 1, J. Mutuverria 1, J. Evans 1, S. Joli 1, W. Pound 1, J. Mackenzie 1, T. W. Johnston 2, D. Murphy 1, L. McMahon 1, T. Dobie 2, J. Perez 1, R. Thomson 1, W. Bowles 1, J. H. Hickling 1, E. Sharp 1, A. C. Webb 2, J. Kearney 2, F. Holmes 2, T. J. Wray 2, T. Hunter 1, J. Cumo 1, B. Grassi 1, P. Garcia 1, A. Miller 3, W. Cornish 3, W. Poole 1, T. Small 1, G. Coleclough 1, D. Henderson 1, F. Mitchell 1, W. Davis 1, J. H. Smith 5, W. Perkins 5, T. Torbet 2.

Tolosa.—G. E. Chandler 5, L. F. Harvey 5, A. S. Jeeves 5, G. Taylor 5, J. D. Leith 5, G. Gunn 10, E. B. Coffey 2,

J. Allampress 1, J. Flores 1, T. Lang 1, C. Curwen 2, R. Comrie 5, H. Griffiths 5, A. Thomas 5, J. Hamilton 5, M. MacGarva 5, J. Rylands 5, J. Milne 10, T. Withington 3, F. Rhoades 10, B. Perez 3, H. Davies 5.

Tandil.—Dr. L. Illade $5, P. Noge 5, R. Noge 1, E. Fontana 1, F. Fletcher 30, G. Cuthbert 5, J. McHardy 5, J. Jackson 1, W. Reid 3, A. Boga 3, J. Chamberlain 5, J. Garrasino 5, J. Olachea 5, D. E. Ibarlucia 2, P. Mazza 2, H. Rogotti 5, E. Brusin 2, S. Roca 1, A. Delavanzo 0.50, J. Rica 2, J. Henry 5, J. Santamarina 1, D. Colombo 1, A. Isola 1, A. Caresia 1, R. Cartotto 2, W. Fairbairn 2, R. Uranga 1, H. Saula 1, F. Fernandez 1, Emilio Caresia 1, B. Perez 2, J. Ranzetta 1, M. Trincherio 1, A. Boero 3, A. Corsi 1, A. Irastorza 1, A. Colombo 1, C. Pearce 1, C. Diaz 1, J. Diaz 2, M. Bergonzi 1, Ernesto Caresia 1, V. Boga 5, S. Ibañez 1, B. Bojesen 1, T. Ramirez 1, L. Messina 1, C. Majenta 0.50, M. Perceval 5, A. Petovello 1, D. Cremona 1, G. Rios 1, P. St. Miguez 2, V. Bertucci 1, A. Temperley 1, J. M. Colombo 1, G. Rivas 1, J. M. Ibarbia 1, J. Marzoratti 2, E. Bardi 1, F. Fabrisio 1, A. Tesis 5, A. Aramburo 1, A. Suffredini 1, C. Destefano 1, L. Garcia 2, F. Carmeri 1, P. Stabile 1, E. Arzcurena 1, D. Tili 0.50, C. Oddone 1, A. Policarpo 1, C. Dol-sadelli 1, P. C. Silva 1, P. Romano 1, J. Bianchi 1, J. B. Ibarbia 1, J. Peveri 3, F. Echelini 1, J. Rivas 1, A. Rizzcuren 1, J. Rezzoagli 1, J. Saux 1, A. Espinossa 2, L. Rica 2, D. Petovello 1, V. Raggi 1, P. Beltrachi 1, B. Beltrachi 1, C. Salinas 1, E. Federique 1, L. Vittaz 1, F. Mariezcurena 1, M. Bardi 1, M. Catalano 1, G. Anzor 1, B. Ibarburo 1, J. Cirola 2, M. Rivero 1, A. Chamberlain 1, I. Rigotti 2, N. Baratucci 2, P. Almaraz 0.50, C. De-loof 1, S. Fabrisio 1, M. P. Lamela 1, M. Caresia 1, J. Vanoni 1, R. Diaz 2, J. Roberts 10, C. Raffo 1, J. Sarat 0.50, M. Varella 0.50, A. Colombini 0.50, A. Bardelli 1, F. Ugalde 1, A. Lottetto 2, T. Dumont 2, P. Aguire 1, G. Suarez 1, J. Merigo 2, P. Barrenechea 1, J. Alonso 2, E. Bell 2, J. Molina 2, A. Colombo 1, C. Schagen 0.50, L. Vas-sani 1, A. Becna 1, J. Potovelo 1, R. Isola 1, G. Raggi 1, H. Catalano 0.50, E. Formozo 1, J. Taverna 0.50, A. Alonso 1, P. Papini 0.50, J. Lufau 0.50, P. Piloni 1.

BELGIAN RELIEF FUND.

J. Milne (Tolosa), $10.

RESERVISTS' FAMILIES.

Ingeniero White.—H. Helliwell $5, A. Adamson 10, T. Green 5, J. Anker 5, R. Clutton 10, L. Raggi 5, S. Griffiths 2, J. Williams 5, C. Land 10.

BRITISH RED CROSS.

Ingeniero White.—F. Garcia $5, T. Egan 10, J. Quintan 5, W. Barker 5.

PRINCE OF WALES'S FUND.

Ingeniero White.—L. Marthini $5, T. Murray 5, F. Whitby 8, R. N. Shrewsbury 10, W. Bullock 8, S. Martin 5, J. Foreman 8, T. Pye 5, J. A. Robertson 10.

Mechanical Staff, Western Railway (Liniers).—W. Squire $3, C. LeLievier 1, E. Hansen 3, G. Airth 5, G. C. Ferreira 0.50, C. R. Gabb 5, C. Chapuis 2, C. Ainsworth 1, A. H. Dudbridge 3, G. James 3, C. W. Airth 5, G. Hopkins 5, J. McHough 3, J. Nicholls 1, L. Ruy-think 2, A. B. Comber 3, J. A. Ranger 10, J. Rudolf 2, C. Jones (Junior) 0.50, G. H. H. Culley 5, M. A. Gonzalez 0.50, A. Waring 5, A. W. Bannatyne 20, A. Smith 5.

ANOTHER WINTER CAMPAIGN

GERMANY'S GREAT PREPARATIONS.

Amsterdam, Sept. 13.

Berlin reports show that the Germans are hurrying on their preparations for a winter campaign, and several train loads of material, stores and clothing have already been sent to the front of the lines in Russia. The arrival of the intense cold, it is intended, shall find the troops fully equipped.

BRITISH WOMEN'S PATRIOTIC ASSOCIATION

The monthly meeting of the Association was held on Friday last at the Plaza Hotel. At the next meeting on the second Friday (8th) of October, new collecting cards will be issued, and it is urgently requested that the holders of cards will come to exchange the present cards for new ones.

It is proposed that, as the proceeds of the monthly collections have for the past year been devoted to the Prince of Wales's Fund, the fund in future to benefit will be "The Officers' Families' Fund," which is admitted to be a most deserving organisation. It was reported at the meeting that a draft for £250 had been sent to this Fund since the last meeting.

A warm vote of thanks was passed to Mrs. Boyd, who had organised a young people's dance at the Plaza Hotel, in aid of the British Red Cross Fund, which realised $1245. Also to Mrs. Seward and Miss Holmes Brown, who arranged the American Tournament Ladies' Doubles at the Belgrano Club on the 18th of last month, realising $71 for the same Fund.

A hand-painted hat, donated by Miss Barraud, was raffled in aid of the Red Cross Fund, and realised the sum of $18.

The raffle organised by Mrs. French, Trevolares, realised $17, and was won by "A. F." holder of ticket No. 3.

Attention is called to the Gymkana which is to be held in the grounds of the Rural Society at Palermo, kindly granted for the purpose, on Sunday, October 3rd, in aid of the Patriotic Funds. Further announcements will appear as usual.

The following letters have been received:—

JOINT WAR COMMITTEE.

London, Aug. 10, 1915.

Dear Madam,

We have to acknowledge receipt of your letter of July 15th, forwarding to us on behalf of the British Women's Patriotic Association; Buenos Aires, First of Exchange value £100 as a further contribution by them to our funds, and have pleasure in enclosing herewith the formal receipt.

Yours faithfully,

ROBERT A. HUDSON,
Chairman of Finance Committee.

WAR REFUGEES COMMITTEE.

London, W.C., Aug. 9, 1915.

Mrs. Hope Gibson,
Calle Rodriguez Peña 1833.
Buenos Aires.

Dear Madam,

The Committee very greatly appreciate the generous contributions which they have received from the British Women's Patriotic Association, together with the most acceptable gifts of clothing.

Will you please convey to the Association the very grateful thanks of the Committee?

Yours faithfully,

(Signature illegible),
Accounting Officer.

NATIONAL RELIEF FUND.

London, S.W., Aug. 12, 1915.

Mrs. Hope Gibson,
1833 Calle Rodriguez Peña,
Buenos Aires.

Dear Madam,

I have to-day received a draft for £500, representing a further amount which has been so generously contributed by the British ladies and their friends in Buenos Aires to the British Women's Patriotic Association in the Argentine Republic, on behalf of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales's National Relief Fund, for which I thank you.

Yours faithfully,

L. E. HALSEY.

Acknowledgment has also been received of £100 from Lady Hope on behalf of the Officers' Families Fund.

PRINCE OF WALES'S FUND.

Previously acknowledged $37,278.80
Part July Subscriptions . . . 1,050.50
August and further July sub-scriptions . . . 2,003.00

$40,332.30

PIPE AND TOBACCO FUND.

Previously acknowledged	$1,030.20
Mr. James Deck (Miramonte)	10.00
Dr. Carlos Small	10.00
Mrs. H. Smith	10.00
Mrs. Paton	10.00

$1,070.20

BELGIAN RELIEF FUND.

Previously acknowledged	$2,844.65
Mrs. Neilson	10.00

$2,854.65

OFFICERS' FAMILIES FUND.

Previously acknowledged	$4,375.65
Mrs. Edye and Miss Stubbs entertainment Plaza Hotel	1,803.00
Mrs. John Runnacles (fowls and eggs)	25.00

Castleton	5.00
Mrs. Barclay	3.00
Mrs. Mendl	5.00
Mrs. Christie	5.00
Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Bradbury	50.00
Mrs. French (raffle)	17.00
H. Schwind	5.00

$6,293.65

BRITISH RED CROSS FUND.

Previously acknowledged	$1,575.55
A. E.	5.00
Cakes	9.40
Mrs. Recknall (Sale of Work)	6.00
Miss Sylvia A. Hogg	3.00
Miss Barraud (raffle)	18.00
American Tournament Ladies' Doubles	71.00
Raffle of Cushion, per Mrs. J. Leitch	50.00

$1,737.95

FOR THE SOLDIERS.

Miss Merriman 1 pr socks, Mrs. John Dunnacles 1 pr socks, Mrs. Robert Paton 6 body belts, 2 prs. mittens and two knee-pads, Miss D. Prophet 4 prs socks, Miss Stubbs 2 prs socks and 10 pillow-slips, Mrs. W. W. Hayward 2 flannel shirts, Mrs. L. de Knight Adkin 2 flannel shirts and 2 suits pyjamas, Mrs. A. Auld, 6 prs socks, Miss Eugenie Oxley 2 prs socks, St. John's Sewing Guild 7 woollen bed jackets, St. Mary's Guild (Lomas) 3 knee caps, 8 flannel shirts, 5 body belts, 2 scarves, 3 prs. cuffs, 12 prs. socks, 1 pr mittens and 1 pr. gloves, Mrs. Neilson 1 pr blankets, 6 towels, 1 pr twill sheets, 1 white quilt, 2 suits pyjamas, 4 flannel shirts, 3 body belts, 4 prs socks, 1 pr mittens and 1 packet of tobacco. Miss Dashwood 2 prs socks, Mrs. French and Miss Dickie 1 scarf and 3 prs. socks, Miss Vera Scott 2 prs socks.

Parcels were received from the following for the War Refugees: Mrs. P. Brown, Mrs. Robert Paton, Mrs. Neilson, Mrs. L. de Knight Adkin, Miss Daly, St. John's Sewing Guild (per Mrs. Trillia), "Hurlingham," Miss B. Prophet, Mrs. Emilio Casares.

The following articles were sent home on 27th August:—7 feather pillows, 22 pillow cases, 2 flannel night-shirts, 10 day flannel shirts, 1 suit pyjamas, 3 slings, 12 flannel cholera belts, 2 scarves, 2 prs. mittens, 26 prs. socks.

"HERALD" BELGIAN FUND

Amount previously acknowledged	$2,642.40
Mrs. E. W.	6.00
J. Manning	2.00
F. S.	2.00
A. L.	1.00
F. C. H.	0.50
J. Wyllie	10.00
Joseph J. Brooking	9.00
Mary Esther and Betita (6th donation)	4.60
W. K. Cunningham, for May	50.00
Mrs. Cochrane (for May)	5.00
Miss Cunningham (for May)	5.00
J. Manning	2.00
H. B. (for May and June)	10.00
Pito-Pico	20.00

E. W.	2.00
F. S.	2.00
A. L.	1.00
"Jam"	50.00
A. L. L.	10.00
G. A. Scharenberg	20.00
George Clarke	10.00
Miss Z. S.	10.00
W. K. Cunningham (for June)	50.00
Miss Cunningham (for June)	5.00
Mary Esther and Betita (7th donation)	4.60
J. Manning	2.00
"Jam"	25.00
F. S.	2.00
A. L.	1.00
W. K. Cunningham (for July)	50.00
Miss Cunningham (for July)	5.00
Mrs. Cochrane (for July)	5.00
H. B. (for July)	5.00
Mary Esther and Betita (8th donation)	4.60
J. Manning	2.00
A. L. L.	5.00
H. B. (for August)	5.00
W. K. Cunningham (for August)	50.00
Miss Cunningham (for Aug)	5.00
Mrs. Cochrane (for Aug.)	5.00
F. F.	10.00
F. S.	2.00
A. L.	1.00
Total	$3122.70

RED CROSS FUNDS

SUCCESS AT RIO GALLEGOS.

A highly successful effort has been made by the people of Rio Gallegos and district to provide funds for the Red Cross Societies of the Allied Nations, and a sum in excess of $10,000 has been raised.

In addition to subscriptions, money was raised as the result of several functions, principal of which was the bazaar and concert organised by the joint committee under the presidency of Mr. F. A. Goodman, of the Frigorifico. This event took place on July 14, and the gross receipts were $7,261. A feature of the concert was the excellent tableaux presented by the lady helpers of the movement. The patriotic tableau was presented by Srta. Alcira Cubas (Argentina), Sra. de Pople (France), Mrs. Goodman (Britain), Sra. de Barck (Belgium), and Sra. de Borgialli (Italy).

The following is a statement of the proceeds of the bazaar and concert:—
Sweet Stall (Mrs. Patterson) $ 94.60
Cigarette Stall (Mrs. Molloy) 84.05

RED CROSS CONCERT AT RIO GALLEGOS.

A feature of the recent Red Cross Concert at Rio Gallegos was a tableau presented by Srta. Alcira Cubas (Argentina), Sra. de Pople (France), Mrs. Goodman (Britain), Sra. de Barck (Belgium), and Sra. de Borgialli (Italy).

A photograph of the tableau appears above.

BRITISH WOMEN OF CAMPAIGN

PATRIOTIC FUND SUBSCRIPTIONS

Mrs. Warrender	$5.00
Mrs. Stalker	3.00
Mrs. Gibbs	5.00
Mrs. Brown	5.00
Master H. Brown	1.00
Mrs. Mallet	2.00
Mrs. Thompson	5.00
Mrs. E. Murray	2.00
Mrs. Windsor	2.00
Mrs. Sainsbury	5.00
Mrs. Duffy	10.00
Mrs. Mason	5.00
Mrs. Mullen	3.00
Miss Waddel	5.00
Mrs. Hooton	5.00
Mrs. Cunningham	10.00
Miss G. Cunningham	5.00
Miss M. Cunningham	5.00
Total	$86.00

Several who promised monthly subscriptions are now some months overdue.

As this represents such a laudable object, worthy of the greatest possible support, it is hoped that all will hand in their subscriptions to date, and not lose sight of the urgent needs of the British Red Cross Society, on the funds of which Society the call is increasingly great as time goes on.

Ice Cream Stall (Mrs. Goodman)	55.—
Champagne Stall (Mrs. Pople)	64.—
Supper tables (Mrs. Carr)	1109.35
Entrances to Concert	961.—
Entrances to Bazaar	252.—
Wheel of Fortune (Messrs. Rae and Welcker)	731.50
Wheel of Fortune (Messrs. Elbourne and Laborde)	871.35
General Stall (Mrs. Picard)	926.20
Petits Chevaux (Messrs. Bergialli, Laws, Carr and Cooke)	936.40
Fish Pond (Mrs. Slater)	238.95
Bar (Mrs. Molloy)	579.50
Raffle, portrait King of Belgians	100.—
Raffle, ring presented by Mr. Gooderham	50.—
Killing Kaiser (Messrs. Galli and Busticci)	207.45
	$ 7,261.35
Subscriptions to date	4,968.12
	$12,229.47
Less expenses	2,311.80
Net result	$ 9,917.67

In addition, about $2,000 has yet to come in in subscriptions.

ICE FETE AT PALAIS DE GLACE

A BRILLIANT AND SUCCESSFUL FUNCTION.

"A pronounced success," or a variant of that formula, is the only truthful comment which can be passed on the Grand Ice Festival in aid of the British Red Cross, on Sept. 11, at the Palais de Glace.

The function was under the patronage of H.B.M. Minister, Sir Reginald Tower, K.C.M.G., C.V.O., and Mr. H. G. Mackie, the Consul General, and Mr. Rodgers, Vice-Consul, were also present, as were an exceedingly large and representative number of British, Anglo-Argentine and American members of the local community.

The handsome interior of the Palais itself presented its most attractive aspect, and from the centre of the dome four cords depended at angle joining the edge of the circle to each of which were affixed eight British flags of the various Dominions and Colonies forming the Empire. At 9 o'clock the enceinte of the circle was freely occupied, the balconies were filling, and fresh arrivals continued to pour in long after 10.

Among the energetic skaters who might be seen flying over the real ice, which diffused a temperature of agreeable moderation, were the Consul General, Mr. Chevallier-Boutell and other well-known members of the British colony. The "realness" of ice was evidenced to the most sceptical by the wet tracks left by the skates on the carpets by those who had come off.

In addition to the skating by those who came prepared to "skim" the frozen Sound, there were some exceedingly graceful and clever exhibitions of fancy skating by Professors Roberto Fuschilling and Amalio Buono.

A well-contested hockey match by the International Team, fancy skating by Sr. Hede Winsteyn, world's champion, and, as a concluding number, Valse Reservee, made up a most attractive programme.

From the very large number present, it was evident that the Red Cross Fund will benefit substantially, and Mr. Chevallier Boutell expressed himself as highly satisfied with the prospects of the result. An excellent orchestra was present and played throughout the evening. Those who had the matter in hand are to be congratulated on the result achieved.

PLAZA HOTEL DANCE

The Committee is now in a position to furnish a statement of the result of the Dance in aid of the British Red Cross Funds, held at the Plaza Hotel on August 26:

Sold by the Organisers
313 tickets $6	$1,872
Sold by the Plaza Hotel
71 tickets $6	426
Special donations	11 $2,315

Plaza Hotel for refreshments, orchestra, etc., by special arrangement	$1,060
Cloak room attendants	10 $1,070
Nett	$1,245

which amount has been handed to the Treasurer of the Ladies' Patriotic Fund. The organisers desire to express their deep appreciation of the hearty co-operation of Mr. George McHardy, by permitting the use of advertising space; Messrs. Kidd and Co. by gratuitously printing the programme and tickets; THE BUENOS AIRES HERALD and The Standard for the extensive publicity given in their columns, and last but not least, thanks are due to the Management of the Plaza Hotel for the particularly harmonious manner in which the wishes of the Committee were realised. All of which has largely contributed to the gratifying result obtained for the relief of suffering.

Mainly for Women

Conducted by "Egeria"

EARLY RISING

"To Rise or not to Rise"—early, that is a question, a very vexed question with country-visitors.

Some people like oil, others don't; but my experience is that those who like it, have a profound contempt for those who do not. I don't quite understand why, unless it be that they think their likes and dislikes, being so superior, should be, like olives, an acquired taste by all the world. It is very much the same with the early rising question. Those who get up with the sun or before it, parade their effort as a virtue worthy of emulation by all the world and those who do not follow the example, are condemned to the outer darkness of lazy good-for-nothingness.

It may be true that the early bird catches the worm, but that is only one kind of worm. The most brilliant worms are only to be caught late in the day or at night a treat the early bird may not enjoy; for his earlier exertions have exhausted his energies; and the glow-worm is a dish for the night-bird. Later hours later dishes!

To see the sun rise on the Matterhorn, to climb to the top of the Breit horn or Monta Rosa, yes certainly, I agree with you early risers! Who would not make a special effort, for a special reward? But what is the reward for the daily effort of early rising? A lady said to me, when we met at breakfast in the country on one occasion, "My husband and I have just had a 5 mile walk around the river and the morning air was glorious." It was said with the meaning air of "Why don't you do likewise?" I quite believed it was a special treat for the lady, just as rising to view the Matterhorn at sunrise might be to some others; but as my husband was not present to give me his company, as I had a small child depending on my company, who was incapable of walking even one mile, and as the same glorious air poured into my open windows without any effort on my part, further than the unfastening of a bolt, I could not convince myself that the lady and myself could drink from the same cup, with the same degree of contentment.

There is another proverb which states that one man's meat is another man's poison, and as with the digestive apparatus, so with the mental equipment. Your early riser will thrust his experiences down the non-early-riser's throat as it were. He can't stop in bed after early dawn; he is up and out; he has tramped miles to get an appetite; he has seen and heard and tasted Nature in her best moods. I have made a study of the early riser, the antithesis to myself, I find him as fat as the non-early-risers, he is no better looking, he hasn't any better appetite, he is no wealthier, he is no healthier. He may be wiser for who is to be the judge of his Minerva-like qualities? Not I, surely not I! I am an Owl, I blink at the sun, but I do like the glow-worms. There is certainly nothing hypochondriacal about the early-riser. He never mistakes his robust health, for a kind of one-foot-in-the-grave existence; he is therefore always capable of great generosity. He gives and gives freely—excellent advice on how to acquire robust health, although those on whom he bestows so much charity are often better equipped with physical abilities than he himself.

I asked a lady once why she never visited the country, she had so many opportunities "I hate the country," she answered, "I hate your early rising, and the trees and the green-fields, and your rippling brooks and grazing cattle, and especially the people who are so pleased with themselves because they get up early and make butter while I am getting my beauty sleep. I like my blood to run in my veins with my own way of living, and not to congeal in an existence, cut in paper pattern fashion." I quite understood the lady's attitude, and I venture to think she is mistaken when she says she hates the country. She is the victim of the early-riser and his platitudes. I questioned a city man about his liking for the country. He told me he loved the country. He loved to lie in bed in the mornings with the fragrant air blowing in from fresh fields, to feel the sun gradually warming the world, himself included; to realise that he could lie and lie all day if he wished, without rushing from a tram, or catching a train. And he said he liked watching all the living things, tame or wild, while his brain and his body rested alike. "But do you not get up early in the country?" I asked. "Get up early," he replied, "not me, why that would spoil it all. I set myself no tasks, I follow my inclination, and while in the country I breathe, and eat, and rest." I was pleased to meet a kindred spirit. His motto was "Do what you want to do, when holidaying, and not what other people expect or want you to do." It is more honest and it is to be free!

Given a human being with intellect and a nervous system, it is wisdom not to treat the being as an experimental machine, as the early-riser is so fond of doing. Is it any wonder something breaks, under such treatment either the nervous system or the intellect? And it is a pity when this happens, that the only feeling engendered in the early-riser is a delightful sense of superiority. I think Eve must have been an early-riser, otherwise she never would have strayed so far after forbidden fruit; and the result is that Adam gets hipped and over-worked, and condemns other Eves to the early sunlight when they would much prefer the moonlight. Those who like early-rising for its own sake, with all it brings them, let them rise at cock-crow or sunrise, or day dawn, or whatever it may be they rise by; those who earn their daily bread by early-rising have no other choice; but ask any one of them if they do it from choice, and I am sure their answer will be "No." But those others who find that the midnight oil suits their taste and habits better, and gives better results than the morning sun affords them, let them follow their inclination without the annoyance of those on the other side. Each thinking individual should be master not only of his own destiny; but in the manner of working out that destiny. Early-rising is not the alpha and omega of existence. It is the means to a certain end. Other ends, other means!

The "Irish Citizen" says that ten members of the newly-elected council of the National Union of Women's Suffrage Societies have resigned owing to the union's refusal to send delegates to the International Peace Congress. They include many notable persons—Mrs. Swanwick, Miss Ashton, Miss Ford, Miss Roydon, Miss Leaf and Mrs. Horley. But Mrs. Fawcett apparently stands firm against seeking even the appearance of premature peace.

Western Australia has just taken a very important forward step. Last session a Bill was passed providing for the appointment of women as Justices in Children's Courts. The "Woman Voter" announces that Mesdames Beadle, Casson, Cowan, Mellows and Rischbieth have now been appointed by the Government. They will be invested with full Justices' powers in trying offenders and prescribing punishment.

ADELA VERNE—ARTIST

A GREAT ENGLISH PIANIST

AN APPRECIATION

To be admitted to the precincts of the High Priestess of Musical Art has been a privilege extended to a representative of THE HERALD.

During the years that Miss Adela Verne has been known to the public, she, before all other lady pianists, won for herself this title, and under circumstances that are quite unusual.

It was at the early age of four that Adela Verne made her first bow to the public, who to-day have to thank parental wisdom in that it was an unbeliever in infant prodigies, with the result that she is rightly recognised the world over as the greatest of living women artists at the piano.

It has been repeatedly said, and will continue to be said, that Adela Verne is a greater pianist than Hoffmann, who had no master except in Paderewski, and that in the rendering of much of her work she has a power that even Paderewski lacks, a power of attractive magnetism that beggars pen painting.

Such praise as this, the consensus of the world's famous musical critics, has been earned through sheer merit and genius. In what lies her power? Technically perfect as was D'Albert, Borwick, Hoffmann and Paderewski, all of whom excelled the reputed playing of Rubenstein and Liszt, Adela Verne surpasses D'Albert in expression, Leonard Borwick in warmth, Hoffmann in her power of interpretation, and in some work surpasses Paderewski by the genius she possesses in understanding the exact meaning of the art of the composer she translates.

She is the only living pianist, not a native, who can express the exotic music of Cervantes and Marie Verona in their Cuban airs, and from this, can interpret Beethoven as only Paderewski could, and then again she has a power of interpretation of the sensuous music of Chopin which only a pianist who interprets nothing else possesses.

It is Adela Verne's unity (her instrument is only a medium of expression) with the essence of the meaning and feeling of the composer she interprets in which her genius and magnetic power lies.

It is her proud boast, the only one she has, that all her musical education was received in England. This is perhaps one of the most unusual of facts. There was no studying at famous European Conservatoires, only a sister's teaching developed her genius. Adela Verne comes of a musical family, her father was organist for many years at St. Joseph's Church, Southampton, while three of her sisters are very familiar in the musical world.

At the age of fourteen she played before Paderewski, who wanted her as a pupil, but unfortunately the project fell through. It was he who prophesied a great career for her, and his prophecy comes true.

There could be no more charming personality in private life than Adela Verne, a womanly woman in whose character is not a feature but that is natural. She cannot talk of her art and of herself, but of the art and genius of others she is expressive.

A few interesting stories of her experiences in her world-wide travels were obtained with difficulty.

One night she was to give a recital in a theatre in a Far Western town. She was surprised at being approached by the aged caretaker and asked if she could play "The Ruins of Athens" or the "Battle of Prague." Miss Verne answered that she regretted they were both impossible, and on further questioning told the old man amongst other things she was playing Chopin's Funeral March. The old man shook his head sadly, and said it would have to do. Miss Verne amused asked for the reason of his question. The caretaker explained that it was a question of scenery. "I have only three scenes, one is an

SOME WOMEN AND MANY THINGS

Among the titled nurses of British society to-day is the beautiful and popular Lady Amy Gordon Lennox, grand-daughter of the Duke of Richmond. She is twenty-one, but cares little for society, preferring Highland country sports. She is now nursing wounded soldiers at Gordon Castle, Banffshire.

The ill-luck attributed to the opal is a matter of modern superstition. In old times it was supposed to be efficacious against disease. The legend of the opal in Walter Scott's "Anne of Geirstein" is believed to have set public caprice against the beautiful stone.

The "Debats"—always admirably informed—published the statement of an irremediable breach between the Crown Prince of Germany and his wife. The "Auto," a French sporting paper, gives a version of the motives of the quarrel which is all to the honour of the Crown Princess. Six weeks after the outbreak of war—early in September, that is—the Crown Princess received from her husband a surprise present in the form of two large furniture vans crammed with looted objets d'art. The Crown Princess, who is Russian on her mother's side, and a woman of education and delicacy, was frankly disgusted by the gift, which she considered an outrage. She refused to take in the booty, and ran to her mother-in-law, the Empress, to complain. The Empress took her part, and expressed her indignation to her husband. The Kaiser merely laughed, and said that he thought his daughter-in-law rather overdid her scruples.

But the Kaiserin had the courage to stand up to her Imperial consort, and at last gained his grudging consent that the thefts of the Crown Prince should not be forced on the Crown Princess. The booty was accordingly divided up among different members of the Kaiser's suite. When, long after, the Crown Prince returned to Berlin there was a terrible scene between him and his wife. The gulf that separates the royal couple has widened since then owing to the flagrant and insolently paraded infidelities of the heir of the German Throne.

ancient abbey, another a battle scene of soldiers' camps, and the third is a cathedral graveyard. I suppose this one will have to do for the funeral march."

Later Miss Verne discovered that the caretaker had set his scenes and arranged a number of coffins so that just a glimpse could be caught of them by the audience through the cathedral door, which he had propped open for the purpose. "I never played the Funeral March with greater emotion," said Miss Verne.

Camille Saint Saens is a fervent admirer of Adela Verne's and one day, the first that they met, he asked her whether she played any of his works. Promptly she sat down to the piano and commenced his Concerto in G Minor. No sooner had she struck the first few bars than Saint Saens sat down at another piano and commenced to accompany her. The whole Concerto was played, and at the finish the great composer took Adela Verne's hands, and kissed them, saying, "I have never heard my Concerto played so beautifully." This took place at Erard's musical establishment in London.

The Mexican tour of Adela Verne created for her an immense appreciation, and added to her already world-wide reputation.

For weeks, however, she has touched no piano, as illness came her way, and only now, after fourteen weeks of sickness, is she once more able to look forward to more successes.

It is a question whether congratulations on her recovery are due to her, more than they are due to lovers of music. Adela Verne's genius could not have been done without.

Land of Lilliput.

Conducted by Egeria

THE FIGHTING EAGLE

(By Carrie Thurston.)

The King of Birds, the Golden Eagle, settled himself in solitary grandeur on the very highest point of a gigantic cliff and gazed unblinkingly on the full rays of the midday sun. He certainly looked a beautiful creature, and well earned his name, as the slanting rays of the sun lit up his shaded brown plumage with a glorious golden hue. He had not been idle while sitting here, no, indeed, all the while he was planning and scheming, for there was a great war going on in the forest, the feathered folk having at last revolted against his repeated attacks on their young.

"We do not mind being killed in a fair fight," said they, "when each side is well matched, but this cruel monster and his kind swoop down unawares and carry off our nestlings, who cannot protect themselves, that is more than we can stand."

Now as the Golden Eagle peered cunningly into the distance with his fiery black eyes, he could see the dead bodies of the feathered folk lying everywhere around. Like all his breed, he had wonderful sight, but his imagination was even more wonderful as he flapped his great wings slowly up and down in a self-satisfied manner, seeing himself in the near future conqueror of the whole bird world, and even part of the animal too. He was a haughty, pompous individual of the noble family of Aquila, but though strong and majestic he was really not brave, for he was never ready to pounce on an enemy if there was the slightest danger to himself; so while the battle had been raging down below, he had thought it wisest to stay in his own rocky fortress where he was well out of reach, for there were scores of his mighty army chasing and killing those brave little bantams who were gallantly fighting with all their might, though the chances were small against such a powerful enemy.

"So far so good," he muttered to himself, "Now I'll away and see what General Sea Eagle is doing."

With a loud, shrill cry he took himself off a long distance, to where those ferocious airmen were preparing to swoop down unawares, to make a raid on the seafolk. But for once they had not taken into account the strength of their foes, for there was somebody else who had been thinking, too, besides the eagles, and that was a big British bull-dog, who was always ready to defend the weak. He was a very fine swimmer, and jumping into the deep water, he made his way down to the fish folk to be in readiness for an attack.

Down swooped the Sea Eagles, sticking their claws into the weaker and smaller prey, then getting bolder, they attacked the Seals and drove their claws deep into the flesh, so deep, indeed that the Seals found it quite an easy matter to draw their enemy down under the water until they died miserable deaths. Then the screaming and screeching of the Sea Eagles grew less and less, and the few that were left flew wildly away, to where the Golden Eagle with his Imperial Ally sat discussing matters on a distant rock.

"Best go on attacking them on land," advised the Imperial Eagle, "for our enemy can never be beaten at sea, that's plain."

To this they one and all agreed, and with their new leader the Forest Eagle, they started to make preparations for a fierce attack.

But the bird folk were not idle, either, and their neighbours of the animal world who had suffered through the enemy were coming to help them in big numbers, so a vast gathering had collected together to talk matters over.

Never before had the quiet of the forest been so disturbed as when this motley crowd met together, for everybody tried to talk at once. Besides, the feathered folk, who were present in great numbers, there were rabbits, hares, lambs, and even young deer, ptarmigans, ducks, and such like, and last, but not least, the bulldog, for whom they had great respect. He was a quiet, dignified sort of being till roused, and then he showed himself to be a wonderful fighter. So this strange mixture of birds and animals were now united on one big effort to extinguish the pride and avarice of the Golden Eagle, and keep him for ever in his place.

The chattering monkey was the first to start relating his misfortunes, for the Forest Eagle had always been his greatest enemy. Then the deer interrupted him as he said, "many a time have my brothers been devoured, and when the eagles cannot catch them they chase them over the cliffs till they fall lifeless into the chasms below."

"Listen to me," said the fox. "You would scarcely believe it, perhaps, but even our race, with their natural cunning, are not smart enough to dodge them."

Then the old sheep looked up, bleating piteously, "baa, baa," she cried. "I have been one of the worst sufferers, for those wicked monsters have robbed me of my young fat lambs, and carried them away to their eyries, where they have been cruelly devoured."

There was also a magpie present, and it wasn't to be expected that he could keep quiet, and perching himself on the branch of a tree where they could all see him, he said, "Ah, it's not only we forest folk who have suffered, for even the earth mortals have had their little pink and white babies carried away and torn to pieces by those cruel monsters."

Now here the wise old bulldog interrupted. "Best act," he said gruffly, "instead of wasting any more time talking. We are all joined together in a just fight against our enemy the Golden Eagle, who at different times have robbed us of our young, and we are going to teach him a lasting lesson. Listen! Now what is that noise? Ah! those eagles are again attacking our weak ones." And away these brave forest allies ran or flew in a body.

Again and again the great Forest Eagle, with a sort of barking sound, gave out his orders to kill the young, but those brave little fighting bantams were full of courage and sprang forward fearlessly to meet the attack. The enemy, however, soon proved too powerful and strong for them as they stuck their cruel claws with tremendous force into the bodies of their victims and carried them away captive, sometimes in their rage preferring to tear them to pieces, but help was coming to the weak side, as older birds in vast numbers, crowing lustily, now came forward and fought with all their might. Then in the distance a part of the bulldog army showed itself and following on their heels were some giant earth folk handling big weapons.

"Bah!" screeched the Forest Eagles, "we had not reckoned on all these foes."

Crack! Crack! one after another the rifle shots rang out through the air, then down came the enemy one by one, falling to the ground, some killed outright, and others wounded, the latter happening to fall in distant parts where the Bruin Army were encamped, were soon made short work of by the enemy, who used their paws and teeth, or crushed them with terrific blows. Yelping, shrieking cries now rent the air everywhere, and all that were left of that mighty army of Forest Eagles, flew madly back to their haunts.

Up above the Golden Eagle sat gloomy and sullen on his lofty crag, listening to the noise and din which told him of the defeat of his army; turning round at last, he gazed with dismay at his empty larder.

"Only bones and feather left," he cried hoarsely.

"Plenty of carrion down below," croaked his mate. "Carrion indeed, that's no good to me, its the live-tender things that suit my palate best, and I'll have them, too," and instantly, like an arrow from a bow, off he shot through the air, each stroke of his powerful wings taking him over a considerable distance. He knew the way quite well, for it was not the first time he had paid a nightly call on the sheep farmer. As he neared the spot he listened intently. All was still and quiet, the good folks of the house were all in bed at this hour. Down he came and watched for a while, then moving cautiously along the ground, he espied not far off, a young fat lamb. But, ah! what was this wretched thing entangling his feet just when he had got within easy reach of his prey. In vain he tried to lift his feet, but no, they were stuck fast, then tore and struggled in mad rage to get free, but, alas! his struggles were all in vain, he had been caught in a trap and was now a helpless prisoner.

"Hark! what's that," barked old Trusty, the watchdog, pricking up his ears, and round he trotted to where the sheep were camped, and there, sure enough, was the Royal prisoner caught at last.

"I must fetch my master," yelped Trusty in high glee, and away he tore back to the house. The noise soon woke the farmer, who guessed directly what was wrong, as he appeared at the door, rifle in hand.

"This way, this way," Trusty seemed to say, bounding along madly ahead of his master, but long before they reached the spot, the farmer heard the deafening shouts. Then the sun rose and shed his golden rays over all this happy band, and a soft, murmuring, coo-roo-coo was heard in the distance, but gradually coming nearer and nearer. Then all stopped to look and listen, and along the ground with quick, short steps and bobbing head, came the Rock Dove who lived on the ocean cliffs, holding in his beak a little olive twig.

"The dove, the dove," they all joyously cried together, "we love her best of all, for she has brought peace to the forest folk."

TESSA.

(By Lucy Murray.)

Little Tessa had been brought from her Italian home when her parents died, just after she was nine years old. She was taken to an ugly old house in a bare-looking garden, and for a while felt dreadfully homesick for her sunny birthplace. It was a raw, bleak winter here, and she had no idea how different an aspect the new scenes would have worn had she arrived a few weeks earlier. Then the dingy walls of the house were one blaze of scarlet under the embrace of gold and crimson blossoms.

She did not fret or cry, as many children might have done; she only sat with her little hands clasped on her knee, and refused to be enticed out of her shell.

Then one day the rain poured heavily down from a leaden sky, and a wild wind blew stormily; and the next morning saw a change, and as the week crept by and Tessa was obliged to lie in bed while the doctor came to see her twice a day and tried to coax her to take medicine, which she detested; but nothing seemed to do any good. She just lay in her white bed and hardly opened her eyes.

One afternoon, however, the doctor came and found her crying. Taking her thin little hand in his, he drew from her trembling lips the story of her pain, of her homesick baby-heart, and how she did long to see her beau-

SOME WOMEN AND MANY THINGS

The rose is the emblem of silence in Greece, and was formerly hung over the table when guests were entertained, as a warning that anything heard there was not to be repeated. Hence the phrase "sub rosa," and its English equivalent, "Under the rose."

The King of the Belgians has presented the Order of Leopold II. to three nurses of the British First Aid Nursing Yeomanry Corps for bravery under shell fire in rescuing some wounded men from the trenches.

Housewives in Florida scrub their floors with oranges. They cut the oranges in halves, and rub the flat exposed pulp on the floor. The acid in the orange does the cleansing, and the boards are as white as snow after the application.

When war broke out there was a naturally a great deal of activity among the army tailors in London, and there was a prodigious fitting on of officers' khaki uniforms. A big shop was full of colonels and majors and cutters and tapemeasurers, when a simply dressed young man wandered in, and asked somewhat shyly, "Can I be attended to at once, please?" He was told gruffly that he would have to wait; and a six-foot cavalry officer inquired in a six-foot-six voice, "Who made that boy an officer?" The rebuffed one wandered around the shop, and encountered another attendant. "Can you tell me," he asked, "who has the Prince of Wales's cap in hand?" Exit the cavalry officer, while in the confusion the Prince was conducted to a private fitting room.

Admiral Jellicoe's wife is constantly appealing for comforts for the men of her husband's fleet on the watch in the North Sea, or Lough Swilly, or wherever it happens to be hid from the prying eyes of German scouts. Lady French and Mrs. Despard, wife and sister of Sir John French, are equally industrious in providing for the men in the trenches of Flanders and France, while Mrs. Parker, the sister of Lord Kitchener, seemingly a confirmed bachelor, seems to be able to turn her hand to anything from charity to recruiting and temperance reform. Lady Smith-Dorrien, wife of the general who won undying fame in the retreat from Mons, is always on tap for any scheme for the improved welfare of the troops under the command of her husband, and one might extend the list indefinitely to include the wives of most of the men in subordinate commands.

tiful sunny Italy again.

Now, while she was tolling her old friend all this, it happened that a ray of sunshine entered the room, and saw and heard the state of matters. Back he flew up to the great bright sun-king behind the mists, and repeated everything to him, and the sun was interested, though he answered nothing—sovereigns do not always tell their subjects what their thoughts may be. He acted instead.

Next morning was quite a spring day, sweet, warm and pleasant, and the next day was even sweeter, and so things went on till two long beautiful weeks had passed away.

Then, when all the world seemed full of bird-music and dancing rills, a tiny huddled girlie was lifted in the doctor's strong arms and borne into the sun-light, where she was settled comfortably under a willow there.

Tessa looked languidly around her, at the green young grass, the branches above her, breaking into tender life, the blue clear vault overhead. Then her eyes spied a huge golden daffodil within reach of her hand.

"Oh!" she exclaimed eagerly. "Oh, look!"

In that moment she began to grow happy in her new life, and when summer roses strewed the walks with fragrant leaflets there was no stronger or more joyous child in New Zealand than little Tessa.

RAILWAY PENSIONS

Government Scheme Analysed

And Pronounced "A Fraud"

(BY A RAILWAY EMPLOYEE)

(The following critical review of the Argentine Government scheme for providing pensions for railways employes, has been contributed to THE HERALD by a railway employé holding a position of importance on one of the lines).

The Object of a Pension Scheme.—The true object of a pension scheme proper is to provide for the individual beneficiary thereunder, a monetary benefit, whereby he is to be enabled to exist in his old age especially when his age precludes the possibility of his earning a living wage. It is not the object of a Pension Scheme proper to make any provision for the wives and families of deceased members although very often Pension Schemes are coupled with Benevolent Schemes under the name of the former.

Pension Schemes and their Subscribers or Members.—Any pension scheme other than State scheme should be on mutual principles, i.e., the subscribers to the Funds of the scheme should be persons directly interested in the benefits of the scheme.

Argentine Government Employes' Pension Scheme.—It is unnecessary at the moment to refer in detail to the working of this scheme beyond pointing out that it at present extends its benefits to widows and orphans which is beyond the scope of a Pension Scheme proper. Upon the Argentine Government Employes' Pension Scheme the present Railway Scheme, which by the way, is only in embryo, has its foundation.

Subscribers to the Funds of a Railway Pension Scheme.—By argument 2 it is held that the subscribers to such a scheme should be the beneficiaries under the scheme; therefore it holds good that the Funds of a Railway Pension Scheme should be subscribed by the Railway employes. As a matter of actual practice it is found that if the employes are to subscribe during their working years out of their salaries or wages directly sufficient sums to provide any reasonable pension the monies so to be subscribed are so considerable that it is found very difficult to obtain members in sufficient numbers to carry on a permanent scheme. To prove this, take a salary of £100 per annum of a member 20 years of age, and suppose an annuity to be provided at the age of 30, the cost of such annuity in the British Post Office is no less than £25 per annum. Of course such a provision of £25 per annum for 30 years out of a salary of £100 per annum is out of the question of practical politics so that it is necessary to reduce the pension, extend the retiring age, or resort must be had to a combination of the two to arrive at a reasonable subscription, i.e., one within the means of the beneficiaries.

Subscriptions to a State Pension Scheme.—If a State guarantees a pension scheme the subscriptions thereto would be found by taxation if such scheme extended beyond state employes.

The Present Railway Pension Scheme and its Incomes.—The present scheme is not a State scheme inasmuch as the State guarantees nothing to the proposed beneficiaries. It is a scheme fostered by the State, and in its present condition deals only with subscriptions leaving benefits in the air. It goes without saying that in these circumstances the State cannot resort to taxation for purposes of fostering any such scheme. Notwithstanding these premises, the proposition as it stands, pretends to levy a subscription from the public on goods and parcels tariffs of 3 per cent; the confiscation of involuntary over-payments by the public to the Railway Companies, or a jurisdiction over same contrary to the laws of the land. It further pretends to enforce subscription from the private Railway Companies and lastly subscriptions from unwilling Railway employes, all of such subscriptions to be handed over to a Treasury to be dealt with not as State Funds, but as Funds of a scheme at the mercy of a semi-irresponsible Committee.

It is not clear whether retiring members will have returned to them their accumulated subscriptions on their retirement from Railway service prior to pension age, but if the intention is not to return such subscriptions the proposal creates a system of slavery, the Railway slaves' price of freedom being the total loss of their own subscriptions, effected by discount from their salaries or wages, and those effected on their behalf by the public and the Railway Companies, with all interest accumulation. Generally it would be supposed that the subscription of such Railway Company would bear an exact proportion to those of its employes seeing that eventually all subscriptions by a Railway Company are supposed to be in supplement of a man's salary, but by this scheme it is proposed to levy a greater subscription from the rich Company, than that of the poor, relative to the subscription of each of its employes. Thus, "A" Company, will pay 100 per cent. of its employes' subscriptions, whilst "B" Company may pay 50 per cent. or even no proportion of its employes' subscriptions; that is to say "A" Company is to pay "B" Company's pensions. But this principle is extended further than this. "B" Company having had the benefit of the services of an employé, say 25 years out of 30, may subscribe nothing to the funds as no provision has been made for these payments of back subscription beyond 50 per cent. of an employé's first months' salary, whatever such an expression may mean. This want of provision of back subscriptions is a very serious matter in the initiation of any Pension Scheme as in equity all the old hands will have to receive such small pensions from the funds as to render the scheme absolutely useless to them. It is not at all evident why a Railway Company subscribing to a pension scheme for its employes should have the Funds resulting from its subscriptions appropriated to the employé of another railway, but such is the result of the continuous Railway service principle embraced in the scheme, and ex-Railway servants who quitted the service prior to Jan. 17, 1913, are also to be embraced, notwithstanding the fact that no funds have been provided by or for them, the pinnacle of absurdity seeing that their equitable share of the funds is Nil.

In order that any workable scheme may be evolved it is essential that the income should bear a due relation to the Expenditure. This is obtainable in respect of a subscription based upon a percentage of salary or wages; but when the income of a scheme is dependent upon such a fluctuating quantity as a percentage of the goods and parcels receipts it is perfectly hopeless to frame any scale of benefits in proportion to salaries or wages.

The income of the proposed scheme is therefore impugnable as follows:

(a) It is inequitable as between Railway Company and Railway Company.

(b) It is unspeakably deficient in regard to provision of back subscriptions.

(c) It is chaotic as regards income proposed to be derived direct from the public.

The Present Railway Pension Scheme—Rights, Hopes and Fears of Subscribers.—The first rights of a subscriber to any mutual pension scheme are to know whether his money is returnable in the case of his quitting the scheme prior to the pension age, to share in the product of the funds in proportion to his accumulated subscriptions thereto, and a full knowledge of the main conditions at least of the scheme; and what is true of one subscriber is true of the whole.

Take the first class of subscribers—the public. With them the scheme spells confiscation of their subscription as they never participate in the funds. Taking the second class of subscribers, the Railway Companies, it may be fairly held that their subscriptions only represent subscriptions on behalf of their employes corresponding to the increased salaries and wages. Accepting this view, and only in this light could the Railway Companies fairly subscribe to the funds, it follows that such subscriptions must be voluntary on the part of the Railway Companies as they represent to them part of the men's salaries and wages; thus any subscriptions enforced upon the Railway Companies are tantamount to a tax. As regards the freighters, unfortunate enough to have overpaid accounts to the Railway Companies, their subscriptions would be confiscated and the laws of prescription violated entirely by this proposed pension scheme. Putting aside the subscribers in the shape of the public, and the unfortunate freighters suffering from overcharges, and assuming the Companies and employes' subscriptions to be on all fours, what are the hopes and fears of these subscribers? As the matter stands at present it is a question of put your money in the lucky bag, shut your eyes and trust in the Treasury. If you draw prizes all the luck is yours; if you draw blanks, well gentlemen, your money has gone; better luck next time."

This state of things appeals to the overconfident, the gambling element and the uninitiated. Although nothing is known of the proposals as to the pension age, or the distribution of the funds it may be surmised that the hopes of employes have been flattered with the anticipation of some distribution equivalent to 95 per cent. of their ultimate salaries at ages varying from 43 to 50 with 25 or 30 years of service.

The Railway employes consist of three main groups.

(1) Those who have already spent many years in the service having already arrived at a pensionable age or thereabouts (this is the class whose hopes are to get something for nothing);

(2) Those who have joined the service late in life, frequently of the more intelligent class of employes, and hence the better paid men who will subscribe large "quotas" to the funds; but seeing they are never likely to complete a 25 or 30 years' service, the scheme to this class spells confiscation or "heads you win, tails I lose."

(3) The younger employes of the Railway. The hopes of these youngsters are those of Railway slaves. The more intelligent who in the orinary course largely use the Railways as a training ground to fit them for better work, will find that they must sacrifice their subscriptions of 6 per cent., i.e., 3 per cent direct and 3 per cent extra wages, subscribed by the Companies on their behalf, also the quotas of last months' salaries and those corresponding to the increases in salaries obtained from time to time, with all interest accumulations, at any time they wish to obtain their freedom from Railway bondage! The alternative is continuance of service for 25 or 30 years with a prospect of a burst bubble, or at the outside a pension of some paltry sum at the end of their time, as, supposing their subscriptions and accumulations to be intact and available for distribution among such members after 25 or 30 years' service, the pension which they would receive could not amount to more than 15 to 20 per cent. of their ultimate salaries.

As an example of the ideas of the first category of employes above mentioned, the following will serve to shew the ideas prevalent amongst this selfish and arrogant class:

An employé of a Northern district Railway writing to an employée of a Southern district Railway accuses the latter of not understanding the wonders of the present pension scheme. The theory propounded by the gentleman is clearly, "every man for himself, and the devil take the hindmost." He remarks "take 100,000 employes at the age of 20; say 50,000 survive 25 years, but owing to men leaving the service, only 300 remain to get their pensions."

What calculations to be sure? Now of 100,000 living at the age of 20, some 80,000 will survive the age of 45, as a matter of fact, and of these 80,000, this gentleman proposes that 79,700 slaves will have purchased their freedom in order to pension 300 more or less vagrants, who have robbed their brethren in order that they may wax fat in their old age. Was ever a more impudent proposal of confiscation advanced by any man? Very fine ethics in a socialistic age, and in a Republic of Brotherhood! But the Argentine may rest with easy conscience for the propounder of this rotten theory claims to be an Englishman. Laws are said to be made now for the greatest good of the greatest number.

The Financial side of the Proposition

To go into this at any depth is beyond the scope of this memorandum which is intended for the man in the street. Take a workman with £100 per annum subscribing 25 years to the Pension Fund, investing the Funds at 5 per cent interest (a very liberal rate) each £1 per annum subscribed accumulates to £47.72.7; supposing that with deaths of other members his annual subscriptions amount to 15 per cent of his wages, i.e. 6 per cent his own and Company's and 9 per cent from deaths and tax on Public, then the gross accumulation in this man's favour will amount to say £716; if he entered the service at 25 and retires at 50, the pension which £716 will produce for this man is say £48 or somewhat under 50 per cent. The above is the case of a regular wage. The benefits accruing to the man with a salary or wage, increasing in the 25 years from say £100 to £300 is on quite another footing, as the result in the latter case would be to greatly reduce the proportion of pension to ultimate salary or wages and the utmost which would be obtained (if the Funds were never drawn upon by Pensions to members beyond their due proportion for years of subscription and not years of service), would amount to possibly 1/3 of ultimate salary or say £100 per annum to a man with a salary of £300 per annum. Now there are some railway companies who are at present granting this pension to their men at the reasonable age of 60 after 15 years of service without calling upon their men or the public for any subscription whatsoever. Is it to be wondered that such companies complain of a general advance of 3 per cent in their wages and 3 per cent tax enforced on the public to the detriment of their business as also the shortsightedness of their employes who advocate such a Pension Scheme.

Some speculations upon the proposed distribution of Funds by the Treasury.

Up to the present the expenditure of the funds to be accumulated is entirely a matter of speculation. It is a piece of enormous bluff to waylay the unwary railway employé and pretend forcibly to appropriate a considerable portion of his hard earned wages to put into a gigantic lottery or lucky bag without even having the decency to exhibit the prizes. Who are to be the winners and what have they to win? As far as one knows, to become a winner any railway servant must become a bonded slave for at least 25 or 30 years. This is tantamount to lifelong slavery, as, in very few instances, would any other walk in life be open to a man who has spent 25 to 30 years as an Argentine railway servant. How many will draw prizes? It would be fair to answer this by the idea of a railway employé. Says he "300 out of 100,000 will draw prizes, 99,700 will draw blanks."

Now for the prize—the prize winners have had dangled in front of them, 95 per cent of ultimate salary or wage, if they remain to draw a grande. Suppose a winner of a big prize retires at 50 and having arrived at 65 suddenly finds the Treasury has closed its doors. No hay fondos, no hay mas pagos is a cry that some of us know only too well. Here will be a man in old age quite unable to earn a cent and taught to rely monthly on his $285 per month may he; and suddenly his income stops. Who can he apply to for relief? Will the Argentine Government respond? The old hands, i.e. those who have already spent their 25 to 30 years in railway service have had dangled before them 95 per cent of their present wages and are anticipating drawing their prizes forthwith without paying a cent for their tickets in the grand lottery. Where is the money coming from to divide? Against the would be vagrants, the honest portion of such folk will undoubtedly refuse prizes offered to them on these terms. A further distribution has been mooted—a payment for 15 years to widows and orphans—this lucky bag is in the eyes of some a veritable widow's cruse of oil—in fact the more you extract from the Funds the bigger the prizes. Again the sick and needy are not to wait for their 25 to 30 years, so the great sack is to turn out more gold or paper, most probably the latter in favour of this deserving class of slave.

Oh for a Business Government who shall see that "as ye sow, ye shall reap"—a division according to years of subscription and what really corresponds to each must surely be his participation instead of "B" enjoying "A"'s happy lot which is the great hope of the crowd who are pushing this unhappy bubble. The non-prize winners made up of the hopeless who shall subscribe without hope of ever drawing a prize and the youngsters with the gloomiest of prospects it may be said are the great multitude of the damned who will follow "the broad way which leadeth unto destruction."

Legal and moral aspect of the project.

The most important point of the project is that of the supposed enforcement of subscriptions by unwilling employes and an unwilling public in other words the scheme pretends to be a compulsory one. Now the legislature of all civilised States at the present day is handed over by the people to certain trustees of rights—members of a Congress; a Senator, a President of a Republic, or a King or possibly an Emperor, but in all cases the legislators' rights and duties are limited. Powers are given to the legislature to raise funds for national purposes and this is done by means of taxes. These taxes and the corresponding expenditure in regard to which the funds are to be raised must be submitted to the Legislature in the form of what is known as a Budget and no powers are extended to a legislature for purposes beyond national administration expenses. It would appear therefore that for a legislature to pretend to enforce taxes on the public or any member thereof such as the employes of private railway companies for the purposes of augmenting the benefits, wages, salaries or emoluments of any party to a private contract is entirely beyond the trust imposed upon the legislature by the public.

If therefore the legislature pretend to enforce a deduction from the salaries and wages of citizens or embargo such salaries and wages they are without doubt enforcing a payment equivalent to a tax for illegitimate purposes. The Law 9653 pretends to create a Railway Bondage in as much as it makes no provision for the return of the monies to be deducted from what it is pleased to designate as permanent employes, which of course do not exist as no railway servant serving a private company has a contract for life, nor is such a contract legal since the abolition of slavery. To call a man on a daily wage a permanent employé is a farce and the same may be said of a monthly paid man. In fact the term permanent employé gives the clue to this enormous bluff for no one has yet been found who knows what it means. The Executive Power says it means permanent employes and does not exclude daily paid men, but then the poor Executive had to say something, so it did its duty to the best of its ability and if anything added another "hass" to the existing "hass."

There exists a Law 5315, known as the "Mitre Law," which deals primarily with railways constructed after the date of its introduction and further operates as a contract made by the Argentine Government with private railway companies as regards their existing railways which latter were to secure certain benefits for 40 years provided they submitted to a tax of 3% on their net income and the Nation bound itself in turn not to intervene in the Company's tariffs prior to such tariffs producing 17 per cent gross earnings in respect of its recognised capital. Yet the Law 9653 Art. 6 says the companies will raise their tariffs in a sum limited to 3 per cent in order to subscribe to the Pension Scheme. Is this subscription a tax on the public, or do the Argentine Nation wish it to be clearly understood that they treat the Mitre Law as a "scrap of paper"?

Now if Law 9653 is constitutional law (which it is not) and it levies a tax on railway employes, railway companies and the public alike, who are the tax collectors. Have we arrived at a stage when the Republican Government of the Argentine are going to enforce by a sort of press gang operation the private railway companies into tax collectors. Law No. 9653 may be law in name, but it makes desperate war upon the existing Code of Commerce or other Civil Codes as it does not even respect the unfortunate public who have overpaid their accounts. The Pension Treasury sack is like the ostrich's stomach or a ravenous beast of the field going about seeking whom it may devour.

Awake oh ye slothful railway employes; out with those you have placed in high places, it is your duty to vote for legislators who understand their trust and it is your duty to oppose the "hass" of a Law 9653 by every legitimate means in your power.

ITALIANS FROM ARGENTINA

Rome, Sept. 11.

Several hundred of Italian reservists from Argentina and Brazil have arrived at Naples from Genoa, and will be despatched to the military instruction encampments prior to being incorporated in the ranks of the active army.

THE RAILWAY PENSIONS LAW

(To the Editor)

Sir,—“Railway Employé” in his able analysis of the badly framed Railway Pension Law—which was so well described in your head lines on the article, and which Law has been carefully and without prejudice reviewed in the leading article in your issue of to-day—hits the nail on the head, when he says that the only employees in favour of this nebulous scheme are the old men who have almost completed their 25 to 30 years service, and who are thinking of being able to retire at once, or in a very short time, with high pensions.

How can these men in fairness think they can obtain a pension of even 30 to 50 o/o of their salary for the rest of their lives, when their contributions, and those from other sources, will not amount to the value of one year's pension? Is it not a fact that they argue that the Fund will have large amounts of Cash on hand to meet claims? entirely ignoring the circumstance that such large balances will be required to meet the claims of men wanting pensions some 20 years hence.

When one studies the question dispassionately the selfish ideas of the old employees are so apparent that one wonders the younger members have not at once risen in opposition to their older colleagues. Unfortunately although the Chief Officials of the Companies may recognise the crass stupidity of the would be claimants for large pensions, coupled with small payments, it must not be forgotten that the older men, often holding the senior positions, are able to exercise a quiet intimidation on the younger members.

The last named should, however, insist on the Organic Law containing a provision for the return of the men's contributions—with or without interest is immaterial—on their leaving the Railway service for any cause whatsoever, otherwise as “Railway Employé” so aptly puts it Railway service will become a revived form of slavery, out of which one can only retire or purchase his freedom at the loss of his contributions. If such contributions were to be retained for charitable purposes the procedure would not be so aggravating, but that same should go to swell the pension of fellow workers, whose only claim to consideration, is long service is worse than annoying. Long service it must not be forgotten, is, in a good many cases, synonymous with mediocrity, as it means that the men in question were not fit for better work than the detail posts they have occupied all their lives. Further in a new country where development has been so rapid in the last few years, as in the Argentine, inferior employees often obtain fairly good positions, solely on account of their knowledge of the detail work.

Yours, etc.

“One of the Younger Brigade.”
Sept. 11.

“THE PATENT PULVERISING POUNDING-TO-PULP OF THE POOR PEN PUSHERS.”

(To the Editor)

Sir,—I am a pen pusher on a Railway.

About the 6th of each month I get some money in a small envelope. By dint of much brain work I am enabled to stretch the contents of said envelope to last until the 15th, brain work after that date being doubled in trying to borrow.

As you may have noticed from my style of correspondence I am not an Argentine and the prospects of paying about nine tenths (seems like that to me) of my salary to provide for my declining years, does not appeal to your poverty stricken humble servant. According to my distorted views on this subject the Railway Cos. are allowed to increase their freight by ten per cent, three per cent of this they contribute direct to the fund. What becomes of the other seven per cent? I suggest that this seven per cent be dealt with as follows: That the three per cent to be deducted from the staff be paid out of this and the balance be held over and paid to the miserable members like myself as a Christmas present twice a year.

The Hon. member who introduced this Act to Congress in the first instance, deserves an Iron Cross; in fact I am willing to bet any portion of the said envelope which remains on the 15th, that when the 1st. deduction is made nine tenths of the “miserables” who have been “reduced” would gladly provide the aforesaid Hon. member with all the Crosses (Iron or otherwise) that he is ever likely to require. This Act reminds me of Mark Twain's Racehorse.—You tie a carrot to the Winning post and put your trust in Providence, the carrot in this instance is ninety-five per cent of your salary and the Winning post is twenty-five years away. Many things might happen in twenty-five years; for instance you might die; then what's the good of a pension—something to drink would be more acceptable. I am only speaking for myself.

According to my views, if the Government is so exceedingly like myself on the 15th, why don't they follow my example and borrow, or better still why not bring the Rivadavia back to the Docks to be used as a floating Café, with a properly regulated scale of charges, such as Admission 10 cts.; View of Admiral in Cock fighting Order, 50 cts.; Permission to use 12 inch guns as a telescope, 20 cts.; Permission to use furnaces for heating water for maté, 10 cts. Why I am willing to bet again that the Government would be able to pay off the National Debt in about three weeks. (I understand that that National Debt is about £97,19,9 1/2, for every man, woman and child in this country). Another brilliant suggestion—when the Moreno comes to hand why not have a tug of war between the two (Rivadavia and Moreno) and see which busts first. Admission $1.

By what I have heard of Pensions (Ju-jubilaciones I think they call it in this country), it appears that some are born with pensions, others achieve pensions, while poor miserable Railway employees are to have pensions thrust upon them (or the pay part of it) whether they like it or not. There is something rotten in the State of... Denmark. As an employee of a Railway Company with years of service permit me to say that the scheme formulated by the Companies in the past was vastly superior to the New El Dorado de Argentina, for by the old scheme the employees paid nothing and ‘got’ a pension, while under the New Scheme, the employee will pay for a pension and get nothing. (Logic)

Just a short sentence more. Take any paper published in this land of liberty and it is a dirty dollar bill to a chew of tobacco that your eye meets a paragraph informing you that the Customs Officials have not received any wages for three months, that the National School teachers have completely forgotten what a “shinplaster” looks like, that the postal authorities exist on the nourishment derived from licking stamps, and all other branches under National control being unpaid for dates ranging from three to seven months. Ask yourselves straight, Railwaymen, what chance have you of getting your subscriptions, representing misery for many weary dreary years, returned with interest, when you retire?

Why does none of our Railwaymen, both management and employees, form, Anti-Pension Scheme Committees. Something will have to be done, and done quickly, if the contents of that envelope are to continue to last until the 15th.

Gott strafe pension schemes.

Yours, etc.

WILHELM.

Rosario, Sept. 14.

(2 times).

TE AGUILA ES EL MEJOR

DOLLAR CONCERT AT BELGRANO

A MUSICAL TREAT.

It was to Miss Ivy Bulman and to Miss Baillie that the organisation of the dollar concert at St. Saviour's, Belgrano, on Sept. 10, was due. The result was an excellent entertainment and the reason why the hall was not packed is impossible to explain. It would have been better filled had the public realised how good an entertainment was to be given. Of this last there was no doubt and every one present testified to it in the warmest manner. Apart from this there were also two items of unusual interest—unusual in that Miss Muriel Marr has not been heard for a very long time and again because Miss Eileen Scott was one of the artists and an almost unknown one, when the other should be the case.

Miss Muriel Marr was in excellent voice. As is well known she possesses an excellent contralto voice which her rest has improved, but it would have been more pleasing to have heard her in other songs than those she chose, more especially in her second choice. Chaminade has character, individuality and many technical difficulties to overcome and in this Miss Marr succeeded admirably, but "When the birds sing" is not of a character to display the voice to best advantage.

Miss Eileen Scott should also be heard again. She is a pleasing singer and possesses a beautiful voice which with training and more training especially in phrasing and enunciation could be quite exceptional. She too, in her choice of songs, with the exception of the last encore in the second half, was classical.

The Misses Wolff were excellent with their instrumental items and only a flatness of a string caused a sense of uneasiness in Godard's "Berceuse."

It was unfortunate that Miss F. Beascochea disappointed, but her place at the piano was filled by Mrs. Hertz. "The death of St. Isolda," Liszt, was extremely well rendered, but is amongst one of the most unsympathetic and unmusical of that composer's works.

Miss Wolff in her solo on the cello overcame in a highly finished manner the tarentelle difficulties of Popper. This difficult and highly technical piece was rendered to perfection.

Mr. H. W. Brady was, as always, good, but not as good as always. He chose songs that were much appreciated, but was not in quite such good voice as he has been on other occasions. Mr. Olivet well as he sang, was quite off colour and perhaps a cold had much to do with it. He sang by no means as he can sing and as he has always sung at other entertainments. Notwithstanding many critical expressions, the concert was an extremely good one, well arranged and musically of a high order, but it would have gained by more simplicity.

Miss Bulman and Miss Jeannie Baillie are to be congratulated on the all-round success of their efforts in organising the entertainment.

The programme was as follows:—

Part I.

'Cello solo, "Caro mio Ben" (Gordoni), Miss F. Wolff.

Song "Venetian Song," encore "Sing happy birds," Miss M. Marr.

Song "Jack Briton," encore "Rolling down to Rio," Rev. H. W. Brady. Trio, cello, violin and piano, "Tannhauser," Misses C. and F. Wolff and Mrs. Hertz.

Song "A toi" (Benburg), encore "I will love thee" (Grieg), Miss E. Scott. Song "Mephistopheles" (Boito), encore "Torna," Mr. A. Olivet.

Song "The Trumpeter," Rev. H. W. Brady.

Part II.

'Cello solo "Tarantella" (Popper), Miss F. Wolff.

WEDDING AT ST. JOHN'S

COLLIER-DAGGER.

On Sept. 11, at 4.30 p.m., the marriage of Miss May Dagger, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Dagger, of Buenos Aires, to Mr. William Bradely Collier, of Blackpool, was celebrated at St. John's Pro-Cathedral.

The bride entered the church, in which a large number of friends were present, on the arm of her father, Mr. R. Dagger, who also gave her away. She was charmingly gowned in white charmeuse, the bodice and tunic being of white Chantilly lace, lined in pearls, with a train a full tulle bridal veil, wreath of orange blossoms, and large shower bouquet of white carnations and lilies of the valley. Her sister, Miss Edith Dagger, who acted as bridesmaid, wore a pretty frock of delicate shell pink silk, trimmed with Meehlins lace, and a large Leghorn picture hat, veiled with pink tulle and rosebuds. She carried a large bouquet of fine pink carnations. Mr. W. Langhorne made an exceptional and resourceful best man.

The service was choral, and the Wedding March was played on the entry and retirement of the bridal party from the church, which had been prettily decorated with flowers and palm branches.

The Rev. H. Westby-Brady conducted the Marriage Service. It was understood that the happy pair were to leave by the night steamer for Montevideo for the honeymoon.

A large number of handsome presents were received, of which the appended list is only a partial record:—Bridegroom to bride, diamond and sapphire ring; bride to bridegroom, gold cuff links; father of bride, cheque; mother of bride, sewing machine; Mrs. Collier, cheque; Miss Collier, silver butter dish; Miss Edith Dagger, silver fruit stand; Mr. and Mrs. G. J. Louis, silver and cut glass tanzalus; Mr. J. Dunne and family, dinner service; Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Andrews, silver and cut glass salad bowl; Masters W. and H. Andrews, silver bonbon dish; Mr. and Mrs. J. Clark and family, silver salt cellars; Mr. and Mrs. Hayes, silver photo frame; Mr. H. G. Sahlin, silver biscuit box; Mr. and Mrs. Briggs and family, silver cake basket; Mr. and Mrs. Sparkes, travelling clock; Mr. and Mrs. Lennox, silver sweet dish; Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Jutton, silver butter dish; Mr. W. Langhorne, silver salts and pepperettes; Mr. and Mrs. Trilsbach, silver vases; Mr. and Mrs. Alabaster, silver tea service; Mr. and Mrs. T. McCulloch, silver butter dish; Mr. and Mrs. Cesari, silver and glass jug and stand; Miss C. Bayley, silver sweet dish; Mr. and Mrs. Hill, silk cushion; Mr. Hagen, hand-embroidered paper bag; Mrs. T. Morris, lingerie; Mr. J. Pulman, tea service; Mr. M. Carmody, toilet set.

CINEMA AT AMERICAN CHURCH HALL

On Saturday afternoon there was a large gathering of young folks at the fortnightly matinee at the Lecture Hall of the Church. Besides the many laughter-provoking films exhibited there were two especially good dramas, "Lochinvar" of Sir Walter Scott, and "The Gunmaker of Moscow," which claimed special attention.

Song "L'Eté," encore "Palomma é notte," Miss E. Scott.

Song "Les Rêves de les Greux" from "Manon," Mr. A. Olivet.

Pianoforte solo "Le mort de S. Isolda" (Liszt), Mrs. Hertz.

Song "When the birds sing" (Chaminade), Miss M. Marr.

Trio, "Berceuse" (Godard), Misses C. and F. Wolff and Mrs. Hertz, violin, cello and piano.

Imitations, Mr. T. Cadmus.

God save the King.

Mr. Weston and Miss Attwell were quite exceptional as accompanists.

QUILMES TRAMS

DEMAND FOR IMPROVED SERVICE.

The Quilmes "Asociacion de Fomento," Cuartel I.N.O., at their meeting of September 7, resolved to send the following petition and expression of opinion to the Manager of the Anglo-Argentine Tramway Company:

"The residents of Quilmes and neighbourhood consider it fair and legitimate to expect that a rapid journey without stupefying halts to the Federal Capital should be possible by the No. 22 tram route, and that the distance between that township and the Metropolis might be covered in a length of time but little greater than that occupied in transit by the Southern Railway. The establishment of monthly passes and provision of workmen's cars, benefits included in the actual service, would predispose them to give preference to the tram route over the railway.

Further, the increase of 10 per cent. by the F.C.S., on present fares, resisted as is notorious by the travelling public, would considerably further incline them towards the interests of this company if they introduce the suggested improvement and satisfy the desire of the residents of Quilmes and district."

ROYAL COLONIAL INSTITUTE

NEW CANDIDATES.

The following names of candidates have been received since the last list was published:—D. J. Laird, A. J. Campbell, M. M. Campbell Henderson, D. Campbell, S. S. Boote, R. G. Monkman, H. R. Darbyshire, W. A. Sturgeon, N. Squire, N. Hemsley, A. C. Williams, R. Cameron, J. C. Somerville, J. E. Turner, T. G. Ferguson, F. C. Ballentine, E. H. Williams and J. H. Berry. Lady associate Mrs. G. B. Norris.

Nomination forms may be obtainable from following members of the Local Committee:—H. G. Mackie (British Consul General), Hope Gibson, Thos. Lloyd, W. E. O. Haxell, Francis Scott, Basil Gwyn and P. A. Grassick.

Supplentes: Frank Foster, E. M. Pixton and James Begg, or from Hon. Cor. Secretary, Mr. W. Warden, 519 B. Mitre.

WILL YOU HELP POLAND?

A PATHETIC APPEAL.

POLISH LADIES' PATRIOTIC COMMITTEE.

(To the Editor.)

Sir,—I should be very glad if you will kindly give a little of your valuable space to a request for consideration for some of the unfortunate sufferers of the war who have not been, so far, very much in the foreground. Poland has been torn between the great Continental Powers for many decades, and in the present war it has suffered quite as much, if not more, than heroic Belgium. One sentence alone is sufficient to convey this fact—when it is known that some 15,000 villages have been burnt already. There has been much highly laudable effort in behalf of the Belgians, which doubtless is fully deserved and will be maintained, but it is hoped that the martyrs of Poland will not be left to suffer their undeserved miseries without the succour of those happy people whose good fortune it is to enjoy life free from the extremities of tragedy and sorrow which modern war has brought to so many.

The above-named committee has been recently constituted and is working with the object of alleviating a little of the terrible distress in Poland. Preparations are being made for a concert to be given on November 19. An excellent programme is assured, including some of the best local British talent; and the help of the British Community is invited. The programme will be furnished later.

Thanking you in anticipation,

Yours, etc.,

For the Committee,
Sra. JUANA DE RECHNIEWSKI
Yerbal 2214, Flores,

OUR ILLUSTRATIONS

The Italian forces have their own peculiar problems to solve in their campaign against the Austrians, and though, owing to the difficult nature of the country, their progress is slow, they have shown themselves quick to grasp every advantage. An interesting picture is given this week of the Italians entrenching a mountain side, on the road to Gorizia, and screening it with branches. No work is more dangerous than that of observing and directing artillery fire under conditions shown in the second picture. The battered old house, within a couple of hundred yards of the enemy, is made use of and fitted with telephones. From this point trained observers watch the fall of every shell, and communicate results to the batteries. The picture of the happy "Tommies" holding a fort which they have improvised, is an actual photograph taken in the advanced lines in Flanders. In the United Kingdom the women have volunteered for all classes of work, and at the Richmond depot they are employed in baling and pressing fodder for the cavalry horses. The Danish steamer Sulfoos was stopped by a German submarine, and after her crew had taken to the boats she was sunk by shell fire. The picture of the charge of the Liverpool Scottish depicts a stirring incident in the fight which again gave the British possession of the village of Hooge, near Ypres. The Germans discharged clouds of gas and liquid fire, but the British troops dashed on their bayonet, and won back the position which had been lost some time before. In the last picture a batch of German prisoners, captured by the French, are seen being taken from the firing line. To protect them from the shell-fire of their own guns they are being led in safety through the French trenches.

CHILDREN'S CONCERT AT TALLERES

A BRIGHT LITTLE ENTERTAINMENT.

The entertainment given by the little children at Talleres Scotch Church on Sept. 11 was a bright and jolly function. All the items were rendered by boys and girls, and the audience was chiefly composed of these with their parents. They had a royal time of enjoyment, and Mr. A. W. Pearson, who worked so hard for success, must have been gratified by the results.

The Rev. Mr. Cameron presided, and introduced each mighty atom. Mrs. Mackenzie, who was responsible for the elocutionists, and Mrs. Torbet for the singers deserve every congratulation.

There were one or two special items that require remark. One was the singing of Master Alfie Roberts, who was recalled again and again, and the singing of "the group of girls," or much better, "The Little Gypsies," was another item which brought down the juvenile house.

It was a successful entertainment, and one which was tremendously appreciated by the little ones.

Miss Brown was the accompanist. The various items included the following:—

Recitation, "Her First Cake," Dora Nielson; song, "The White Lily," A group of girls; recitation, "The Robin," Lily Poole; song "The Sparrow," Laurie Torbet; recitation, "Full of Mischief," Jennie Jonston; dance, Annie Torbet; song, "The Fairies," A group of girls; recitation, "Dear," Annie Cogan; sing, "The land of I don't know where," Alfie Roberts; recitation, "The Months," Rosie Scheafer; song, "And a little child shall lead them," girls; recitation, "Out in the garden," Jennie Jonston; dance, Sword Dance, Annie Torbet; recitation, "Dirty Jim," Albert Pearson; song, "The Gypsies," A group of girls; recitation, "My lollie," Annie Cogan; recitation, Willie Dobbie; sketch, "Three Newsboys," (in two scenes), Robert Beattie, John Harold Beattie, and Alec. Small.

ON THE ROAD TO GORIZIA. ITALIAN FORCES ENTRENCHING A MOUNTAIN POSITION.

AN ARTILLERY OBSERVATION POST IN FLANDERS, DIRECTING A BOMBARDMENT OF GERMAN TRENCHES.

BRITISH TROOPS HOLDING A FORTIFIED RUIN.

WOMEN ENGAGED IN WAR WORK AT THE RICHMOND ARMY DEPOT.

A GERMAN SUBMARINE ATTACKING THE DANISH STEAMER SULFOSS.

THE LIVERPOOL SCOTTISH RE-CAPTURING HOOGE IN THE FACE OF LIQUID FIRE AND OTHER HORRORS.

GERMAN PRISONERS CAPTURED BY FRENCH BEING PROTECTED FROM THEIR OWN GUNS.

IMPRESSIONS OF PARAGUAY

BY COLONEL W. B. PALMER, OF THE SALVATION ARMY.

Knowing that Paraguay figures very much in the public eye just now, and having been there quite recently, the thought occurred to me that a line from my pen might not be unwelcome—not that I can add anything, I fear, to what is generally known.

However, Paraguay as a country, and looked at from the standpoint of the principles we have before us, viz., the Social and Spiritual betterment of the people, possesses considerable charm for me, and this was not lessened, but rather increased, by my second visit.

I am not experienced in land buying, or land cultivation, but I was impressed that surely there is a great future before Paraguay, as undoubtedly there are great possibilities in the productive power of the land itself, while the people would I should imagine be willing to learn how to help their own Country, when once all its great possibilities were open to their vision, and hoping I am correct when I say that, that vision is enlarging.

With regard to Revolutions, I made enquiries and was told by some that there were many rumours. In other directions I was assured that nothing serious would take place. Time alone can tell, but I will simply venture an opinion, and it is only an opinion, that nothing so comprehensive as the Revolution of 3 years ago will take place again.

The Salvation Army with its work of mercy and love is trying to do its part. Our progress has naturally been slow, having been hampered for funds, sufficient people, and then the combined interferences of Revolution, the crisis, and the War. Our Fruit Farm in Villarica has been greatly interfered with owing to the difficulty in finding a market for our produce largely caused owing to the heavy cost of carriage. Nevertheless we are struggling on, and during my visit I saw a few boys, who being too old for our school in Asuncion, were transferred to the Farm, and they were happy and well, and we hope later to make use of this Farm as a school and orphanage when necessary funds are forthcoming.

In Asuncion I studied with interest the condition of things. Business people shook their heads and said there was practically nothing doing, neither did they seem hopeful regarding the immediate future. And yet I gathered from two or three persons connected with the Railway that freight on the line had somewhat improved. I heard also that a North American Company have secured necessary permission, and intend building a frigorifico in Asuncion which is to be completed in two years time. This would certainly indicate some faith in the future.

No doubt the European War has very seriously interfered with Capital and business in the Country. And now—our work.—Our "Asilo Maternal" is I think meeting a special need in its efforts in the directions of educating, viz., giving elementary instruction (Kindergarten) and caring for the children, some by day and by night. Again we are seeking to help the children morally and spiritually. The parents of two of the children who attend as day Scholars said to me at the close of my public meeting, "Your organisation is doing a great work for the children." For our part we say we are trying to do a little, and with greater resources we will do more by and bye.

I looked with sorrow upon the evidences of the last Revolution, which as everybody knows took place only a few months ago. The ruins of the Theatre, the steel telegraph posts, broken, twisted and perforated by shot and shell, all pointed to the havoc caused by instruments of War. May we not pray that all Paraguayans may see that the way to prosperity is to cease from internal strife,

VICTORIA SAILORS' HOME

SATURDAY NIGHT'S CONCERT.

The concert at the Victoria Sailors' Home last night was in the capable hands of Mr. J. Llewellyn Hawes, the popular organist of the Scotch Church, and a packed house and repeated encores gave abundant evidence of Jack's appreciation of the good things provided for him.

Mr. Douglas Filliter, the new Vice-Consul, took the chair, being introduced by Mr. Stanley Parker, the Superintendent. After a few humorous remarks from the Chairman he announced the opening item a piano solo, a Sonata by Beethoven played by Mr. J. Llewellyn Hawes, who in the second half played Grieg's classical pieces that one would think "above" the average sailor but which earned rounds of hearty applause. Mr. Hawes also played most of the accompaniments.

Miss Woodwell played violin solo, her items in the first half being Schaffer's "Morris Dance," Schubert's "Serenata" and the ever popular Intermezzo from Cavalleria. In the second half she played Paderewski's "Minuet" and "Simple Aven" and the audience was loath to let her go.

Miss A. Comrie sang "Mary of Argyll," "Scots wha hae," "Twickenham Ferry" in pleasing fashion the other lady, performers being the Misses M. G. and E. W. Tyson who sang as a Duet "Gentle Spring" and in response to an enthusiastic encore, "A Song of Sunshine." Their individual items were, Miss M. G. Tyson "There's a land" (encore "The garden I love"), and Miss E. W. Tyson "Sunshine and rain" (encore "Spring's awakening"). They sang very sweetly and there was no uncertainty about the encores.

Mr. J. Howie Brown sang "Alone on the raft," "The little Irish girl" and "Ailsa Mine," and his clear tenor blended well with Mr. W. Henderson in "The Battle Eve."

Mr. W. Henderson struck the right note with his songs and gave "The Deathless Army," "The River and the Sea," "The Bandolero" and "Somewhere a voice is calling." This baritone singing was much appreciated and a very enjoyable evening was brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem.

This evening at 7.30 the service will be conducted by Mr. Stanley Parker. Subject, Repentance, Return, Rejoicing. Soloist Mr. R. Morris.

and for all to unite in developing the potential resources of a truly picturesque and fruitful land. I am convinced the majority of the people desire it.

A concluding word: we found the people very friendly. Our officers are working hard and leading self sacrificing lives. My wife and I found many evidences of the appreciation of the people for what our people are trying to do, which is encouraging.

We returned by boat, and a zig-zagging business it was. The buoys which are supposed to indicate the shallows were themselves high and dry. We ran on a sandbank in the darkness of night. The shallowness of the River made clearer than usual the vast amount of Crocodiles in the Paraguay River. A gentleman from the Southern States of North America used his field glasses freely, and during the afternoon of the first day aboard, said he had counted up to 500 of these creatures, and then he stopped. I quite believe it as with the naked eye I saw many. Then my American friend asked, why does not someone turn these Crocodiles to good account, seeing that Crocodile leather is so scarce and dear, and then he shewed me a small pocket leather case made of crocodile skin, for which he paid £1 in London last year.

Paraguay will see better days. We must all have patience.

WILL. B. PALMER.

Colonel.

Headquarters, Salvation Army, Victoria 452.

"DONT'S" FOR BRITONS

ADVICE TO THE NEW ARRIVAL

By P.P.C.

A correspondent, evidently writing from experience, suggests that newcomers to this country could be saved many a disappointment if there were some means by which they could, before landing avail themselves of the experience of others who have gone before. He thinks it would be a good idea if the shipping companies, instead of distributing the conventional booklets with uninteresting photos of dining-saloons and cabin-interiors, were to print and circulate items of practical information which would be of some use to passengers visiting the Argentine for the first time. In this connection the menu-cards might be used advantageously as a medium for presenting each day some useful hint or timely word in season. "For instance," says our correspondent, "how many mistakes might be avoided if newcomers whilst enjoying the various good things on the bill of fare, had the opportunity of digesting at the same time some such "pointers" as the following."

"Don't count too much on those letters of introduction getting you a job. They will get you one or two lunches, that's all. You may take it that once having invited you to lunch, the gentlemen you present them to have done all they intend to do—or can do. The percentage of jobs filled through letters of introduction works out at .03 per million. Besides if there was a good job going, they would be after it themselves."

"Get rid of the idea that Hurlingham is the only possible place in which to live. The people on board from whose conversation you formed that opinion don't live there. You will find quite a number of respectable people live in Belgrano—and other suburbs."

"Don't be hasty in passing judgment on the British community in Buenos Aires. What at first sight may appear to you to be snobbishness is in reality only our national British reserve thrown somewhat into relief by a cosmopolitan background."

"Don't condemn Argentina in a week's experience. A week is not long enough. Even you, when you get a job, will be given a month's trial. Wait till you get that job before arriving at a definite conclusion. Buenos Aires is neither the rotten place you will make it out to be at the boarding-house, nor is it quite the paradise your friends at home will parading from your letters."

"Remember that Argentines in Argentina are not foreigners. 'You' are the foreigner. If you feel tempted to laugh at some apparent peculiarity of manner or dress, don't. These people are considerate enough to hide their amusement when 'you' walk about the streets with a straw hat in the middle of winter."

"If you have come out with the idea that you know all there is to know, and that there is nothing to learn out here, forget it. Buenos Aires was here before you were born—it was not discovered just before you came."

"Don't bore people with a list of the things you can do in London which you can't do here. Everyone knows them already. Besides if your letters home are truthful your people will soon be marvelling at the things you can do here which you never did at home."

"Don't take it to heart if the man you were introduced to the day before, cuts you in the street. He didn't see you. He's shortsighted. It's the constant glare of sunlight. Many Englishmen go almost stone-blind and are only just able to make out their friends provided they are displaying a large expanse of dress shirt front. Some get so bad they even have to "touch" you before they can recognise you."

Lastly, "Don't play the lottery." Those tales you hear of Englishmen

DESEADO ATTACKED

REPORTED INCIDENT OFF BREST

Madrid, Sept. 9.

It is reported from Coruña that the British steamer Deseado arrived there yesterday from Liverpool with five million pesetas in gold for the Bank of Spain.

The captain stated that when off Brest he was chased by a German submarine, which fired two torpedoes but missed. The Deseado escaped by steaming at full speed.

The steamer having landed her cargo for Spain, proceeded on her voyage to Buenos Aires.

BAIT THAT FAILED

SUBMARINE ATTEMPTS TO TRAP P.S.N.C. ORIANA

A Madrid cablegram, published in yesterday's native Press, states that the British steamer Oriana which sailed from Coruña for South America put back again, having received warning that a German submarine was lying in waiting for her off Cape Finisterre.

The crew of the Oriana state that when off the French coast they saw a boat with about twenty men in it who had belonged to a British steamer which had been sunk. The Oriana was going to their assistance when the presence of a submarine was observed, and it was clear that the Germans were using the boatload of shipwrecked sailors as a lure to attract other British vessels.

TRAPS FOR SUBMARINES

A LOCAL CLAIM.

With reference to an article which appeared in the "Standard" on Sept. 9, in which details were given of a trap for submarines, invented by Mr. Jesse W. Reno, of New York, there appears substantial evidence that the idea was originally propounded in Buenos Aires last February.

The main idea of Mr. Reno's invention is that of fouling the propellers of submarines by ropes attached to an iron ring which is buoyed to the right depth for the submarine to strike it. When contact is made with the ring, the ropes become entangled with the propellers and effectually stop the progress of the ship. At the same time, the fact that the submarine is caught and is helpless is signalled to patrolling vessels by means of a flare at night and a smoke signal by day, the signals automatically acting a minute after the submarine has driven her nose into the ring.

Mr. H. B. Greenwood, who called at THE HERALD office yesterday, showed a representative of this paper a sketch of an idea which was laid before the British officials on February 18 last. In all essentials this idea is exactly the same as that of the device invented by Mr. Reno, or rather the latter's idea is Mr. Greenwood's idea. Under Mr. Greenwood's plan a lengthy bar of lead is hung between two buoys, which would not be visible through the periscope of a submarine. The bar is kept floating at the right depth to ensure contact, and from each end of it strong ropes depend. Such contrivances can be spread like mines over any area of sea in which submarines are expected. When the submarine strikes the bar, the latter bends and takes the shape of a hairpin, with the ropes brought up and lying alongside the hull until the loose ends engage the propeller and lead to much cursing in the engine room, and rejoicing in the opposing fleet.

Having taken out the "grande" three or four times, can be put down as "cocktails."

Not being a Shipping Co. we have referred our correspondent to the shipping column of our paper from which he will be able to get the addresses of the various lines and submit his ideas in the proper quarter.

Sports and Pastimes

THE TURF

PALERMO

The immense enthusiasm aroused by the Jockey Club Stakes was evidenced at Palermo on Sunday afternoon by the enormous crowd which gathered together to see this event. Once again disappointment was in store, and the weather was to blame for a further postponement of this event, as was the case last Sunday.

It was indeed an unfortunate day from start to finish. Everything went wrong, or rather seemed to go wrong. From a dull start (dull and threatening so far as the weather was concerned), the day developed into the same from a point of view of members of the talent. After the first race there was a general slump, and not a single favourite was in evidence.

The meeting was full of incident and had its peculiarities.

It was an exceedingly unlucky day for Ocurrencia, her owner, trainer, and jockey. She was entered for the Premio Etoile, and was not withdrawn from this race as most persons thought, until the very last minute. The reason was because had the weather broken and the Jockey Club stakes been postponed she would have run in the other classic. She hung on to the last second, and was then withdrawn, because it was understood that the big race would be run. Fate and the heavens were against her and the public. The horses had even paraded when down came the rain, deluging the course, and once again the great race was declared off until next Sunday, when nine races will again be in the programme, commencing at 12.30 p.m.

A remark is necessary concerning the classic parade. The daughter of Val D'Or appeared in infinitely better fettle than on the day of the Premio Rivadavia. She was just like her old self, and had none of that listless look she had in the parade for the Rivadavia. We learn on excellent authority that her owner did not wish to run her in that race because it was known she was not quite up to the mark, but he gave in on persuasion. Be this as it may, Ocurrencia was a different filly on Sunday.

Each one of the entrants appeared perfect, and a vast improvement was remarked in Capullo. The betting was interesting, and showed Ocurrencia favourite, with some 16,000 winning, and 3400 place tickets on her. Packoy and Melik had some 8000 and 2000 respectively. Capullo surprised in having 2700 place tickets, and was in this respect second favourite. Picacero registered 4000 odd winning tickets. So much for public opinion. It should, however, be remarked that the boxes closed before all the betting that would have been done, was done.

The Classic Etoile went to Alsacia, who showed her immense superiority over the others. We were not in the very least surprised at Decidida's failure. (She ran last after leading the field.) We have never held an especially high opinion of this filly. Good she undoubtedly is, but from the first we have always regarded La Sonambula as the better of the two, although twice a loser to the Gonzalo filly. We hardly expected, however, the complete failure shown. Torterolo in this race very nearly allowed himself to lose it. Had he not had such a fine mare under him he would never have been able to pull out (when shut in) a short distance from home and win as he did. Uva Negra ran a fine race, and scored second place at the expense of the excellent Chaica. Passimal was fourth. The first race was a complete victory for the Stud La Posta. Tareta and La Delfina ran first and second, with the surprise packet Riparia, coming in third. This "justa" win of the first two allowed Querida II., running fourth, to pay place money to the tune of $7.45.

With the running of the second event the "talent" commenced a real warm and stormy day. Huarmi, officially was beaten a head by Marie Leczinska. The verdict was an exceedingly doubtful one. La Almendra ran third. This was her first time out, and although well away, she ran creditably. Mansilla's victory was not a surprising one in the Premio Juvencia, no more was the running of the red-hot favourite Procopio. This latter is a big black beast, shockingly groggy in the near fore leg, and was not in condition. The leg trouble was most pronounced, but it may not prevent him winning races, but he will always be an uncertain runner on account of it.

The fourth event saw Beethoven win by a neck from Guandacol, with Persil, the favourite, a head behind. The public suffered cruel luck. Persil would have won had not Lanatti on Beethoven bored him up against the rails a distance from home. Beethoven was disqualified, and the race awarded to Guandacol. Lanatti was suspended, and was severely dealt with, but no more seriously than he deserved. His riding was atrocious, and although Beethoven is supposed to be an awkward customer, Lanatti is or ought to be a good enough jockey to keep him straight. In suspending him the Stewards were no doubt influenced by his riding of Siete y Media on July 15, when he interfered with the others and was disqualified for second place. It was not as though Lanatti is an incapable rider like Cichetti, and the Stewards treated Lanatti as they treated Blanco for a similar offence some time ago.

The storm broke after the running of the Premio Etoile, and there was as a result another upset in the next race.

Lovelace once more "put it across" the favourites Full Hand and Valenton, and got home half a neck in front of Bizet, who ran a strong race. Nitrato came third.

The long-suffering public had another piece of shocking luck in the seventh event. Cichetti, the rider of Campesino, the favourite, actually fell off his horse at the start. True Campesino stumbled, but it was a shocking exhibition for such a course as Palermo. The public, however, took it in very good part, considering they lost some 42,000 dollars by the mistake. Evoé evinced a most remarkable superiority over the others, and one of which we did not believe him capable. Not only this, his time of 2.5 3/5 with the going as it was was as remarkable as his 3 lengths win from Gladiador. La Commune, for some quite "unearthly" reason, ran like a pig, and never at any stage of the journey did Quinteros attempt to take advantage of his light weight.

The afternoon ended with Bolin running away with the last event, and putting the hat upon a disastrous day's racing from the public point of view.

The feature of the meeting apart from the above incidents, was the majority of fine finishes, and this redeemed the afternoon somewhat. In general, however, it was a thoroughly disappointing day.

ROSARIO

The feature of the races at the Hipodrome Independencia, Rosario, on Sunday, was the inclusion in the programme of the Jockey Club Stakes.

Only four horses presented themselves, and the race as expected, was won by Mi Nene. The remarkable thing concerning the event, however, was the ease with which she won, and the fact that she registered the very remarkable time of 2.5 1/5 for the 2000 metres, which we have been informed, but have been unable to confirm, is a record for the race at Rosario. She beat Lord Bramble in a hack canter by four lengths. The remaining items all drew attention, and entries were on the large side.

The attendance was naturally on the large side, and the racing itself created much enthusiasm, and was incidentally in favour of the talent.

PREMIO BANTAM, 1000 metres.—1. Helix; 2. Juncal II.; 3. Gala Day. Also ran: Ganadero, Monona, Lucila II., Silvano II., Jellicoe, Paraguay, and Motherless. Won by two lengths. Time 1.2. The winner paid $7.40 and $2.65; 2nd, $2.95; 3rd, $2.55.

RESULTS.

PREMIO PALERMO, 1400 metres.—1. Cocainera; 2. Ormilla; 3. Topacio II. Also ran: Don Gabiño (4), Lugones, Ambicioso, Colla, Yankee II., Mamoré, and Arequipa. Won by a head. Time 1.26 4/5. The winner paid $4.20 and $2.70; 2nd, $3.30; 3rd, $2.90.

PREMIO IGUAZU, 1400 metres.—1. Nenito; 2. Blondin; 3. Hodas. Also ran: Alcazar, Don Clorindo, Profana, and Rosa. Won by three-quarters of a length. Time 1.28 1/5. The winner paid $3.50 and $3.15; 2nd, $6.95.

PREMIO AQUARONTE, 1600 metres.—1. Duna; 2. Söpeton; 3. Toupet. Also ran: Frezre, Gallana and Gallardia. Won by three lengths. Time 1.40 4/5. The winner paid $5.20 and $3.45; 2nd, $6.75.

PREMIO JOCKEY CLUB, 2000 metres.—1. Mi Nene; 2. Lord Bramble; 3. Idolatria; 4. The Libel. Won by four lengths. Time 2.5 1/5. The winner paid $2.95.

PREMIO LYBA, 1600 metres.—1. Audax; 2. Socarrona; 3. Industrial; 4. Formosa. Also ran: Facundo IV., Marobe, Narvaez, Borrachin. Won by a neck. Time 1.40. The winner paid $3.65 and $2.85; 2nd, $17.70.

PREMIO MARCELLUS, 2000 metres.—1. Sinai II.; 2. Cleipan; 3. La Bulliciosa; 4. Sunchales. Also ran: Opulento II., Button Hole, Royal Nose, Macabeo, Gigantea. Won by half a neck. Time 2.7 1/2. The winner paid $10.25 and $4.55; 2nd, $3.45.

LA PLATA

Racing at La Plata on Sunday was somewhat remarkable. In the first place in some races a complete upset on previous running form was noticeable, and in the second the races between Indecisa and Arma and Liberty and Sibarita respectively were amongst the most exciting events seen at La Plata for a long time. Both their races resulted in dead heats, after most desperate finishes. The former pair ran off their race, and Arma won comfortably by half a length in 1.24 1/5 and paid $3.50. The latter pair divided. Big dividends were the order of the day, Tremus paying the largest of these by returning $54.90. The average per winner works out at $18.50, which indicates the nature of the racing, especially if the two dead heats (which are included) are considered. The results were as follows:

PREMIO VERDAD, 1200 metres.—1. Quiroguita 54, G. Quinteros; 2. Marguerite 55; 3. Capitán Piazza 57. Also ran: 8 de Diciembre, Rasqueta, C. de Foudre, Ogham, Irú, Caraway, Cumbey, Festolin, Poco á Poco, Apiz (4), Agorera.

Dividends: $23.30 and $8.90; 2nd, $15.90; 3rd, $8.40.

Won by various lengths; a neck. Time: 1.14 4/5.

PREMIO VARSOVIA, 1400 metres.—1. Genial, C. Capra; 2. Floweret 50; 3. Macauley 49.

Also ran: Glou Glou (4), Fable, Copeta, Edgardo, Belvedere, Guarapó, Paunero, Variación, Misionero, Hamburgo, Pichuleta, Mari Peta, Heresy, Pitina II., Loterie.

Dividends: $29.30 and $8.20; 2nd, $8.30; 3rd, $8.80.

Won by half a neck; 1 1/2 lengths. Time: 1.28 2/5.

PREMIO VERDI, 1300 metres.—Dead heat between Indecisa, 51, J. Arlandini; and Arma 54, M. de Lara; 3. Primauté 54.

Also ran: Polo Sud, Real Envido, Chillar (4), Posen, Ongara, V. Flow-er, Galleguita.

Dividends: Indecisa $27.10 and $11.10 place; Arma $5.50 and $5.10; 3rd, $3.50.

Time: 1.24 2/5.

FOOTBALL

INTERNATIONAL.

URUGUAYANS (2) v. ARGENTINOS (0.)

Before an immense crowd the international match between Uruguay and Argentina for the Newton Cup took place on Sunday afternoon. Rain fell heavily, much to the discomfort of the spectators. The match resulted in a win for the Uruguayans by 2 goals to nil. After the match a banquet was celebrated, and the cordial relations existing between the two Republics was discoursed upon.

FIRST DIVISION CHAMPIONSHIP.

	P.	W.	L.	D.	Pts.
San Isidro	16	16	—	—	32
River Plate	15	12	1	2	26
E. de La Plata	18	11	3	4	26
Platense	19	11	4	4	26
Independiente	19	10	5	4	24
Racing	12	11	—	1	23
Porteño	14	9	3	2	20
Estudiantes	19	9	8	2	20
F. C. Oeste	17	5	4	8	18
Banfield	19	8	9	2	18
Hispano-Argentino	20	7	9	4	18
Argentino de Quilmes	14	8	6	—	16
San L. de Almagro	17	7	8	3	16
Belgrano	21	7	12	2	16
Boca Juniors	17	5	7	5	15
Estudiantil Porteño	18	7	10	1	15
Huracan	13	6	5	2	14
G. y Esgrima	18	5	9	4	14
Tigre	16	4	8	4	12
Kimberley	18	5	11	2	12
Atlanta	19	6	13	—	12
D. de Belgrano	19	4	12	3	11
Quilmes	13	3	6	4	10
Comercio	16	1	12	3	5
Floresta	17	1	13	3	5

SAN ISIDRO (3) v. PORTENO (0).

On the ground of the Gimnasia y Esgrima at Palermo on Sunday, the above teams met for the benefit of the Society for sick children, but owing to the weather conditions the attendance was a poor one. A silver cup and gold medals were presented to the winning team, which turn out to be San Isidro, through the goal-getting of Sayanes, Alzua and Marini. Play was interrupted by the rain, but nevertheless a fast game resulted.

PREMIO VILMUT, 1400 metres.—1. Duquesita 43, D. Garay; 2. Torterola 45; 3. Hormiga Negra II. 51.

Also ran: Gacetilla, Monedita, Farista (4), Alta Mar II., Effusion, Divagadora.

Dividends: Duquesita $12.40 and $4.60; 2nd, $4.60; 3rd, $5.90.

Won by half a length; a length. Time: 1.27 3/5.

PREMIO VIOLA, 2200 metres.—Dead heat between Liberty 57, J. Arismendi and Sibarita 52, A. Lauria.

Also ran: Renta (3), Pedernales II, Sigfrido (4), M. de Oro, and Ica.

Dividends: Liberty $4.10 and $5.10; Sibarita $7.70 and $9.20.

Won by three lengths. Time: 2.22 1/5.

PREMIO VOLNAY, 1400 metres.—1. Diorita 48, J. D. Dufour; 2. Troca Tintas 55; 3. Arrogante 55.

Also ran: Matatias, Sud America, Per Bacco, V. Chief, Marabú, Fine Mouche, Cebada, Ehontée, La Tubau (4).

Dividends: $7.40 and $2.90; 2nd, $5.40; 3rd, $3.30.

Won by two lengths. Time: 1.28.

PREMIO VOLTA, 1500 metres.—1. Tremus 52, R. Haedo; 2. Saltarin 48; 3. Puro 54.

Also ran: Monarch, Guitry, Condarco, Finette, John Wood (4), I. Brava, Homérico.

Dividends: Tremus $54.90 and $6.40; 2nd, $4.70; 3rd, $2.70.

Won by a length; half a length. Time: 1.35.

PREMIO VOLUNTAD, 1600 metres.—1. Camorsito 43; 2. Electro 53; 3. Chambery 45.

Also ran: Neleo (4), Cherobayá, Menianto, Ibicuf, Sagueador.

Dividends: Camorsito $17.40 and $4.40; 2nd, $6.10; 3rd, $4. Time 1.41 1/5.

The teams opposing one another were:—

San Isidro.—C. A. Wilson, J. Iriarte, A. Bruno, J. Rossi, J. Morroni, A. Olivari, E. Fernandez, J. Fernandez, S. Sayanes, M. Marini and J. Alzua.

Porteno.—O. Zapiola, J. Girado, R. Gonzalez Escarrrd, J. Ayaya, J. Vesano, P. Moltoni, T. Uslenghi, M. Garat and C. Izaguirre.

Señor B. La Veija acted as referee.

WESTERN RAILWAY (1) v. PLATENSE (1).

After a hard-fought game on the Railway ground at Caballito on Sunday, the above teams drew their match with the score of one all, obtained by Angeletti for the railway men in the first half, and by Berti from a free kick in the second half for the visitors.

The game was a very good one of a ding dong nature, and play throughout was very level. The shooting, however, was not good.

The following represented their clubs:—

F.C. Oeste.—D. Estrachi, A. Pini, J. Saccardo, E. Elordi, R. Caprile, S. Barbera, A. Moggio, J. Pini, E. Moggio, N. Angeletti, F. Crespo.

Platense.—R. Perez, R. Ansaldo, E. Berti, D. Santangelo, J. Zatcheo, A. Felisaro, N. Spinelli, J. Colombo, T. Sinigalia, L. Amores, M. Balmaceda.

Referee: L. Gil.

RIVER PLATE (6) v. COMERCIO (0).

The River Plate team on Sunday on their own ground gave a tremendous trouncing to Comercio and showed their superiority by running out winners by six goals to nil.

Señor J. G. Vaccarezza lined up the following teams:—

River Plate.—C. Isola, A. Lanatta, E. Calneggia, H. Simons, A. Sparnochia, A. Peruzzi, H. Rivas, N. Rofrano, A. Ameal, M. Rizzo, R. Fraggia.

Comercio.—Carlés, Paganini, Gallasi, Enriquez, Romero, Mendy, Minia-berry, Bordieu, Dolagaray, Schiaffino, Bravato.

The whole of the first half resulted in the River Plate having all the play, and piling up goal after goal. They scored 5 before the whistle blew, and then eased off, but still added another in the second half. Their play in the first section was all the more creditable, considering that they were playing against a strong wind.

The results of the various Sunday matches were as follows:—

ARGENTINE FOOTBALL ASSOCIATION.

FOR THE NEWTON CUP.

Uruguayans....	2	Argentinos . . .	0
Championship—
F. C. Oeste.....	1	Platense	1
Independiente..	4	E. Porteno	1
Banfield.....	3	Tigre	0
River Plate.....	6	Comercio	0
Estudiantes....	6	Floresta	1
Boca Juniors v. S. L. de Almagro (suspended.)

Friendly—

San Isidro.....	3	Porteño	0
-----------------	---	-------------------	---

Owing to the breakdown in the weather there was no polo played at Hurlingham on Sunday, and furthermore the International hurling match between Argentina and Ireland had to be postponed until Sunday, Sept. 26.

B.A.C.C. ENTERTAINMENT

PROFIT OF $842.

It will no doubt be interesting to Members of the Buenos Aires Cricket Club as well as to all old friends and well-wishers to hear, that as a result of the Concert and Dramatic Performance given last Tuesday, the Club Funds have benefited by the nett amount of $842.85 m/n, which sum has been duly handed over to the Hon. Treasurer by the organisers of the entertainment.

The Committee desire to express their hearty thanks to all the performers as well as the organisers, to whose combined efforts the social and artistic success accomplished is due, and also specially to thank The HERALD and The Standard for kindly publishing the various notices free of charge.

GOLF

ARGENTINE GOLF CLUB.

MONTHLY STROKE COMPETITION.

The monthly stroke competition of the Argentine Golf Club, played at Palermo on Sunday afternoon resulted in a win for Mr. C. G. Dodds, who played the best round of the competition, and returned the best card, in both nett and gross scores. Details of play were as follows:—

	Out	n	Tot.	Hp.	Nt
C. G. Dodds	42	42	84	6	78
F. Madero	50	49	99	20	79
C. Gonzalez Guerrico	47	45	92	12	80
D. E. Cerboni	46	48	94	14	80
F. von Peborgh	49	47	96	16	80
M. Gonzalez Guerrico	44	47	91	10	81
P. Saubaran	48	54	102	20	82
F. Martinez de Hoz	48	46	94	11	83
E. A. Thompson	48	46	94	11	83
R. E. Cranwell	48	51	99	16	83
R. Mendez	50	49	99	16	83
L. F. Sersteven	49	50	99	16	83
Thos. Gregory	48	55	103	20	83
J. T. Galvez	48	46	94	10	84
P. Chapar	53	47	100	16	84
D. King	49	51	100	16	84
A. J. Wilson	46	49	95	10	85
S. Smiles	47	43	90	2	88
H. C. Thompson	52	48	100	12	88
A. Hueyo	53	49	102	14	88
R. M. Mackenzie	52	49	101	12	89
M. F. Gilderdale	52	51	103	14	89
E. Anchorena	56	49	105	16	89

PACIFIC RAILWAY CUP.

Play for the Pacific Railway Cup was indulged in over the Hurlingham Golf Links on Sunday afternoon. The weather interfered with the play, and only 14 cards out of the 25 taken out were returned. Mr. H. A. Cooper was the winner, returning best scores both nett and gross. He finished 4 strokes in front of the second player, Mr. A. C. Luck. The following cards were returned:—

	Gr.	Hp.	Nett.
H. A. Cooper	78	4	74
A. C. Luck	86	8	78
T. B. Birmingham	102	18	84
Dr. R. R. Watts	96	12	84
D. G. Anderson	93	8	85
E. L. Rumboll	95	10	85
B. Gwyn	100	14	86
W. A. Agar	91	5	86
N. W. Jackson	98	10	88
T. S. Boodle	104	14	90
R. W. Denton	105	15	90
D. D'Enger	105	12	93
E. R. Gifford	112	18	94
E. Buckland	111	16	95

SAN ANDRES GOLF CLUB.

PLAY FOR THE SMITH AND LOGAN CUPS.

Play at San Andres on Sunday was confined to the Smith Cup for the Championship of the Club, and to the Logan Cup handicap. Mr. A. Kidd, in returning a card of 159 (79—80) won the former by eight strokes from Mr. C. H. Bartlett, and also was the winner of the Logan Cup, his handicap of four giving him a nett score of 155, three strokes in front of Mr. H. L. Kidd, 172—14—158. Details of the cards are as follows:—

	Out	In	Tot.	Hp.	Nt.
A. Kidd	79	80	159	4	155
H. L. Kidd	91	81	172	14	158
C. H. Bartlett	81	86	167	8	159

LAWN TENNIS

BELGRANO ANNUAL SPRING TOURNAMENT.

On Saturday afternoon on the courts of the Belgrano Athletic Club, the annual open Spring Lawn Tennis Tournament commenced. It is in point of entries the largest tournament held by the Club. Good progress was made on Sunday afternoon, and the storm that broke, just as matters was getting in full swing, entirely put an end to the play at an early hour, so that very few matches were played.

The handicapping has been carefully done, and the poorer players have received plenty of encouragement. The spectators were very disappointed at the behaviour of the weather, which robbed them of the sight of one or two interesting matches which were drawn for decision on Sunday afternoon. The following are the results of play up-to-date:—

Ladies' Singles.

Miss Carmen Sastre beat Miss Ernestina Lanusse 6-0, 9-7.

Miss Sara Lanusse beat Miss Maria Teresa Obarrio 6-1, 2-6, 9-7.

Gentlemen's Singles Scratch.

A. B. Cullerne beat S. S. Mackinnon 6-4, 2-6, 6-1.

Gentlemen's Singles Class "A."

H. F. Prescott beat L. Alden Smith 6-4, 7-5.

Hutton beat J. M. O'Farrell 6-3, 6-3.

Gentlemen's Singles Class "B."

Boam beat Milberg 6-4, 4-6, 6-1.

Hansard beat Prest 9-7, 6-0.

Durañona beat McHardy 6-2, 6-1.

McKechnie beat A. Etchepareborda 6-2, 6-1.

Sansot beat P. N. Etchepareborda 6-1, 8-6.

Thomson beat Yorston 6-0, 6-0.

Loheed beat Darch 6-3, 4-6, 6-3.

Roberts beat Griffin 6-3, 6-2.

Gentlemen's Doubles Handicap.

Hansard and Isaacs beat Cullerne and Thomson 6-5, 3-6, 6-2.

Watson and Manley beat McHardy and Bruce 3-6, 6-2, 6-2.

Mixed Doubles.

Miss Capdepon and A. H. Durañona beat Miss M. Obarrio and M. A. Goni 4-6, 6-4, 6-2.

Miss Guerrico and A. Pero beat Miss Morton and Mackern 6-3, 6-3.

SAN ISIDRO L.T.C.

OPEN SPRING TOURNAMENT.

The weather has already done much to interfere with the progress of play in the above tournament, with the result that since the opening day but little progress has been made. The entries for the Club Championship have not yet been published. There was practically no play on Sunday. Results to date are as follows:—

H. K. Loos	86	89	175	16	159
H. F. Bulman	90	94	184	24	160
H. K. James	85	85	170	8	162
R. M. McCrum	91	88	179	16	163
G. A. Brougham	99	105	204	40	164
E. Drysdale	89	84	173	8	165
J. R. Stathers	103	95	198	32	166
H. Dornig	87	89	176	10	166
A. F. Hubbard	101	98	199	32	167
H. McMaster	90	93	183	16	167
F. J. Giuste	92	96	188	20	168
J. A. Brown	83	86	169	ser.	169
C. G. Palmer	85	97	182	12	170
C. Carlisle	100	99	199	28	171
E. W. Jacobs	105	106	211	28	183
W. MacKern	102	110	212	28	184

Mixed Doubles.

Miss M. Obarrio and M. A. Goni beat Miss B. Anderson and D. de Urquiza, 6-0, 3-6, 6-4.

Miss J. Palacios and O. Milburg beat Miss N. Viola and R. Maschwitz, 6-2, 7-5.

Gents' Singles A.

H. Manley beat D. G. Davidson, 5-7, 6-1, 6-3.

L. Hortel beat B. D. Crawley, 1-6, 9-7, 6-2.

P. Gallishaw beat O. G. Babington, 6-1, 6-4.

W. Russell beat J. Watson, 2-6, 6-3, 6-1.

E. S. J. Parry beat E. R. Guppy, 7-5, 6-4.

Gents' Singles B.

E. B. Sansot beat R. Romero, 6-7, 6-1.

S. Hogg beat F. Hughes, 3-6, 6-3, 7-5.

W. B. Spufford beat E. W. Mills, 7-5, 6-1.

A. Podesta beat J. J. Porreiro, 6-2, 6-1.

C. A. Barriero beat H. G. Hughes, 6-4, 4-6, 6-4.

A. Anderson beat J. Morgan, 7-5, 6-0.

Gents' Doubles.

Dodds and Colvell Jones beat R. Romero and R. Maschwitz, 6-1, 7-5.

Bosch and Mourgher beat Spefford and Edmonds, 6-2, 7-5.

Ahumada and Sansot beat Goni and Podesta, 6-1, 6-0.

QUILMES L.T.C.

SPRING TOURNAMENT.

A postponement of all games in the Quilmes Lawn Tennis Tournament was brought about by the weather. No matches were played to a finish on Sunday afternoon. Play will continue next week, Sept. 19.

F.C.P. ATHLETIC CLUB

MATCH, DINNER AND INFORMAL CONCERT.

The Pacific Railway Athletic Club had a field day on Sept. 11, comprising a football match, Traction v. the Other Departments, at Saenz Peña. Notwithstanding the lamentations of the Secretary as to the difficulty of getting teams together, it is understood that a very good game resulted. It ended in a victory for Traction by 2 goals to nil, the first being scored by Mr. Davies, and the second by Mr. Salvarezza by a smart run up the field. In the second part of the exercises of the day, proceedings were equally pleasant, but strenuous.

A "banquet" at the Alexandra Tea Rooms was pronounced to be a fitting termination, and the manner of its disappearance was a tribute to its excellence.

The remainder of the evening was devoted to mirth and harmony in the form of singing, recitations and some dancing in which members gravely revolved in the mazy waltz. After eleven the symposium was still being kept up, and the evening finished as agreeably as it began.

Among those who were present were Messrs. S. E. Sherrard, T. D. Taylor, A. N. Kerry, G. Davies, J. Moffatt, T. G. Taylor, C. Prosser, W. G. Kennedy, C. Coleman, J. MacDuff, P. Bertolini, A. Porretti, C. Piccioli, N. K. Carrott, G. Howe, J. J. McClew, P. Thompson, J. Bird, J. McGough, H. Cowell, J. J. Anderson, and several others.

FERNET-BRANCA

Tonic, bitter, appetizer and digestive

HOFER & Co., B. Aires.—Sole Agents

FALKLAND ISLANDS NEWS

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT].

Port Stanley, Aug. 18.

(Note: The following correspondence only appears on the same date as that for August 29, owing to it having been delayed by the Censorship at the Falklands.—Ed. THE HERALD).

Shipping and Port.

The R.M. Oronsa arrived from P. Arenas and left on July 23. Among passengers by her there came Messrs. W. Berntsen, Ben. Davis, Darwin Watson, from Patagonia. Among 15 passengers that left Stanley by her were Mr. Perry (for Buenos Aires Hospital) accompanied by his sister Mrs. W. McDade, Mr. and Mrs. Howatt and child, Messrs. Ralph and Roger Smith, Messrs. George and John Dean.

The local s.s. Falkland left for outstations on July 23. Among the 17 passengers by her went Mr. and Mrs. Millar, Mr. Cyril William, for Hill Cove; Messrs. Michal, Conrad Robson and Buckworth for Fox Bay; Messrs. F. and A. Simpson, H. Clarke, G. Perrin, J. Alazia, F. Rawsen, H. Harris, R. Hutchings, S. Barnes, wife and 3 children.

The Falkland returned to Stanley on August 2; by her came Messrs. J. Tanner and J. Biggs.

Messrs. R. P. Evans and H. Harding were put across the F. Sound and rode to Stanley, as did also Mr. J. Smith from Great Island.

S.s. Whalecatcher (from New Island, W.F.) came to Stanley on Aug. 4 bringing a man to Stanley Hospital.

The cargo (linseed) of the schooner "Pax" was discharged.

The Hulk "J. P. Smith" overlaid had to be beached, pumped out, and discharged.

The R.M.P.S.N.C. "Orissa" out-bound arrived on August 7. Passengers were Headmaster and Headmistress for the Government Schools.

Passengers that left by the "Orissa" for Punta Arenas were Miss Alazia, Mr. W. Berntsen, and Mr. B. Davis.

The steamer was so full that Mrs. W. Luxton, Miss J. M. L. Dean, Mr. R. P. Evans, and Mr. W. Luxton could not get passages.

Caruso, the Italian Tenor, at Stanley.

Passing by on the Orissa the Italian Operatic Company held an afternoon concert in the Church Hall.

Though mail day and all Stanley and his wife keen on getting their correspondence and newspapers, also a bad day as regards weather, more than expected attended the concert, the proceeds of which were to be devoted to the Italian Red Cross Society. The effort was much appreciated.

H.E. Governor Young was present, and made a brief but sympathetic speech. The National Anthems of the Allied Nations (English, French, Belgian, Italian and Russian) were sung enthusiastically.

H.M.S. Glasgow's visit to the Falklands.

Having straightened and preened somewhat her ruffled plumage after flying hundreds of thousands of miles back and forth hunting and destroying German shipping, the H.M.S. Glasgow allowed her officers and men during the ship's last visit a little relaxation by way of a Ball in the Stanley Church Hall.

Twenty years or so ago, the F. J. Magazine printed an effusion by a local embryo poet, viz. A. Parody, on Longfellow's Hiawatha, in which it appeared that the Stanley girls manifested an overweening partiality for uniformed Naval visitors in preference to their local swains, who had perforce to take a back seat.

The same obsession holds good at the present day, accentuated by the Naval heroism and deeds of derring do displayed on the spot.

At the Ball, Captain Luce was present, also Miss Young (sister of H.E. the Governor). H.E. was not present, (in deference to Royal Court restrictions in this time of stress and mourning). The Ball room was crowded, but there was no hitch or break but which could easily be repaired by a stitch or two, or a few pins. "One of the best dances we've had," was the general verdict.

A return dance to officers and men was given shortly afterwards by their guests at the previous Ball. It was not so crowded, and those who hadn't had their fill of dancing on the previous occasions had an opportunity of better satiating their terpsichorean proclivities. All went well until the wee sma'ours of next morning.

As Stanley, (with the visitors from the camps) and others was so full-up, and boarding accommodation scarce, Captain Luce before his men were given permission to remain ashore during the night, required them to show a written request from Host or Hostess to that effect.

During the Sunday afternoons a string of boats was towed off to H.M.S. Glasgow loaded with the Stanley small-fry to explore the ship in which they were so interested. The Dresden's Casabianca "pig" which with a bowline was lassoed and rescued from a watery grave by one of the Glasgow's men excited much interest.

The Dresden's cat-o-nine-tails provoked many comments and surmises from the awed and imaginative children.

Several engagements matrimonial with Stanley girls have been the result of the Glasgow's visits.

All the ship's company were vastly interested when shortly before the vessel's departure, John Robinson Farrow, P.O. of the "Glasgow," secured in matrimony the hand and heart of Mrs. Hastings, of Stanley.

Some of Mr. Farrow's shipmates desired to vent their enthusiasm in the novel exertion of man-hauling the blushing bride to the ceremony (o'er our muddy roads) seated on a gun carriage, (the only carriages there are in Stanley). But the modesty of the bride was such, that she insisted on having a 'quiet' wedding in the private house of Mrs. Edward Biggs; where after the ceremony 47 guests sat down to the Wedding Feast, accompanied by the usual healths, toasts and speeches; and where other callers showered their congratulations.

The ceremony was solemnized by the Rev. M. D. Hobley. Bride and Bridesmaid (Miss Winnie Biggs), were attired in Navy-blue. Mr. Alick Steel gave the Bride away.

Captain Luce,—who made the couple a handsome present,—considerately gave the Bridegroom permission to remain ashore until the ship was ready to leave Stanley.

A picked boats crew of the "Glasgow's" were matched against a picked crew of Stanleyites.

The conditions were, that both the boats, were to be those of H.M.S. Glasgow, and her spoon-oars to be used. The course from Hamblin Point (in the outer Harbour) to the Town Jetty (in the inner Harbour). The weather all the morning was bad but heavy rain and sleet put down sea swell. At 2.30 p.m. fog and mist lifted, and the boats were started. The boat manned by Stanley men was first through the narrows, and kept ahead. They threw up their oars at the town jetty, one minute and thirty seconds before the Glasgow boats' crew reached the goal. The Glasgow crew were: Coxswain, Berks; stroke, J. Dayborn, T. Ellery, W. Hanks, G. Walls, H. Sherwood. The Stanley crew were: George Kelway (junior), coxswain; stroke, R. Bailey, H. Ratcliffe, Fullendorf, W. Halliday, and F. Kiddle.

A concert by H.M.S. Glasgow was given one evening in the Church Hall, with a view to inaugurating a fund to erect a memorial to the Falkland Island action, and to those who lost their lives there. The room was crowded, and each item fully appreciated. Several encores were called for. Captain Luce and Miss Young were present. The church hall proved to be too small to comfortably seat all that came.

Some murmuring is heard as to the large Assembly Room at the new Town Hall apparently being taboo to all but important civic functions which occur but very rarely.

Church of England.

The time of the services was altered during the stay of H.M.S. Glasgow to suit their attendance. The first verse of the National Anthem is sung at the close of all church services.

The whole of the cathedral services, all Protestant weddings, funerals, baptisms, and choir practices devolve upon the Rev. M. D. Hobley, who also runs the Church Magazine. The proficiency of the choir testifies, as do other things, that though he has many irons in the fire, he keeps them all glowing. It is on the cards that after all said and done as regards celibacy of the clergy here, we may have one married clergyman stationed in the Falklands. The Rev. Mr. Smith, who four years or so ago was much appreciated as C. E. Chaplain in the camp of S. E. Patagonia, will probably come here. He married Miss Hobbs, of Punta Arenas.

The Non-Conformist Church.

Sunday Schools and children's Band of Hope meetings have been kept going by Miss Ratcliffe and her helpers during the lack of a pastor. But the church has had a vacant pulpit.

St. Mary's R.C.

Their "business as usual" largely means help to the necessitous whomsoever they may be. They have been indefatigable in raising relief funds. On July 31, the proceeds of their cinema, £8 15s., were devoted to the Serbian Red Cross Society.

House burned down at Fitzroy Harbour, E.F.

On July 27 a house was burned down at Fitzroy North. The house itself was the property of the F. I. Company, built on their freehold land 46 years or so ago, but it was leased for ten years to the late Mr. John Robson, when he also leased from the Government the surrounding land for a sheep farm. Mrs. J. Robson was in Stanley at the time of the fire, having come to the funeral of her mother, Mrs. G. P. Smith. The inmates were seven, viz., the two Misses Robson, their brother Roy, three younger children, and a workman Guitan, all of whom escaped through door or window without injury. They made their way to the Bachelor establishment of Mr. Grant at Bluff Cove, some few miles distant.

The soot at the top of the chimney was on fire when the inmates retired to bed, but they apprehended no danger from it. Between 11 and 12 p.m., however, they awoke to find the house full of smoke, and the woodwork round the fireplace ablaze. Their efforts were ineffectual to save the (wooden) house, or furniture, save two boxes. Within an hour it was a heap of ashes. Though midwinter, fortunately the weather was not very severe just then.

Wedding at North Arm, East Falklands.

On June 30, Miss Isabella Watson, daughter of Mr. W. Watson, of Mofat Harbour, to Mr. W. J. Bowles (of Darwin). The ceremony was solemnized by the Rev. M. D. Hobley, who had to ride 70 odd miles in severe weather to get there. The bride was given away by her father. Mr. G. Bowles was groomsmen. The bride was dressed in white silk, with the usual orange blossoms, bouquet, etc. The bridesmaid, Miss Mary Watson, wore a blue crepe de chine dress, and white silk hat.

Nearly a hundred guests had gathered. The reception, toasts, and speeches, etc., were highly appreciated. The bagpipes and feet of the dancers kept high revel until well into the next morning. The evening of August 1 witnessed a renewal of the festivities. Wedding presents were numerous.

A Double Wedding.

A double wedding was solemnized in Stanley, August 4, when two sisters at the cathedral, together took their vows to love, honour, and obey. Miss Lilly Peck, to Mr. Albert Henrickson, and Miss Mary Peck, to Mr. David Stewart. The brides were daughters of Mr. John Peck. The service was conducted by the Rev. M. D. Hobley. A large number of friends and spectators gathered. Both brides were dressed in white, the bridesmaids, Miss Manry Henrickson and Miss Mary Peck were robed in pale blue costumes.

Obituary.

In Stanley, after but a few days' illness, died from influenza, on August 2, Sarah White, daughter of the late Mr. John White, and Mrs. White. Had she lived but two more days she would have been 14 years of age. The funeral took place on August 5. The funeral service was conducted at her mother's house by the Rev. M. D. Hobley, when her favourite hymns were sung by those assembled. She was then carried direct to Stanley cemetery, followed by many friends, relatives and schoolmates.

At Bonner's San Carlos (South) died suddenly on August 3, George Robson, eldest son of the late Mr. J. Robson, and Mrs. Robson, of Fitzroy (North). Though for years suffering from asthma, it is generally thought that drinking water from a galvanised iron tank where the connections had been made tight with white lead caused his death. He was buried at San Carlos.

At Stanley on August 16, died Mr. Lars Berntsen, after ten months' illness. Aged 69. The funeral, accompanied by members of the Stanley Benefit Club, and many relatives and friends, took place at the Cathedral on August 20.

Birth. At Stanley, July 24. Mrs. Jense Pederson, a daughter.

Engagement announced. Miss Beatrice Kirwan, to Mr. J. G. Royle.

The Censor not having returned the above F. I. News until after the steamer had left accounts for its not having been posted on August 18.

A Relapse into Winter.

Port Stanley, Aug. 29.

Winter returned on August 15 and following days, just as we were hugging ourselves that we had seen the last of it. Garden shrub buds were turning into leaf, the wild birds were mating, cows and sheep calving or lambing, when a tremendous gale set in from W. and N.W., then veered to S.West. The mercury in the aneroid jumped down to 20 degrees, the landlocked harbour became feather-white, the local steamer couldn't venture out. The cutter Indiana was driven ashore at Bluff Cove. In Stanley, a tall chimney at the Hon. Vere Packe's fell crashing through the large greenhouse, causing wholesale destruction. The chimney at Mr. Summer's bakery came down by the run, as did also that of Mr. Wang, that of Mr. Pearce, and many other chimneys suffered in a minor degree. At the wireless station, the aerials (200 feet high) descended and made "wire entanglements," while the expansion-hoops went off on a bowling expedition. Though Sunday, only those living within a few steps of the church dare venture to it. At the evening service in the Cathedral, the Rev. Hobley, the sexton, organist, and organ-blower faced the music, but only a congregation of three, viz., the two gentlemen whose duty it is to take round the offertory plates, and one to collect from; thus reminding us of the story of shipwrecked sailors on a desolate island, who in their extremity urged one another to offer up a prayer, but as neither of them could remember a prayer, one of them suggested that they could at least "take up a collection." The offertory—like the mercury in the barometer in Stanley—went down to the lowest on record.

Annual Return of Sheep Stock.

As these returns were made up in July (before lambing), the increase for 1915 is not included. The East Falklands have 15 sheep-runs, having a total of 403,399 sheep. West Falklands, 8 sheep-runs, having 210,460 sheep. Adjacent islands, 15 sheep-runs, having 87,409 sheep. Total: 701,268 sheep. In the year 1913 the total was 702,859. In the year 1914 the total was 698,072.

The whole area of the Falklands (very much of which is now freehold) supports 38 large and small sheep-runs. The largest having 188,934 sheep, the smallest 377 sheep.

Two meat-canning factories, export live sheep to Argentina, and supplies of mutton to inhabitants and shipping keep down overstocking. This year's report shows the total to be 1,591 less than the year 1913; and also 3,196 more than that of last year, 1914.

As nearly all sheep stations have their clipping sheds near the sea, draught oxen or draught horses are seldom used. Cattle and horses are comparatively few.

There are no meat freezing factories. Sheep stock on the farms are as follows. F. I. Comp. at Darwin Harbour, Walker Creek and North Arm (East Falklands) 188,934. Dean and Co., Port Stephens and Port Edgar (W.F.) 40,671. J. L. Waldron and Co., Port Howard, W.F., 37,877. Holmstead and Blake, Hill Cove, W.F., 31,667. Greenshields, Douglas Station E.F., 31,261. Vere Packe, Fitzroy and Port Louis, E.F., 31,165. Dean and Anson, Chartres, W.F., 30,798. G. Bonner, San Carlos South, E.F., 29,113. J. J. Felton, Feal Inlet, E.F., 28,372. W. K. Cameron, San Carlos North, E.F., 27,139. Packe Brothers and Co., Dunnose Head, Fox Bay, and Port Howard, W.F., 23,114. J. H. Dean, Pebble Island, and Golden Island, W.F., 22,704. Baillon and Stickney, Fox Bay, W.F., 17,100. A. M. Pitaluga, Salvadore Harbour, E.F., 17,022. Bertrand and Felton, Roy Cove, W.F., 16,351. Mrs. Smith and Sons, Berkley Sound, E.F., 16,010. Mrs. T. Robson, Port Louis, E.F., 15,060. Mrs. C. H. Williams, Weddel Island, W.F. (return not sent) previous year was 14,050. Stickney Brothers, Spring Point, W.F., 12,702. H. J. Pitaluga, Rincon Grande, E.F., 9,772. W. D. Benney, Saunders Island, W.F., 8,635. Speedwell Islands Co., Speedwell, Barren, and George Islands, E.F., 7,923. H. and G. Cobb, Lively Island, E.F., 8,195. J. Smith, Great Island, Ruggles, and Swan Islands (F.I. Sound) 5,885. Mrs. Hansen, Carass, and Jason Islands, W.F., 4,182. Morrison and Grant, Bluff Cove, E.F., 3,824. H. Waldron, Beaver Island, W.F., 3,062. G. H. Dean, Keppel Island, W.F., 2,816. A. E. Felton, Westpoint Island, W.F., (return not sent) previous return 2,598. A. F. Cobb, Bleaker Island, F. Sound, 3,619. Mrs. M. Robson, Fitzroy North, E.F., 2,000. Mrs. Scott, New Island, W.F., 2,011. C. Bender, Moody Valley, E.F., 1,445. F. Browning, Mullet Creek, E.F., 1,375. J. B. Luchtenborg, Sea Lion Islands, W.F., (return not sent) previous year 712. C. C. Wessel, Pass Islands, W.F., 629. J. Smith, Cape Pembroke Peninsula, E.F., 407. Mrs. Mathews, Swan Island, Falkland Sound, 377.

A Flutter in the Falkland Dovecotes.

The editor of the F. I. Magazine of August says:—"We have received upon the appalling article that recently appeared in the 'Daily Express' signed by 'A Lonely White Man,' a number of letters and articles; but they are rather too much of the blood-thirsty type for insertion in our paper. We have, however, chosen the mildest, which we print on another page," and forthwith prints that signed by "A Ruffled Kelper," who writes: "It is absolutely infamous for any man who has been in these islands so long, with such hospitality which he has no doubt had accorded him, to write such a foolish, untrue story of our home, especially to the Press, where it is read all over the globe."

The Ruffled Kelper (Falklanders are called Kelpers) says:—"The Falkland Islands are not so well known as they deserve to be; indeed, when I visited London—that gay city—I had a constant longing to get to my home in the Falklands again."

I could cite very many who have expressed and acted upon that same nostalgia (including myself) and who are ready to fight for the Falklands if necessary to the last ditch, for "Brothers we are of one dear mother born,

One love is ours, one tongue, and one desire,
And shall we from her bosom warm be rent?"

In the lamentations of the Jeremiah who signed himself "A Lonely White Man," he wrote that "he would very much like to see civilised white men again." Also: "Nothing but a keen duty to my King would keep me in this afterthought of a country." We all hope that his "keen duty to my King" has induced him to evolve an "afterthought" himself, viz., to "take up the white man's burden," go to the front and fight against Kultur, cruelty and frightfulness.

The Ruffled Kelper adds that "he deems that 'Lonely white man's duty to his King' is to write the truth about the Falklands, which, if he did would bring us to the notice of the outside world, thereby helping us to become more popular and known."

The methods and temperament of the Falkland people are most salubrious for reducing swelled-heads and feet-too-big-for-their-boots of some who come here expecting to swank, then leave us to tell the world that we are "uncivilised." Those whom we should like to keep here almost invariably leave the islands with regret, and those who can do so return here.

The Farthest South Church.

The same Magazine (August, 1915) has on its frontispiece a photograph of what it states to be "The farthest South Church in the World," viz. that at South Georgia (a dependence of the Falklands). This statement is hardly correct. While, some 13 years ago, on a visit to old friends at Ushuaia, Tierra del Fuego, I was in a Roman Catholic church at the Prefecture (Argentine) there; also in the S.A.M. Society's Protestant church a few miles South of it; 35 minutes further South, each of them, than the church at South Georgia. From Ushuaia I went (by cutter boat), visited and spent a few months at Tekeenier (further South), and on Hoste Island where there was a good-sized wood and-iron church, having a good congregation of Indians. That church building was soon after removed still farther South, viz., to Douglas River (on Navarin Island). At it the Rev. Mr. Williams has ministered for several years, and it was recently visited by Archdeacon Rivetts. It must be nearly one degree farther South than the church at King Edward's Cove, South Georgia, seeing that King Edward's Cove is in Lat. 54 deg. 15 min. South, Long. 36 deg. 27 min. West; whereas the churches at Ushuaia are in Lat. 54 deg. 53 min. South, Long. 68 deg. 12 min. West.

At the little S.A.M.S. church at Ushuaia, in 1872 (that is 43 years ago), Bishop Stirling one day baptised 36 natives and married seven Indian couples. The Rev. T. Bridges and his family, together with myself and family, with about 150 Indians were present on that occasion.

Weddings in Stanley.

On August 16, at the Cathedral Miss Lavina Yates, to Mr. Walter Summers. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. M. D. Hobley. Mr. R. Yates (brother) gave away the bride; Mr. Vincent Summers was groomsmen. The bride was dressed in white silk; the bridesmaid, Miss Sylvia Summers, wore saxe blue costume.

A reception and dance were held at the residence of Mr. John Summers

CONCORDIA NEWS

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT].

Sept. 9.

Weather.

During the week heavy rains have fallen. It is reported that up north too much rain fell and that unless fine weather sets in the good done will be annulled. The river Uruguay has risen rapidly during the last few days and has once more overflowed its banks. At the Port, the Customs House and Coast Guards' Station are completely cut off from the town. This happens every time the river overflows. At present the weather is very fine and to all appearances tends to remain so for some time.

Dance and Concert Committee.

At a meeting held in the Railway Institute on September 6 various matters were brought up for discussion. The accounts of the last dance were submitted and approved. After all expenses a profit of $40 was realised, which is very satisfactory. The question of naming a date for the next dance was brought forward and October 2 was proposed provisionally. As the Concordia "Feria" will be held on or after that date it was considered a good opportunity to have a dance as many Britishers from the camp would be present and would have the opportunity of attending. It was suggested that no concert be given but that a fancy dress ball be held instead. As it very probably will be the last dance of the season special efforts will be made to make it an even greater success than the last one, and thereby increase the balance in hand, which is to be given to a Patriotic Fund. Enquiries are being made as to whether support will be given to a fancy dress ball.

Salto Grande.

President Viera, of the Uruguay Republic, visited Salto during the week and was fêted to his heart's content. A speech he made as regards the economic situation has given great satisfaction, not only in Salto but also in Concordia. During his speech he mentioned that it was his intention to see what could be done to make full use of the water power afforded by the Salto Grande, which is a natural dam in the river somewhat to the north of Salto. Properly worked, on the lines of the power obtained from Niagara Falls, Salto would benefit enormously from electric power. Often has it been observed to what use the Salto Grande could be put but so far nothing has been achieved. As a local paper remarked, the Argentine Republic, if it saw its way to lend a helping hand to the neighbouring Republic across the river, could afford Concordia an opportunity also of benefitting.

ARGENTINE PAPER

ANOTHER PETITION FOR A HOME INDUSTRY.

The Sub-Committee in the Chamber of Deputies who act on behalf of the Ministry of Agriculture have in hand a proposition for the encouragement of paper-making in the Republic. It is their proposal that Sr. José Mussini shall be charged with a mission to Neuquen, to study the conditions and the possibilities of the forests in that region, with a view of obtaining the necessary materials for the manufacture of Argentine paper. Whatever good intentions this committee may possess, they have run against a stone wall in the apathy of the Chamber. It is considered that the encouragement of paper-making in the Republic is a subject of interest and would be of natural benefit, but it is not considered that it is a business that would require Government capital and that the financial position of the Government to foster so many doubtful industries is none too strong. However the committee have now petitioned the Chamber for a hearing during the course of next month.

MURDER OF PINHEYRO MACHADO

ENORMOUS SENSATION THROUGHOUT BRAZIL.

In Brazil and in Uruguayan circles also, the sole subject of conversation is the murder of General Pinheyro Machado. Political groups and individuals of all shades of opinion unite in the strongest condemnation of the shocking crime. The friends of the deceased statesman declare as do all other public men who have spoken of the matter, that politics had no share in the motives, and the murder, but this is considered to be merely a polite prevarication.

Meanwhile the police are actively pursuing the matter, and investigating the antecedents of the assassin. It is expected that the entire facts connected with the affair will be made public shortly.

All the Press organs devote much space to the subject, and express the greatest horror and detestation, describing the act as cowardly and barbarous.

Telegrams from all parts of the Republic bear testimony to the profound sentiment of public grief and anger at the crime. Further details have been published. It appears that General Pinheyro Machado went to the Hotel to enquire for Doctor Rubiño Junior, after presiding at the Session of the Senate. It was in the corridor of the hotel when in conversation with the gentlemen named in the previous report, that the murderer Francisco Masso de Paiva Coimbra, came up quietly and walking fast, and in passing stabbed the General twice, fleeing instantly.

Dr. Alfred Ellis who was in the hotel, immediately gave his assistance, but found the Senator already dead. The police had to take extraordinary measures to keep the front of the hotel clear. A very painful scene occurred on the arrival of Señora de Machado, and all present were visibly affected. Amid an enormous and respectfully silent concourse, the body was removed to General Machado's residence.

At a special Cabinet meeting held on Wednesday night, President Wenceslao Braz, and Ministers dictated the arrangements for the public honours and funeral.

General Machado's remains have been embalmed and will be sent to his native province of Rio Grande on board a ship of war.

Three days of public mourning have been ordered, public offices closing at 1 p.m.

The murderer is said to have been a solicitor who deserted from the forces in Rio Grande and joined the police under a false name. He declares that he intensely hated General Machado, and had made up his mind to kill him since the candidature of Marshal Hermes de Fonseca was announced as President. All the acts of that Government he attributed to the power of the deceased. He shows no remorse, and, on the contrary, glories in his crime.

IMPOSING FUNERAL CEREMONIAL IN RIO.

An imposing manifestation of public mourning accompanied the removal of General Pinheyro Machado's remains from his residence to the premises of the national Senate.

It was after 9 o'clock in the morning when the black coffin with silver plates was carried out and placed on the plain unornamented hearse. A cavalry escort accompanied the cortege. The remains will continue to lie at the Senate till 9 to-day, when they will be removed to the Naval Arsenal to be placed on board the cruiser Mariscal Deodoro for Port Alegre. A large number of friends and relatives will accompany the cruiser on board of a Brazilian Lloyd steamer chartered for the occasion. Manifestations of public mourning in the capital continue.

Agricultural & Pastoral

CAMP NOTES

(By OUR AGRICULTURAL EDITOR.)

The rainy weather experienced about the beginning of the week was most welcome to camp men, as it will clean and freshen the pasture for stock and also for the "breard" which is looking very bad on some of the drier soils, and not likely to give a satisfactory yield, if climatic conditions are not more favourable from now onwards.

The Sociedad Rural Argentina have arranged for the holding of the Fat Stock Show on November 10, when the usual classes will be judged most likely by a visiting British expert, though at time of writing I have not heard the gentleman's name. Judging will commence on November 9, and, according to the regulations, will be finished before 12 p.m. on the following day. The list of competitors has not yet been completed, as entries are received to within twenty days of the opening of the show. The competitors at this year's show are likely to be more numerous than at any previous exhibition, as I have personally seen numbers of animals intended for competition in various parts of the country, while several estancieros have selected some of their most symmetrical animals from their "rodeos" and are having them stall-fed in exactly the same way as is employed in Britain. This is undoubtedly a most encouraging sign, for the better finishing of our steers will also be a payable proposition now that beef cattle are so very dear. In time, more economical ways will be devised for feeding stock under this more modern and artificial condition, and not the least the very valuable manure will be put to some good purpose and help to maintain the fertility of some good cropping part of the camp not too far from the feeding sheds. How wasteful it seems to see a dense cloud of smoke hanging round the sheds, and be informed that it comes from burning the dung from the feeding byres! Were this manure heaped at some convenient point, for distribution, it could, when required, be ploughed down or spread in the drills as crop or conditions demanded. If an approved rotation of cropping were followed, which is as sure to come as more modern and advantageous methods are adopted in cattle feeding, then the quality of the beef exported from this Republic will show a marked superiority in its richness and quality over what is being at present exported. This country produces everything that is required for the artificial feeding of stock, and now that the value of beef has reached its present high level, from which it is not likely to come down very much, if at all, more attention will be given to the artificial feeding of good quality steers. It could be said that practically all cattle are only grass-fed in this country, when by proper subdividing a property and making the division smaller, workable lots of cattle could receive a supplementary ration of ground maize, bruised oats mixed with linseed, or whatever was most convenient for the estancia, according to its accepted system of cropping. A property well subdivided, especially for the subject under review, has many advantages over a similar establishment not so advantageously fenced where the cattle are run in large mobs. When a very large mob of cattle are grazing in one large enclosure, it would be a most risky proceeding to attempt artificial feeding, while great areas of the pasture would be trampled under, especially in wet weather. During wet days, or when the ground was in a very sodden condition, it would be better not to give any artificial trough feeding, as anyone with such experience in Britain well knows. Cattle, firmed by a supplementary ration, would meet a far firmer demand, realise much higher prices, and thereby recompense the progressive feeder for his extra outlay in artificial foodstuffs.

A noteworthy point of the conditions of the Rural Society is that, from next year, steers will not be admitted for competition that are branded on the rump. This is undoubtedly a step in the right direction, as very serious damage is done to the most valuable part of the hide by the branding, which ought to be applied to that part of the hide with least value and where it would also be easily distinguished. I remember in New Zealand, a number of years ago, when that progressive Government advised all its stock owners to brand on the cheek, and which was at that time accepted as the proper place for branding an animal. In this Republic, where many of the brands are foolishly intricate and as correspondingly difficult to see, and where cast branding is so often resorted to, I fear any ordinary steer's cheek would not present sufficient surface for the intricate marks one very often sees in animals consigned to the local market.

Another feature is that all competing steers must have been castrated before being eight months old. This rule was also very necessary, as on many previous occasions animals which by their very full necks gave all outward appearance of having been originally intended for bulls, but which were castrated at a later date but not soon enough to get rid of the heavy bull neck, which had already formed, were on exhibition.

The last rule notifies that all competing steers must appear with a ring in their nose, or in default a ring will be fixed and the sum of ten dollars charged. I understand that this rule was framed to prevent the danger of steers getting beyond control, as occurred some years ago. If the animals are sufficiently tame, I do not see the wisdom of insisting that all should carry a ring. Make the condition that if the animals are not maintained quiet, to be handled by the judge, they are liable to be disqualified from further competition, but allow the man who may not have placed rings in the noses of his competing steers, and has them sufficiently tame, to show them without, in my opinion, that objectionable appendage fixed in the nose of a feeding steer. At Home shows I don't know whether an animal is ever seen with a ring in his nose competing in beef classes, and such an innovation would not be likely to meet with the approval of practical stockmen in Britain.

Mr. Sidey, of the firm of Poels and Sidey, West Smithfield, has just purchased for a French client in the Argentine Mr. John Aungier's champion Sussex bull at the Royal Show this year, viz., Lynwick Judge. Just over two years old, he is a typical specimen of the breed, and, being beautifully bred, should do much to enhance the reputation of Sussex cattle in this country. In addition to the above, Mr. Sidey also bought for the same client two bulls from Mr. Ernest Brady's herd at Dungewick Manor, viz., Drungewick Marksman 5th and Drungewick Marksman 11th. Other recent shipments include three bulls from the Lynwick herd the property of Mr. Aungier, viz., Lynwick Buffer, Lynwick Saracen and Lynwick Worth, and two from Mr. Brady, viz., Drungewick Joe 1st and Drungewick Marksman 9th. These five bulls were purchased on behalf of the Cordoba Land Company, Ltd., for export to the Argentine. Dr. William Kelley-Patterson, Sunhill, South Godstone, Surrey, has also sold to the Northern Camps,

Do not wait for the last moment to treat your Horses against the STOMACH BOT
DO IT NOW

USE OUR SPECIAL CAPSULES. Write for Catalogue

CALASTREME & RATTI

Veterinary Establishment,

MAIPU 247, BUENOS AIRES.

Ltd., for export to Brazil, two very fine bulls in Lynwick Rocket and Northiam Confidence.

There was a very important sale held by the Messrs. Bullrich on Wednesday, when a very high class lot of imported Lincoln rams were sold to very good advantage. A former champion at the Royal Show realised the handsome figure of $8,000, being sold to Messrs. Hurtado, Costa and Co. The second winner at the Royal Show passed into the possession of Estancias Cecilio Lopez, Ltd., the price being $3,100, which could be considered a bargain at this sale. This consignment gave the great average of over $1200 a head for all sheep sold.

Yesterday afternoon the Messrs. Bullrich exposed another consignment of Lincoln rams belonging to Mr. A. T. Pears. This lot have for some days had many admirers, and the sheep were shown in exceedingly good bloom by the representative in charge, Mr. J. MacCormick, who has every reason to be proud of the excellent result obtained at auction. The 35 animals sold gave the most satisfactory average of $981 a head. This lot of sheep were referred to in our columns a few days ago, and this satisfactory sale shows how firm is the demand for good quality Lincoln rams.

That well-known and popular representative of Mr. Joseph Shepherd, Mr. A. Machattie, received by the s.s. El Paraguayo a most select consignment of Lincoln rams which came to hand in splendid bloom. They were taken off the ship in the Darsena Norte and walked to the desembarcadero sheds where their quality was very favourably commented on by some interested onlookers. The reduced number of sheep-breeding establishments, or those properties such as La Belen and Las Barrancas, belonging to the late Don José Manuel Cobo, which yearly exposed a large number of pedigree Lincoln rams, on the local market, in a way accounts for the firmer trade experienced by these fortunate owners of imported Lincoln rams. This trade is quite likely to continue, as sheep bred in the country are evidently in reduced numbers, while importations will also be on a more limited scale. I learn that several consignments of New Zealand Lincolns are expected to be placed on the market within the next few weeks, when it is to be hoped their enterprising owners will participate in the good trade lately being experienced for all imported Lincoln rams.

Messrs. J. and I. Rawes experienced a very indifferent trade for their imported bulls, which does not augur well for forthcoming sales of pedigree Shorthorns. The active demand of a few weeks ago appears to have passed and values are now decidedly lower than was experienced by those fortunate owners who sold at the opening sales.

SUGAR HARVEST

RETURNS FROM MILLING OPERATIONS.

Official information and figures have now been received from Tucuman concerning the sugar harvest.

Thirteen mills have been in operation, and the work of these ceased between Aug. 21 and 31.

The results obtained are as follows: La Florida (Mill), 111,405,110 kilos (amount of cane milled); 7,076,800 kilos (yield), Aug. 28 (late).

La Trinidad, 98,047,060 kilos, 5,326,300 kilos, Aug. 31.

Nueva Baviera, 63,555,940 kilos, 4,002,865 kilos, Aug. 23.

San Andres, 26,824,900 kilos, 1,696,870 kilos, Aug. 21.

Cruz Alta, proceeding, 8,748,060 kilos, to date.

San Antonio, 61,261,210 kilos, 2,284,010 kilos, Aug. 30.

San Pablo, 132,023,850 kilos, 7,944,440 kilos, Aug. 30.

Santa Rosa, 25,934,480 kilos, 1,435,770 kilos, Aug. 31.

Santa Lucia, 44,369,800 kilos, 2,967,600 kilos, Aug. 29.

Bella Vista, 128,531,220 kilos, 3,347,740 kilos, to Aug. 19.

Santa Berhara, 15,223,380 kilos, 679,695 kilos, Aug. 25.

Lujan, 48,529,340 kilos, 2,487,940 kilos, to date.

La Invernada, 10,178,250 kilos, 332,560 kilos, Aug. 31.

The total yield to date is 45,000 tons. There are 14 other mills, one or two of importance, which have returned no figures or reports.

APPEARANCE OF THE LOCUST

ALARMING INCREASE RECORDED.

The notices which are being received by the Agricultural Department of the Government concerning the movement of the locust, are anything but reassuring. The gradually warming temperature of the past few days, has caused an alarming increase in the pest, and they are appearing in increasing numbers and commencing to voraciously attack their food. The danger to agriculturists is becoming serious. A large increase of the locust in Ibicuy was recorded yesterday, and from there to Arenales in the Province of Buenos Aires a strong "belt" of the pest was observed. Another "belt" which a few days ago passed over in to Brazil has returned, and is threatening certain parts of Entre Rios.

The pest is present in the southwest of the Province of Buenos Aires and experts consider that a northerly wind will bring them right up to the doors of the capital.

Much energy is being displayed in methods of combatting the danger, which seems this year to have an exceptionally serious outlook.

FAT STOCK THEIR PREPARATION.

The annual Fat Stock Show, appears to be yearly gaining in popularity, and rightly so, just as our principal estancieros are realising the advantage of producing the best quality animals that they can bring out, as it pays to produce quality, as exemplified by the high prices realised for any animals of exceptional merit. Until quite recently, practically all cattle fed and exported as "Chillers" or frozen meat, were only grass fed animals. Four years was generally required before these animals reached maturity or before they were considered sufficiently grown to be finished off, and offered to the freezer. These heavy carcasses, did not meet such a firm demand on the Smithfield market, as lighter carcasses, and younger animals, hence we are gradually experiencing the result of the lower price for big heavy carcasses and the higher values realised for more suitable weighted carcasses, if of good quality. The natural disappointment of an owner, who may own many thousands of steers, and find that the year younger cattle, if they have been properly handled are more valuable and practically bring the same price as his year older steers, encourages him, and makes him more of an enthusiast in the preparation of "baby" beef. Now recognising that the young steer, if properly attended to, was worth practically as much as the older heavier carcass animal, the inclination has naturally been for the production of the best beef steer, at the earliest possible age, consistent with the value of beef, and the payable period of disposal, as often governed by local conditions, or adverse climatic conditions, which may force a large number of animals on the market, when values are declining.

The object of this show, is to stimulate competition, and by obtaining the services of a British expert, whose duty will be to place these competing animals in their order of merit or as they would be placed at a show in Great Britain. Readers may ask why judge them on the standard recognised, at British Fat Stock Shows; and to this question I will answer as follows: — By far the greater quantity of meat exported from this country is consigned to Britain, which up to within a very short time absorbed all the meat exported from this Republic. The United States of America, formerly the largest exporter of meat to Great Britain, is now the competitor with that country for the surplus export from the Argentine. The latest factor to be considered in the meat trade is the vast quantity of frozen meat diverted for the maintenance of Britain's large army, in France, and which addition added to the scarcity on the home meat markets, has caused the price of meat to reach a level, possibly never previously known in history. This very fortunate occurrence for sellers or breeders has had a very far reaching effect in this Republic, which is the largest exporter of meat in the world; and not only meat as referred to a carcass of a steer, but a class of animals as far as their typical short-horn type is considered undoubtedly second to none in the universe. The former system of retaining the steers till they were grown or matured and then fed, did not give such a good cutting carcass as those animals, which have been more carefully handled and never allowed to get into low condition, at any period of their existence. Now that the undoubted advantage of marketing steers, at an earlier age, is recognised by all the more progressive estancieros, the question arises, as to the most practical method to be followed, for the attainment of his object. When the cattle are separated from their dams, they should be put on some nice fresh, clean pasture, which had been retained for this purpose, and if this should give out, provision ought to have been made for the changing of the calves to other

Luis Costantini Agriculturist & Seedsman

TREES, AGRICULTURAL, AND HORTICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS.

WE OFFER OUR LARGE STOCK OF FRUIT, FOREST AND ORNAMENTAL TREES AT VERY MODERATE PRICES.

ASK FOR OUR CATALOGUES.

Seeds from the well-known firms of:—

VALMORIN, ANDRIEUX AND CO., OF PARIS.

CHARLES SHARPE AND CO., OF SLEAFORD.

Also FROM OUR SPECIAL PLANTERS IN ITALY.

Implements for Agriculture and Horticulture from the celebrated firms of:—

C. F. SKELTON AND CO., OF SHEFFIELD; and

DITTMAR FRERES, BUENOS AIRES.

HEAD OFFICE AND WAREHOUSE AT RIVADAVIA 6717 to 25.

U. T. 919 FLORES.

OFFICES AND GARDENS AT RIVADAVIA 5956.

U.T. 196 FLORES.

LARGE GARDENS IN LUJAN, F.C.O.

Cabaña 'Lujan' y 'Las Hermanas'

= DE =

R. HERRERA VEGAS É HIJOS

LUJAN, F.C.S.

J. M. GUTIERREZ, F.C.S.

Carneros Lincoln y Oxford Down.

Toros Hereford y Durham. :: ::

FLORIDA 832 - BUENOS AIRES

good pasture or should the climatic conditions be adverse for the growth of green pasture, a plentiful supply of dry fodder should have been saved for tiding such animals over any such critical period. The distribution of dry fodder ensilage, has also the effect of giving the animals more confidence and thereby fitting them for the feeding in troughs, if the subdivisions of the property admit of the separate feeding of small points of steers, in each division, while old watering troughs can be utilised for distributing the feed, supported on strong posts, nearly a meter above the ground. Convenient wooden houses, for depositing a cartload of feed, and mounted on four wheels, admits of their being removed to the most convenient sites for the feeding troughs. This is, in a general way, an outline of the process necessary for the better finishing, of this country's steers. To prepare animals for show is more of a hobby than really a practical test of bringing out animals in numbers, as though they are unquestionably worth far more, being a better quality carcass the difference would not be such as make it payable for the estanciero, to similarly turn out animals on a large scale. The rival freezing companies to encourage the better finishing of steers for export, are prepared to pay, in many cases, fictitious prices, as an encouragement to the feeder, or as an advertisement for themselves, according to the seller, in many cases. The preparation of animals for show will demand their being housed, and treated in much the same way as the preparation of valuable bulls for exhibition. In such preparation, a good deal of exercise, walking along a road or in a ring is very often necessary for maintaining the appetite of beasts eating a heavy ration of feeding stuffs. The exercise also contributes to firming the flesh of an animal and

THE AUSTRALIAN DROUGHT

Mr. J. Burke, Australian representative of the Wolseley sheep-shearing machine, who has been on a visit to New Zealand, furnished some interesting facts in regard to the disastrous season the farmers of the Commonwealth have experienced, in the course of a conversation with a representative of the "New Zealand Farmer."

The losses in sheep in Australia as a result of the drought cannot be less, thinks Mr. Burke, than 30,000,000. The position has been made worse from the sheep-growers' point of view by many ewes having had to be slaughtered, for, with hoggets being in short supply, the breeding stock had to be taken for the mutton trade. Good rains have fallen since, but it turned cold after these, and the grass made very little growth.

In November last horses worth from £50 to £60 were being destroyed in South Australia, the State which has suffered most from the drought. Queensland fared better than any other part of the Commonwealth. The outlook in that State, according to advices recently received by Mr. Burke, is very promising.

Mr. D. Buchanan, the well-known Ayrshire breeder of Tiakitahuna, has just returned from a visit to New South Wales and Victoria. The dominant subject to the visitor to the not have it in such a "fatty flabby" condition as takes place when feeding animals are denied the necessary exercise for keeping them in a healthy condition. Their food should also be varied, as considered most advantageous by the competent person who ought to be invariably in charge of such animals.

A. E.

Commonwealth at the present time is the drought, which, he says, is one of the most serious afflictions the Australian farmer has ever had to face. "I hope," he remarked, "I may never see anything like it again. The country between Sydney and Melbourne seemed to be as bare as the very highways. Dairy cattle were dying by the thousand; 80 per cent. of a herd being a common loss. Many artesian wells, so valuable in the ordinary drought, had stopped flowing, but it was not so much the want of water as the want of food that was being felt. The dairying industry has had the most serious setback, and will be some years before it regains its former position." From what he could learn, the Commonwealth would have practically no dairy produce to export next season, and if they could maintain their Eastern trade it would be about all they could do.

Mr. Buchanan visited the leading Ayrshire herds of New South Wales and Victoria, and saw several which greatly impressed him. The herds of Messrs. A. McLennan (Dandenong), Keyes Bros. (Dandenong), and A. Buchanan (Flinders) all included animals of the big-framed type, with plenty of teat. These herds were in remarkable condition, considering the disastrous drought, and indicated that the owners must have spent very large sums of money on special food-stuffs for their stock.

Mr. Buchanan was particularly struck, on attending the Dandenong saleyards, to see the fine types of dairy cattle being sold. Fully 75 per cent. of them contained Ayrshire blood, and were cows of splendid substance and dairy quality. Another noticeable feature was the way in which the cattle being offered for sale were handled. Every beast in milk was tied up with a halter, and every facility given to the buyer to see that the animals were sound, very different to the usual procedure in this country. Altogether, it was a remarkable experience to see the excellent way in which the stock were handled in the yards, every animal being led into the ring by a halter.

Reverting to the huge losses occasioned by the drought, Mr. Buchanan said it is estimated that New South Wales lost 15,000,000 sheep, over 1,000,000 cattle, and a great many horses. In the Riverina this estimate is considered to understate the mortality among sheep. There was heavy mortality before the weather broke, and since then stock suffered severely owing to the moist, bitterly cold and bleak conditions which followed. In one of the districts the first cold blast killed off fully one-third of the sheep in that part. The animals had been reduced by continual starvation, and had no powers of resistance left.

Recent Australian exchanges show that enormous losses took place in sheep that were sent inland to the higher country for grass. In one case a man sent 7,000 lambing ewes to the mountains, and the last he heard of them was that 5,000 were dead, and that the remainder were straggling along the road, leaving a trail of dead and dying as they went. One pastoralist spent £30,000 trying to keep his sheep alive, but of the total of 120,000, 40,000 had so far died. A leading stock agent at Wagga estimates that over 50 per cent of the sheep in the Riverina will be lost as a result of the drought. In the Kianura district, the snow country eight owners are said to have lost 45,000 sheep in the snow. It is declared by another authority that the Riverina pastoralists will not recover from the terrible effects of the drought of 1914-15 in less than four years.

According to the very latest advices good rains that have recently fallen will make a vast difference to the cropping results in the majority of the States. In this connection, Queensland, which was said to have come out best out of the drought, is suffering more than the other States. Most of the Northern paddocks in Victoria are carrying good sheep feed, says the "Australasian," but the lambing percentage will be small, and the mortality among ewes great owing to their poor condition.

THE TALLERES BAZAAR

How Rosario Remembered

$ 7,000 FOR BRITISH RED CROSS SOCIETY

FIRST DAY

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT].

Rosario, Sept. 11.

The word calling for most ink on the programme of the Grand Bazaar and English Fair opened in aid of the British Red Cross Society at the Talleres Church Hall, was the word "Remember," and the point which the organisers asked should have borne in mind was the fact "that every cent you spend at this Bazaar will go towards helping our suffering British soldiers." It was urged that to those of us who could not fight and were seeking an outlet for our devotion to our country, the Bazaar afforded a means of direct participation in the noblest work.

To this appeal there was a hearty response, and when the hour arrived for the opening ceremony on Friday evening there was scarcely room for one more person in the Hall. It is hardly necessary to say that the decorations were most complete. The occasion was to be marked by a special visit from the General Manager and Mrs. Pearson, and the Committee were on their mettle. The whole effect was tremendously heightened by a clever scheme of electric lighting, which incidentally added greatly to the selling value of the multifarious contents of the stalls. Occupying a conspicuous place was the Roll of Honour of the Chief Mechanical Engineer's Department. One seldom sees such a fine example of the carver's art, and the gallant men whose names are recorded thereon would feel proud at this further token of the esteem in which they are held.

The platform was reduced to a minimum. Mr. J. P. Crouch occupied the chair, supported by Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Pearson, Mrs. Crouch, the Rev. J. A. Rickards, Mr. W. J. Martin, Mr. T. G. Russell, Mr. C. H. Montgomery, and Mr. A. M. Barnes. The orchestra gave the sanction of the "Himno Nacional" to the proceedings, and the well-trained choir of the Talleres Church gave a rendering of "Motherland."

Mr. Crouch, who was greeted with loud cheers on rising, said that the audience would be sorry to learn that Mr. Spencer Dickson was confined to his bed, and could not be with them that evening. Furthermore, Mr. Boutell, who was to have come to explain the work and aims of the Red Cross Society, had not been able to get away in time to catch the train that morning. Mrs. Pearson, however, was an old friend, someone who was far from being a stranger there. (Applause). As a matter of fact Mrs. Pearson had opened a Bazaar for them in the same room about four years previously and she had done it very well and very gracefully without any assistance. He was very glad indeed that the honour had fallen upon him to act as their spokesman that evening to offer her a cordial welcome there—(Applause)—and he was only saying what he knew they all wished him to say when he told her that they appreciated her kindness in coming there as much as they valued her presence amongst them. No fund originated in those parts for the benefit of the victims of the terrible war which was now being waged in Europe was complete without Mrs. Pearson's patronage and assistance, and her efforts in Buenos Aires had attained a success as phenomenal as it was likely to prove memorable in years to come. To him their task seemed to be a simple one in comparison with Mrs. Pearson's efforts, for all they were required to do was to turn their pockets inside out, pay at least as much as they were asked for any of the beautiful and useful things offered to them in the Bazaar, and by so doing send Mrs. Pearson away with the feeling that her friends in the second city of the Republic where she had deservedly earned such fair fame could rival those of its capital in their generosity and open-handedness for such a cause; and at the same time they could let Mrs. Pearson go away with the comforting assurance that her reputation had neither been sullied nor impaired by her visit to them. (Hear, hear). In this way, too, they would show to Mr. Pearson, who by coming here was making a considerable sacrifice of time very valuable in these strenuous and trying days, that the Rosarinos could "paint the lily" when opportunity offered. (Applause).

Very soon they were to lose Mr. and Mrs. Rickards; who had organised the Bazaar, just in the same way as they had carried out countless other thoughtful and kindly acts and schemes since they arrived at Rosario some years previously. Mr. Crouch added that he was not going to attempt to advocate by words all that Mr. and Mrs. Rickards had been advocating silently by good deeds for years past; deeds were more eloquent than words, although the good works of Mr. and Mrs. Rickards had been characterized always by the absence of self-advertisement, to such an extent that none knew more than a little of what had been achieved. But everyone knew enough to realise that they would best understand how highly their work was valued by being able to associate it with a final brilliant effort for the benefit of others than themselves, and especially for the benefit of the stricken brave who were suffering for defence of Country and King, which in the case of Britons meant in the defence of the cause of the freedom and liberty of mankind in general throughout all the civilised, half-civilised, and uncivilised parts of the earth. (Applause).

In conclusion, Mr. Crouch asked Mrs. Pearson to declare the bazaar open.

Mrs. Pearson, gracefully acknowledging the spontaneous ovation accorded her, said: It was very difficult for her to speak after the flattering things which Mr. Crouch had been kind enough to say. She felt that she could only wish such a good work as theirs every success, and hoped that these stalls may be cleared and pockets as well—(Laughter)—and that they might find a nice sum there on the following night for such a worthy cause. (Loud applause).

Mr. W. J. Martin next spoke. In the unavoidable absence of Mr. Chevallier Boutell, he said, it had devolved upon him to say a few words of thanks to Mrs. Pearson for so kindly coming to open this Bazaar. As Mr. Crouch had said, it was not the first time she had come amongst them. On a former occasion she had inaugurated a very successful function, and it was to be hoped that the present one would be even more successful. The Committee had worked hard, and the results were on the stalls all round. One thing would have been lacking if the Bazaar had not had a good send off, and Mr. and Mrs. Pearson were just what was required to start the ball rolling with success. (Applause). Had Mr. Boutell been there he would have been able to give them a good explanation of the aims and objects of the Red Cross Fund; but in an audience such as theirs it was hardly necessary to say much upon such a subject. Perhaps railway men, with the modesty which was characteristic of them, would not care to say too much about it, but certainly the Central Argentine Railway had done nobly in the matter of supplying men for the British Army. (Applause). Not only had the staff responded splendidly to the call for recruits, but the management itself had done its part nobly in facilitating their men's wishes, and enabling them to get to England. The British population of the Argentine Republic was estimated to be about 30,000, and of these about 5,000 were at the front. That was a very large contingent, and the Central Argentine Railway has supplied quite a number of them. (Applause). He had had a letter a few days previously from Mr. Eric Buxton, the Secretary of the British Patriotic Committee, written from France, in which he said it would interest both Mr. Crouch and Mr. Montgomery to hear that he had met an officer who had made inquiries about them. It was not necessary therefore to say much about the Red Cross Fund to such a community as theirs. They trusted that their friends would not need the assistance of the Red Cross, but if they should do so the audience might know that the Fund to which they were contributing that evening might be the means of relieving suffering and perhaps of saving the lives of their friends. (Hear, hear). He saw present some members of those nations who were associated with Britain as Allies in the war at the present time, and on behalf of the Committee he welcomed them that evening. (Applause).

Little Miss Alice Locke then stepped forward, and tendering a basket to Mrs. Pearson said: "Dear Mrs. Pearson, the boys and girls of the Talleres Sunday School desire to show their sympathy with their little brothers and sisters across the sea, whose fathers and brothers are fighting, and on their behalf I have to ask you to please accept this basket and $157 towards the Bazaar which you have opened." (Loud applause).

Another little maiden, Emily Hopkin, presented Mrs. Pearson with a lovely basket of flowers, which she received with a kindly word and smile of thanks; and, turning to the speechmaker, Mrs. Pearson remarked how prettily she had spoken, adding how greatly she appreciated the self-sacrifice of the children.

Mr. Crouch then made an important announcement: "We will now," he said, "proceed to spend money!" And, like the cleric who "allured to brighter fields," he "led the way."

Appended is a list of stall holders:—Tie and Handkerchief Stall.—Mrs. J. P. Crouch, Miss Benedict, Miss Le Bas, Mrs. S. Hopkin, Mrs. C. Todman, Misses Gertie Jutting, Ivy Kanarens, Edie Kanarens and Louie Horton.

Plants, Flowers and Sweet Stall.—Mesdames C. H. Montgomery, M. Brunton and W. Barnett, Misses Emily Hopkin, Alice Locke, Ruby Hollis, Florrie Rowley, Joyce Todman and Marie Parker.

Toy Stall.—Mesdames W. P. Deakin, Reid, S. E. Sykes, J. H. Smith, Ivy Sykes, Mary Perrigo, Minnie Cochrane and Alice Cochrane.

Provision Stall.—Mesdames C. O. Roberts, J. E. Ryberg, E. A. Johnson, M. Jones, Segunda Hopper, Lilly Brewster, Ethel Parker and Polly Battcock.

Plain and Fancy Stall.—Mesdames J. A. Rickards, G. H. Harding, A. E. Locke, Louisa Didden, Ada Brewster, Dollv Gimenez and Mabel St. Mary.

Bran Tub.—Misses Baillie and Johnston.

Tea and Supper Room. Miss Studert, Mesdames Every Miller, J. Manley, A. Finch, Violet Astbury, Mabel Astbury, Edith Frost, Katie Macdonald, Maggie Macdonald, Elsie Beck, Mary Todman, Nellie Hopkin, Maud Monnington, Violet Barfoot, Lilly Rowley and Mary Saber.

Parcels Stall.—Mr. H. Drake.

Miniature Rifle Range.—Messrs. Gillespie and Barfoot.

Fishing Pond.—Messrs. Overton and E. Todman.

Aunt Sally.—Messrs. Joe and Jack Mountford.

Football Game.—Messrs. J. Anderson and E. Jutting.

Concerts.—Mr. G. H. Harding.

Cinematograph.—Mr. Parry.

Competitions.—Mr. H. Hindell.

Orchestra.—Under the direction of Mr. Stanley Hopper.

Officials.—President: Rev. J. A. Rickards, M.A.; Secretaries: Messrs. P. J. Flook and J. W. Challen; Treasurer: Mr. A. E. Locke.

I understand that the total result of the Bazaar—re-opened to-day, as I must describe in a further letter, by Mrs. J. P. Crouch—was a sum of $5000. Rosario certainly remembered!

SECOND DAY

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT].

Rosario, Sept. 13.

The expectations raised by the proceeds of the opening day of the Bazaar at the Talleres Hall in aid of the funds of the British Red Cross Society were more than realised. An audit on Friday night put that day's takings at some $2000, and on Saturday night this figure had been carried, as I mentioned in yesterday's issue of THE HERALD, to the $5,000 mark. Since then other amounts have come in as contributions to the Bazaar Fund, and I am pleased to be able to announce that at the time of writing there is a total of no less than $7,000 to be handed over, with a prospect of perhaps still further odd sums to come in.

The opening ceremony on Saturday afternoon was performed by Mrs. J. P. Crouch, wife of the Chief Mechanical Engineer, and there was again a large attendance both of townspeople and railway folk. The General Manager of the F.C.C.A., Mr. C. H. Pearson, took the chair, supported by Mrs. Pearson, Mr. and Mrs. Crouch, the Rev. J. A. Rickards, Mr. T. G. Russell, Stores Superintendent, and Mr. C. H. Montgomery, Locomotive Works Manager. The orchestra prepared the way by a selection of airs from the national music of the Allies. Next the Chairman read a letter from Sir Reginald Tower in which the British Minister regretted that he would be unable to attend the Bazaar as he had a prior engagement to attend a patriotic entertainment in Buenos Aires, adding that he wished them complete success in their undertaking.

THE CHAIRMAN'S SPEECH.

Proceeding to introduce Mrs. Crouch, Mr. Pearson said that, honoured though he considered himself to be when he was asked to occupy the position of Chairman of the gathering that afternoon, he had felt considerable diffidence in accepting the invitation, for he was fully conscious of the lack of those qualities which he deemed to be essential to a chairman of a Bazaar at the Talleres. The chairman that afternoon should be possessed of eloquence and all the flowers of speech, for it was his duty to express and represent for them a hearty welcome to their dear friend Mrs. Crouch and to voice the esteem and affection, if Mr. Crouch would allow him to say so, in which they all held her. (Applause.) If he failed in gifts of eloquence, he did not fail in sincerity. Mr. and Mrs. Crouch had been in Rosario a comparatively short time, but they had conquered the affections of all. They were the foster-parents of a very large family of Central Argentine children. As a distant relative—(Laughter.)—he was proud to be among them. It had often been said, and it was going to be said in the future, that London was the hub of the universe; and he thought in the same way Rosario was the hub of the Central Argentine Railway. (Loud applause.) Mr. Crouch, with Mr. Montgomery, Mr. Mallon and many others, could turn out in the Talleres work which would compare with anything turned out in any shops of the world; the work done in the Running and Traffic departments under Mr. Muir, Mr. Martin, Mr. Duclos, and many others, the work done under Mr. Russell, the Stores Superintendent, and the work done on the Engineering Section under Mr. Miller—all that was work equal to anything done on any Argentine Railway. Mr. Pearson added that he had been out to Perez, and had seen the progress there, which had been entirely designed by Mr. Crouch, and he was sure that for many years to come the names of Mr. and Mrs. Crouch would be intimately associated with the Gorton Shops and affectionately esteemed by those who would reside in their vicinity. (Applause.) But not only was Mr. Crouch's department doing that, but it was doing very much more. Over there was a list of the names of many noble and brave men—and they formed a considerable portion of the three hundred odd from the Central Argentine who were either in training or fighting somewhere in France or other parts. (Applause.) They had given all that they could be expected to give; those left behind had their task still to perform. They were there that afternoon to do all they could to help in providing for the comforts of those who had gone to fight for Britain. Not only that, he thought that there was a still greater task to be performed, and that was for those left in the Republic to show what it meant to be an Englishman—to show that it stood for everything that was right and pure in the world; so that when their task was done, if they had only shown themselves to be true Englishmen they would have attained their ends. (Loud applause.)

ROSS'S

Belfast Ginger Ale

After paying a tribute to Mr. Rickards, Mr. Pearson called upon Mrs. Crouch to declare the Bazaar open.

MR. RICKARDS AND THE UNEMPLOYED.

The Rev. J. A. Rickards, rising to propose a vote of thanks to Mrs. Crouch, said he did so in the absence of the British Consul, Mr. Spencer S. Dickson, who was still indisposed. "In the name of you all," he said, "I should like to thank Mrs. Crouch very heartily for her kindness in coming here this afternoon. At the same time I should like to thank both Mr. Pearson and Mr. Crouch for the very kind words which they have spoken about my wife and myself. I can only say that the fact of the continual kindness that we have always received during the six years we have been among you, from all members of the Central Argentine Railway, have made this to us one of the happiest spheres of life that we have ever had the happiness to work in." Mr. Rickards then remarked that Mr. Pearson had said something about the work accomplished by officers of various departments of the Railway. For his part he looked at the Railway from rather a different point of view. He looked at the great Railways of the country, and especially the F.C.C.A., as giving bread to thousands upon thousands of people, and he wanted that afternoon to thank all who had so kindly again and again taken men on whom he had personally been able in his humble sphere of life to pass on. He had always made it a point, when he found a man in the street without bread to eat, to endeavour to do his best to find employment for that man. Of course, during the last twelve months, the tremendous war in which they were involved had made it difficult at times; but at the same time he looked back over his length of years in the Republic, associated not only with the Central Argentine but with the Pacific, and he remembered again and again, he might almost say weekly, those Railway Companies had been kind enough to take men on at his request, and it was for that that he desired to thank all for their kind help in that direction. He was sorry Mr. Chevallier Bontell could not come and that Mr. Dickson was not there, but in the name of them all he desired to thank very heartily those who had taken part in making the Bazaar a success. Everybody approached, whether in the city or in the camp, had done their best to help. He did not wish to mention any names, and he did not think anybody else would care to have names mentioned, but there was one name, and that was a gentleman associated with the London and River Plate Bank, Mr. J. W. Challen, who had been up nightly to twelve and one o'clock with one or two men connected with the Railway, helping the organisers. Sincere thanks were due to that gentleman for his kind efforts on behalf of the Bazaar. (Applause.)

THE ROLL OF HONOUR.

As I mentioned in writing yesterday, one of the features of the Bazaar was the Roll of Honour of the Chief Mechanical Engineer's Department. It was a magnificent piece of work. On the pediment was the British coat of arms, flanked by battle scenes, carved in high relief in cedar stained to the colour of Spanish mahogany. The pediment was surmounted by a crown, with laurel and oak wreaths. Just over the name board was the title "Roll of Honour, C.A.R." in brass scroll work, the base being of Florentine bronze colour, with the lettering and projected parts made bright and lacquered. At the sides are carved rifles of the standard service pattern, reduced in size, but correct to scale in every detail. These again are flanked by hand grenades, come into their own once more in this war of old ideas renewed, and near the butts of the rifles are two or three cartridges. At the bottom there is a carved symbol of palm and laurel, representing "Peace with Honour" for which the Allies are fighting with such grim determination. I doubt whether better work has ever been turned out at the Talleres Workshops, and the greatest credit is reflected on Mr. Manley's section. So far there are 117 names, inscribed in white enamel, shaded with green. This green is changed to black in the case of men whose names are reported amongst the casualties, and this sad information is supplemented by a star showing that a man has been killed in action, a cross indicating that he died of wounds, and a degree mark (a small circle) in cases of death from sickness or other causes.

A GLANCE ROUND.

I must mention one or two items in the programme of varied entertainments which complemented the Bazaar proper. There were the tableaux arranged by Mr. and Mrs. Harding, of the Talleres School, in which some sixteen of the pupils took part. The first was to represent the Red Cross, and the second was entitled "United we stand," and included allegorical figures of all the Allies. There was tremendous applause as the curtain was rung up on these tableaux, and one felt gratified that the efforts of Mr. and Mrs. Harding should have been so cordially appreciated. Mr. Montgomery was the lion of the concert platform, with his conjuring entertainments and his amusing patter; the children would have voted him quite the star turn of the side shows. Then there was Mr. Parry, who provided a whole series of cinematograph shows, also to the great delight of the little ones. The orchestra performed wonders, considering the small amount of elbow room available for them, and here congratulation should be paid to Mr. Hopper, who takes so much pains with his men. There were several vocal and instrumental contributors to the concerts, though in the absence of a regular programme it would be somewhat hazardous for me to embark on any attempt even to indicate them. I know there was one little girl of eight summers who played away in the big hall without a tremor, quite in the manner of a prodigy. Lastly, in so discursive a note even I must mention the auction, conducted as a finale to the evening by Mr. Montgomery. There was great excitement, and while the fancy bidding lasted there was a touch of sensation, as when a bunch of flowers was run up to the neighbourhood of thirty dollars.

RED CROSS FUNDS

The following statement of accounts for the entertainment organized by Mrs. Dey at the Italian Hall, Quilmes, on August 30, 1915, in aid of the Allies' Red Cross Funds, has now been issued.

Expenditure: Hall $84; Hall attendants $7; Orquestra (Stark's) $80; Special train $40; Mitchell's account for programmes, less programmes, value $45 free $32; Lennox Samson's account for tickets $32; Coleman for workmen (his own services free) $23; Reid for decorating hall (his own services free) $16.85; Sandwiches, sweets, etc. $80.15; Cinematograph $26; Receipts: Tickets sold, $1,279. Subscriptions: J. Macdonald $20; Mrs. P. A. Grassick $10; Mrs. Dalrymple $5; G. and H. Benedict $5; Mrs. Dey $92, total $132; Sale of Sweets $21; Bridge Tournament on the 8th inst. $62.

The balance of $1083 has been apportioned as follows: To British Red Cross Fund $541.40; To French ditto $136.37; To Belgian ditto $135.37; To Italian ditto $135.38; To Russian ditto $135.38.

Thanks are due to the following ladies for cakes, refreshments, etc.: Mesdames Bate, Allinson Bell, C. Bell, Benedict, Boote, Brain, Brougham, Norris Clarke, Cutler, Dobson, Edmonds, Grassick, Harvey, Jacobs, Knight-Clarke, Lea, Leslie, Alister Mackill, Harry Marrs, Marsden, Murdoch, Paterson, Pennington, Pritchard, Recknell, Rogers, Rowstrom, Sinclair, F. W. Steed, Woods.

Misses Forbes, Mackintosh, Marrs, Oldham, Percy, Ross, and Sannes; also to Capt. Andrews.

For attending the tables to: Mesdames Driver, Lovett, Pite, Misses Logan, Ross, Rouse and Cater.

For selling tickets: Misses Delamain, Jacobs, Lovett, Oldham, Rogers, Del Campo, and Robinson; Messrs. J. and W. Grassick, G. Dey and J. Sinclair.

The following gentlemen, in various ways, contributed greatly to the success of the entertainment:

Messrs. Pite, Williams, Thorburn, Grassick, and Mackill, Rev. W. M. Laing. Mitchell's very kindly gave a supply of programmes free of charge whilst Messrs. Gath and Chaves provided a liberal supply of sweets. Acknowledgments are gratefully made to the HERALD and Standard for notices regarding the event.

ANNIVERSARY SUNDAY AT ROSARIO

What is called "Anniversary Sunday" has become a great annual institution in the First Methodist Episcopal (English-speaking) Church of Rosario. Elaborate preparations especially in music are made for many weeks preceding. The celebration took place last Sunday, and despite the unfavourable weather, the Church was filled with large congregations at both morning and night services. The special choir composed of children and young people numbered eighty-five voices. They sang splendidly, assisted in the instrumental part by piano, organ, flute and violins. The plate offerings at both services will be given entire to the Rosario City Mission, the Society which so generously and efficiently helps the poor; the amount for the day will reach over one hundred and fifty dollars. The preacher at both services was the Rev. Dr. McLaughlin, and the address at night was to a large gathering of young people and children. The Methodist Church has also in Rosario one of the largest Spanish-speaking Protestant churches on the Continent, and several smaller ones likewise. The school for girls on Avenida Pellegrini with its fine new buildings is the most successful of its class in the city. It has also a girl's school for poor children with an attendance of over one hundred and fifty. The English-speaking Methodist church and school under the able and energetic leadership of the Rev. G. A. Werner, is very prosperous. This church has always been noted for its generosity. It gave last year to one cause alone, "the Prince of Wales's Fund," over five thousand dollars.

RAILWAY FARES

INCREASING PUBLIC RESISTANCE

Larger and larger is growing the section of the public who are becoming associated in a common cause to resist the increase of the railway tariffs and fares. The adhesion of all the people in the suburban districts to an active resistance is according to "La Razon" practically unanimous and but a very small minority now remains of the people, who have not already determined to travel second class.

Discussion of the matter has already taken place in Congress and it is logical to presume that the legislators will not be long in bringing their opinion and the weight of their advice to bear upon the Minister of Public Works. It is considered that the public, in spite of the various statements of the railways to the contrary, many rest assured of ultimate victory.

The result of yesterday's meeting of railway managers is that they have decided to consult the several directorates anew. The Minister of Public Works on receipt of the result of this new conference has decided to make a fresh appointment with the managers, to be realised on Saturday next.

Dr. Moyano will receive the representatives of the Provincial Exchanges on Friday next, they will be presided over by the President of the Buenos Aires Exchange, Sr. Luis E. Zuberbuhler.

Rosario is very active in its resistance and the whole of the business, commercial, agricultural, and rural population are adhering in the determination of active protest. The Sociedad Rural Argentina at its next meeting will be occupied with a consideration of the railway freights and the majority of the members have already expressed themselves as favourable to resistance. The Agrarian League have already protested to the Minister of Public Works.

In Matanzas a monster meeting has also been held. Over 200 signatories were forthcoming for a protest and one and all decided to travel second class and a large number of others, refused to renew their contracts and decided to use the tram routes in future.

A special protest has been made by La Plata residents directly to the management of the Southern Railway. Martinez has followed La Plata's example so far as the Central Argentine Railway is concerned.

The immense weight of public opinion is bound to bring the matter to a head in a brief period.

RACE COURSE AND HOSPITAL

TUCUMAN'S CENTENARY PRESENT FROM THE JOCKEY CLUB.

A committee of ladies and gentlemen of Tucuman have approached the directorate of the Jockey Club requesting their assistance and support to the great festivities which will be celebrated in that city on the centenary of the day of Independence next year.

The decision of this powerful and wealthy body may seem humorous, but it is none the less a fact that after an intense but brief deliberation, they decided to present the city with a hospital and further to give the necessary funds for the construction of a race course.

This latter gift celebrates the hundredth year of independence, but it is doubtful whether it will be of benefit to the people of Tucuman, and furthermore whether there are sufficient people in the locality to support a racecourse or appreciate the generosity of the Jockey Club. The combination of a race course and hospital might indicate the directorate of the Jockey Club as being a body not entirely lacking in a sense of humour.

Public Opinion as expressed in the Argentine Press.

THE GOLD IN THE LEGATIONS

(La Nación.—September 9).

In banking and commercial circles much unfavourable comment is heard, remarks "La Nación," anent the proposals concerning the gold in the legations which have been despatched by the Finance Committee of the Chamber of Deputies. A well-known banker, whose opinion carries weight, states that the measure will be unduly favourable to the Federal Government, the provinces, and the municipalities, by allowing them to dispose of the funds in the legations, funds that represent the favourable balance of trade abroad. The interests of the banks, commerce, and the general public, are not taken into account, being pushed into the background as though the gold was not common property, with its paper equivalent circulating generally throughout the country. Stress ought to be laid on the fact that if the governing powers need the money gathered under Law 9480, to ease the exchanges, they ought to take its equivalent, not in gold, since the use of minted gold is insignificant, but in paper at the legal rate, as often as the producer needs money here for his sales abroad. Experts are agreed, continues "La Nación's" informant, that all that is needed is for the Government to retire, through the Banco de la Nación, gold bonds with paper in accordance with Law 3871, and this faculty ought to be made a permanent one, as well as the right to open or close the legations to foreign gold in accordance with the needs of the market. The actual plan proves complete ignorance of the financial and banking operations involved, hence it ought to be withdrawn without delay, being re-drafted in a manner more commensurate with the true needs of the situation.

THE LIGHTING OF THE SOUTH COAST

(La Prensa.—September 11).

In accordance with the project formulated by the Ministry of Marine, says La Prensa, the order has been placed in Europe for the materials necessary for the installation of the proposed lighthouses on the South Atlantic coast. These materials will cost approximately $130,000, and the work of erection will entail another outlay of $138,000, paper. Amongst other innovations it is intended to substitute the lamp on Punta Médanos whose visual radius is only twenty miles for one of acetylene of much greater power. On Punta Ninfas a light with a radius of eleven miles will be placed to complete the system of signals which will give easy access to the entrance to the Golfo Nuevo. To indicate a danger to navigation which exists near the island of Rasa a light is being installed with a radius of ten miles. At Cabo Blanco the initial work is being hurried on in preparation for the arrival from Europe of the materials for a large lighthouse of the first order which will greatly benefit navigation, general and local. At Puerto Deseado a system of four lights is also being installed which will ensure a safe entrance to and exit from the port at all times and in all weathers. Three large lighthouses are to be constructed on the prominent capes of San Francisco de Paula and Buen Tiempo and on the Island of Leones, whilst the ports of San Julian and San Antonio are to be lighted in such a manner that entrance can be effected at night as well as in daylight.

The notice that the contract has been fixed for these improvements, says La Prensa, as also the knowledge that the work has already begun comes as a welcome solution to a very important problem and one which it has often advocated in its columns.

MUNICIPAL TAXES FOR 1916

(La Prensa.—September 9).

The Intendente's Department has handed the Municipal Commission the statement of proposed taxation for the coming year, remarking that it is advisable to place the finances of the city on a base commensurate to the needs of the epoch, whilst recognising the need for greater equity in the incidence of the various imports. Hence there are reductions suggested in such taxation as weigh on articles of general consumption, even whilst the Intendente does not admit that the municipal taxation is the chief factor in dear living. This evil he lays at the door of the middleman, and adds that the Municipality is doing its best to eliminate him by free markets and direct consignments. Hence for 1916 it is proposed to do away with the taxes on fruit, vegetables, river fish, cheese, butter, charcoal, and other necessities of all classes, whilst the $800,000 odd that is thus lost to the Municipal treasuries will be made up in other and more permanent forms of taxation.

Articles of luxury are on the other hand to be taxed more heavily, including the use of automobiles, theatres, and billiards, the additional taxation being calculated to bring in at least $600,000. To balance the shortage economies in the cost of collection will be enforced all round. Further reductions are to be made in the tax allocated to meeting the expenses of lighting and cleaning. The estimated values of 1912 are admittedly too high, and rather than go to the expense of a new valuation, a 20 per cent. reduction all round is suggested. Special attention is to be given to the tax payable on unoccupied ground. Admittedly this has been far too low, and the speculator has benefited by municipal services without contributing thereto his fair share of the cost. On this head alone it is hoped to raise some $591,000 additional revenue, whilst another increase will be brought in by severe economies in the lighting department, calculated at $1,500,000. In short, the whole Municipal Budget for 1916 is to be placed on a new and equitable base that will, it is firmly hoped, benefit both the individual and the community.

THE 1916 CENTENARY

(La Nación.—September 11).

The presence of the Governor of Tucumán, says La Nación has brought once more on the tapis the question of the centenary of the Independence which affects and interests the whole country in general, but in particular the Province of Tucumán. The celebration of the centenary of 1916, says La Nación, must not be a repetition of that of 1910. It is admitted in the first place that it must be on a more modest scale, not only on account of the actual economical stringency at present being felt in the country, but also on account of the nature of the event it is intended to commemorate. The Revolution marked the entrance of this country into the community of free nations. It was fitting therefore that the centenary of 1910 should be an international celebration, and that its centre should be Buenos Aires, the initiator of the emancipation, and the capital from which the country communicates with the world. The Declaration of Independence was the act by which the newly born Republic, as a result of that revolution, affirmed in a solemn manifestation the wish of Argentines to form a spiritual and political unity, and as such must be commemorated by a celebration es-

EUROPEAN PATRIOTISM

(La Nación.—September 11).

Commenting on the resolution of the British Trades Union Congress, where by 600 votes against seven it was decided that complete and ample support must be given to the government by Labour during the conflict, "La Nación" declares the matter to be of the most transcendent importance. The resolution did not stop there; it declared that the action of the Allies was fully justified; that the war is not a Capitalist's war; repudiates the ideas of the pacificists; and finally declares that peace cannot be thought of until the kingdom of Belgium is reintegrated, the north of France restored, Alsace-Lorraine returned, and Poland once more incorporated with Russia. These pronouncements, says "La Nación," show that Great Britain is as solid as is France or Belgium. Hitherto there has been no categorical and solemn declaration of adhesion on the part of the British Labour Party to the national policy, whilst Bernard Shaw and a few isolated Labour members have on various occasions made speeches that found a warm echo in the hearts of the Pan-German supporters. From henceforward such speeches, if they are made, will be devoid of all weight, at the same time proving that despite the grave perils with which the country is surrounded, nothing can alter the principle of free thought in the British Isles.

The German statesmen had hoped for discord in France; Radicalism and Socialism were to rise against Nationalism and the various reactionary parties. Instead of which the "sacred union" referred to by President Poincaré on the day of the declaration of war has become a fact; Barrés calls Viviani, "our brother and our Leader"; Sembat and Ribot are in the same Cabinet; the journal "l'Humanité" refers to the death of the Comte de Mun in the phrase, "Jaures would have wept." Turning again to the British Isles, "La Nación" reminds its readers that the Irish Question was indefinitely postponed on the 4th August. Looking elsewhere one finds that in Russia as in Italy all internecine feuds have been dropped. The recent vote of the British Trades Union Congress spells the downfall of the idea of "l'Internationale." The ideas of Liebknecht, of Bernstein, of Rosa Luxemburg, and the other leaders of the Social Democrat party in Germany have been repudiated. And one of the finest spectacles in this dreadful war is afforded by the abnegation and perfect patriotism of the Allies. It is, concludes "La Nación," one of the greatest proofs of the power of a moral force that Humanity has ever shown.

essentially national and internal in character. As Buenos Aires centralised the commemoration movement of May so must Tucumán centralise the celebration of the Independence. Round its name are gathered all the sacred memories of Argentine history. Hundreds of thousands flocked to Buenos Aires in 1910 to celebrate the first hundred years of liberty, and it is to be hoped that on this occasion a like number will congregate in one of the most important and prosperous towns of the interior. The National Government, says La Nación, must lend its support to the movement, to the end that Tucumán may be signalised as the one brilliant centre of the celebration, to which all the provinces of the country will send their delegates and lend their assistance, thus ensuring a success worthy of such an important occasion.

DEAR MEDICINES'

(La Prensa.—September 11).

The falsification of certain specifics, and their substitution, in so far as the composition is concerned, by dangerous drugs, is, says "La Prensa," a matter deserving of serious attention. The fact leads one to believe that in many departments of the trade this falsification and substitution is being carried on to a very considerable extent by dealers who have no conscience, and do not recoil before the grave legal and social responsibilities involved in thus exploiting the public. "La Prensa" recommends the government to order an investigation in the case of those articles that by their high price offer an incentive to such illicit operations, and remarks that the affair should be put in charge of the Department of Hygiene, the various national and municipal chemical laboratories collaborating therewith, putting aside for the nonce all red tape ideas as to the limit of authority or jurisdiction corresponding to each particular department.

It would at the same time be advisable to investigate the prices now charged, both as regards imported and national remedies, since in the case of certain specifics it is literally correct to say that they are sold for their weight in gold. Moreover there have been many local substitutes made to take the place of certain popular alkaloid remedies; substitutes sold under a different name but invested with all the marvellous virtues—in the advertisements—of the original articles. Logically these ought to be cheaper, but the chemists, going on the rule that at the present time no one can check their prices, charge what they like, with the result that the trade is becoming avid of unduly high profits. Similar situations in other business have however been checked, and "La Prensa" suggests that the Department of Hygiene might well publish periodical price lists showing the public more or less what the chemists were doing. If matters are allowed to go on as they are, half Buenos Aires will be unable to buy medicine at need, and the apathy of the authorities will be contributory to what is little better than a conspiracy against the public welfare.

LIBERALISM IN RUSSIA

(La Nación.—September 13).

It looks as though the war was bound to have very favourable results for Russian Liberalism, remarks "La Nación." The government realises that the full and frank co-operation of the people, as represented by the Duma, is necessary to give full weight and prestige to its acts. Hence Russia's internal policy has of late been marked by a distinctly Liberal bias; the change has been slight as yet, but undeniably the Liberal outlook is there, and the fact is all the more remarkable, given the erstwhile predominance in that country of reactionary tendencies. Even when war was declared these tendencies were unmoved, is shown by the arrest and exile in Siberia of the revolutionary, Burtseff, who had come back to Russia expressly to serve with the army. The Duma took the case up, and at the beginning of August, Burtseff was allowed to leave Siberia, whilst the Duma proposed that a general amnesty be granted to all political delinquents. More or less about the same time two of the most reactionary members of the Cabinet, Maklakoff and Shteglovitoff, resigned, to be replaced by Octobrists.

A still more important sequel of the Liberal evolution that has taken place in the Russian government is found in the participation of the

DANGEROUS ALCOHOL DEPOSITS

(La Prensa.—September 14).

In the report of the administrator of the Inland Revenue, covering the year 1914, there is, says "La Prensa," a special chapter devoted to the fiscal deposits for alcohol, and it urges with great insistence the need for radical measures towards removing what at the present moment constitutes a very real danger. Situated in the midst of a thickly populated neighbourhood, the danger is self-evident, nor is this the first time that it has been pointed out to the Minister of Finance, whilst, as "La Prensa" remarks, the indifference of the authorities to a matter so closely affecting the safety of the public is a proof of the lack of preoccupation that reigns in official circles. It is easily understood that some matters must perforce be slow in settlement, owing to other urgent affairs claiming preference, but this reasoning does not apply to the inaction of the government with respect to the alcohol deposits. The question of finding a suitable site ought not to be allowed to outweigh the safety of those who live in the vicinity of the present deposits, seeing that any moment might see the latter involved in an irreparable disaster.

Moreover the indifference of the government is all the more surprising when one remembers the many rules and regulations dictated by the Municipality with a view to isolating dangerous trades. It is remarkable, to say the least, that the government should in its own person defy such wise provisions for the common weal. The danger consequent on the actual system of storage for alcohol is the most important point to be borne in mind, says "La Prensa," but it is not the only drawback to be remedied. Heavy rent for the sheds; inconvenient situation, with a consequent increase in the charges for cartage; lack of all means for handling the merchandise; tumbledown and unhygienic condition of the whole store; all these things are clearly pointed out in the administrator's report. They ought to be taken note of by the authorities, and immediate measures adopted. Otherwise, concludes "La Prensa," it must be confessed that the department concerned, namely the Ministry of Finance, has lost all appreciation of what administration really means.

Duma in the duties and responsibilities of the state. When the Ministry of Munitions was created, a commission was co-opted thereto, consisting of nine members of the Duma and nine members of the Imperial Council, whilst it is now stated that in the new ministry there will be various members of the Duma. Parliamentary government may therefore be looked on as a fait accompli in Russia, since there is no danger of the Tsar abolishing the present order of things once the war is over. Naturally, as "La Nación" points out, it is not reasonable to expect that the parliamentary system will spring full-panoplied into life in Russia, on lines similar to the procedure in France or Great Britain, but the present movement is sufficient to make all Liberals rejoice and join in predicting better days for Russia, now free from the impositions of the reactionaries. It is to this Liberal movement that Russia owes the governmental promises to improve the situation of the Jews. Nor will the Jews be the only ones to benefit; certain laws that weighed heavily on the Catholics are also to be rescinded. Alty to all this the promise of Polish autonomy, and you have, says "La Nación," a balance which is very favourable to Liberalism in Russia, and that as a direct consequence of the war.

A PROMISING HARVEST

(La Prensa.—September 13).

The recent change of weather has, says "La Prensa," been very favourably received throughout the camp. In Buenos Aires the small cultivators were just beginning to dread a drought, but further north, in certain parts of Santa Fé and Cordoba, the danger was already there. Rain has now become general, and it may be said that in the agricultural and pastoral regions of Corrientes, Entre Rios, Santa Fé, Cordoba, Buenos Aires, and the Pampa Central, the future is clear, it being reasonably safe to declare that the crops will benefit exceedingly by the timely showers. All this, as "La Prensa" observes, is very favourable to the economic outlook. A large area has been sown this year, not only in the provinces of the plain but also in the foothills of the Andes. It would be of no use to give figures as yet, but it is certain that if no unforeseen misfortune comes along, agriculturalists will be fortunate, since ample yields will be supplemented by high prices for grain.

There is of course the difficulty of gathering the harvest. Immigration must not be reckoned upon for a long time to come; even if peace is imminent, Europe will find employment for all her able-bodied men. Argentine farmers must look to their local resources, as they must take time by the forelock. This will be of benefit to the working classes, and the better organised things are the better it will be for all concerned, but official action must be diligent and practical; no sending gangs of peons to places where there is not the least hope of their getting employment, or to regions where the farmers always get their crops in without outside assistance. In short, the common phrase "golden rain," really appears applicable this year, but it rests with the country to make the most of the opportunity that now presents itself.

INCREASE OF RAILWAY TARIFFS

(La Nación.—September 14).

At the conference held on the invitation of the Director General of Railways, the representatives of the various lines met to exchange ideas regarding the 10 per cent. increase on tariffs for passengers and cargo, to which the companies are entitled in accordance with Law No. 5315 Ingeniero Nogues, who presided, opened proceedings, according to "La Nación," by remarking that the invitation to meet and talk things over came from the Minister of Public Works, who wished to know the reasons that had led to the adoption of this increase, and at the same time desired to point out that it would be advisable to suspend a measure that was contrary to general interests. It was not good policy at times such as the present to place a surcharge on the handling of national produce, since such surcharge weighed directly on the national consumer. A lengthy debate made it very clear that the reason for the increase was to be found in the arbitrary interpretation given to the law aforesaid by the provincial governments and municipalities through whose territories the companies' lines ran. It was argued that whereas the law explicitly exempts the railway companies from all taxation other than the 3 per cent for road construction, it had been interpreted as referring only to exemption from national taxation, the courts having found Law No. 5315 to be in this respect unconstitutional. On these findings several municipalities immediately sought to collect large sums, the case of Rosario, with its claim of $1,000,000 against the Central Argentine railway coming in for special mention. The Pension Law is another unforeseen drain on the revenues, meaning a half per cent off the nett profits, already much reduced

NATIONALITY AND THE WAR

(La Prensa.—September 15).

Times and again, says "La Prensa," it has been consulted by correspondents who, though Argentine citizens, are the sons of foreign parents, and as such wish to know how they stand as regards their duties in the present war. Hence it re-opens this important question, doubly important at the present time owing to the attempts that have been made in certain cases to ignore Argentine citizenship. The fundamental difficulty, "La Prensa" declares, lies in the dual legislation distinguishing the Old and the New World. In Argentina, as in most American lands, the place of birth is the deciding factor in determining nationality, the "jus soli" as against the "jus sanguinis," or blood right, that rules in France, Italy, and other countries, where the nationality of the parents decides that of the child, notwithstanding its place of birth. Under this reasoning the son of Italians is an Italian, whether he be born here or anywhere else outside Italy.

The doctrine of "jus soli" was adopted by the Argentine Constitution subsequent to the negotiations with Spain that concluded with the treaty of 1859. In that treaty the sons of Spaniards born in the Republic were considered as following the nationality of their fathers, but in 1863 a new treaty with Spain was drawn up, wherein it was stated that in order to determine the nationality of Spaniards and Argentines, each country would adhere to its own laws and constitutions, and to this the law of citizenship of 1869 also adhered, declaring that Argentines would in future be taken to include all beings born or to be born within the confines of the Republic, irrespective of the nationality of their parents. Whence it follows that the individual born on Argentine soil is obliged to comply with the duties that fall upon all Argentines, including military service. If an Argentine citizen goes abroad, he has the right to claim the protection of his Government, save in the case of his being in the country of his parents where, supposing the "jus sanguinis" to prevail, he is liable to be considered as a co-national and forced to render military service. "La Prensa" promises to return to this important subject, dealing with the various nations wherein this situation may be produced, and examining the various laws with a view to discovering whether the principle of rigorous adherence to the "jus sanguinis" is not possible of relaxation in order to avoid unnecessary conflict.

PAPER MAKING IN ARGENTINA

(La Nación.—September 15).

Under the heading, "The Wealth of the Cordilleras," "La Nación" alludes to the fact that the project dealing with the utilisation of the Neuquen "araucaria imbricata" for wood pulp and paper making will soon be up for discussion, backed by ample data which will be laid before Congress. Want of information will certainly prove no barrier to speedy Parliamentary examination of the proposed measure. Nor ought it to be overlooked, seeing that although but few days remain of the present session, the indisputable importance of the proposals brought forward warrants the subject receiving preferential attention. "La Nación" goes on to state that it, in common with many other people, has repeatedly tried to show that the making of paper from Argentine wood is a matter of public interest. It not only promises to add to the industrial life of the Republic, but also looks like ed owing to bad traffics. Hence an increased tariff is both legal and advisable, but the various managers stated that the views of the Minister of Public Works would be laid before the boards concerned ere definite steps were taken in regard to the advance in tariffs.

HORSE THIEVES IN CORDOBAGRAVE SUGGESTIONS.

From the south of the Province of Cordoba information comes of the depredations of a band of horse thieves, whose pillaging is causing a considerable amount of alarm amongst the stock-owners in that district. The losses are already very considerable, and the greatest indignation is expressed at the complete failure of the protests to raise the police to any form of action.

The stock-owners take every means possible to avoid loss by theft, but have so far been out-manoeuvred. Matters have reached such a pass, and the boldness of the thieves is such that the other day they "lifted" a number of horses and cattle from the estancia of the Governor of the Province himself.

The nature of these robberies, and the fact that they are performed at considerable distances from a previous one, and often twice or more times on the same estancia, gives flavour to the opinion that there is more than one band of horse thieves at work.

A very grave charge has been laid before the Executive concerning the disappearance of a number of valuable animals from an estancia in the south of the Republic of Santa Fé. It is said that these animals were stolen by the police themselves, and were driven by them, and are now kept in the south of Cordoba province. The denunciation states that the estancia was one belonging to an important public functionary. Furthermore it gives an idea of the amazing proportions of the late thefts, firmly charges the police with being concerned in them, and points out the scandal and discredit brought to the province. The Executive is called upon to act immediately.

From another source comes the statement that about a month ago the estancia of Doctor Carcano was robbed and $10,000 worth of horses and cattle driven off. The police have not yet moved in the matter. Fifteen days after the robbery at Doctor Carcano's, the neighbouring one was relieved of 70 bullocks, valued at 30,000 dollars. Again the police have discovered nothing. There are many more cases of less importance reported.

PROPOSED MEMORIALTHE LATE MR. HERBERT ROBINSON OF CONCORDIA.

In view of the fact that it is largely due to the generosity of the late Mr. Herbert Robinson that the English community of Concordia owe their Church building, it has been decided to place in St. Thomas Church in that town a memorial to be subscribed for by present and past residents of that District.

The memorial will take the form of a litany desk with a suitable inscription.

Subscriptions will be received and acknowledged by either of the following:—T. B. Morley, 315 Calle Buenos Aires, Concordia; F. C. Sketch, 338 Calle Primero de Mayo, Concordia.

bringing in something to the revenues from lands that have hitherto been sterile. Labour will flow thither, the paper-making trade will flourish, the literary and graphic arts will, it is reasonable to hope, expand considerably, and the book trade benefit thereby. Hence the legislative chambers ought to decide promptly and one can scarce doubt what their decision will be. Wood pulp costs double what it did a year ago, and when the war is over it will probably be still higher. No article of the first necessity has shown such a heavy increase, not even coal. Hence if this Republic is to rely on imports, it is logical to suppose that the printing trade will suffer, and this means both moral and material loss to the country. The chambers ought to decide the matter before the recess; otherwise it practically means losing a year, and may mean the loss of a golden opportunity, since Argentine capital devoted to the same ends will, as recent cables show, be only too welcome in Chile.

Our Point of View: "Herald" Leading Articles of the Week.

THE OUTLOOK FOR THE ALLIES

FRIDAY, September 10, 1915.

There are many interesting features about the war news of the last day or so, and while some items which would appear to be momentous may not be confirmed as time passes, there is every indication that important developments in the whole situation may be expected. First and foremost is the report that an alliance has been formed through the instrumentality of the Prime Minister of Greece, M. Venizelos, embracing Serbia, Greece, Bulgaria and Rumania. So far no official confirmation of this report is forthcoming, and furthermore it does not appear consistent with the recent announcement that Bulgaria had entered into a treaty with Turkey. If this announcement were true, then we should say at once that the story of the reconstruction of the old League must necessarily be false. Possibly the report of the treaty with Turkey was incorrect and in that case M. Venizelos has most probably succeeded at last in bringing about the alliance. This in itself would constitute a development of immense import to the Allies, and conversely it would be a severe blow to the Germanic alliance.

Another interesting report is that the Allies contemplate making a combined and powerful effort to crush Turkey and force the passage of the Dardanelles. It is asserted that both Italy and Japan are to be associated with this campaign, and that considerable significance is attached to General Joffre's visit to Italy in connection with the contemplated attack. On this point, as on all others about which we have no confirmatory intelligence, it is only possible to speculate, or rather to discuss matters on reasonable grounds of assumption. Such an attack in force on the Dardanelles as is rumoured to be imminent, is an exceedingly probable thing, and from a military point of view would be both eminently desirable and fairly certain of success. In all other theatres of the war except at the Dardanelles, the enemy is practically immovable. He also has the great advantage of being able to move his forces to meet any new pressure. The case of Turkey is different. She is isolated from her allies, and she can be attacked with overwhelming forces without her being able to call up help, unless Austria and Germany force the neutrality of the Balkans.

Under present conditions Turkey is barely holding her own against the determined attacks of the comparatively small forces which the Allies have on Gallipoli. A successful landing of large forces higher up the peninsula and the application of strong pressure through the Caucasus by Russia would certainly lead to decisive results, and it is a campaign that would naturally commend itself to those who possess any military judgment. If it can be assumed that this is to be the next big campaign it is possible to find some sound reason for the appointment of the Grand Duke Nicholas to the command of the Russian armies in the Caucasus. At first glance it undoubtedly looks as though the Grand Duke has been deprived of the command in European Russia, and appointed Viceroy in the south, merely as a polite way of exiling him in disgrace. Probably this is exactly what it does mean, though it cannot fairly be argued that such punishment is deserved. The Grand Duke has not failed in such a manner as to warrant his disgrace. We still maintain that it has been a military achievement of the highest order to effect the retirement of the Russian lines over hundreds of miles of difficult country in the face of a vigorous enemy in great strength, and at the

THE RAILWAY PENSIONS SCHEME

Saturday, Aug. 11.

The proposals of the government for the provision of pensions for the employees of railway companies have apparently not been well received in certain directions of the railway services, and we doubt whether the scheme has ever been so effectively torn to shreds and tatters, as was the case when it came under review by the railway officer whose contribution on the subject was published in THE HERALD yesterday. According to the writer of the article the scheme is not only unsound and unworkable, but it is immoral, and should be opposed by the men whom it is ostensibly designed to benefit. In support of this contention the writer certainly advanced substantial reasons, and laid before the public a series of facts which call for close attention by the general community.

It may be taken for granted of course that the intentions of the framers of the pension scheme are good. They have endeavoured to design a system under which a hard-working section of the industrial community, who deserve well at the hands of the country shall be assured of pensions when their working days are over. The trouble, however, appears to be that good intentions have run fast ahead of wisdom and commonsense. We do not pretend to be thoroughly conversant with the details of the proposed scheme, but accepting the facts to be as stated by the critic we have referred to, it looks as though the government had made a bad bungle of a scheme that had as its basic principle a laudable idea. The scheme proposes to carry out the generous intentions of its originators at the expense of somebody else—in this instance the railway companies and the general public. It is with the latter that we are particularly concerned, though we readily admit the strength of the case of the railway companies which claim that they would be illegally taxed under the Government proposals.

The manner in which the public are to be made to pay for the idea is by the levying of a three per cent subscription on all goods and parcels and by the confiscation of involunsame time avoid anything in the nature of a debacle.

Returning, however, to the question of a general attack by all the Allies on Turkey it is possible that the appointment of the Grand Duke Nicholas as Viceroy in the Caucasus means for him not disgrace, but his selection for a post of prime importance. There has certainly been something lacking on the side of the Russians so far as co-operation with the Allies at the Dardanelles is concerned. Turkey is vulnerable through Asia Minor, and a vigorous attack by Russia who has plenty of troops available in that direction is essential if the attack on the Dardanelles is to succeed. Then again there is the political aspect of the whole situation to be considered. The Balkan kingdoms may really be wavering between hostility to the Germanic Alliance and friendly neutrality toward it. It is reported that Austria has a large force along the frontier of Rumania. At any moment the whole of south eastern Europe may be aflame. Russia can play a large or a small part just according to how her affairs are handled. There may be more behind the appointment of the Grand Duke as Viceroy of Russian Caucasasia than at first sight appears. In every direction there now appears to be movement, and we anticipate important developments within the next few days.

ZEPPELIN RAIDS

SUNDAY, September 12, 1915.

The best feature of the recent Zeppelin raid on the heart of London is that it has given an enormous impetus to recruiting. Thus, in our opinion, is the only effect it should have. We are not disposed to indulge in a tirade of abuse of Germany and her methods, and we are sorry to learn that once more some sections of the British populace have lost control of themselves in a fury of indignation, and have visited mob violence upon Germans and their property in London. We recognise of course that while human nature is what it is, it is impossible to expect people to keep cool when their indignation is aroused to the point of fury by such wanton and wicked attacks as those made upon London and other parts of England by the Zeppelins. We know also that were positions reversed, and were British aeroplanes to shower bombs upon Berlin, the Berliners would very speedily wreck the homes, and attack the persons of any British people who might be there; and the German Government, apparently recognising the fact that mobs cannot be prevented from starting on destruction, took the precaution long ago of internment all alien subjects. This should have been done thoroughly in Britain.

While we feel that the outbursts against Germans in London as a result of the last raid is foolish—almost as foolish and purposeless as the raid itself—we cannot acquit the Government and the Press of England of responsibility for what has happened. Behind the history of the German raids on England we find the same foolish English policy of belittling the enemy, and underrating of his capacity for "frightfulness" as well as his capacity for action. The people of England were warned, from the inception of the war that the Germans would at least make serious tary over-payments to the railway companies. That is to say that if a customer of the railways has paid ten pesos for freightage when he should rightly have paid only eight, the two pesos go to the pension fund. This idea is certainly a bright one, and we can easily imagine what will be said by the victims of it. In the past when they have been overcharged and have discovered the fact, they have had the satisfaction of a fight for their money. In future they will have to bid a long farewell to their money. Maybe the Government has some method of finding out when overcharges have been made, or will devise some means of acquiring the knowledge, but it is certain the public will not be anxious to assist it in discovering overcharges when the sole result is that the public is more certain than ever to lose its money.

On general principles we agree very largely with the criticisms of our contributor. If the railway men want pensions they should provide for them themselves, with the assistance of the companies. We do not see why the public should be directly taxed to benefit the employees of private corporations. If the Government can make the public pay for the pensions for the railway men, then it can make the public pay also for pensions for the tramway companies, or the shipping companies or any other group of private organizations catering for the public service. We have no doubt many of the employees are ready to seize any benefits provided by other people, though to the credit of a large percentage of them it can be said that they have the decency and honesty to feel insulted at the suggestion that they should be the recipients of forced public charity. The whole question is one to which the public should give the closest attention. It is being handled by the politicians in a casual kind of way, and it will undoubtedly result in a bungle or a scandal with the public, as always, the victim and the loser.

attempts to raid England with their airships. How was the warning received? With a shriek of laughter from end to end of England. The Zeppelins were described as unwieldy useless gas-bags, and the idea of them ever reaching England was derided by the popular Press, and made the subject of laboured calculations by supposed experts who set out to demonstrate that a Zeppelin could not travel to London and back, and could not carry sufficient explosives to do any damage, even if she could make the journey.

The sad truth is that Zeppelins have on nearly a score of occasions justified the German claims that they could commit frightful crimes. Since January 19, when Yarmouth and King's Lynn were attacked, German airships have been responsible for the deaths of 108 English people and the wounding of another 250, and each raid has been more deadly than its predecessor. Such results, while they cannot have any military value, and do not effect the result of the war one iota, prove conclusively that the Zeppelin in the hands of the Germans is a deadly and infernal machine when employed against peaceful cities and civilians. Therefore it is time to stop scoffing at it. Apparently this is what the people have done, but now it is too late to start protesting and wailing, nor is any good purpose served by the Press in printing columns of abuse of the German nation. Nothing that the Germans can do should excite surprise, or call forth vain protests and abuse. The British Nation should have recognised long ago that Germany is capable of any crime, and that she may be relied upon to live up to her own professed character for frightful conduct.

It is useless arguing about the Zeppelin raids, and equally useless for the people of England to run riot against individual Germans. The only answer to Zeppelin raids should be a stronger determination to beat the nation responsible for them, and some action toward that end. The man who is roused to a pitch of indignation against the calculated cruelty of the Zeppelin raids, and the submarine horrors, should not smash the nearest German shop windows, or pelt the shopkeeper with stones. That will not end the war, nor give Britain the victory. The best way for such a man to show his indignation, is to join in the work of beating the German nation on the field of battle. Apparently this is what the thinking people of England have decided to do. The best answer to the raids is a rush to the colours. Let Germany see and feel that every Zeppelin raid on England brings ten thousand new soldiers into the field against her, and she will not derive so much satisfaction from her "frightfulness" as she has done in the past.

PATRIOTIC FUNDS

TUESDAY, September 14, 1915.

We have received the report of the Patriotic League of Britons Overseas, together with several other documents dealing with the progress of the League. Very little is known locally about this organisation, and yet it is one of the most powerful and influential organisations, and really the only one covering effectively the patriotic work outside of the British Empire. That the League is not better known in Argentina is due to what the Honorary Secretary, in a letter to THE HERALD, describes as "an unfortunate muddle." The better explanation is, however, that before the real objects of the League were understood, and the influence and importance of its responsible committee were known, the various organisations here committed themselves to a certain extent to a policy of indifference toward it, and consequently the British of Argentina do not figure in the report in any extent commensurate with their numerical strength and wealth.

The League was designed to bring into one organisation for patriotic purposes all the Britons resident overseas in countries outside the Empire. The first object aimed at was the raising of a sufficient sum of money to present a warship to the Nation. In this connection it may be remembered that immediately the formation of the League was announced and its primary purpose outlined in the cablegrams, THE HERALD supported the proposition, but for the reasons which we have stated above the idea failed to arouse any support from the organisations which might have been expected to ally themselves with it. In all other countries, branches of the League were formed. In Chile there are six branches; in Brazil, nine branches. Almost everywhere except in Argentina the League has found active support, branches having been formed under the presidency of the British Ministers or Consuls-General, and the British communities have been brought together under official auspices for patriotic purposes. In Shanghai, as a striking example of what can be done when a community is united and its patriotism appealed to, £10,000 was raised at one meeting.

In commenting on the lack of support from Argentina, the Secretary states that while it is recognised that the British in Argentina have demonstrated their patriotism in many ways, he believes it is only due to some misunderstanding that they have not identified themselves with the League. We are certain this is the case. The British people in Argentina are not one whit less patriotic than their compatriots in other foreign countries. The trouble is that they are scattered over a wide area, and failing a vigorous lead they cannot easily be got to feel that they are embraced in any big movement, the actual working of which they see very little. But that they can be brought into cohesion we are certain. With our own readers, who are spread all over the Republic, we have never experienced any difficulty in securing the heartiest co-operation in any public-spirited movement, and we believe the experience is the same with the British Society. The latter effectively demonstrated the responsiveness of the community recently when it appealed for funds for an aeroplane, and raised all the money necessary within thirty days.

We have gone closely into the organisation of the Patriotic League of Britons Overseas, and have studied the reports of its working for the few months during which it has been in existence. We believe it is an organisation that merits support from Argentina. It has not had that support which it should have had. This is not due to any antagonism to the League, nor is it due to the supposed overstrain on our wealth. So far the British in Argentina have subscribed barely more than £30,000 to various patriotic funds. If the population be 40,000 or more, then this sum does not represent £1 per capita for twelve months. If such a subscription for patriotic or national purposes is to be regarded as sufficient, then we think those who claim that have set a very poor estimate on the value of patriotism and what it means, or calls for. We understand that the question of supporting the League is now before several local organisations, and we shall await with interest their decision in the matter.

WITH THE INSURGENTS

WEDNESDAY, September 15, 1915.

The Globe, London's oldest penny evening journal, has joined the ranks of the insurgents; and now, after little more than a year of war, the Let-us-have-the-Truth Press of Great Britain has a circulation of nearly five million copies daily. If it be admitted that the newspaper-purchasing public of the nation does not exceed eight millions—and we believe the estimate to be a generous one—then the majority of the inhabitants of Britain are opposed to the policy of secrecy and incompetence that has characterised the Government's conduct of the war from the outbreak of hostilities to the present time. Let there be no mistake on this point. It is foolish to imagine that the storm of indignation now sweeping the Mother-country is an artificial campaign existing only in the columns of a cheap "yellow Press." That is far from being the case. Neither the Morning Post, nor the Globe, nor the Manchester Guardian, nor the Daily Express, is controlled by the much-abused Lord Northcliffe. It is true that they, in common with other journals, both dignified and sensational, have followed the lead of the Carmelite Press; but they have done so deliberately and as the result of cool reflection. In effect, they have decided, if tardily, that all is not well in the circles controlling the destinies of the Empire, and they have had the courage to come into the open and loudly proclaim the fact. This gradual transition is significant.

Here in Argentina it is not possible to influence to any great extent the councils of the Empire. The members of the British community have had only one course open to them, and that has been to display silent patriotism. How well they have responded to the call is now becoming a matter of history. Nevertheless, it is not well that a spirit of blind allegiance or quiescent indifference should permeate the community. If our voice be small, that is no reason why it should remain silent. It was on this belief that THE HERALD acted in the early days of the war. Intelligent reading of the cablegrams—confusing though they were—clearly showed that the "walkover" to Berlin was not to be lightly accomplished; careful study revealed the fact that attempts were being made to delude the nation, and alleged "strategic moves" were merely retreats consequent on overwhelming pressure by a numerically superior enemy. More than twelve months have elapsed since THE HERALD commenced its policy of emphasising the truth about the war. That truth was not always palatable; it was sometimes denied by patriots who, if no more ardent, were at any rate less reasonable than ourselves. Our attitude of those days has been vindicated. The Times and the other organs of the Northcliffe school had then just commenced their exposure of Governmental incompetence. Political opponents sought to make capital out of the fact that the journals were Lord Northcliffe's organs, and, in some measure, the attack was successful; but only successful in that it postponed the day when the major portion of the country would awaken to the fact that all was not as it should be.

The first great change occurred when the stately, aristocratic and sincerely snobbish Morning Post joined the insurgents. From that moment, the people of Britain were divided into two camps: those who built their hopes on the victories of the past, and the more rational beings who realised that organisation for war was necessary. The advent of the Daily Express, the Daily Sketch, and—more important still—the Manchester Guardian, to the ranks of critics sealed the fate of the Liberal Ministry and assured the establishment of a Munitions Ministry.

At the moment, it cannot be doubted that Britain is still far from being in a position to end the war rapidly and victoriously. This view is not that of the "yellow Press." It is evident throughout the important utterances of Mr. Lloyd George, Mr. Josiah Wedgwood, and Mr. L. S. Amery, which we reprint on another page this morning. The gravity of the situation is urged by each of these well-known politicians, and it would be idle for the mere layman to join issue with men who do, or should, know better than himself.

Of special importance is the statement by Mr. Josiah Wedgwood, who has fought on both fronts, and was before the war one of the most prominent of anti-militarists in the British House of Commons. His views

DUAL NATIONALITY

THURSDAY, September 16, 1915.

A vitally important question has been broached by La Prensa, which has taken up the matter of dual nationality, and has undertaken further to investigate the problem with a view to securing a relaxation of laws which are in direct conflict one with the other. The method of determining citizenship in most American countries is the simple one of declaring all who are born within the territorial boundaries of the republics to be citizens of those republics, without regard to the citizenship of the parents. Thus a child born in Argentina of British parents, even though they have never naturalised themselves, is an Argentine citizen, liable to fulfil all the responsibilities which that citizenship imposes, and to derive all benefits that it may confer. In direct opposition is the method of most European countries in deciding the citizenship of the children of those who still retain their citizenship of the countries from which they came, and the consequences are decidedly confusing, and frequently very awkward, especially now that half the world is involved in war.

The consequences are particularly severe in the case of those people possessed of a dual nationality, each imposing liability to military service. Thus the young Italian born in this country, and who by Italian law is still a citizen of Italy, is liable to fulfil his military course in Italy. Should he fail to do so, then he is forever barred from entering Italy under pain of being called to account for his default. The operation of such laws is obviously unreasonable. The young Italian is an Argentine citizen. In that capacity he is liable to military service here. As an Argentine citizen he should be at liberty to travel anywhere in the world under the protection of his government, and yet another government, to which possibly he desires to give no allegiance or service, can effectually bar him from exercising the right of an Argentine citizen to travel anywhere without let or hindrance.

La Prensa appears to be in doubt whether the laws of European countries, or rather the principle of "jus sanguinis," or blood law governing citizenship, can, or does prevail, but we know that in the case of Italians born in certain British colonies, the Italian Government can and does call them up for military service, and in cases where the British-Colonial-Italian has not responded to the call, he has had to secure special exemption, or evade Italy forever. In such instances, however, the young Italian is not necessarily of British citizenship by reason of his birth in a British country, the naturalization of his parents being first necessary before he becomes a British subject. Here he would be Argentine by the accident of his birth.

The question is one of considerable importance to British people. It is more than possible that the war will result in a form of conscription being put into force in the United Kingdom. In that case, unless the British Parliament specially exempts from lia-have now changed, and the obvious fact is that the change is due to later and improved knowledge. That knowledge is, as the result of the really patriotic and independent attitude of a large and growing section of the British Press, being made accessible to the general public; and whatever the smaller minds may say, the indisputable fact is that it is only by placing the truth before the nation that the nation is enabled to cope with the dangers confronting it. Britain will win this war—of that there never was and never can be any doubt—but she will have to pay heavily for victory; and the price has been made all the greater by the incompetence of the men who should have led, but have had to be driven.

SHOTS AT THE POLICE

WOMAN'S STRANGE DEED

An extraordinary affair, which is exercising the mind of the police occurred on Sept. 10 in a house in Calle Larrazabal, which is in the jurisdiction of Section 38 of the Police.

The house, No. 3681, is a large one and occupied by several families of work people. On the first floor lives an Italian woman named Baragle, whose husband is an employee on the Pacific Railway. The family is one of several children, all of them young. Late yesterday afternoon the woman shut herself up in the room with her children and commenced to fire off a revolver. The children's cries, the noise of the discharge and the splintering and breaking of furniture and ornaments brought all the neighbours round the door. Soon a vigilante appeared and looked through the key hole only to receive a bullet through his helmet. He retired for assistance and returned with another vigilante, who also attempted to see what was going on. A bullet through the right arm hardly explained the situation.

When the chamber of the revolver was emptied, the police broke down the door and entered. The woman was standing in the centre of the room unharmed, as were all her children.

There was some disorder caused through broken china, but nothing more. Shortly afterwards the husband arrived on the scene and stated that his wife had lately shown symptoms of mental aberration and had a presentiment that she was going to be killed. This point of view of mental aberration is a thing the police cannot understand.

They are energetically employed upon the case. The policeman whose wound in very slight is being attended at the Salaberry Hospital.

EARTHQUAKE IN SAN LUIS

Yesterday morning, to the consternation of the inhabitants, Mercedes, in San Luis Province, was visited by an earthquake.

At 2.45 when the population were buried in slumber, sudden and severe earth tremors woke many families, caused walls to rock and furniture to fall and brought a considerable number of lightly attired people screaming into the streets. No damage has so far been reported.

bility those subjects who possess a dual nationality, the sons of British subjects born in this country will be placed in the same position as the sons of Italian subjects. They will be at once Argentines and Britons as they now are, and liable to service in the country of their birth as well as in the country of their origin, or parentage. On the face of it it is clearly impossible for one of dual nationality to fulfil the obligations imposed on him by both nations of which he is claimed to be a subject, and without delay an anomalous state of affairs should be abolished. It should be possible—if not now, certainly so soon as the war is over—for an international arrangement to be arrived at to solve the problem. If it be not solved it is certain to lead to serious trouble in the future. It can be argued, of course, that the solution lies with the individual himself, who can decide for himself which country shall really possess his allegiance in fact, and by deed, but there should be no legal doubt about a man's citizenship. It is desirable that every man should know clearly how he stands in relation to the country of his birth. If he be legally an Argentine, then he should be free of any obligation to all other countries. Dual nationality confers no benefits upon him as a rule, but it can very easily impose hardships upon him. We trust La Prensa will be able to fulfil its promise to investigate the legal status of the man of dual nationality, and that as a result of the investigation action will be taken to avoid conflict.

CATTLE MARKET

ENTERED: 4,056.

Pigs	866
Prices: 23 to 31 cents per kilo.
Summary of Purchasers.
La Plata	895
Sansinena	516
Armour	192
La Blanca	108
Argentino	86
Smithfield	68
Total	1,865

Prices for Wednesday

SALES.

Juan Lalor—

From Navarro: 22 steers at $200, 23 at 204, 2 cows at 183, 5 at 129, 3 calves at 70, 18 steers at 220; from Coronel Suarez: 22 steers at 155; from Azul: 5 steers at 270, 5 at 153; from Chivilcoy: 3 steers at 156, 2 at 150, 3 at 141, 3 at 115, 4 at 143, 7 at 147.50, 9 at 140, 6 at 97, 3 at 69.50, 16 at 180; from R. Paz: 22 steers at 92, 25 at 82, 5 young steers at 78; from Suipacha: 4 young steers at 114, 3 cows at 137, 13 steers at 154; from General Arenales: 7 cows at 118, 5 at 160; from Santa Fe: 1 bullock at 239, 9 at 123, 12 at 150; from 9 de Julio: 10 heifers at 72.50, 3 at 96.50, 13 calves at 61, 8 at 59; from Matanzas: 4 cows at 57, 3 heifers at 60, 30 young steers at 95, 25 at 79.50, 20 at 72, 10 at 70; from Santa Fe: 7 calves at 55, 9 at 45, 3 cows at 97, 9 at 79, 8 young steers at 108, 3 heifers at 77, 2 calves from Matanzas at 83.

Crespo y Rodriguez—

From Chacabuco: 3 cows at $150, 3 stags at 118, 2 cows at 108, 3 bullocks at 250, 7 steers at 170, 2 bullocks at 180, 3 stags at 140; from Lincoln: 5 cows at 118, 2 steers at 170.

Fortunato B. Arzeno y Hnos.—

From Santa Fe: 22 steers at $235, 26 cows at 170; from Echeverria: 104 cows at 150; from Santa Fe: 3 cows at 140, 2 at 87, 3 heifers at 95.

Juan Elordy y Cia.—

From 25 de Mayo: 10 bullocks at $190, 4 cows at 160, 2 bullocks at 145, 5 steers at 145, 3 heifers at 100, 18 young steers at 108, 3 calves at 65; from Villegas: 10 young steers at 95.

Podestà y Cia.—

From Zárate: 15 bullocks at $245, 20 at 202, 60 steers at 175, 20 at 230, 10 heifers at 70.

Nale, Repetto y Cia.—

From Matanzas: 3 cows at $80, 3 young steers at 100, 10 calves at 88, 11 at 84, 3 at 55, 3 heifers at 55.

Estrugamou y Cia.—

From Chivilcoy: 11 steers at $185, 3 bullocks at 230, 2 steers at 220, 13 cows from Lincoln at 145.

Juan Curutchet—

From Lincoln: 10 steers at $170, 4 at 122, 16 cows at 175.

Bargo, Lascurain y Etchegaray—

From Coronel Suarez: 12 cows at $142.

Julio L. Peña y Cia.—

From Tandil: 10 steers at $195; from Santa Fe: 57 steers at 125, 8 at 175, 19 at 145; from Cordoba: 3 steers at 100; from Suipacha: 8 cows at 175, 8 at 170; from Lujan: 3 steers at 135, 3 cows at 125, 8 calves at 50; from Matanzas: 75 young steers at 90, 11 steers at 135; from Santa Fe: 53 do. at 198.

Caballos y Cufré—

From Rodriguez: 30 steers at $200, 16 at 170, 8 at 140; from 9 de Julio: 10 young steers at 138, 6 cows at 140, 2 at 95.

Crotto Hermanos—

From Azul: 20 cows at $152.

Miguel Ardoain—

From Laprida: 5 cows at $125, 5 heifers at 105.

Uzué, Alzaga y Cia.—

From Santa Fe: 5 young steers at $95, 10 heifers at 95, 17 calves at 65.

Angel Velaz y Cia.—

From Lincoln: 17 steers at $200, 5 cows at 128, 3 heifers at 105.

MESSRS P. AND G. HUGHES'

SALE OF IMPORTED BULLS.

Great interest was manifested in the sale which took place yesterday of a lot of Shorthorn bulls imported by the well known firm of Messrs. P. and G. Hughes. There are few importers who understand the business better than Messrs. Hughes, and any stock offered for sale under their auspices invariably attract the widest attention on the part of breeders. Messrs. Hughes generally make the wisest selection of animals for this market, and their purchases are always presented in the sale ring in first class condition. Many keen judges in the large crowd which attended the sale yesterday at Bullrich's yards expressed the opinion that they had never seen bulls in better condition, even in the show ring at Palermo.

Among the lot of 19 submitted to the hammer at yesterday's event were several magnificent animals with splendid records in the prize rings of the United Kingdom. Such was "Caledon Red Baron," for which Mr. E. Perkins gave $10,500. For the other bulls fairly good prices were obtained. They might well have been higher considering the quality of the bulls, but the season is now well advanced. Following are the prices realised for the different animals, and the buyers:—"Bright Orphan," $3,000 (Degregory Hnos.); "Proud Caledonia," $5,000 (Alfredo Repetto é Hijos); "Choice Clipper," $3,700 (Juan B. Passerco); "Frascati," $1,800 (A. Olivari); "Slow Motion," $4,100 (Federico de Toledí); "Luxury Mason," $2,500 (J. Fraser); "Rosemar 2nd," $1,800 (Agustin Smith); "Orange King," $3,500 (Beriso Hnos.); "Roan Design," $2,500 (E. Kelly); "Tango Tea," $5,000 (Miles Pasman); "Farm Hill Banner," $3,100 (José M. Zebe rico é Hijos); "Ideal Welcome," $2,000 (Agustin Smith); "Silverhill Village Conqueror," $3,400 (Eugenio Moore); "Wellington," $4,700 (Germán Ortíz); "Ballysudden Victor," $2,000 (Emilio Garden); and "Caledon Red Baron," $10,500 (E. Perkins).

Andrés Maraspín y Cia.—

From Pampa Central: 17 cows at $180, 16 at 175, 4 at 150, 3 heifers at 140, 4 at 127, 4 steers at 180, 17 calves at 88.

Juan Anasagasti—

From Santa Fe: 19 cows at $145; from Bahía Blanca: 20 young steers at 135; from Pampa Central: 18 cows at 140, 80 heifers at 83, 66 at 60.

Palacios Hermanos—

From Tandil: 5 steers at $180, 12 young steers at 130, 7 cows at 125.

Ignacio Goñi é Hijos—

From Santa Fe: 44 cows at $125, 2 steers at 150.

Juan Chapar y Cia.—

From General Belgrano: 9 steers at $210, 9 cows at 170.

Martínez de Hoz Hnos.—

From Santa Fe: 10 steers at $215.

Tomás Devoto y Cia.—

From Junin: 73 steers at $215, 5 young steers at 145, 6 cows at 150, 7 calves at 63; from Suipacha: 5 bullocks at 178, 6 heifers at 102.

Lizarralde Hermanos—

From Las Heras: 40 steers at $100, 14 young steers at 162.

BACTERIOLOGICAL INSTITUTE

LIGNIERES HERMANOS

(Adolfo Marcelo & Luis Lignieres)

Vaccine & Serums for Stock

VACCINE for CARBUNCLO, MANCHA, TRISTEZA, ENTEQUE, TUBERCULINAS, LOMBRIZ - TIFUS EQUINO. Etc., Etc.

Rats Exterminated by Virus

The Vaccine, and Serums are personally and exclusively prepared by Adolfo Marcelo and Luis Lignieres, which ensures successful results.

ORDERS AND INFORMATION TO:

748 Pueyrredon 748 - Buenos Aires

Mr. Joseph Shepherd

1 HATTON GARDENS, LONDON.

Exporter of High-Class Pedigree Animals.

HEAVY DRAUGHT-HORSES SUITABLE FOR EXPORT PURCHASED

Local Representative:

Mr. A. Machattie,

San Martín 254, Buenos Aires.

SHEEP MARKET

ENTRIES: 7,506.

Local butchers	2,320
La Plata	1,569
Sansinena	986
Armour	218
La Blanca	940
Argentino	110
Las Palmas	147

Total 6,290

Prices for Wednesday

SALES.

Bargo, Lascurain y Etchegaray—

From Chelforo: 170 cap. frig. at $15.20, 53 at 13, 162 cap. inv. at 11.40; from Lonquimay: 154 cap. frig. at 18, 53 cap. mat. at 22.30.

Julio L. Peña y Cia.—

From Olivera: 110 cord. mat. at $7.20, 10 cap. frig. at 10.50.

Bunge y Born—

From Ibarra: 110 cap. mat. at $11.

Pedro y Antonio Lanusse—

From Palantolen: 63 cap. irfg. at $19.30, 12 ovejas mat. at 17, 65 cord. mat. at 6.80; from Udaquiola: 42 cap. frig. at 16.90, 36 bgos. mat. at 11; from Las Hermanas: 92 cap. frig. at 17.50; from A. Corti: 44 cap. frig. at 16; from Trail: 18 cap. frig. at 13, 10 bgos. mat. at 10, 24 at 11, 15 cord. mat. at 5.80, 71 ovejas mat. at 15.90, 147 at 11.60, 347 bgos. frig. at 13, 53 cap. frig. at 15.50.

Lizarralde Hnos.

From Castellanos: 10 cap. mat. at $27.50, 27 at 22, 12 ovejas mat. at 25, 10 at 17.70, 17 bgos. frig. at 17.

Unzué Alzaga y Cia.—

From Laplacette: 22 cap. frig. at $13.50, 68 ovejas mat. at 13.20, 114 cord. mat. at 6.30.

Enrique A. Thompson y Cia.—

From T. Uriburu: 49 cap. frig. at $20, 28 at 17.

Juan Lalor—

From Bacacay: 67 bgos. frig. at $11.50, 90 cord. frig. at 9.10.

S. Abello y Cia—

From La Canals: 84 cap. frig. at $20.30.

Patron Costas y Perú—

From Las Hermanas: 185 cap. frig. at $17.40.

Ignacio Goñi é Hijos—

From Pelicurá: 106 bgos. frig. at $18, 106 ovejas mat. at 19.10, 50 cord. mat. at 7.80.

Juan Chapar—

From Cabildo: 240 cap. frig. at $18.50, 28 ovejas mat. at 13.50, 18 bgos. frig. at 11.30; from Lonquimay: 125 bgos. frig. at 11.80; from N. Roma: 148 ovejas mat. at 12.60, 50 cord. mat. at 7.60, 80 at 7.60; from A. Corti: 159 ovejas mat. at 14.50; from Egaña: 45 ovejas mat. at 12.70, 45 cap. inv. at 11.50; from Stegman: 88 cap. frig. at 19.50.

RAILWAY TRAFFICS.

The subjoined traffic returns for the week ending Sept. 4 are compared with the corresponding week of last year

Railway.	Gross Take	Increase or Decrease	Inc. or Dec. per mile	Miles Open	Aggregate from July 1st.	Increase or Decrease
	£	£	£	1914	1915	£
Central Railway	105,600	+ 16,100	+ 4 9 11	3,262	3,307	+144,300
Southern Railway	85,000	+ 24,000	+ 6 1 7	3,729	3,792	+ 96,000
Pacific Railway	75,000	+ 17,000	+ 4 14 7	3,517	3,534	+141,000
Western Railway	41,000	+ 9,000	+ 4 2 0	1,792	1,867	+ 69,000
Arg. North-Eastern Railway	8,152	+ 3,143	+ 3 14 9	667	752	+ 14,184
Central Cordoba	20,500	- 9,905	- 8 7 0	1,186	1,186	- 18,835
Central Uruguay	19,778	+ 6,383	+ 6 10 6	978	978	+ 33,204
	$	$	$			$
Province of Buenos Aires	122,840	+ 18,174	+ 23.01	790	790	+485,224
Paraguay Central	473,074	+237,051	+ 929.61	255	255	+1,341,717

MEAT EXPORTS

The Sansinena Frozen Meat Company advises despatch by the s.s. Sutherland Grange for Liverpool of 6036 quarters of frozen beef (518 tons).

By the Highland Rover, to London, the Sansinena sent 2459 carcasses of frozen mutton and 127 quarters of frozen beef. Also by the Highland Brigade to Liverpool they shipped 484 quarters of frozen beef and 1428 quarters frozen beef by the Hermione to Liverpool.

La Plata Cold Storage Company, Ltd., have despatched from La Plata for Liverpool by the Sutherland Grange 5948 quarters of frozen beef.

By the Zealandic, the same Company sent off for Marseilles 19,732 quarters of frozen beef and 6557 carcasses of mutton.

The Armour Frigorifico advise despatch from La Plata of 2503 fore and 2445 hind quarters of frozen beef for Liverpool by the s.s. Sutherland Grange.

The La Blanca Company have forwarded to London by the Highland Rover 3201 carcasses of mutton and 78 of lamb.

By the Sutherland Grange, the same Company have shipped for Liverpool 3498 carcasses of mutton, and 17,054 quarters of frozen beef.

La Plata Cold Storage Company have forwarded by the s.s. Dochra for Marseilles 12,204 quarters of frozen beef.

Las Palmas Produce Company advise despatch by Highland Scot for London of 4,365 carcasses of frozen mutton, 3,066 of frozen lamb and 1,178 each fore and hind quarters of beef.

By the Vestris to New York the same Company have sent 1,962 each fore and hind quarters of frozen beef.

The Sansinena Meat Company have forwarded by Demerara to Liverpool 3780 quarters (308 tons) of frozen beef.

By Vestris, for New York, the La Blanca Company have shipped 5332 quarters frozen beef and 1182 quarters chilled beef.

La Blanca Company sent to London by Highland Scot 3758 carcasses of mutton, 281 of lamb and 3932 quarters of chilled beef; and to Liverpool by Demerara 7986 quarters frozen beef.

The Armour Frigorifico reports shipment by the Vestris for New York of 2260 fore and 2269 hind quarters frozen beef (414 tons).

COTTON AS CONTRABAND

BRITAIN TO INSIST ON GUARANTEES FROM EXPORTERS

Manchester, Sept. 11.

The British Government has announced that in the case of cotton fabrics being exported to countries other than British possessions the shipments will require a certificate guaranteeing that the goods shall not reach the hands of a hostile Power.

GRAIN MARKET

TERMINAL CEREAL MARKET.

First Ring.

No operations.

Second Ring.

Linseed.

For October—100 tons Darsena at $11.10 and 200 at 11 05. Total 300.

REGISTERED CONTRACTS.

(Delivered in Buenos Aires).

Linseed.

For October—100 tons at $11.10.

Official Prices.

Wheat.

For September Darsena. . . $10.70

For January Darsena. . . 9.80

Linseed.

For September Darsena. . . 10.95

For October Darsena. . . 11.05

For November Darsena. . . 11.15

Maize.

For September Darsena. . . 4.60

For October Darsena. . . 4.70

For November Darsena. . . 4.80

CHAMBER OF CEREALS QUOTATIONS.

Prices in the Bolsa de Comercio.

100 kilos waggon Darsena.
(Available).

Linseed. 10.70

Wheat for bread. 12.20

Do Barletta for Europe. 11.30

Do do for bread. 11.10

Do do (Export. Europe). 10.50

Do do (Export. Brazil). 11.90

Oats Bahia Blanca. 5.60

Yellow maize. 4.45

NATIONAL PRODUCE EXCHANGE.

(Rosario de Santa Fe).

First Ring.

No operations.

Second Ring.

Maize.

For November—100 tons at $4.58.

Official Prices.

Wheat.

For September. $11.85

For October. 11.90

For November. 11.80

Available. 11.85

For January. 9.40

Linseed.

For September. 10.40

For October. 10.50

For November. 10.90

Available. 10.35

For January. 9.40

Maize.

For September. 4.45

For October. 4.50

For November. 4.60

Available. 4.45

In Rosario.

Wheat No. 1. 12.50

Wheat No. 2. nominal

Linseed. 10.40

Maize. 4.35

WHEAT PRICES

The report of the Centro de Acopiadores states that their previously expressed opinions are fully confirmed to the effect that the drought, recently broken, would not seriously affect quotations for wheat, linseed or maize. From the first the opinion was held that there would be no change in prices or that Brazilian consumption would prevent a drop. No improvement in maize prices was expected in view of the difficulty of placing the grain in Europe and the considerable stocks still on hand.

THE MEXICAN MUDDLE

Washington, Sept. 15.

American Consuls and Consular agents in the Mexican States of Soñora and Chihuahua have been ordered to withdraw within the borders of the United States on account of the danger of border risings and the inability of the Mexican military leaders to protect them.

PHILIP & CARRUTHERS

Camp and Live Stock Agents

Calle Cangallo 456

BUENOS AIRES

U.T. 3881 Avenida

WANTED: Heavy Horses
suitable for Exportation.

On Sale: Imported and Camp Bulls of all Breeds, Rams, Pigs, etc.

LINKING-UP THE REPUBLICS

B. A. TO CALLAO BY RAIL IN NEAR FUTURE.

The connecting link between the Argentine and Bolivian railway systems is about to be built after long years of debate. It is announced that the Bolivian Government has entered into agreement with the Charles Vezin Company, of Paris, to construct the line between La Quiaca and Tupiza. The former is on the Argentine frontier and is the terminus for the Central Norte, and the latter is the last station on the La Paz railway. The Argentine Government has also promised support and all the necessary material for the 104 kilometres of line will be discharged at the port of Santa Fe, from whence it will be transported by the Central Norte to its destination.

The importance of the new railway is obvious; it will link together the railways of Argentina and those of Bolivia and through these to Peru. It will be, in course of time, possible to travel by rail from Buenos Aires to Callao. The sleepers used in the construction will be purchased in the Chaco.

DRAGGED TO DEATH

SHOCKING END OF A YOUNG MAN.

News has been received from General Villegas of a shocking accident, which occurred on Saturday and cost the life of a young man, the son of a well-known landowner in that district, Don Celestino Fernandez.

The accident occurred at Elordy, where Don Fernandez has an estancia. At eight o'clock in the morning young Alexander Fernandez was engaged in an effort to lasso some cattle. His horse, untrained and restless, became frightened with the swirl of the rope and bolted throwing its rider. In some manner the rope entangled itself round the rider's neck, who was dragged a considerable distance along the ground and hanged. Death was instantaneous.

The sad death of the young man has caused a profound sensation, and great sympathy is expressed for his bereaved family.

BAHIA BLANCA NEWS

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT].

Sept. 12.

Patriotic Banquet.

Arrangements had been made to hold a banquet last night in honour of the anniversary of the battle of the Marne, but it was decided to abandon the project and give the money that would have been spent on it to the Red Cross Funds of the Allies.

Bazaar in Aid of the Missions to Seamen.

A meeting was held last Friday at the small hall in the Port in order to consider the question of whether the proposed Bazaar in aid of the Missions to Seamen should be proceeded with, or whether the funds in hand should be devoted to some other purpose. At the meeting were present Mesdames Harding, Green, Migotti, Bennett, Pollard, Macdonald, Mac Kerrow, Robertson, Pye, Haliwell, Watt, Simpson, MacKensie, Tregathan, Atwood, Mortimer, Miss Bennett and the Rev. Mr. Sanderson. After the meeting had been opened it was unanimously decided to continue with the bazaar, the object of which was to raise funds for the building of the Missions to Seamen's Institute. This bazaar is to be held on December 18, in the large hall at the Port, and weekly meetings are to be held on Tuesdays at 2.30 p.m. in the small room now used for the Missions Hall.

Hereford Cattle.

After various trials the Hereford cattle are thought to be as good as any for the Neuquen climate, and on one estancia alone situated near Las Lajas, there are no less than five thousand of this class of animal. The majority of the grazing land near to the Cordilleras is situated at more than a thousand feet above the level of the sea, the climate there in winter is very trying, as sometimes in June and July the temperature is sometimes as much as 20 below zero, and there are also very heavy rainfalls at times which flood everything. It is estimated that a half-bred steer will eat the same amount of pasture as a criollo while the first will yield 280 kilos against the latter's 160.

Livestock Sales.

At the sales of livestock held here on Thursday last fat half-bred cows were sold at $130 to $151, steers $132 to $140, criollo steers $112 to $116; Hereford steers, 1 year old, $82.50, criollo cows $77.50, Rambouillet wethers $12, the total amount of the sales being $24,855. The next auction of live stock will be held on October 5.

PERFECT FENCING

— from the —
ONLY Factory for Wire
Moulding.

C. DELVEAUX,
Rivadavia 2247, Bs. As.

U.T. 3618 Mitre

Alfredo J. White

Solicitor and Accountant

Cordoba 1321, Rosario

Tel. No. 5191

PASSENGER LISTS

S.S. HIGHLAND SCOT.

Among the saloon passengers who left by the Nelson liner Highland Scot on Tuesday were the following:—Mr. F. A. Waugh, Miss M. Pophan Wrixon, Mr. Percy J. Grove, Miss Emily L. Walton, Mr. Giovanni Colombo, etc.

R.M.S.P. DEMERARA.

The following passengers leave to day by the R.M.S.P. Demerara:—Virgil R. Kershner, Harry H. Gomm, John Logan, Flavio R. Colmegua, F. J. Williams, P. del Campo, Joao N. de Pinto, Norton Eden, Corregge A. O. Berner, Margaret Alderson, Annie Briggs, Mary Johnston, Bertran H. Briggs, Pedro Latorre, Henry A. Westmoreland, William Wakling, Ernesto Baby, George C. Henry, John A. Blaylock, Tomas Wilding, E. Helen Wilding, Arthur H. Green, Ivan Sinitsa, Timoley Sinitsa, Carl Robert Christensen, Ivan Mozour, Jacobo Bobeck and Laurence G. Freeman.

S.S. VESTRIS.

The Lamport and Holt liner Vestris will sail this afternoon from La Plata on arrival of the 10.53 train from Plaza Constitucion, with the following passengers for New York:—

Mr. Albert de Ibarra, Mr. Carlos Ibarra, Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Scott, Mr. Raul Barthe, Mr. Alfred C. Rapkin, Mr. Marcelino Paz, Mr. John M. Strausner, Mrs. Alcira A. de Raybaud, Miss Maria Alcira, Mrs. B. Jones, Miss M. Jones, Mrs. Ruth Chandler, Mr. Morris Uri, Mr. Abel Ezeiza, Mr. Manuel Aguilo, Mr. J. J. O'Rourke, Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Goodmansson, Mr. Louis C. Decius, Mr. G. O. Tuck, Mr. P. C. Schilling, Mr. E. E. Ling, Mr. James C. Jones, Mr. Guillermo Amar, Mr. G. T. McHardy, Mr. A. S. McHardy, Mr. L. J. Ollesheimer, Mr. J. N. Rose, Mr. P. G. Russell, Mr. W. J. Hussey, Miss Maria Amalia Raybaud, Miss Zulema Raybaud, Miss Sarita Raybaud, Miss Maria Matilde Raybaud, Mr. Casimiro Ain, Mr. J. L. Marty, Miss Edith Simpson, Mrs. Carolina Cafaggi, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Alborta, Mrs. Sara Bierman, Mrs. Louise Denelle, Mrs. Lena Greenspan, Mr. E. Hermansen, Mr. Lisandro Caceres, Mr. Juan P. Palacios, Mr. and Mrs. Ubblio Zanelli.

R. H. L. TUBANTIA.

The following passengers leave for Europe on Friday by the Royal Holland Lloyd steamer, Tubantia:—Mr. F. Torromé, Mrs. C. E. C. Henderson Torromé, Mr. R. H. Aramburu, Mrs. C. Soler Espeleta Aramburu, Dr. M. Casas, Mr. E. Tomkinson Ugarte, Miss C. Tomkinson Ugarte, Miss A. Tomkinson Ugarte, Mr. A. Discry, Mr. J. Edwards, Mr. J. Guldman, Mrs. M. B. Montes Guldman, Mr. F. Anchorena, Mr. and Mrs. P. Mira, Mr. Mira, Mr. J. A. Saenz, Mr. C. E. von Bernhard, Mr. O. Ossovetzky, Mr. L. A. Barling, Mr. F. S. J. M. Sala, Miss M. Hartwig, Mr. H. Trounson, Mrs. D. Trounson, Mr. A. E. Steel, Miss A. E. Norris, Mr. A. Monti, Mrs. C. Monti de Rosa, Mr. J. P. Herraez, Mr. J. E. Blanco, Mr. E. E. Blanco, Miss Frieda Koch, Mrs. A. A. den Tex Engelberts, Miss E. Spaucke, Mr. P. Azzollini, Mr. G. C. Jockes, Mrs. A. Azzollini, Mr. R. Azzollini, Mr. S. Benbasat, Dr. Sandeford, Mr. J. Sastre, Miss V. P. Sastre, Miss P. Sastre, Miss Sara Massue, Mr. M. Groenendijk, Mr. N. Scheepbouwer, Mr. L. M. Vernimmen, Mr. M. Medrano, Mrs. S. I. M. Medrano, Mr. and Mrs. B. B. Burns, Mr. B. B. Burns, Mr. J. Bouzas, Mrs. R. Schweizer, Mr. W. Schweizer, Miss L. Schweizer, Miss L. Weber, Miss C. Reiss, Mrs. I. Sommer, Mr. J. Gontan, Mrs. M. L. Gontan, Mr. J. Castro, Miss A. Stange, Mr. G. Levy, Mr. and Mrs. J. Spear, Mr. A. King, Mr. Solari, Mr. J. J. Schreyer, Dr. E. Schlund, Mrs. V. Breuil, Mrs. A. S. Leão, Mr. J. M. Gonzalez Vispa, Mr. M. J. Kunstenaar, Mr. L. Kunstenaar, Mr. and Mrs. D. Dimensten, Mrs. Hartley, and Miss A. J. Lebreton.

R.H.L. TUBANTIA.

The following passengers arrived on Sept. 11 by the R.H.L. s.s. Tubantia:—

His Excellency P. Dinichert, Swiss Minister; Lt.-Col. Enrique Peme and family, Military Attaché to the Argentine Legation in London, Sr. and Sra. J. Gironde, Dr. Aneiva and family, G. Duhalde, G. Purcel, Mrs. T. Morgan and family, Mr. and Mrs. P. Dirks, G. and H. Rojas, H. Zublin, Ph. Yung, A. Hansen and family, Mr. and Mrs. P. den Tex, J. van Leeuwen, M. Mohr, A. Stephard, E. Hall, E. Ehrhardt, G. Thompson and family, A. Percival, A. Brown, W. Mullville, Mr. and Mrs. D. Bombal, L. Greef, J. Gonzalez and family, A. Fernandez and family, J. Legrand, R. Martien, A. Pillitz and son, Bosman van Oudkarspal, C. Mulder, J. Molder and family, D. Vila, P. Garcia, G. Barreiro and family, F. Franco and family, A. Claro, M. de Britto, J. de Chaves, J. Albertotti, F. Mella, F. Gould, R. Btesh and family, J. Brannon, H. Conille, A. Hamelinck, M. Kasel, J. Carcavallo, A. da Cunha and Sra. da Cunha, F. Santos, E. Eguira and family, M. Chamorin, E. Brown, A. King, Mr. and Mrs. J. Spear, E. Tillen, A. Remy, C. Dolianes, A. Pinson, C. Pastore and Sra. Pastore, J. Diebergen, J. Bollo, C. Rabenalt, J. Schiff and sons, B. Beckers, K. Liljedahl and wife, O. Alberger, H. Wiemers, M. and H. Soennet, F. Weiss and sons, P. Krumpster, Mrs. Trider and daughter, A. Curming.

L. AND H. VAUBAN.

The Lamport and Holt s.s. Vauban from New York entered the North Basin on Tuesday with the following passengers:—Mrs. Winifred B. Ayres, Mr. Jorge Pinedo, Mrs. John S. Calvert, Mr. John S. Calvere, Junr., Mr. Fred. Stinson, Mr. Thomas de la Hunt, Mr. Carlos R. Barsotti, Mr. Timoteo Ussher, Mr. Hellis R. Ussher, Mr. Rafael Dominguez, Mr. Andres R. Moalpinio, Mr. Charles E. Elliott, Mr. Gustav Josohke, Mr. Henry H. Hahn, Mr. Gregory Rengle, Mr. Charles W. Linklater, Mr. Mike Funk, Mr. Herman Weethouse, Mr. Juan Hoursourpipe, Mrs. Amy L. de Hoursourpipe, Mr. Harry C. Crowther, Mr. Charles H. Lauritzen, Mr. Rudolph F. Myers, Mr. John W. White, Junr., Mr. Roy C. Barnes, Mrs. Roy C. Barnes, Mr. W. Sprague Brooks, Mr. E. Kenneth Hoyt, Mr. Ernest Neele, Mr. Henry Atterbury, Mrs. Henry Atterbury, Mr. Frank J. Solis, Mr. Benito A. Alvarez, Mr. Fred. P. Root, Mrs. Fred. P. Root, Mr. Louis Basch, Mrs. Ruby H. Richardson, Misses Margaret and Elizabeth Richardson, Mr. Henry Chapman, Mr. Adolpho de Romero, Mr. Percy A. Catley, Mr. Enrique F. Echeves, Mrs. Luise Echeves, Mrs. Maria E. Sarsotti, Miss Estela Sarsotti, Mr. Roberto Sarsotti, Mr. and Mrs. William E. Leigh, Mr. Fred. A. Dickhoff, Mr. Morris Hece, Mr. Juan Duhalde, Mr. Juan P. Rojas, Mr. A. Vicente Sefredi, Mr. George Wilson, Mrs. Helen Paz, Mr. Thomas Paz, Mr. Carl Prinz, Mr. Lewis F. Higinbotham, Mrs. Lina Lahoz, Mrs. Helen Murdoch, Mr. R. Francisco Apesseeche, Mrs. Robina H. de Apesseeche, Mr. Eugenio Restoy, Mr. Santiago Larraldi, Mr. Luis M. Lairet, Mr. Manuel Palacios, Mrs. Eugenie Marchand, Mrs. Julia Novas Portas, and Mr. Manuel José Cirqueira.

RISE IN THE RIVER PARANA

SHIPPING DIFFICULTIES ENDED.

From Corrientes and Misiones reports continue to come to hand concerning the increase in the waters of River Parana. The difficulties and late inconveniences to shipping may be now considered as being entirely removed and the general traffic of the river again normal.

Dredging operations are still being continued. The depths at various points in the River has been officially issued as follows:—Colastiné-Rosario 15 feet 6 inches; Santa Fé-Rosario, the Invernada Channel 19 feet, entrance to Bajada Grande, Rosario 17 feet 6 inches; Rosario-San Pedro 24 feet.

PACIFIC MAIL STEAMSHIP POSITION.

RESULT OF RECENT U.S. LEGISLATION.

THE ABANDONMENT OF A TRADE ROUTE.

The Pacific Mail Steamship Company has, as already announced, decided to withdraw from the Pacific trade, thereby leaving open to commercial rivals a very valuable route. The reason for this action on the part of the American undertaking is to be found in certain recent legislation passed by the Washington Government, and particularly what is known as La Follette's Seamen's Act, which will come into operation some months hence, and will render it necessary that on every vessel trading to America at least 75 per cent. of the crew shall be able to understand the orders given them. That is to say, three-quarters of the personnel of every ocean-going vessel must understand Anglo-Saxon. The net result of this measure is to render ineligible a very large proportion of the black crews which have hitherto served on American vessels. To replace them with white labour would, it is estimated, involve in the case of such a company as the Pacific Mail Steamship line an addition of something like £120,000 per annum to the wages bill, and such an amount, it may be mentioned, would far exceed the company's net earnings under normal conditions, while it is very doubtful whether such a surplus would be achieved even under exceptionally favourable circumstances. Consequently the directors have decided to abandon their existing connections, and, with the disappearance of this line between the West Coast of America and the Orient, it may be said that every American steamer will have been driven off the Pacific Ocean. Such a development was scarcely expected by President Wilson when La Follette's Act was passed, and there is little doubt that this disastrous piece of legislation will be revised at the earliest possible date. Meanwhile, however, British shipowners, being preoccupied in connection with the war, the Pacific Ocean may be said to have been abandoned to the Japanese, and they, naturally enough, are making the most of the exceptional opportunity presented to them of doing fresh business on a remunerative basis. It is not to be expected, however, that the United States will continue to place itself at a disadvantage in connection with its Oriental rival, and if the shipping interests on the other side of the Atlantic have any influence at all it will not be long before they compel President Wilson to introduce an Amending Bill. The provisions of the existing measure are condemned by practically all classes in America, the general feeling being that the Act was passed without sufficient consideration, which is undoubtedly quite true. To remedy the obvious defects of the measure would be a perfectly simple matter, and while the Act may possibly remain in force so long as the Government at Washington are intent upon the course of the crisis in Europe and developments in Mexico, an overriding Bill will undoubtedly be introduced as soon as the authorities at Washington are less hard pressed than at present.

SEVEN "HUN" STEAMERS

In accordance with the Admiralty decision to associate the names of the enemy steamers which are being employed in British service with their original owners, the modern Huns, seven large steamers appear in the new volume of Lloyd's Register with the prefix "Hun." Their new names, old names, and tonnage are given as follows:—

Hungerford, ex-Lautenfels, 5,811 tons; Hunstanton, ex-Werdenfels, 4,504 tons; Huntly, ex-Ophelia, 1,153 tons; Hunsdon, ex-Arnfried, 2,899 tons; Huntress, ex-Frisia, 4,997 tons; Hunsate, ex-Altair, 2,220 tons; Huntsend, ex-Lutzwow, 8,826 tons.

The steamers are described as being requisitioned either for British Government service or by the Admiralty.

Buenos Aires Herald

Weekly Illustrated Edition

CORRIENTES 672

Proprietor: THOMAS BELL.

All communications for the Editorial Department should be addressed to The Editor. Business letters should be addressed to The Manager. It is particularly requested that correspondence of an editorial or business nature should not be addressed to Mr. Bell, or to anyone personally, otherwise delay and inconvenience will result.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

WEEKLY.

Town or Camp:

Yearly	$ 14 00
Half yearly	" 7 50
Quarterly	" 4 00

Other Countries:

Yearly (£1.13s.0d.)	$ 19 30 m/l
Half-yearly (17s.6d.)	" 10 00 "
Quarterly (9s.7d.)	" 5 50 "

DAILY.

Town or Camp:

Yearly	$ 20 00 m/l
Half-yearly	" 11 00 "
Quarterly	" 6 00 "
Per month	" 2 00 "

Other Countries:

Per annum (£3.7s.3d.)	$ 38 50 m/l
-----------------------	--------------

POST FREE; PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.

THE MAILS.

TO ARRIVE IN SEPTEMBER.

- 19.—British by AVON.
19.—British by HIGHLAND PRIDE.

TO LEAVE IN SEPTEMBER.

- 17.—Brazil and Europe by TUBANTIA. Mails close at 2 p.m.
17.—Brazil, Australasia, South Africa, Canaries, Great Britain, Portugal and Spain by PRINCIPE DE ASTURIAS. Mails close at 8 a.m.
18.—Brazil and Europe by ORISSA. Mails close at 4 p.m.

BIRTH.

DIGGS.—At Nurse Nolan's nursing home, Humberto I. No. 1071, on the 10th inst., to Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Diggs, a son. 550 k12

DEATH.

GEbbie.—At Las Flores, on 11th inst., Andrew Gebbie, aged 92. 638 k15

HOMEWARD FIXTURES

The following vessels (says the "Times of Argentina") were fixed during last week to load homeward:—
s.s. Antiope, 4500, 10 per cent., pr., no reduction, San Lorenzo U. Kingdom, grain, 62½.
s.s. Boyne, 6000, 10 per cent., pr., no reduction, Bahia Blanca Genoa, oats, 71½.
s.s. Penlee, 6200, 10 per cent., pr., no reduction, Bahia Blanca West Italy, oats, 70½.
s.s. Italia, 3800, 10 per cent., pr., berth terms, Rosario Genoa, grain, 55½.
A 4000, 10 per cent., pr., Buenos Aires United Kingdom, grain, 60½.
s.s. Regent, 4500, 10 per cent., pr., San Lorenzo U. Kingdom, grain, 62½.
Option North Spain 3½ extra.
Deckspace s.s. Indralema, Sept., B. Aires Marseilles, horses, £9.10.0.
Sailer Queen of Scots, 2000, pr., Buenos Aires Danish ports, grain, 57½.

BAHIA BLANCA SHIPPING.

(From Our Correspondent).

September 12.

At Ingeniero White:—Cloutsam, discharging American coal for the Southern Railway. Celia, discharging general cargo for various. F. and T. Lupton, American schooner, discharging lumber of D. Meyer and Co.

At Port Galvan:—Ternero, loading for Bunge and Born.

Buenos Aires Herald

ILLUSTRATED WEEKLY EDITION

39th Year. New Series, No. 584

Buenos Aires, Friday, Sept. 24th, 1915

Price 30 Cents

ALLIED COMMANDERS' NEW PLANS

Unceasing Artillery Fire Along
Western Front.

GERMAN POSITIONS BEING RENDERED
UNTENABLE.

British Army in France Nearing Strength of 2,000,000

Paris, Sept. 22.

It is insistently stated here that Field Marshal French and the French Commander-in-Chief, Marshal Joffre, have arranged a fresh plan of attack upon the German positions.

This consists in keeping up an unceasing artillery fire along the whole front, and, as both armies are well supplied with guns and ammunition, the plan is now being put into practice with excellent results.

Since the commencement of the bombardment the Germans have been driven out of several of their positions which had become untenable.

The British War Office is pouring troops across the Channel, and it is stated that the British army will in a few weeks be raised to a strength of 2,000,000 men.

ARTILLERY WARFARE CONTINUES.

Paris, Sept. 22.

An official bulletin issued this afternoon states:—

"In Belgium, in the Boesinghe region, there has been rather heavy cannonading.

"In the Arras and Agny sectors lively exchanges of rifle fire by night produced on both sides volleys of artillery fire.

"There have been artillery actions north of the Champs de Chalon, between the Aisne and the Argonne, and in Lorraine in the vicinity of Regnicourt, Aousse and Leitrey."

CANNONADING IN BELGIUM.

Paris, Sept. 22.

An official telegram states that in Belgium there has been spirited cannonading in the region of Boesinghe in the Arras sector and at Agny there was heavy rifle fire last night, followed by violent artillery exchanges on both sides, as also between the Somme and Olse.

Intermittent bombardments took place in the regions of Amancourt, Dancourt, and Loges. There were artillery engagements north of Chalons, between Aysne, Argonne and Lorraine, and in the suburbs of Rechicourt, Oousse, and Lenitry.

Canadians for England

DEPARTURE OF ANOTHER TROOPSHIP.

New York, Sept. 22.

A telegram from Ottawa announces officially that the troop ship Metagama sailed on Sept. 11 with 1700 troops for England, chiefly from Alberta, Manitoba.

"Idle Talk"

MR. BOWERMAN APPEALS TO BRITAIN TO "GET ON WITH THE WAR."

London, Sept. 22.

Referring to the recent declarations of the Munitions Minister, Mr. Lloyd George, the Trades Union Secretary, Mr. C. W. Bowerman, says:—

"All that is idle talk. For Heaven's sake let us get on with the war! Weeks and months have passed and we have done nothing else but talk. What a laughing stock we must be for the world!"

Moor Liner Sunk

AN OBSTRUCTION TO NAVIGATION IN ENGLISH CHANNEL.

Paris, Sept. 21.

Traffic in the Channel is said to be interrupted on account of the sinking of the British steamer Linkmoor. The Minister of Marine has ordered the remains of the vessel to be removed as they are an impediment to navigation.

French aviators destructively bombarded the enemy's barracks at Middlekerke, and a troop train between Bruges and Thourout.

A group of eight French aeroplanes also effectively bombarded the railway station at Conflans on the Lun from Verdun to Metz.

BRITAIN'S SENSATIONAL BUDGET

SMALL INCOMES TO BE TAXED

FIRST STEPS TOWARD "TARIFF REFORM"

HIGHER DUTIES ON TEA, SUGAR, AND TOBACCO

London, Sept. 21.

Mr. Reginald McKenna, Chancellor of the Exchequer, to-day introduced the Second War Budget to the House of Commons.

His speech explaining the provisions of the proposed taxes occupied about two hours.

In it, he proposed an addition of 40 per cent. to the already existing Income Tax and the taxation of all incomes of £130 per annum and upwards. The present minimum is £160. A man earning 55s. per week would pay quarterly 12s. 1d., a man with £5000 would pay 1029s.

He also proposed to raise sugar duties from 1s. 10d. to 9s. 4d. per hundredweight.

Duties on tea, tobacco, chicory, coffee, and dried fruits will be increased 50 per cent.

No alteration is proposed on spirits or beer.

Patent medicine taxes will be increased one hundred per cent.

Postal rates also are to be increased, abolishing halfpenny postage and adding additional telephone and telegraph charges.

He proposed to tax 33 1/3 per cent ad valorem, all imported motor cars, bicycles, films, clocks, watches, musical instruments, plate glass and hats.

He stated that a heavy tax would be imposed on profits of manufacturers of war supplies and suggested a tax of 50 per cent. on all war profits above the amounts assessed for Income Tax last year, working out at a total of 60 per cent on profits. This is expected to yield £30,000,000.

There was no doubt as to the drastic character of the proposals, but he said in conclusion that in asking the House to sanction these great, those unprecedented burdens he felt sure if the House accepted them, the country would do so. He emphasised the difficulty of framing estimates in war time but said he did so as accurately as he could. Revenue for the current year he thought would be £272,000,000 and expenditure £1,590,000,000.

Our national wealth is great and this debt will not cripple our resources but, we must not overlook the strain which such expenditure will impose on our sources of supply and it will be necessary to borrow again.

McKenna's Budget

"CITY" FEARS EFFECTED OF WAR PROFITS AND INCOME TAXATION.

London, Sept. 22.

On 'Change and in the City to-day the Budget has been the almost exclusive topic of conversation and comment. Where not viewed actually favourably, as it is by many, it is taken philosophically; but it is feared that the Income Tax and War Profit provisions may have a detrimental effect on future investment and buying.

APPALLING MINE DISASTER

MEN ENTOMBED AT NUNEATON

200 MEN RESCUED

London, Sept. 21.

The fire cage employed to bring the entombed miners to the surface in the Exhall Colliery at Nuneaton was destroyed by flames. There were 250 miners in the colliery at the time, 200 were rescued by means of the emergency shaft. Ten bodies have been recovered.

Spies Sentenced

MAN TO BE SHOT AND WOMAN IMPRISONED.

London, Sept. 22.

It is stated officially that a man and a woman of German origin, names not given, been tried and found guilty on Monday of attempting to communicate to Germany information regarding the movements and disposition of the British fleet.

The man was sentenced to death. The woman was given ten years' imprisonment. Leave was given in both cases to appeal.

Allies' Aerial Flotillas

SUPERIOR TO THOSE OF GERMANY.

Paris, Sept. 21.

The marked superiority of the Allied aerial flotillas over the enemy has recently been clearly demonstrated.

While the Germans bombard open and undefended cities, the Allies employ flotillas and squadrons of forty or fifty aviators to make raids on fortified places and important strategic points.

Shortly when the Allies have incorporated the large and new types of machines which are building, and which promise remarkable results, they will develop great power.

The Germans are believed to have lost their best airmen during the war.

RUSSIAN ARMY ESCAPES

Tsar's Best Troops Evade Teuton Trap Near Vilna.

PROBABLE FAILURE OF PROPOSED ADVANCE ON PETROGRAD.

Many Teuton Men and Guns Captured

Petrograd, Sept. 22.

It is officially announced that the Russians have been victorious in several small encounters with the Austro-German forces northeast of Dvinsk, east of Lutsk, in Beresowka, at Slove and at Czorthow.

South of Dvinsk and east of Vilna a great battle is being fought.

New York, Sept. 23.

An official report from Petrograd says:—

"N. W. of Dvinsk near Munede village we drove the Germans from their trenches by a vigorous attack. South of Dvinsk fighting continues along the front from Novo Alexandrovsk to Lake Driniadata. The German heavy artillery has frequently bombarded certain sectors of this front, discharging poison gas shells.

"At Tremonbaponhaise, east of Lutsk, the enemy began an attack, but were repulsed. We made repeated bayonet attacks, and took 700 prisoners and machine guns.

"During attacks against the villages of Bezekowa and Bostoki, north-west of Wyzenewill, the enemy reached our trenches in spite of our heavy fire with machine guns and rifles. They rushed on us shouting Hurrahs! and Hochs! A desperate bayonet fight ensued, resulting in the expulsion of the enemy, who returned, leaving the ground covered with their dead.

"We then counter-attacked, took the enemy in flank, overthrew him, and pressing him back in confusion, did execution on him till we entered his trenches. The Austrians then fairly fled, many surrendered, or were bayoneted.

"We took 10 officers and 600 men, then another 50. We also secured a booty of great quantity of cartridges, engineering equipment and stores.

"Near Slove south-west of Thest, we threw the enemy back across the river, taking 5 officers and 200 men.

RUSSIAN ARMY'S ESCAPE FROM VILNA.

London, Sept. 22.

The Petrograd correspondent of the "Morning Post" declares that the Russians have made good their retreat from Vilna, destroying the railroad behind them, and everything else of military value. The Vilna Salient covered a great area, and was held by some of the choicest Russian troops. It was considered profitable to run great risks which might have been fatal, though the stubborn grip of the Russians on the positions has nullified the German designs. On the Viliya River the Russians made an effective stand after the railway had been secured. The Russian retreat will be made by road, but in view of the enemy's incessant attempts to cut the Russian communications, it is not certain to predict the escape of the Russian covering force, which is fighting a series of successful rearguard actions on Villoyay, north-west of Molodechna, arresting the German advance.

Campaign Against Petrograd

"ALMOST IMPOSSIBLE THIS SEASON."

London, Sept. 22.

The "Times" Petrograd correspondent says, that a serious German advance against Petrograd is almost impossible this season. If the Vilna covering force and garrison escape, the worst of the crisis is past and he is convinced that the German losses in this campaign are appalling and far greater than those of the Russians. He quotes Dr. Hurd, an American who has been working with the Russians on the Grodno front as saying that the losses of that army have been incredibly small since the retreat began and, says it is probably the same with the other Russian armies.

70,000 Teutons Captured

RUSSIAN OFFICIAL STATEMENT.

London, Sept. 22.

A despatch from Petrograd says that the number of prisoners taken by the Russians in southern Poland during the end of August and the beginning of September includes 70,000 already registered and many more whose total will be ascertained when the final reports are received.

This statement is an official reply to a report emanating from Vienna which denied the claim laid by the Russian authorities to having captured a large number of prisoners.

War's Burden on Neutrals

SWITZERLAND MAY HAVE TO PAY 400,000,000 FRANCS FOR MOBILISATION.

New York, Sept. 21.

Havas agency has a telegram from Berne stating that Dr. Motta, President of the Swiss Confederation, has informed the National Council that should the war last ten months longer, the cost of the mobilisation of the Swiss army, will amount to 400,000,000 francs.

The President considers it advisable to take certain means to avert an economic crisis which this enormous expenditure must otherwise occasion to the limited resources of the country.

GERMANS TAKE OSTROW.

New York, Sept. 22.

A Berlin despatch reports that the War Office has announced that Ostrow has been taken.

The Overseas News Agency says it is officially denied that the Germans bombarded Warsaw after evacuation. The residential districts were never shelled by German artillery nor was the fortress fired on after the Russians withdrew.

Russia and the War

M. BARK ON THE FINANCIAL SITUATION.

Paris, Sept. 22.

The Russian Minister of Finance, M. Peter Bark, left yesterday for England in order to consult his British colleague, Mr. McKenna. Before leaving, the Russian statesman made the following statement:—

"It would be childish to deny that the role of the United States in international finance during the past year has been important. The power of America as a centre of production has been affirmed in an incontestable manner.

"The needs of the belligerents have changed the international credit balances so markedly in favour of the United States that the question of exchange has become acute. The supplies which America is sending to Europe are preparing the market for the re-sale to the Americans of their securities in Europe. I hope that the Anglo-French delegates in New York will find a basis adapted to American tastes and temperament."

M. Bark alluded to the lively sympathy displayed by the Americans towards Russia, and continued:—

"Russia is going through a difficult period as regards exchange. We cannot export our products, and there is a lack of remittances from abroad. Russia has large payments to make abroad and she cannot make them in goods or produce. The difficulty was examined closely last February, and the British and French Governments came to the assistance of Russia with an advance which was employed to pay coupons and purchase supplies. Evidently this policy of co-operation must be continued.

THE STABILITY OF THE ROUBLE.

"Certain precautions must be taken to raise the rate of exchange for the rouble and give it stability. An improvement in the rate of exchange will facilitate importations into Russia which are now being obstructed by the depreciation of the rouble.

"Russia is putting into common effort with her Allies all her resources in men and money, and she receives from her Allies their indispensable co-operation. The stability of the franc and the pound sterling is as important to them as that of the rouble is to Russia, and the Franco-British mission to America marks a great step in that direction.

"The solidarity of the alliance has been demonstrated to the whole world and the intrigues of the Germanophiles in New York prove how far-reaching are these negotiations. It is to be hoped that the bonds of sympathy and solidarity have extended to the great Banks of the Allied nations. We have already seen the fruitful results of the convention between the banks of France and Russia last winter in order to liquidate outstanding accounts.

"As for the question of munitions in Russia, it suffices to say that in the last six months the output has increased sixfold. In order to remedy the falling off in the number of munition workers, the Government has given formal orders that all labour required by the mines and factories working for the national defence shall be placed at their disposal immediately."

Allies' Finances

TITTONI'S VISIT TO ROME.

Rome, Sept. 21.

Signor Tittoni, Italian Ambassador to Paris, has just arrived here. He had interviews with Baron Sonnino, the Foreign Minister, and with Signor Salandra, the Premier.

It is supposed that his journey has relation to the approaching financial conference at Paris of the delegates of the allied nations and the arrangements begun at Cernobbio.

Duel in the Adriatic

SUBMARINE v. DESTROYERS.

Rome, Sept. 21.

The evening papers publish details of the attack of the French submarine Papin, acting with the Italian Adriatic fleet, on a group of Austrian destroyers.

The fight took place near Capo de Lenca. When the enemy approached, they were steaming about 15 knots. The Papin attacked a vessel of the Huszar class, when another destroyer ran in between her and the mark. The latter a vessel of 250 tons, was struck by a torpedo and badly damaged.

(The Huszar was built at Yarrow's, Poplar, in 1905. 33 knots, 787 tons. She carries 2 4in. and 4 12 pr. guns).

Pirate Vessels Sunk

UNFORTUNATE MISTAKE BY SISTER VESSEL.

London, Sept. 20.

The "Daily Mail's" Copenhagen correspondent sends an interesting report which has been brought into Stavanger by Norwegian fishermen.

They say that off the Island of Utsine, at the entrance of the Stavananger Fjord, a German submarine made a fatal mistake by attacking another of the same flag which had, it is believed, been disguised to look like a British vessel. The latter is conjecture, as the second submarine sank with all hands, and no one survives to clear up the mystery of her appearance.

RUSSIAN SUCCESS IN THE BLACK SEA.

London, Sept. 21.

A telegram from Odessa states that Russian warships have destroyed and sunk the German submarine recently reported as operating in the Black Sea.

Submarine "Scare"

FALSE ALARM INTERRUPTS CHANNEL SERVICES.

Paris, Sept. 21.

An interruption of the Channel service between Folkestone and Boulogne has been caused by a false alarm of submarine activity. A trawler had seen a floating mine, and mistook it for a submarine. The Boulogne floating defences were mobilised, but nothing further transpired.

No More "Mistakes"

PIRATE COMMANDERS' NEW INSTRUCTIONS.

New York, Sept. 22.

A telegram from Berlin states that the commanders of German submarines operating in the North Sea have received orders that if there is any doubt as to the attitude of the merchant vessels they meet they are to allow them to get away without attacking them, so as to avoid making mistakes.

Sinking of the Hesperian

BERLIN SAYS LINER WAS NOT ATTACKED BY A SUBMARINE.

New York, Sept. 22.

A semi-official statement has been issued in Berlin to the effect that, after further enquiry, the Admiralty contradicts the allegation of the British Admiralty and can now state that no German submarine was responsible for the attack on the Hesperian.

SERBIA DEMANDS EXPLANATIONS

Bulgaria's Mobilisation Believed to be Menacing.

KING FERDINAND'S GREAT GAMBLE

Allied Diplomats Said to Admit Failure

Rome, Sept. 22.

It is announced that Serbia has asked the Government of Bulgaria for an explanation of the concentration of troops close to the frontier.

ALLIED DIPLOMATS RECOGNISE THEIR CAUSE IS LOST.

New York, Sept. 23.

The Associated Press Correspondent at Sofia has been informed from the highest quarters that the Opposition now understands the situation and that the country is best served by joining the Austro-German-Turkish Alliance.

This was forcibly impressed on them at the Conference with the King.

Moreover the Opposition understand that their wish to have Parliament convened and a Coalition Cabinet is impossible at present owing to the rapid development of the crisis.

The Entente Ministers here recognise that their cause is lost, owing to the dissatisfaction of the Government at Greece's and Serbia's reply to demands for territorial concessions.

GENERAL SAVOFF RECALLED.

Paris, Sept. 22.

It is reported from Salonica that the Bulgarian Premier, Radoslavoff, has summoned the former Commander-in-Chief, General Savoff, who has been living in retirement in a country residence, to a conference. The General at once came to Sofia and a long consultation ensued with the Cabinet.

SAVOFF TO COMMAND.

New York, Sept. 22.

A Sofia telegram confirms the statement that General Michael Savoff, former Minister of War and the victor of Lule Burgas, has been summoned to Sofia by the King, it is believed to be appointed to the command-in-chief.

FERDINAND'S GAMBLE.

London, Sept. 23.

A Sofia wire says that Bulgaria is hastening all war preparations.

Ferdinand has evidently formed the opinion that the Entente are not certain to win the war, and that he can best serve his interests by joining the Teutonic-Turkish Alliance. Mobilisation is practically complete.

NO INTENTION OF JOINING CENTRAL EMPIRES.

London, Sept. 22.

M. Michoff, the Bulgarian Minister, has been advised by telegraph of his Government's mobilisation order, and has stated that this meant that Bulgaria would maintain her neutrality. Asked whether Bulgaria intended to join the Central Powers he replied emphatically, "Certainly not," and stated that he had no further information to give. He reiterated his assertion that the new move implied nothing more than that Bulgaria was adopting the same precautionary measures as Switzerland and Holland.

RESERVISTS CALLED TO THE COLOURS.

Copenhagen, Sept. 22.

Bulgarian reservists residing in Germany, Austria and Rumania have been called upon by their Government for military service.

GREECE TO MOBILISE HER FORCES.

Athens, Sept. 22.

On receipt of news of the mobilisation of the Bulgarian army King Constantine held a consultation with M. Venizelos and the members of the General Staff.

Subsequently the Premier called a Cabinet meeting. The greatest activity is observable everywhere and a conference is taking place with the representatives of the Quadruple Entente.

The Venizelos Government faces the situation with absolute coolness and perfect confidence.

It is understood here that the first, sixth, seventh and tenth divisions will be first mobilised, or about 100,000 men and a number of cavalry regiments.

In Bulgaria several cavalry regiments have already left Sofia for unknown destinations.

Since Saturday goods traffic has been suspended on the Bulgarian rail-

GREEK KING SUMMONS M. VENIZELOS.

Athens, Sept. 22.

A great sensation has been caused here by the news that Bulgaria has mobilised her army. King Constantine, immediately after receiving intelligence of it, summoned M. Venizelos and the members of the General Staff to a consultation. Afterwards the Prime Minister held a Cabinet meeting.

Much activity is observed on the part of the Ministers of the Quadruple Entente in communicating with the members of the Greek Government.

French Cruiser's Rescue

3,000 HELPLESS ARMENIANS.

Paris, Sept. 22.

The Ministry of Marine states that at the end of July a body of 5000 Armenians, of whom 3000 were children, women and old men, pursued by Turks with intention to massacre them, took refuge in the Djebel Moussa mountains.

They succeeded in keeping their assailants at bay until the beginning of September, when both provisions and ammunition failed, and their ferocious enemies must infallibly have destroyed them if they had not succeeded in sending information of their desperate plight to a French cruiser off the coast.

Several vessels of the French blockading squadron at once went to their help, landed parties, and conveyed them safely on board under the very beards of the Turks. The refugees were landed at Port Said and are now in a provisional camp.

Teutons Difficult Task

OPTIMISM IN SERBIA.

London, Sept. 22.

Serbia is making all possible preparation to defend herself against the expected combined attack by the Austro-Germans and the Bulgarians.

Military critics discussing the Teuton offensive against Serbia consider that the Austro-Germans must employ not less than 400,000 men, with all artillery and other equipment to make headway and do not believe that they can dispose of that force.

It is known that the Serbian army has now very large supplies of ammunition, in marked contrast to the position of Serbia earlier in the war.

Since the crushing defeat and expulsion of the Serbians last December they have been supplied with every requirement of a modern army.

The Austro-German bombardment indicates a plan of advance along the Morava valley. This region gives great natural advantages to the Serbians for defence.

PREPARATIONS FOR A LONG CAMPAIGN.

New York, Sept. 22.

Despatches from Nish announce that the enemy's artillery and mortars across the Danube and the Save fired over 800 missiles on the 19th instant at the Serbian positions, at the same time keeping up a heavy fire with rifles and machine guns. They however gained no results of military significance.

The Serbians have made great preparations to hold the Austro-German offensive in check. They occupy excellent positions and their leaders consider that, despite the enormous superiority of the enemy so far as numbers go, they can sustain a long campaign. If it is necessary to abandon Belgrade they will take to the hills and carry on a defensive campaign. It is hoped that the Allies will be able to despatch assistance to Serbia.

BERLIN'S BIASED VIEW.

New York, Sept. 22.

Berlin despatches say that the Press interprets the news from the Serbian frontier as the beginning of her grand reckoning with that nation by a large scale offensive movement. Serbia is blamed as being the cause of the world war. The Berlin Press makes guarded reference to the strength of the forces detailed for the invasion of Serbia, which have been gathering on the Danube in recent weeks. In this connection the words of Herr von Bethmann Hollweg's speech in the Reichstag are recalled "We have strong armies ready for new blows." Military critics deprecate underestimation of the power of Serbian resistance, but are convinced that the Austro-German forces are adequate for the work in view.

Progressive Holland

WOMEN'S SUFFRAGE AND STATE INSURANCE PROMISED.

The Hague, Sept. 21.

In returning from the opening of the States General of Holland, Queen Wilhelmina and Princess Wilhelmina Juliana were involved in collision between the Royal car and another automobile, the occupants of which were injured and taken to Hospital.

In her opening speech the Queen said that the Government would present a project for removing the present obstacles to Woman Suffrage. The statement was received with applause.

Credits would be asked for to assume the protection of the East Indian Colonies and to assist State system of Social Insurance and re-organisation of the present system of taxation was also foreshadowed.

It was intimated that Holland could still be congratulated on maintaining a strict neutrality which would be defended if needful by the entire power of the Dutch Nation. The army was reported to be in a satisfactory condition.

Egypt in War Time

EXCELLENT ECONOMIC CONDITION OF THE COUNTRY

Rome, Sept. 22.

"La Tribuna" has received a telegram from its correspondent at Athens saying that persons who have recently arrived from Egypt report that the economic condition of the country is excellent.

The British maintain strict vigilance in the Suez Canal owing to the aggressive intentions of the Germans and Turks.

The Germans continue the construction of the double line of rails between Jaffa and Baghdad.

Scandinavia's Attitude

GROWTH OF PRO-GERMAN FEELING.

New York, Sept. 21.

Reports from Stockholm observe that as the German advance progresses into Russia, pro-German sympathies are developing in the Scandinavian States. Affinities of race, incessant propaganda, fear of the consequences of the British blockade and a certain underlying spite against the Russian Empire cause them to look with complacency on the German successes.

KAISER INJURED

IN A MOTOR DISASTER.

New York, Sept. 21.

Radiotelegrams from Berlin report that the Kaiser and Prince Joaquin Albrecht have been slightly injured in a motor accident. It is added that the vehicle was completely destroyed. Details are lacking and the Emperor's condition is not known.

German Airmen Interned

FALL WITHIN BULGARIAN BOUNDARIES.

London, Sept. 21.

The "Star's" Athens special correspondent reports that a German aeroplane crossing Bulgaria came down. The apparatus was seized and the aviators interned.

Pirate's Cruise

GERMAN SUBMARINE SIGHTED OFF ST. VINCENT.

Madrid, Sept. 22.

A radiogram has been received from Cadiz announcing that a German submarine has been sighted off Cape St. Vincent.

LESSENING PIRATE FLEET

50 UNDERSEAS CRAFT REPORTED SUNK.

Rome, Sept. 21.

Advices given by the Italian Government to the Press state that the British Admiralty is quietly noting the destruction of the last German submarine to complete a total of fifty sunk by British vessels.

Commenting on the circumstance, the Roman papers say that it is undoubted that the British fleet has become highly skilled in hunting submarines and that after careful observation the British sailors are able to detect over the spot where the submarines lie hidden, the peculiar undulation of the water indicating their presence which has been fatal to many.

"THESE FOOLS OF YANKEES"

Anti-American Comment in the Dumba Correspondence.

PUBLISHED BY THE BRITISH FOREIGN OFFICE

Bernstorff and Von Papen Implicated

London, Sept. 22.

The British Foreign Office has published the correspondence which was found in the possession of the American subject, Dr. Archibald, who was on his way to Vienna.

From the contents of this correspondence it appears that, as regards the strike propaganda among the ammunition workers, not only the Austrian Ambassador to Washington, Dr. Dumba, is implicated, but also the German Ambassador, Count Bernstorff.

The action of the latter differed from that of the former in that Dr. Dumba also made violent attacks upon President Wilson and tried to bring about the intervention of Congress in prohibiting the shipment of arms and ammunition for the Allies.

The ex-Ambassador of Austria further tried to injure the reputation of the former Secretary of State, Mr. Bryan, by endeavouring to make out that he was favouring the Teuton cause. He confesses to having instigated the Bridgeport strikes and to having asked his Government for funds to pay the managers of the labour associations to get up strikes in the Bethlehem Steel works and other similar establishments.

STRIKE IN THE COTTON AND MEAT INDUSTRIES.

From the documents it transpires that Dumba was the promoter of the campaign started by the Austro-Hungarian Press in America, and was the cause of the antagonism between the exporters and the producers of cotton, also of the campaign of the great meat preserving works against Britain. He incited the shippers of frozen meat whose cargoes were detained by the British authorities to take action, and worked actively to prevent England from receiving any meat from America.

Elsewhere it appears that this Austrian diplomat was secretly using his influence with the United States legislators in order to promote ill feeling between the States and Britain, and that it was put a stop to by President Wilson. The matter has hitherto not been made known to the public.

VON PAPEN'S INSULTING EPITHETS.

The military Attaché to the German embassy, Capt. von Papen, also was concerned in the organisation of the strike among the men employed in the Remington works, and in attempts to breed ill feeling towards Britain, particularly among the cotton planters. In these affairs it appears that he was in collusion with Count Bernstorff. In a private letter from him to his wife, one of the thirty-four letters taken from Dr. Archibald, Capt. von Papen refers to the Americans as "these fools of Yankees," and uses other injurious epithets.

Seventeen of the thirty-four letters were not published as they were either concerning private matters or were of no interest to the public.

One of the letters is from Dr. Dumba to Dr. Archibald accepting

Dumba's Successor

FORMER AMBASSADOR AT ROME APPOINTED.

New York, Sept. 21.

Despatches from Vienna state that the post of Ambassador to Washington left vacant by Herr Dumba, will be filled by Herr von Marc Zynsky, previously Ambassador for Austria at Rome.

AMERICA AND GERMANY

ANOTHER NOTE HANDED TO MR. GERARD.

New York, Sept. 17.

A Berlin wireless, via Sayville, states that the Foreign Office to-day handed a reply to the American Note to Mr. Gerard, United States Ambassador in Germany.

This Note confirms and acknowledges that a submarine did attack the Orduña after that ship attempted to escape.

$70,000,000 Daily

GERMAN FINANCE MINISTER'S ESTIMATE OF COST OF WAR.

New York, Sept. 22.

Berlin despatches report that the Imperial Treasurer, Helfferich, interviewed by the correspondent of the New York "Journal," said that he estimated the expenses of the war to the principal belligerents at seventy million dollars, or fourteen million pounds, daily.

These sacrifices are unprecedented in history.

New Military Medal

M. MILLERAND'S PROPOSAL.

Paris, Sept. 22.

M. Millerand, the French Minister of War, proposes to ask the Government to agree to striking a military medal commemorative of the war.

DARDANELLES FIGHTING

THE TURKISH VERSION.

New York, Sept. 22.

A Constantinople official telegram states:—

"On Sunday near Ari Burnu we successfully bombarded the enemies (Allies') guns at East Point. On Monday our batteries on the Asiatic shore successfully bombarded Morto Lunau and the enemy's camp at Seddul Bahr. We also shelled the hostile artillery at Kissandijek."

with pleasure the offer of the latter to take letters to Europe and requesting him to send them to Vienna by the Austrian Legation at La Hague or the embassy at Berlin.

NO ANNEXATION!

A Striking Appeal

ISSUED BY GERMAN ORGANISATION

Paris, Sept. 22.

The first instalment of an anti-annexation petition issued by the German "Bund Neues Vaterland" is printed to-day by "La Humanité." It is believed that the offices of the Bund organization in Berlin have been raided, and Dr. Wasberg arrested. The demand for annexation was issued in the name of six economic associations, and the petition against it points out the great danger of its annexation policy to the conclusion of a timely and honourable peace, and to the future security of the German Empire.

The Bund therefore feels obliged to oppose the demands of the Association, and asks the Chancellor to stop their activities, and to disavow the objects of the war as herein set forth. The idea of weakening England and Russia until they become powerless or annihilated is so childish as not to admit of serious discussion.

The propagation of this madness is dangerous because it makes the more difficult anything like a lasting peace. The petition goes on to say that the Chancellor's speech in the Reichstag on May 28 stated that Germany would continue the war until they had obtained guarantees that none of her antagonists alone or allied ever would dare to attack her again. We understand the Chancellor felt it necessary to affirm energetically, when Italy entered the war, his confidence in the ultimate issue notwithstanding our new adversary, but his rhetoric is being taken literally by simple people.

The petition considers the various territories proposed by the Economic Associations to be annexed. This amounts to, East and West more than 130,000 sq. kilometres and 16,000,000 inhabitants. What do the six petitioning Associations imagine would be our relations with these men who would be forcibly subjected to German domination?

CEMETERY ENLARGED

TO HOLD GERMAN DEAD AT ROULERS.

Amsterdam, Sept. 21.

Reliable reports state that continuous convoys of German wounded are pouring into Roulers. The losses suffered at that place by the Germans, have been so severe that the Cemetery of the town has been three times enlarged to take their dead.

The Mine Peril

DUTCH STEAMER SUNK.

Amsterdam, Sept. 22.

The Dutch steamer Koenigen Emma, 9,000 tons gross register, struck a mine when entering the port and sank. All on board were saved.

AUSTRIAN DESTROYERS SUNK

SUCCESS BY ITALIAN SUBMARINE.

Turin, Sept. 16.

To-day's "Stampa" publishes a despatch from Ancona stating that an Italian submarine has sunk two Austrian destroyers off Gargano.

News of the Naval fight was carried to Ancona by the Captain of the s.s. Conceltina who claimed to have witnessed the engagement. He says that the Conceltina was pursued by the Austrian vessels and in great danger when the submarine suddenly appeared and engaged them with fatal result to both of the enemy.

Munitions Factory Destroyed

SENSATIONAL STORY TO LEAD TO PROSECUTION IN ENGLAND.

London, Sept. 22.

The sequel to the sensational story recently published concerning the destruction of the great Russian ammunition factory at Okahta, a suburb of Petrograd, was foreshadowed by the reply given by the Home Secretary, Sir J. Simon, to a question in the House of Commons yesterday.

The Minister said that the story had been published without having been submitted to the censor, and added that the fact had been brought to the notice of the Public Prosecutor.

The story in question was that thousands of workmen were killed when the factory was blown up last April, and that the destruction of the plant caused such extreme dearth of ammunition that nothing could be done by the Russians against the German artillery.

A despatch received from Petrograd at the time the explosion occurred said that several persons were killed and many injured, and that much material damage had resulted from the explosion.

Munitions for Russia

SHIPMENTS FROM JAPAN.

Tokio, Sept. 22.

Several consignments of munitions of war have been shipped to Russia and more are to follow shortly. Russia will pay cash for the goods through the English bankers. For subsequent consignments she may give short dated bills.

There is no further talk of sending Japanese troops to aid Russia.

TWO ZEPPELINS DESTROYED

U.S. VERSION OF RECENT RAID.

New York, Sept. 20.

Passengers who have arrived by the steamship Rotterdam say that the damage done in London in the recent Zeppelin raid were enormous and represent many millions sterling. The bombs destroyed whole blocks of buildings in the heart of the city. In one case an autobus was struck by a bomb and blown to pieces, 14 persons being killed. Many persons were completely dismembered by the projectiles.

It appears that two of the Zeppelins were destroyed by the French aerial squadrons.

SCENES IN LONDON.

New York, Sept. 20.

Mr. Frederic Conder, who has recently arrived on the Rotterdam, with other passengers from London, says that during the last Zeppelin raid he was in the streets and climbed a lamp post. The spectacle was thrilling and dreadful. No less than six bombs fell in his neighbourhood. One exploded against a motor bus, killing and hideously mangling all the nineteen people who were in or upon it.

Many people were on the house tops cheering whenever they saw the flash of the auto-aircraft guns, and saw their shells bursting near the raiding dirigibles.

Bank of England Struck?

BERLIN VERSION OF RECENT ZEPPELIN RAID.

New York, Sept. 22.

A Berlin wireless via Tuckerton states that according to reports brought by a traveller who has reached Amsterdam from London, the Bank of England was struck during the recent Zeppelin raid, and that the damage done was much greater than reported.

A POLITICAL CONSPIRACYCENSURE OF THE NORTH-CLIFFE PRESS

BY "NEW YORK HERALD" CORRESPONDENT

New York, Sept. 18.

The "New York Herald's" London correspondent alleges that the Northcliffe Press is now faced with serious charges, formulated by the "Daily News" to the effect that it is believed an intrigue to create a movement for driving Mr. Asquith, Sir Edward Grey, and Lord Kitchener out of the Cabinet and to force a General Election, has been formed, which when the nation is fighting for its life would, says the correspondent, result in mere chaos.

"This morning 'The Times,' followed by the 'Daily Mail,' makes a complete change of front. The former declares that any newspapers now fomenting discord, are guilty of treason. This, in view of its previous attitude, invites a howl of derision. The 'Daily Mail' also has apparently been sobered by the threats indicated in the speech of T. H. Thomas, M.P. for Derby that if it were attempted to enforce the Northcliffe Conscription programme, there would be a revolution; it now pats the railways on the back, commends them for their patriotic service to the country, says it is sure they will not strike, but there is no doubt that the speech of Thomas, who, as General Secretary to the Railwaymen's Union, is thoroughly informed of their feeling, has compelled the "Daily Mail" to modify its policy in place of fomenting trouble; and now asserting merely that the nation to win the war must act unitedly. More powerful, however, even than Mr. Thomas' prediction of a general strike, was the knowledge that if the Northcliffe Press continued to advocate its mischief-making programme, the result might be to concentrate all power in the hands of Lord Kitchener, whom the Yellow Press has vainly sought to destroy.

"This morning therefore "The Times" falls into line, and in a dove-like manner invites all the factions of the country to come together and unite.

"The 'Daily Mail,' in pursuance with the Barnum-like policies of its directors, offers, in order to regain its circulation, to divide £50,000 among its regularly registered readers' families who may have relatives killed or maimed by Zeppelin raids.

"All one has to do is to read the 'Daily Mail' and to be killed or permanently disabled.

"This offer comes most opportunely on the morning when the Admiralty confirms the statement that the raids have no military purpose whatever. The houses destroyed are those of poor shopkeepers. The killed and wounded are all non-combatants; many victims are working men, women and little children.

"To-day also 'The Morning Post' climbs down, and instead of violently insisting that conscription must come, argues reasonably with Mr. Thomas and his co-workers that National Service is the only possible policy which will ensure success.

"The 'Daily Press,' while insisting that there is no conspiracy against either Lord Kitchener or the Cabinet, now sings its chant of Conscription in a small faint voice.

"The three Great Editors of Fleet Street are now made to realise that they no more represent the British people than did the Three Tailors of Tooley Street."

BRITAIN'S FOOD SUPPLIESREASON FOR ADMISSION OF LIVE CATTLE.

London, Sept. 17.

The Duke of Devonshire, answering a question regarding the admission into Britain of cattle for slaughter, stated that the reason was the desirability of increasing the supply of food during the war. Veterinary safeguards had been provided and would remain in force during the war.

BRITAIN'S NEW ARMIESNOW REACH TOTAL OF 3,000,000 MEN

London, Sept. 21.

At to-day's sitting of the House of Commons the Premier, Mr. Asquith, stated that the total number of the British army now reached 3,000,000, without including the Australian, Canadian or New Zealand contingents or the forces from India.

The Prime Minister again expressed the firm determination of Great Britain to continue the struggle with unremitting vigour until the Allies achieve a definite triumph and, to employ all resources at command of the Empire for that purpose.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. McKenna said that receipts in current year in the United Kingdom had amounted to £272,000,000 sterling, while expenditure reached £1,500,000,000 leaving at the end of the year, a debit of £1,200,000,000.

DEFENCE OF LONDONPRECAUTIONS AGAINST ZEPPELIN RAIDS.

London, Sept. 18.

Many fresh precautions are being taken against Zeppelins.

In addition to the vigilance of the British Aerial Squadrons, the authorities are placing anti-aircraft quick-firers at the most exposed points.

It is supposed that the Germans intend to resume their incursions whenever possible, even if they only attack undefended towns and villages.

DARDANELLES CASUALTIES89,237 KILLED AND WOUNDED.

London, Sept. 16.

The House of Commons has been informed that the British losses in the Dardanelles are now a total of 89,237, composed as follows:—Officers 1130 killed, 2371 wounded; soldiers, killed 16,478, wounded 59,258.

BRITAIN'S WOOL SUPPLIESSURPLUS AVAILABLE FOR EXPORT.

London, Sept. 17.

The War Trade Department having taken into consideration the present state of supply of crossbred and similar wools, together with the probable requirements of Britain and her Allies, has decided that a considerable quantity of the existing stock 1,250,000 bales can be spared and is prepared to consider applications for licenses to export to approved destinations, which means to Allied ports.

VON BISSING'S BROTHERINTERNEED IN BRITAIN.

London, Sept. 20.

Baron Von Bissing, who is half brother to the notorious General of that name, Governor of Belgium, has for months been trying to persuade the authorities that he is a harmless naturalised British subject, and should be left at liberty. He has been interned, and was mysteriously spirited away by detectives from his luxurious house in Kensington to-day. No one knows certainly what has become of him, although reports assign Islington workhouse as his residence during the rest of the war.

A small army of newspaper men have been hanging round the empty house all day.

CONSCRIPTION!DEBATE IN THE COMMONS*DILLON ADVOCATES GAOL FOR NORTHCLIFFE

London, Sept. 16.

In the House of Commons to-day, after a speech by Mr. A. J. Balfour on the Aerial Service, the debate turned upon conscription.

Mr. John Dillon vehemently denounced conscription. Pitt, he said, had indeed tried it with some success during the Napoleonic wars, but it would be sheer madness to try the experiment again, especially before the country has been thoroughly informed on the matter. He declared, with considerable heat, that for far less than what Lord Northcliffe had done, Irishmen had been sent to jail. If it were not for Lord Northcliffe's title and his powerful connections, he too would have been sent to jail long ago.

Mr. Chiozza Money declared that under the present voluntary system the country never would have enough either of men or munitions to win the war.

Mr. Stephen Walsh (Labour Member for Ince) said that at least eighty per cent. of the Members of the House had been elected to support the voluntary system. Before abandoning it for conscription there must be overwhelming evidence to support the innovation.

Captain Josiah Wedgwood (Newcastle-under-Lyme) vigorously urged the Government to appoint a strong War Office Committee to prepare a scheme of conscription. That it is an immediate necessity, he said, the course of the war had abundantly demonstrated.

Mr. David Marshal Mason (for Coventry), who has been repudiated and requested to resign by all branches of the electorate, regarded the crushing of Germany as a military impossibility.

On the motion for adjournment, Mr. Mason saw another opportunity and asked whether Germany had not made peace overtures which might be acceptable?

Lord Robert Cecil incisively retorted that Germany had made no peace proposals, nor could he imagine any being made by her at the present time which could possibly be acceptable to the Allies.

CONSCRIPTION IF NECESSARY!LABOUR LEADER'S STATEMENT.

Paris, Sept. 20.

Mr. John Hodge, M.P. (Labour Gorton Division), speaking at a meeting of Socialists, said:—

"We want no premature peace, it must be complete and lasting; nor do we desire conquest, but the liberation of oppressed peoples.

"We wish to beat the Germans by voluntary effort, but if the Government thinks it necessary that we have conscription, we shall have it."

This meeting was the first of a series which has been organised to explain to the French workers what Great Britain is doing in the war.

Monsieur Pierre Barck, Russian Minister of Finance, has arrived here and is consulting with Monsieur Ribot on financial affairs.

A conference of the Entente Ministers of Exchequer will be held either here or in London.

SPY SHOTAFTER TRIAL IN LONDON

London, Sept. 17.

An official report states that a spy, name not given, was shot here to-day after trial.

AERIAL DEFENCEBALFOUR REASSURES PARLIAMENT

London, Sept. 16.

In the House of Commons to-day the Rt. Hon. Mr. A. J. Balfour, First Lord of the Admiralty, made an interesting statement dealing with the adequacy of the British Air Service for Defence, on which numerous questions have been placed on paper in the House within the last few days.

He said that since the beginning of the war the Air Service had been greatly strengthened; it was now actually improving faster than the danger which it is designed to cope with. There had been a great demand for anti aircraft guns for development of the aerial offensive. The Naval Air Service is now an arm of great dimensions. He could not say that there could be a discontinuance of attacks on London but, no one would suggest that such methods of terrorism are in the slightest degree going to shake the resolution of the British people. He frankly admitted that when appointed to the Admiralty, he was very much surprised to find that the Admiralty was responsible for Aerial Service which had in reality only a remote connection with Naval work. The changes already made had been very great and all possible means had been taken to deal adequately with the new great responsibility. No better assurance could be given to the House than the appointment of so eminent an expert as Admiral, Sir Percy Scott.

E7 REPORTED LOSTSUBMARINE DISASTER IN THE DARDANELLES.

London, Sept. 16.

The Admiralty states that, in all probability, the British submarine No. E7 has been lost in the Dardanelles.

At present the fate of the crew is unknown.

CREW IN HANDS OF THE TURKS

London, Sept. 16.

The Admiralty announces that the enemy claims to have sunk submarine E7. Lieut. Commander Archibald Cochrane, off the Dardanelles and to have taken prisoners three officers and twenty-five men.

As no news has been received of this submarine since Sept. 4, it is presumed that the report is correct.

GERMAN CHEMICALSMAY BE EXPORTED TO NEUTRAL COUNTRIES.

London, Sept. 17.

In the House of Commons on Thursday Sir Edward Grey, the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, intimated that the British Government had now decided that chemicals and drugs solely manufactured in Germany should be allowed to pass when consigned to neutral nations and when in urgent demand by these nations.

DO NOT SELL!GERMAN ADVICE TO HOLDERS OF U.S. SECURITIES.

New York, Sept. 17.

A Berlin wireless via Sayville states that the Central Association of German Banking interests advise members who are owners of American securities deposited in London, not to sell. It is explained that London has advised the sale of these securities profiting by the rate of exchange on New York. The real purpose is to make the German owned American securities in England useful by marketing them, which would improve the rate of Exchange. Members of the Association are advised not to authorise such sales.

BE PREPARED ! WARNING TO THE STATES BY PRESIDENT OF PEACE SOCIETY

New York, Sept. 16.

In connection with the campaign for the strengthening and reorganising the national defences, Senator Burton, President of the American Peace Society, has issued a thoughtful statement. He says:—

"We must recognise the advent of the entirely new situation which confronts us. One half of the world and its peoples are involved in a furious war. It seems a sudden relapse into the savagery of olden times. A death struggle is now progressing which for its prodigious destruction of life and property surpasses anything and any war the world has ever known. Treaties are wantonly violated, no pledge is sacred, every thing is subservient to the overwhelming desire to gain the victory in the contest. One of two results must follow in this war. Either an era of militarism in which the nations now engaged will be armed to the teeth, ostensibly to defend themselves but really, to prepare for another struggle which would after the infliction and suffering of untold misery, ruin all the countries engaged in it.

The other alternative is to recognise war as altogether undesirable, even though concessions be made rather than incur the frightful losses incident to armed conflict. After this war, every country engaged in it will be financially exhausted, nevertheless while we are not justified in presuming that there will certainly be a period of militarism, it is also true that we are not safe in supposing that an era of peace will follow. The danger is that Europe will still be bristling with bayonets. Victors and vanquished alike will be ready to provoke a quarrel. There is again the possibility that we may be forced into war before this conflict is finished. Should this occur we must be ready so, that, whatever opinion may have been cherished in the past, new conditions bring new duties. We must be prepared for all emergencies. This means better defence of the coasts, a more efficient navy and army. We cannot afford to say in fancied security that no nation will attack us. Early and earnest attention should be given to this question of national defence.

ALLIES' NEW WAR LOAN

$750,000,000 AT 5 PER CENT.

New York, Sept. 18.

The success of the new Allied war loan is believed in financial circles to be already assured.

An amount of $750,000,000 is to be raised at 5 per cent. interest.

German commercial men threaten to boycott the banks concerned in the loan, but these menaces are little regarded, except in some western towns where the German element is strong.

COMMISSION'S EASY TASK.

London, Sept. 18.

Opinion here is confident that the Anglo-French financial commissioners will achieve their end with ease. Only amusement has been occasioned by the duties of the German agitation against the loan. Britain is confident in the sound political common sense of the United States. A reporter of the Paris journal, recently interviewed M. Ribot who said that the Anglo-French delegates spoke in the warmest and highest terms of the treatment they had received in America. He added that the French loan would not be emitted until the beginning of October as the Treasury was not in immediate need of money and was so swamped with work that it had been found necessary to create a special Issuing Department to relieve the Cashier's Department which, during the first year of war had handled payments totalling over 163 billions as compared with 38 billions in an average year.

MEAT PACKERS APPEAL AGAINST PRIZE COURT DECISION

London, Sept. 17.

Legal agents for the American Meat Packers have lodged an appeal against the judgment of the British Prize Court condemning as contraband the large quantity of their products captured on board several Norwegian vessels bound for German ports. It is expected that all legal steps will be expedited and judgment given as soon as possible.

The British Press strongly support the decision of the Prize Court and upholds that judgment of Sir Samuel Evans which, is everywhere endorsed.

"The Times" says the decision was absolutely necessary as a contrary judgment would have practically nullified the Order in Council declaring a Blockade against Germany.

The "Daily Mail" says that the decision of the Courts was strongly influenced by American precedent given in the U.S. Courts during the Civil War which were guided in large measures by the opinions of Chief Justice Chase and his colleagues with regard to British cargoes seized as contraband. Further the decision is, if adverse to American shippers a compliment to American Jurisprudence.

Other immense cargoes are awaiting the decision of the Government which will not be known until the result of the appeal in the American Packers' case is decided.

TEUTON BOMB-MEN

CAUSED FIRE ON THE SANTA ANA.

London, Sept. 18.

Lloyd's publish a cable from the Azores, stating that the fire on board the Santa Ana which put in there from New York, was caused by enemy spies; after several explosions the fire was put out. A number of unexploded bombs were found in the holds. Had the ship carried ammunition, she must have been blown to atoms.

ITALIAN'S INVENTION

NEW ENGINE OF WAR.

Rome, Sept. 16.

To-day's Press comments on the notices from Paris of the sensational invention of the Italian Engineer, Signor Luis Rota, an apparatus which can either remain motionless in the air or, move in any direction at the rate of 100 miles an hour, by the action of electric currents. "Il Messaggero" says that it is not wise to wax excessively enthusiastic before full experiments have demonstrated the practical value of the invention for, of the thousands of inventions announced many have never been used on account of insuperable difficulties which supervened.

MUNITIONS FOR THE ALLIES

ORDERS PLACED IN SWITZERLAND.

London, Sept. 20.

A telegram from Geneva announces that the British Minister at Berne, accompanied by experts in the manufacture of munitions of war, recently visited the great watchmaking establishment at Loclé, Neuchatel, Switzerland, where he gave an important order for a supply of munitions.

It is also stated that not long since, the Italian Government gave an order representing many million lire to the watchmaking works at Chaux-le-Fonds for munitions.

THE CITY OF VILNA IMPORTANT RAILWAY CENTRE NAPOLEON'S DISASTROUS EXPERIENCE

They call Vilna "Little Paris." The resemblance is not, however, striking to the western eye. When you have discovered that Vilna stands on a river, with hills rising above it, you will find little more suggestion of Paris. Its river, the Viliya, can hardly be 200 yards wide, and flows through winding gorges or defiles densely shadowed by fir and birch. The town is crowded in narrow and not too savoury streets on the slopes of the hills, and above it, on the summit, called Zamkooaya Gora, or Castle Hill, stands the ruins of an eight-sided tower of red brick, the remains of the castle which Gedynim, Grand Prince of Lithuania, built early in the fourteenth century, when he established Vilna as his capital. But the site has a much older history.

Vilna is the headquarters of the Governor-General of the Lithuanian provinces and of an army corps. It is an important educational centre. It has a trade in timber and grain. At the present time its population may be estimated at 200,000 people. But its chief importance is neither administrative nor commercial. It stands at the junction of the railways from Berlin and Warsaw to Petrograd, that is, it is one of the greatest centres of communication in Russia. From the German frontier it is 120 miles distant, from Petrograd more than 400. From Warsaw it is 257 miles. But these railways, though the most important, are not the only lines which converge on Vilna. It is connected by a line running south-east, through Minsk, with Kieff and the great resources of Southern Russia, while yet another branch gives communication due south with the fortress of Brest-Litovsk and the Pripet Valley and Rovno. Through Minsk on the south-eastern line runs the railway, which by way of Smolensk reaches Moscow.

It was Vilna which Napoleon chose as the advanced base of his famous invasion of Russia. He secured the line of the Niemen and made Vilna the strategic centre of the French forces. When he advanced he left Murat in command of his magazines and hospitals. The greatest of French leaders of cavalry seems an odd and inexplicable choice for such a post. Nor did Murat, who might have done much for the advance and something for the retreat, distinguish himself at the base. His men when the disaster of Moscow was known pillaged the stores and left behind 20,000 sick and wounded and 5,000,000. Napoleon had run away from the place in disguise some days before. When the Russians came back, twelve days later, they found in one hospital alone "7,500 dead bodies piled like pigs of lead one above the other." So much for the uses of Vilna as a base for invaders of Russia.—"Daily Telegraph."

RUSSIA'S FINE RESPONSE

Petrograd, Sept. 17.

In addition to the vast body of territorial reserves just called up, hundreds of corps of volunteers are being raised throughout the Empire.

The fact that the Tsar has taken the supreme command is beginning to show its effects and all Russians are anxious to take the field.

It is true that arms, equipment and transport are scarce but it is expected that these deficiencies will be gradually remedied by the constant arrival of war material from abroad.

4,000,000 FIGHTING MEN IN NEAR FUTURE.

Petrograd, Sept. 17.

The reorganisation of the army and the creation of the new corps are proceeding with the utmost despatch.

There are now arriving at the front many divisions sent from distant parts of the Empire.

It is expected that in a short time a force of 4,000,000 soldiers will be disposed along the fighting front.

WHAT ENGLAND IS DOING

FRENCH EX-MINISTER'S TRIBUTE

Rome, Sept. 20.

In a recent conversation with some journalists at Milan the French ex-Minister, M. Pichon, who has lately paid a visit to London, described the impressions he received on that occasion. He said:—

"The spectacle which England, and especially its capital London, offered to me was such as will never be obliterated from my memory. In the British ports one sees lying at anchor the mighty warships awaiting a mere word to leave their moorings to put to sea on some formidable undertaking. The sight of all this real and positive might has a terrifying effect.

"Nor is this the only force in Britain which is impatiently waiting to enter into the fray. The work that is going on there is vast, immense. No one can form an idea how they are labouring in England to ensure the victory to the Allies."

M. Pichon, who during his stay in Britain, conversed with the leading politicians of the country, declared that the Balkan question would be decided in accordance with the final proposals of the Quadruplice.

In regard to the meeting at Cernobio the ex-Minister was enthusiastic over the results obtained. He stated his belief that Italy and France are laying the foundation stone upon which will be reared the future alliance of the Latin world.

FRANCE'S NEW RECRUITS

1917 CLASS TO TAKE THE FIELD IN SPRING.

Paris, Sept. 17.

The notice that the conscript classes for 1917 are to be called to arms is received with general satisfaction, although it is recognised that it is a hard necessity to send the youngest men in the country to the front, but the urgency of the occasion excuses all.

During the next five months these troops will be trained and equipped. They will be ready to take the field in the spring.

The War Minister, M. Millerand, says the Government have great hopes of the new troops, whose enthusiasm is intense.

"WAR WITHOUT END"

GERMANY NOW ALLEGED TO BE PREPARING FOR SPRING CAMPAIGN.

New York, Sept. 17.

In this days issue the "Sun" states that according to news from Berlin the Germans are quite ready for the approaching winter campaign and are now preparing for the spring likewise. All the military stores are stocked with warm clothing for the cold season, and the factories are incessantly at work turning out articles of military necessity.

STRENUOUS WINTER FIGHTING ANTICIPATED.

New York, Sept. 17.

Berlin despatches state that the military critics do not expect that operations with slacken off on the approach of winter. In Russia more violent fighting is actually expected as when the roads are frozen the transport of heavy artillery will be facilitated as it is now frequently mired up to the axles.

ANNEXATION !

Geneva, Sept. 18.

The "Lausanne Gazette" says that it has certain information that Germany has decided to issue a proclamation formally annexing all the Territory occupied by German troops in France and Belgium.

ROSARIO NEWS

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT].

Sept. 21.

Rosario Football League.

Racing v. Central Cordoba.

On Sunday afternoon on the ground of the Gymnasia and Esgrima, the match for the Copa de Honor took place between representatives of the two clubs, Racing and Central Cordoba. The game was very much lacking in interest on account of the immense superiority of the visiting team. The result was a win for Racing 2 goals to 0.

Tennis at Rosario.

The long-expected match between a team from the Buenos Aires Lawn Tennis Club and Rosario came off on Sunday, the 19th, at Plaza Jewell. Buenos Aires won by 9 matches to 7, all of which were closely contested. The scores were as follows:—

Buenos Aires L.T.C.

A. J. Villegas and R. O. Sheward beat H. Middleton and H. Manley, 6—2, 10—8.

A. J. Villegas and R. O. Sheward beat W. Stocks and H. Atkinson, 6—2, 6—4.

A. J. Villegas and R. O. Sheward beat E. S. Knight and G. A. Middleton 3—6, 7—5, 6—2.

L. H. Knight and L. J. Jenkins beat H. Atkinson and W. Stocks, 6—3, 3—6, 6—3.

L. H. Knight and L. J. Jenkins beat H. Talbot and R. T. Taylor, 3—6, 6—3, 9—7.

L. H. Knight and L. J. Jenkins beat H. Middleton and H. Manley, 6—0, 6—2.

D. E. Cerboni and R. Peró beat H. Middleton and H. Manley, 6—4, 8—6, 6—3.

D. E. Cerboni and R. Peró beat H. Atkinson and W. Stocks, 6—4, 6—3.

A. R. Dodds and D. de Urquiza beat H. Middleton and H. Manley, 6—3, 7—5.

Rosario.

E. S. Knight and G. A. Middleton beat D. de Urquiza and A. R. Dodds, 6—0, 6—2.

E. S. Knight and G. A. Middleton beat L. H. Knight and L. J. Jenkins, 6—3, 6—4.

E. S. Knight and G. A. Middleton beat D. E. Cerboni and R. Peró 6—3, 6—4, 6—2, 1—6, 6—1.

H. F. Talbot and R. T. Taylor beat D. de Urquiza and R. Dodds, 6—3, 7—5.

H. F. Talbot and R. T. Taylor beat A. J. Villegas and R. O. Sheward, 6—4, 3—6, 6—4.

H. Atkinson and W. Stocks beat D. de Urquiza and A. R. Dodds 6—4, 3—6, 6—4.

Lunch was to be had on the ground, and tea was kindly provided by Mrs. Stocks and Mrs. Rowe.

Rosario Golf Club.

On Saturday, Sept. 25, there will be a putting and approaching competition for ladies on the links of the Rosario Golf Club, which have been placed at their disposal by the courtesy of the Committee, in aid of the Red Cross Society. The competition is open, and prizes have been promised. There will be tea and refreshments on the ground at moderate prices.

The train leaves Central at 1.5 p.m., and returns from the links at 5.20; tickets for the competition, the price of which are one dollar, can be had from any of the following ladies: Mrs. Crouch, Miss Gay, and Mrs. Murray Hudson.

Alfredo J. White

Solicitor and Accountant

Cordoba 1321, Rosario

Tel. No. 5191

CORDOBA NEWS

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT].

Sept. 20.

Church Services.

Services were held at the English Church Hall on Sunday morning, conducted by the Rev. Mr. Sugden. The latter left for Tucuman on Monday to hold services in the mentioned city on Sunday next.

The English Club Billiard Tournament.

The following gentlemen have signified their intention of participating in the Billiard Tournament (Handicap) to be held at the English Club during the coming month:—Messrs. C. C. Lewis, Harris Smith, Ferguson, Morton, Babb, Brigstocke, Cochrane, Lang, Schultz, Schrivener, Fowler and McCulloch. Entries should be made to Mr. R. J. Cochrane before the end of the current month.

Tram Conductor drops dead while on duty.

Conductor No. 48, Pedro N. Luna, while working on a tram of the No. 3 line, upon arriving at Chalet Crisol, dropped dead on the rear platform of his car. Heart disease was supposed to have been the cause of the unfortunate man's death.

Lawn Tennis Spring Tournament. Cordoba Athletic Club.

The Spring Tennis Tournament of the Cordoba Athletic Club will take place during the coming month of October.

Events are open to members of the Club only, as follows:—Gentlemen's Singles (Handicap), 1st prize presented by R. H. F. Stuart, Esq. Ladies' Singles (Handicap), 1st prize presented by G. E. Morton, Esq. Mixed Doubles (handicap), entrance fees: ladies $1.50 and gentlemen $2.50. Entries close on Thursday, 30th September, play to commence on Saturday, October 2nd, and all first rounds must be played off by Saturday, Oct. 9th. Entries may be made to any of the following members of the Club: Tennis Committee: G. E. Morton, captain; E. W. Marks, vice-captain; and L. G. Babb, hon. secretary.

Ball in aid of the Prince of Wales's Fund.

The Cordoba Committee, Prince of Wales's Fund, have issued the following letter to the members of the Sub-Committee: The Committee having received a very kind offer from Mrs. Hobbs, Avenida Velez, Sarsfield 311, to give a ball in aid of the Prince of Wales's National Relief Fund, the following sub-committee has been appointed to co-operate with Mrs. Hobbs and assist in the arrangements: Miss Muriel Hobbs, Mrs. Walters, Miss Phyllis Symonds, Mrs. L. G. Babb, Miss Doris Robinson, Messrs. Arthur Hughes, F. Lindeman, L. G. Babb, G. A. Brigstocke, and Mr. A. D. Dunbar.

Musical Evening at the Home of Mr. and Mrs. F. Lindeman.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Lindeman entertained a few friends at their home in Alta Cordoba, on Saturday night. Charades, singing and dancing were enjoyed until a late hour. Among those present were the following: Miss Phyllis Symonds, Miss Gladys Symonds, Mrs. Baxter, Miss Gracie Baxter, Mrs. Guppy, Miss Blanche Guppy, Miss Gladys Guppy, Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Babb, and Messrs. G. A. Brigstocke, P. P. Schultz, and A. Prince.

Jockey Club, Cordoba.

The following are the entries for the Jockey Club Meet, to be held next Sunday, at the Hippodrome, General Paz:—Premio "Villa Maria," 500 metres.—Pan, Cacique, Don Teodomiro, Otario, Gualicho, Sufrido, and Rodante. Premio San Antonio, 1000 metres.—Pedante, Valerosa and Romelia. Premio "Pamela," 1200 metres.—Chelita, Turquesa, Gilda IV., G. Meduca, Porotita and Andrianopolis. Premio "Only Boy," 1400 metres.—Stellita, Arabia, Montesuma, Goffo, Filosa, and Lehman.

BAHIA BLANCA NEWS

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT].

September 16.

Things German.

On the Celia which arrived here on Sunday from New York, and is one of the Grace Line of Steamers, is a consignment of cargo for the German Consul here, Diaz lamps, etc., from the States. The Consul gave instructions that only German or Austrian men should be employed in the discharge of the schooner which brought a consignment of timber for him, but no notice was taken of this as the men now unloading the boat are mostly Italians.

Since the commencement of the war there has also been a German named Schaub acting as agent here for an English Fire Insurance Co., the "General," who gave him instructions to continue as their agent but not to do any new business with the German community here until further orders from them.

Football Match in Aid of the River Plate Aeroplane.

A football match is to be played on Sunday (Sept. 19) between the two railways on the Portenians ground, starting at 3 p.m. The teams are to consist of, for the Pacific:—Goal, S. Perry; backs: Mackerrow and Pearson; half backs: W. McCorquodale, E. Caldwell and G. Edge; forwards: L. Andrews, Migotti, Clydesdale, Horton and Maples; with C. Brooking as linesman; and for the Southern:—Goal, Pongibobe; backs: Mortimer and Clayton; half backs: Clutton, Kelly, and Anker; forwards: Forman, Grimeaux, Mawson, Girado and Campbell; the linesman being H. G. Bennett. The referee is to be J. R. Mouzo; the entrance is to be $1. It is expected that there will be a large crowd there to witness this veterans' match and most of the thousand tickets printed have already been disposed of.

Cordoba Athletic Club.

The new tennis court at the Cordoba Athletic Club was inaugurated on Saturday afternoon last. This makes the fourth court arranged in a line from the Club Pavilion, and should prove a beneficial addition for the Spring Tournament, which takes place during the coming month.

Mr. Harry McCulloch, the winner of the recent Blackheath Golf Cup Tournament at Alta Gracia, will be presented with the Cup which remains in his possession for one year, at the Cordoba Athletic Club Pavilion, on Sunday, Sept. 26, at 4.30 p.m. It is hoped that as many of the golfers will be present as possible.

Football.

The standing in the several leagues of football in Cordoba up to the present date is as follows:—

Club.	P.	W.	D.	L.	P.
Central Cordoba	5	4	1	0	9
Belgrano	5	2	2	1	6
Juniors	5	1	1	3	3
University	5	1	0	4	2

Second Division.

Juniors (A.)	9	5	4	0	14
Central Cordoba	8	5	1	2	11
Alta Cordoba	7	5	0	2	10
Argentine Peñarol	8	4	1	3	9
Belgrano	5	3	2	0	8
Juniors (B.)	8	3	2	3	8
University	9	2	0	7	4
San Martin	10	0	0	10	0

In the Third Division (A), the "Los Andes" team are first in a field of 13 clubs, with 22 points, Juniors coming second with 17.

Third Division (B) also contains 13 teams with Belgrano leading with 20 points, and Velez Sarsfield second with 13.

The Fourth Division is composed of 7 clubs, with Belgrano and the General Paz Juniors tied for the leadership, each team having won 11 matches.

Ingeniero White Laws.

All places of business and the botiques in this town are supposed to be closed on Sundays, but according to the latest information, permission has been granted to them by the chief of the police to remain open, on the condition that they pay the sum of three dollars for this privilege, which was taken advantage of in several cases. The money, it was stated, is devoted to police expenses.

Police Notes.

Information has been given to the police by the owner of the shop known as the "Mantequera Inglesa" that some persons unknown have robbed him of wine, etc., to the value of $300.

The representative of the firm of N. Adot and Co. here has reported that between May, 1914, and April, 1915, there has been a shortage, that cannot be accounted for, of 9,800 pairs of shoes belonging to this firm. The value of the loss is estimated to be $15,000.

One of the police officials here yesterday arrested two men named Sifredi and Fregora, whilst they were in the act of endeavouring to persuade an acquaintance to hand over to their keeping the sum of $4,000 which he had just drawn out of the bank. They would probably have succeeded but for the unfortunate interruption.

The Editor of one of the local papers has reported to the authorities that an agent and travelling correspondent of the paper has left the district suddenly taking with him some $1,200, which sum had been collected for subscriptions and advertisements.

Five coach drivers have been arrested for not having taken out their licences which they will now have to pay as well as the corresponding fine.

The Frosts.

A considerable amount of damage has been done to the quintas in Bahia Blanca, Argerich, Medanos and La Alasca by the frosts of this week more especially those of Monday and Tuesday. The majority of fruit trees which were in bloom have had this nipped off, and a scarcity of fruit will again be felt this year. The only hope is that the vines, which are not yet in leaf, will not suffer a similar fate later on, as last year there were some sharp frosts in November which did a great amount of damage in the vine growing district.

Items in Brief.

A large number of people were present at the sports held by the public schools last Sunday on the Olympic ground.

Several of the principal families here spent a very pleasant day at Port Militar last Sunday where they were entertained to lunch on board the Moreno.

On Tuesday 1000 tons of wheat were sold here for Brazilian export and although the price was not stated it is concluded that this was not below $12; oats, good and clean, with a base of 47 kilos, are selling at $5.802; barley, for which there is very little demand, is quoted at $6.40.

Dr. A. Dominguez has now been named Municipal Doctor in Punta Alta, where he has been practising privately for some years past.

A sale of 2,000 head of cattle and 3,000 sheep is to be held in Villa Borden on September 24.

Complaints are now being received from Dorrego with regard to the large number of beggars that are about there in the streets.

On Sunday a lecture is to be given in Coronel Pringles by the farming expert, Sr. Unanue, to the farmers there.

SOUTHERN WOOL CLIP

Very satisfactory reports have been received of prospects for the southern wool clip. From Bahia Blanca, Chascomus and Tandil come statements that there are no more wools to sell, the buyers having taken all obtainable at $12 per 100 kilos.

Mainly About People

Mrs. Charles Towne wishes to announce to her friends that she has discontinued her regular "At Home" day for the remainder of the season.

Mr. A. Mitchell Innes, British Minister to Uruguay, has arrived in the Capital and will make a brief stay of a few days before returning to his post.

Friends of Trooper Hugh Baldoch, Number 1275, 2nd King Edward's Horse, an Argentine volunteer, who was wounded on July 9, are informed that he is, though still in hospital in London, doing well.

A beautiful miniature of the King of the Belgians, painted and presented by Miss K. Gregg, is to be raffled for the benefit of the Women's British Patriotic Association funds. Tickets, $2 each, may be obtained from Mrs. Robert Paton, Quinta Trelawne, San Martin, F.C.C.A., or at Mitchell's Book Store, Cangallo 580.

The petty officers and men of H. M. S. Macedonla have subscribed a sum of money amongst themselves to acquire a piano, pianola, and gramophone with discs. The ship's company comprises musical talent of a very high order, as was demonstrated at a smoking concert given by the men a short time ago. Offers of second hand instruments should be sent in without delay to the Hon. Secretary, British Patriotic Fund, Uruguay, Administración F. C. Central, Montevideo.

DAY BY DAY IN ROSARIO.

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT].

September 21.

A social is to be held in St. Bartholomew's School on the evening of Wednesday, 29th inst., at 9 p.m. There is to be a bridge drive and music, and refreshments will be provided. Tickets may be obtained from Mrs. H. Mackintosh or any member of St. Mary's Guild, also from Messrs. E. C. Tompsett and W. H. Dilrew. There has been a great complaint that there is no amusement for the evenings in Rosario, so it is hoped that this may be the first of a series of like entertainments. The proceeds will be given to one of the Patriotic Funds.

Mr. Arnado Andreson has been appointed acting Norwegian Consul. The Consulate is temporarily installed in Calle Salta 1455.

Mr. Spencer S. Dickson, the British Consul, has recovered from his recent indisposition.

Mr. G. H. Marsh, of Roldan, is shortly leaving for England to offer his services as a volunteer. All who know "Tiny" and his genius with the mandoline will agree with me that he is destined to become the "mascot" of some fortunate regiment.

Mr. A. C. Beasley, grandson of Mr. John Murray, late station-master of Funes, left on the s.s. Ruahine for England to offer his services for the manufacture of ammunition. Mr. Beasley was anxious to volunteer for active service, but was told that it was improbable that his services could be accepted owing to defective eyesight.

Miss Searle, of Alberdi, who has been spending some three weeks in the Hills, returns on Thursday.

Great dissatisfaction is being expressed in commercial circles over the postponement of the construction of the new custom house.

The delegates appointed by the Sociedad Rural to visit the cattle show in Santa Fe on the 28th of this month are Messrs. Emilio C. Largaia, Richard Murray, Juan Bocro, and Carlos Bocro.

DAY BY DAY IN BAHIA BLANCA.

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT].

Sept. 16.

Mr. and Mrs. Pye left here for Buenos Aires on Tuesday night.

Amongst the new arrivals here is Mr. Reynold, who has taken the position formerly occupied by Mr. Williamson on the Pacific Railway.

Mr. Joliffe, who has volunteered for active service, has now gone up to Buenos Aires to undergo a medical examination.

Mr. and Mrs. Mason are expected back here from their honeymoon to-day.

The Ladies' Commission in charge of the arrangements for the Red Cross function which is to be given at Harrods, Buenos Aires, Ltd., on September 26, has recently been augmented and now comprises the following members:—Mesdames Lainez, Martinez de Hoz, Mackie, J. S. de Pell, Chevallier Boutell, R. A. Norton, E. van Peborgh, S. T. Cabib, L. Delaunay, T. Serstevens, de Morra, M. Saubert, F. Pegasano and de Casaubon. Several meetings have been held, and considerable progress made in the work of preparation. In a few days' time it is hoped to be able to publish the details of the programme which will be of a varied and high-class character. There has already been a good demand for tickets, and everything points to a very large and fashionable gathering and a substantial addition to the Red Cross Funds. The hours will be from 3 to 7 and in addition to the musical programme tea will be provided. As is known, Harrods are making themselves responsible for the service of tea, and are defraying all other expenses in order that the whole proceeds may be handed to the Red Cross Societies of the Allies. Tickets will be $5 each including tea, and may be obtained from the British Society, 536 Cangallo; the Plaza Hotel; the Savoy Hotel; Mappin and Webb; Mitchell's Book Store; Robert Grant and Co.; Harrods Ltd.; Club Francaise, and the Bonboneria, "Iris Blanc."

DAY BY DAY IN CORDOBA.

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT].

September 20.

The Rev. and Mrs. Sugden have started housekeeping in Cordoba, having engaged a house in Calle 24 de Septiembre near Calle Pringles, General Paz.

Mr. Roland Hunt was a visitor in town on Friday of last week from Buenos Aires.

Mr. and Mrs. Wyatt Smith, accompanied by Miss Randall, journeyed to the Capital last week with their little daughter who is ill.

Mr. and Mrs. Webb have moved from General Paz to Pueblo San Vicente.

Mrs. Hughes, of Barrio Inglés, has been confined to the house for several days, suffering from a severe cold.

Mr. Donald Smith has left town for a visit to the Capital, and expects to be away some days.

Mr. Sciebler, who has been suffering from a sprained wrist, is now much better and was able to resume his favourite game of tennis on Sunday last.

Master Edward Smith, of the stores Dept. of the Cordoba Light and Power Company, has been away from his post now for over a week, suffering from throat trouble.

Mr. McDonald, President of the Villa Devoto Tennis Club, was a visitor in town yesterday, and took advantage of the beautiful weather to make a trip to Alta Gracia to enjoy a round of golf.

Mr. Livock, who spent several days with us on business, has returned to the Capital.

MISSIONS TO SEAMEN

SUCCESSFUL CONCERT

Miss E. Woodwell was responsible for a splendid concert given last night at St. John's Missions to Seamen. It was unfortunate that Miss Kathleen Knight was not able to sing owing to a cold. This young lady has made herself immensely popular by her singing at all concerts given in the city for good and patriotic causes, and there cannot fail to be a sensation of something missing when she is unfortunately unable to appear.

Last night's audience was the usual appreciative one, and encores, well deserved, were frequent.

Mr. W. Crispin opened the concert with a pianoforte solo, and was followed by Mrs. Honeysett, who sang charmingly and gave as her encore a well chosen song, "Moonlight Bay."

Mr. A. Ridley's whistling solos brought down the house, and he was enthusiastically applauded.

Mrs. Herald was just as good as entertaining and as humorous as ever and most generously gave of her best.

One of the items most appreciated was Miss Woodwell's violin playing. Schubert's "Serenade" as an encore was delightfully rendered.

"The Storm King" and "Jack Ashore" suit Mr. Fairclough excellently.

Mrs. Honeysett in the second half of the programme was equally as charming as in the first, and the effect of a violin obligato to Noel Johnson's "Farewell to Summer" was new and pleasing. The ladies of Lomas have much to congratulate themselves upon in providing a highly entertaining evening. The programme was as follows:—

Part I.

Pianoforte solo, Ragtime selections, Mr. W. Crispin.

Vocal solo, "The Billet Doux," Mrs. Honeysett; encore, "Moonlight Bay."

Whistling solo, "Cavalleria Rusticana," Mr. A. Ridley; encores, "How I saved my life" and "I'm a plumber."

Violin, "Morris Dance," Miss E. E. Woodwell; encore, Schubert's Serenade.

Recitation, "Ymn of Ate," Mrs. Herald; encore, "The Old Crock."

Vocal solo, "Storm King," Mr. W. Fairclough; encore, "Jack ashore."

Part II.

Pianoforte solo, "Wonderland," Mr. W. Crispin.

Violin solo, "Bolero," Miss E. E. Woodwell, encored.

Vocal solo, "Rank and File," Mr. W. Fairclough.

Recitation, "How young Hoky enlisted," Mrs. M. Herald; encore, "Sister Susie sewing shirts for soldiers."

Whistling solo, impromptu, Mr. A. Ridley, encored.

Vocal solo, "Farewell to Summer," Mrs. R. Honeysett, with violin obligato by Miss Woodwell; encore, "The magic month of May."

God save the King.

DAY BY DAY IN CORDOBA.

Mr. A. D. Dunbar visited Alta Gracia on Sunday last to participate in the game of golf on the well appointed links connected with the Sierras Hotel of the mentioned place.

Mrs. C. C. Lewis, who was confined to her bed for some time with a severe attack of influenza, is now much improved in health. Master Jack Lewis has also recovered from a bad case of bronchitis.

Mr. Holland, who is making a visit to this city, expects to leave for Buenos Aires shortly, to embark for England, where he will join the colours.

Mr. Reynolds, who is installing an electric plant at his estancia, was a visitor in town to-day.

Mrs. Tony Lowande is making a stay at San Esteban, in the Cordoba Hills, where she is recuperating from her recent illness.

Mrs. A. D. Dunbar and baby made a visit to the Cordoba Athletic Club on Saturday afternoon.

CINE CONCERT AT AMERICAN CHURCH

FULL HOUSE AND FULL COLLECTION PLATE.

The Concert and Cinema at the American Church last evening were remarkably successful from every point of view. As notified, the purpose of this function was to assist in the provision of an Apprentices' Room at the Victoria Sailors' Home, an accommodation badly needed. Mr. W. H. Robertson, the American Consul, was present in the Chair and a very large number of other people also inasmuch that the sign was "standing room only" and that, chiefly in the outer darkness of the side passage. All seating accommodation was very early occupied in toto. The film exhibited "The Daughter of Neptune" is an exceedingly long one but as it is also exceedingly beautiful and a piece of genuine old Romance, no one complained on that account. It who an undiluted pleasure and was watched with intense attention. If there be no mermaids as the sceptics assert, it is infinitely to be regretted. Much more so since one has seen what possibilities of charm they possess.

Mr. H. P. Dee furnished a slumberous accompaniment of music, like the grieving wash of waves on the beach. A brief but excellent musical programme was included.

Madame de Mello, who was in excellent voice, gave with Mr. de Mello a charming rendering of the duet "In a Garden of Roses." Subsequently Madame de Mello sang in her best manner "A Geisha's Life" and Mr. de Mello "Susquehanna." Madame Edgard's contribution was that fine song of tragic power Tosti's "Good Bye," which she sang most sympathetically. Mr. J. Gibson Taylor's ventriloquial sketch and Ocarine solo by Mr. H. W. Curtis, which might have been taken for that of a powerful siffleur except for the piercing clearness of the notes completed the programme. It is understood that the "Paper" collection was not the least satisfactory part of the evening. Certainly it had every appearance of being a bumper one, and being satisfactory to Mr. Stanley Parker and "The Home."

Y.M.S.C. SOCIAL

HELP FOR THE TOBACCO FUND.

The social evening held last night at the Salon Béranger by the Young Men's Social Club in aid of the Tobacco Fund was a great success and quite a brilliant gathering.

Some 35 couples were present, and as there was a special arrangement in force for a prolonged evening there was no complaint about these pleasant functions being too short on this occasion. Dancing was indulged in, and as an example of the financial success it can be mentioned that the Tobacco Fund was swelled by $50, which represented a clear profit after all expenses had been paid.

A further opportunity for increasing the fund was originated by a member of the Club who struck upon the splendid idea of presenting a large picture to be raffled at a dollar per ticket. The picture, a pencilled landscape, was the work of this member, and most cleverly and ably had he done the drawing. The picture will be raffled at the next social, on November 3.

Owing to the kindness of Miss Doty the piano was given but little rest, as this lady gave her services and was untiring throughout the evening in playing for the various dances.

The social all round gave plenty of enjoyment, and Mr. Martin and his committee have once more shewn that energy and perseverance in a good cause can work wonders. Dancing and welcome refreshments occupied the evening.

THE BRITISH SOCIETY

Steady Progress Made

SUBSTANTIAL INCREASE OF MEMBERSHIP.

(Contributed.)

Since its annual meeting in August, the British Society has made steady progress and new members are constantly being enrolled. The good work done during the past twelve months has been recognised. Promises of support from British residents in far-distant parts of the Republic are being received in increasing numbers and the work of banding together the various members of the British community into a strong, active, progressive organisation which will guard and advance British interests in every possible way—an ideal which many thought impossible of realisation a few months ago—is being steadily and successfully continued. If the present rate of progress is maintained, the Society will have more than doubled its membership before the time of the next annual meeting comes round. There is, however, no reason why this rate of progress should not be increased fourfold, and with their lands strengthened by the encouragement received from all quarters the Committee are making arrangements which, it is hoped, will bring this result about.

The first business to which the new Committee directed their attention was the election of officers for the ensuing year. The following were appointed:—Chairman, Mr. Arthur Geo. Pruden; Vice-Chairman, Mr. D. C. Anderson; Hon. Secretary, Mr. P. A. Grassick; Treasurer, Mr. W. Watson. As will be seen, the executive officers are the same as last year, with the exception that Mr. P. A. Grassick has succeeded Mr. W. B. Anson-May in the position of Hon. Secretary left vacant by Mr. May's departure for Uruguay. Mr. Grassick's activity and energy are well known. He has had a wide experience of British organisations in Argentina, and it is recognised that he is the "right man in the right place." The Committee congratulate themselves upon having persuaded him to take office, and feel sure that his co-operation, always given willingly, as a member of the Committee will be of the utmost service to the Society in this position of greater responsibility.

A number of Sub-Committees have also been appointed to look after the various branches of the Society's activity. The work has developed to such an extent that this course was absolutely essential. It was found quite impossible for the General Committee to deal with all the business at their fortnightly meetings, and subdivision, which it is hoped will lead to greater efficiency and more effective organisation, was decided upon. The Sub-Committees have power to add to their numbers from outside the members of the General Committee, but, of course, it is a sine qua non that all members of the Sub-Committees shall be members of the Society.

Mr. A. G. Pruden and Mr. D. C. Anderson have been selected to represent the British Society upon the Committee of the Allied nations. This Committee exists as a central organisation to control matters in which all the nations of the Allies are jointly interested, and is doing valuable work.

Now it is obvious that the war will continue through another winter, an appeal will shortly be made to British residents to do their part once again in providing comforts for the men at the front. Last year the response was a splendid one, and the socks, mufflers and warm underclothing, sent forward in such quantities were of the greatest value. This is a work suited particularly to ladies and it is to them principally that the appeal will be made. They are advised, therefore, to have their knitting needles in readiness. Information regarding the articles in greatest need and the styles and quality chiefly favoured will be given later. It is quite certain that amongst the ladies there will be no diminishing of the desire to help. Their sympathies are as strongly as ever with the men in the trenches. It may be, however, that some will imagine that there is no need for this individual co-operation now; that during the past twelve months the authorities have had time to make ample preparation for all requirements, and that the second winter will not find the troops so unprepared to withstand the rigours of winter as was the case before. This is a wrong idea which should not be allowed to make ground. With the hundreds of thousands of men at the front and with the sick and wounded to be attended there is ample work for all British subjects. Everyone is asked to do something, and however small the individual contribution may be, it should be remembered that it will help to swell the sum total.

The work of supplying the sailors on board the British cruisers in these waters with books and magazines is still carried on, quietly and unobtrusively, but regularly. It is rarely a Royal Mail boat leaves without taking with it to Montevideo a fairly large consignment of reading matter, varied with articles of clothing calculated to be of use to the men and supplied by friends in Argentina. The same may be said of the tobacco for the soldiers. Appeals for funds for this object have not been issued recently by the British Society, but the supply is steadily maintained and each month several hundreds of parcels of cigarettes, etc., provided by well-wishers in this country, are distributed in the trenches.

In these and other ways the Society believes that it is carrying out its programme and is meriting the support of British residents here. That support should be shown by all associating themselves with the work being done. With a strong organisation a great deal more could be accomplished, but a strong organisation depends upon a large membership. All recognise the need of a properly organised British Society, truly representative of the British people in this Republic, and many are acting up to their belief by enrolling themselves as members. Why should it be necessary to appeal for support in such a cause? Why should it not be recognised that it is the duty of all British subjects to ally themselves with an association formed for guarding and advancing British interests? Had such a Society been in existence a few years earlier, had it been an established, properly supported and recognised central organisation, the work of co-ordinating and directing individual patriotic endeavours might have been much more easily and satisfactorily carried out. A lesson may be learned from the past. When the need for River Plate aeroplanes and ambulances has disappeared, a British organisation should and must remain, and there is plenty of work before it. Below are given the names of British residents who have been elected members during the past month. The subscription is $5 a year. With the means at his disposal it is impossible for the Society to make a personal appeal to every British subject in the country. Moreover, such an appeal ought not to be necessary. Application membership forms may be obtained on request at the offices of the Society. These have simply to be filled in and returned.

The recently elected members are: N. H. Nielson, C. H. Quirk, Arthur Ibbotson, Alexander Picken, Valentine A. Brown, M. M. Venter, W. P. Hardie, Henry Martin, Mrs. J. C. Wellby, A. T. Nickson, Miss G. F. Rendall, Miss I. C. Cantlay, C. H. Hulme, E. M. Pixton, Mrs. E. Halpin, J. P. Kelly, G. H. Jackson, Miss E. J. Stanger, G. B. Sparkes, F. H. Jones, L. Richardson, C. W. Candy, A. T. Andrews, J. Bow, B. A. Prichard, F. J. Sellers, D. Rogers, Mrs. J. W. M. Corbett, Rev. C.

WRITERS AND THE WAR

NO. 1.

Mr. Gilbert K. Chesterton

Perhaps too little time has elapsed since the outbreak of hostilities for the war to have had any appreciable effect on English literature; but, whatever may be the cause, it is nevertheless a fact that the modern British authors have not, as a body, been influenced by the troubled times in which they live. This, of course, is speaking broadly, for there are noteworthy exceptions, among whom must be placed Mr. Gilbert K. Chesterton, Mr. Arnold Bennett, Mr. Bernard Shaw, and Mr. Jerome K. Jerome. They are given in this order, not necessarily because it is insisted that they hold those places in modern literature, but because it is the order in which their written work since the outbreak of war has left them at the present time. Mr. Chesterton therefore is the premier Imperial writer of to-day, and it is not difficult to determine why he occupies that position.

The majority of Britons have read more than one of the striking articles contributed by Mr. Chesterton to the columns of the "Illustrated London News" during recent months. Some of those articles have been purely ephemeral in interest; others will live for many years to come.

Mr. Chesterton, more than any living British author, has a clear conception of the national character. Its greatness, its inconsistencies, its insularity, and its respectable narrow-mindedness, are all known to him. He makes free play with all these characteristics, and, if often satirical, he is never abusive or insulting. Mr. Chesterton's adjectives are the necessary adornments to skilfully constructed sentences, and are never part of the armament of a policy of vituperation.

Each of these features of Mr. Chesterton's literary style existed in pre-war days. How then can they be said to have been influenced by the changed conditions which at present prevail? The answer lies in a careful reading of the author's past and present work and in an understanding of the Chestertonian philosophy.

Mr. Gilbert K. Chesterton is only less entertaining than Pickwick, because we have him in the flesh; he only falls below the immortal Dr. Johnson because Dr. Johnson died more than a century ago. Actually, he is greater than Pickwick, because he is real, whereas Pickwick was a literary creation. He is superior to Johnson because he is large-minded, whereas the dead literary giant was small minded. He has the big virtues of both and the shortcomings of neither.

Were it not that the now famous essayist did not loom into promience until the days of the Boer War, it would be possible to term him the last of the great eighteenth century writers. In many respects, there is little room for Mr. Chesterton to-day. He is avowedly a lover of beer. This in itself is a virtue in Mr. Chesterton, for the simple reason that a smaller man, mentally, could not love beer and at the same time remain great. A respectable defender of Christianity and of all that is best in British domestic life, could not at the same time defend the right of the soldier to drink, and himself rejoice over the possibilities of alcoholic refreshment as one of the lesser happinesses of existence.

Similarly no ordinary man could write in the patriotic strain adopted by Mr. Chesterton and, at the same time, contribute revolutionary articles to the Socialist press, and scourge the backs of the respectable middle-class Englishman.

Mr. Chesterton is one of the few great figures of the present day. He is never guilty of the indiscretions of Mr. Bernard Shaw; he lacks the petulance of Mr. H. G. Wells; he is not the pot-boiling opportunist so frequently imitated by Mr. Arnold Bennett. Nor does he possess the incompetent egotism of a Hall Caine or a Marie Corelli. Rather is he a Briton of the type perpetuated in the allegorical John Bull. He has the physical characteristics, the outspoken independence, and the keen sense of righteousness, beloved by most Englishmen; yet which are at the same time possessed, and able to be possessed, by very few.

Entertaining and healthy prior to the war, Mr. Chesterton's work is now a national asset. He does not let us forget that Britain must emerge from the bath of blood purified and chastened in spirit, that the shortcomings which were eating into her national life must be swept away, and that out of the nightmare into which she has been reluctantly drawn must come a better, freer, and happier people. Naturally, the majority of these things can only come as a result of action by the people themselves, but there is no doubt that the spark which will set the tinder alight must come from the thoughtful writers and thinkers who will lead the public. Mr. Chesterton is not the least among the men appointed by fate to conduct so great a mission. One factor, at any rate, will count in his favour, and that is that he is able to reach his public. The works of the essayist are, as a rule, closed to the average reader who desires entertainment. But Mr. Chesterton is never so happy as when writing essays. He is always interesting no matter how unusual may be the subject on which he is engaged. Indeed, so good is Mr. Chesterton when writing of other things, that one could almost wish that he would write of himself. But possibly he does. Did not Anatole France once state that when an author ventured on criticism he was writing "of myself apropos of" whatever the selected subject might be? The great war has made great opportunities, but few have seized them. At the head of the select band stands the greatest essayist now known to the English language.

H. L. L.

STATE RAILWAYS

WEEKLY RETURNS.

The official statistics published of the return of the State Railways for the past week contain the following information:

The profits show an increase of $41,229.28, and are returned at $326,217—27. The figures for each railway are:—

Central Northern Railway $241,387—67
Northern Argentine . . . $68,844—42
Section C. and N. West $13,016—18

The amount of yearly profit to date is $10,164,290—41, and is an increase of $480,479—47 over the corresponding period of 1914.

J. Turner, J. B. Hilton, R. J. Williams, P. H. Keenan, H. J. Hale, J. Forbes, M. Hood, Brian Hope, G. E. Griffin, E. A. Woodward, Robert Veitch, C. Hitchman, G. F. Magrane, W. J. Mulhall, H. A. Hill, J. P. Pearson, Mrs. J. E. Turner, J. L. Lewin, P. H. Shepherd, F. J. Mendl, T. H. Braithwaite, Mrs. M. F. Richards, F. Richards, B. S. Webb, R. Dagger, J. S. Prescott, B. A. Cash-Reed, F. Briggs, F. O. Franks, R. E. Bailey, A. C. McCarthy, W. C. L. Sheppard, W. J. Potts, A. Logan, G. E. Snell, J. M. Wigg, P. J. Wyatt, A. G. Bridger, Bevan R. Chantrell, A. J. McMorran, H. A. Jacobs, A. de Tiel, P. P. Sutrageon, Miss D. M. J. Devine, S. Parker, Mrs. E. E. Parker, Miss R. C. Fagan, Miss K. R. Birch, Miss M. MacCutcheon, S. O. Bridge, H. W. Hughes, F. Leitch, Mrs. E. N. Reed, Captain E. N. Reed, H. G. Jones, Miss A. Selway, J. M. Murray, H. Jolly, A. Geoghegan, P. H. Fairclough.

A CRIME OF JEALOUSY

Wife Shot by Husband

TRAGEDY AT NUEVA POMPEYA

A crime of jealousy, in which a young married woman was murdered by her husband, yesterday disturbed the tranquility of Nueva Pompeya.

In a small and respectable house in Calle Amhato there lived as a tenant Maria Morgen, and her two little girls, the eldest of whom is 3 years old and the youngest only 8 months.

Maria Morgen was separated from her husband, who is a Turk, and whose real name is Bayn, and whose employment is as a workman at Riachuelo. His conduct has always been good. It was the habit of his cousin, Martini Bayn, to occasionally pay visits to the wife and take presents to the little children. Early yesterday morning the husband arrived at the house and demanded the reason for these visits. The house was quiet and the children asleep, but the sound of quarrelling awoke the neighbours, but before they could interfere Bayn suddenly drew a revolver and fired at his wife three times. The third shot hit her in the left side, and the poor woman sank to the floor and died a few minutes later.

The first shot wounded the little girl Teresa, who was asleep, but fortunately the wound is slight. Bayn at once took to flight, pursued by another tenant of the house and a vigilante. He was soon caught and lodged in jail. Doctor Llavallol has ordered the transference of the body of the unfortunate woman to Comisaria 34.

The little children are in the charge of friends. The incident has created a considerable excitement in the neighbourhood.

CORPORAL RUNS AMOK

AMAZING AFFAIR AT RIO DE JANEIRO

An extraordinary affair is reported from Rio de Janeiro in which two captains were shot dead, a lieutenant dangerously wounded and a sergeant of police no less seriously injured by a subordinate. The telegraphed despatches state that a regiment of cavalry were stationed at Curityba under the command of Captain Leonico Moraes.

For some reason this officer had cause to reprehend a corporal named Antonio Galdino.

The latter drew a Mauser pistol and shot his superior dead.

Captain Silvero Hurtado interfered and was treated in a like manner. Captain Hurtado died shortly afterwards. Lieutenant Avila and Sergeant Carrego were also fired upon and both dangerously wounded.

Even this was insufficient for Corporal Galdino. The matter was at once reported to the Colonel, who also had to withstand a leaden shower but was fortunately unhurt.

THE AGRICULTURAL BANK

POSTPONEMENT OF THE DISCUSSION IN THE SENATE.

The committees of Agriculture and Home Affairs, in the Chamber of Deputies commenced some little time ago an enthusiastic study of the possibilities of founding an Agricultural Bank in the Republic. For the moment, however, this business has been shelved, and "pressure of business" is given as the excuse.

Further discussion on the matter has been suspended until 10 days before the closure of the session, which means that the matter is entirely out of all decision for some time to come.

The native press decry the shelving of a matter of such great importance to agriculturalists, and points out how each deputy is calling for money for some scheme or other, the value of which is more or less hypothetical.

CRIME AT LA PLATA

20 Severe Wounds

ON CORPSE FOUND IN A DITCH

Yesterday morning about 10, some residents of Calle 116, found the corpse of a man, in a ditch full of water, opposite to numbers 23 and 24.

On informing the police, the body was removed to the Asistencia Publica, where examination showed that no fewer than 20 severe wounds had been inflicted in the head alone, some being four centimetres in depth. From the nature of the injuries it is conjectured that some of them at least were inflicted with a paving stone or a similar blunt and heavy object.

There is suspicion that the murderer is an Austrian subject named Dray Wasyl, who was seen in the neighbourhood, and whose motive was probably robbery. The police are looking for this person, but the dead man has not been identified.

POLICE STATISTICS

A publication known as the "Boletin Estadistica" of the police is a pamphlet full of interesting details and statistics, concerning crimes and robberies that have taken place in and around Buenos Aires during the first six months of 1915. As a point of general observation it is remarked that there is a general reduction all round in police cases as compared with an equivalent period of last year.

In the first three months of the present year the number of cases in the Capital was 2652, which includes thefts from private and public persons, forgeries, burglaries, matrimonial cases, assaults, infringement of laws and the like. In the second three months 3223 cases of a similar nature were registered. The total for the equivalent period of 1914 was 7875.

4388 cases of minor offences were also recorded as against 5875 of last year's period.

The total amount of stolen property was valued during January, February, and March at $126,875.50.

During the second three months of the year a reduction of 25 per cent. of all cases was recorded. These recorded reductions of cases are not at all clearly shown in the statistics, and it is difficult to realise that while during April, May and June property and goods to the value of $760,812.12 were found missing, and that in the first three months only $126,875.50, where the reduction comes in.

EDITOR ASSAULTED

HOTEL PROPRIETOR'S ANGER.

A fresh terror is added to journalism and the reporter who does not speak in terms of the highest laudation of camp hotel proprietors, goes in peril of his life.

At General Roca a weekly newspaper, the Rio Negro, had ventured to refer in a censorious manner to the proprietor of the Hotel Toscano and to his nephew. Several robberies had been committed upon guests residing at this house of entertainment for which no satisfaction could be obtained, and the journal had pointed out the circumstance without praising the honesty of either the landlord or his relative.

Since then the director of the paper has been savagely assaulted by the aggrieved hotel proprietor and his relative, possibly in vindication of their injured honour which is now under repair at the Comisaria.

CHEAPER POTATOES?

Possible Effect of New Regulations

FACILITIES GRANTED TO IMPORTERS

It may have been noticed (house-keepers know it), that potatoes are scarce. In the restaurants the liberal allowances of two waxy and aenemic looking tubers, is cut down to half—"porque de la guerra," which is no doubt also the reason that potatoes are not grown, or will not grow, in the Republic. Hence the potato importers have approached the "Minister of Finance and obtained certain facilities" for the delivery of these necessary vegetables.

Among these are permission to discharge potatoes in the same dock in which the vessel carrying them, is turned, provided this be done within 48 hours. Up till now, the discharge of potatoes has only been permitted in Dock 1, which has originated all kinds of delays, demurrages, extra charges and expenses which all ultimately come out of the consumer's pocket which, is probably the reason that neither Government nor anyone else worried about the matter or altered it. No reason is assigned for the rule, probably because none existed beyond the fact that the arrangement gave somebody a "pull" on the public, and a chance to squeeze them. Potatoes are 30 cents a kilo. That is 3d. a pound, or the price of good apples in England. Whether the consumer will profit by the concessions made to the importers is questionable. Probably not, out cause.

The authorities cannot blame the public, si this sensation of suspicion and loss of confidence is created. The point of view which will be taken of officials to the public well being, hiding themselves behind locked doors must of necessity be unsavoury.

The figures published in this week's bulletin shows death from tuberculosis 49, scarlatina 1, small-pox 12, diphtheria 13, croup 1. Total 76. Last year's equivalent figures are: Tuberculosis 54, small-pox 1, typhoid 13, diphtheria 4, croup 1. Total 73.

DOCTOR PALACIOS VICTIMISED

ARREST OF A SWINDLER.

Dr. Palacios, whose name is so well known in legislative and social circles, was some little time ago the victim of a series of swindles and forgeries of signature of which he duly gave notice to the police. The rogue was one José Chaine, well enough known to Dr. Palacios, but whom, at the same time the politician did not wish to give in charge. On many occasions the influential protection of the ex-deputy, it is stated, was the cause of favour being shown to the delinquent.

Under the name of Valentin Virasoro, Chaine swindled Dr. Palacios as far back as 1908, but influence obtained his freedom and as has been the case on many occasions since, the late leader of the Socialist party has used his influence to persuade the law to let the man go.

At last these constant breakings of the law irritated Dr. Palacios, who was a victim of them all to such an extent that he determined to let the law do its duty, with the result that Chaine, already a man who has served six years, has been arrested.

His method of procedure, in general, was to beg for money in the name of Dr. Palacios and to sign the ex-deputy's name to begging letters. Why it should be that any other than the President of the Republic has power to persuade the law not to take action in a right and proper cause and in one to the general benefit of the public is not explained in the police report.

TRAGEDY IN B.A.

MOTHER AND WIFE DONE TO DEATH

ITALIAN'S TERRIBLE CRIME

A most shocking affair, ending in the death of a wife and daughter, occurred on September 16 in Calle Ayacucho, and appears to be the result of insanity on the murderer's part.

At a house No. 736 Ayacucho, there lived a married woman, Rosa Paggio Adogno by name. The mother of four children, the eldest four years of age, and the youngest less than a month, she had been in the Republic several years, during which time her husband, an Italian like herself, had been engaged as a cleaner of trams at Barracas.

Owing to the husband's employment at Rosario he and his wife had separated, and the mother and father of the wife were also living apart. The elderly couple had apparently suffered a period of some 18 years' hard struggle in the country, and latterly it had been decided that mother and daughter should live together.

The daughter engaged herself in providing the necessities of life, but fell upon hard days when her husband returned from Rosario. It was his habit to go daily to see his mother and his wife and ask them for money.

Yesterday they were without funds and whether this was the reason for the husband producing a knife and killing his mother is a point that the police are deciding. It would point however, to a case of insanity, because a few moments after killing his mother he went to his wife's room and threatened to kill the little child, less than a month old, who was lying in bed with the mother.

A shocking scene ensued. Adogno attacked the child. The mother in her efforts to save it from harm had her arms and hands literally cut to pieces. Her cries for help were unattended, until she rushed out into the patio streaming with blood and her insane husband after her.

Still infuriated, the husband stabbed his wife eight times. Three of these wounds were each enough to cause instantaneous death.

He was about to return to dispatch the child when caught by the police.

It is stated that no more shocking tragedy has occurred in the city, on account of the terrible manner in which the murderer's victims were butchered. He apparently danced round them in the manner of a maniac, and each defensive action was received with a slash by his knife, until the poor defenceless women had no hands left with which to protect herself.

The affair has created an intense excitement in the neighbourhood of the crime. The house was a well-known one, and some 150 persons were living on the premises, mostly women. The mother was removed to the Morgue, and the wife to the hospital.

It appears that Rosa Paggio, the wife, had suffered considerably from her husband's threats, that unless she earned money he would kill her child. The deceased woman unfortunately believed her husband, and while obeying him lived in constant fear.

DONALDSON LINER DESTROYED

FIRE IN MID-OCEAN.

New York, Sept. 20.

A telegram from Halifax, Nova Scotia, reports that the steamer Athenia, 8588 tons gross, belonging to Donaldson Bros. of Glasgow, has been destroyed by fire on the trip from Glasgow to Montreal or Quebec. Passengers, who numbered 500, and crew were rescued by the Ausonia.

Another message states that one life was lost.

OBITUARY

MRS. M. E. PENNINGTON.

On Friday, Sept. 17, the funeral took place at Quilmes English Cemetery of the late Mrs. M. E. Pennington, mother of Mr. A. Stuart Pennington of Queen Victoria College, San Fernando, who died on September 16 at the residence of her grandson, Dr. Miles Stuart Pennington, at Quilmes.

The deceased lady was born in 1827 and was therefore in her 89th year. An impressive funeral service was conducted by the Rev. J. W. Fleming, D.D..

Wreaths and flowers were sent by "Arthur and Annie," "Miles and Janet," "Willie and Julia," "Anita and Ethel," Mr. and Mrs. R. Craig, Mr. and Mrs. Avery, Mr. and Mrs. S. Kay and others.

The following friends of the families of Mr. A. Stuart Pennington and Dr. M. Stuart Pennington were present or sent cards:—

Mr. and Mrs. David C. Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew J. Avery, Captain and Mrs. R. Andrews, Mrs. Geo. T. Bate, Mr. and Mrs. W. Allinson Bell, Sr. B. Bretti, Mr. and Mrs. G. Chandler, Mr. and Mrs. Rob. Craig, Mr. Geo. Common, Sr. N. Chavarri, Mr. and Mrs. Foster Cutler, Mrs. H. Dougall, Mr. Charles H. Dougall, Mr. Fras. H. Davenport, Mr. Herbert J. Dobson, Dr. and Mrs. L. G. Dodds, Sr. Emilio E. de Vecchi, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Edve, Miss Forget, Messrs. Willie and Cyril Forget, Sr. C. Galli, Mr. Andrew H. Gibson, Miss Adelaida Godio, Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Garssick, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Gilbert, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Gilbert, Mr. and Mrs. T. Gregory, Sr. E. Gagliolo y familia, Mrs. J. S. Hooper, Mr. and Mrs. David Hogg, Mr. Ernest Hogg, Sr. Juan P. Hesperne, Miss Holland, Mrs. W. L. Hall, Misses Howard, Mr. T. B. Higgs, Mr. Alfred Higgs, Mr. W. Itho and family, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Jacobs, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Kay, Mr. Mateo Kay, Mrs. Kay, Mr. John J. Kay, Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Lovett, Mr. and Mrs. T. N. Leslie, Mr. and Mrs. Reg. Lee, Mr. and Mrs. S. U. Leonard, Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Lowe, Mr. and Mrs. D. Arrol Macfarlane, Mr. Robert MacIntosh, Mrs. Murdoch, Miss Linda Muir, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. C. McKelvey, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Martindale, Prof. Munro and Miss Dora Munro, Mrs. Neill, Mr. J. G. Neill, Mr. and Mrs. Oldham, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. C. Paterson, Sra. Perlender y familia, Mr. and Mrs. Pritchards, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Pott, Miss Percy, Mr. G. H. Rodger, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Rodger, Mr. H. H. Rodger, Mr. and Mrs. A. Woodbury Roscow, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. W. Reynolds, Mrs. Hugh A. Ritchie, Mr. A. E. Ruffier, Miss Ross, Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Robinson, Miss Anita F. Robinson, Mr. R. W. Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. Sanders, Sr. Agustin Sala, Mr. and Mrs. Alberto Sanders, Mr. H. M. Sanders, Dr. J. Sarmiento, Dr. J. J. Salas, Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Steed, Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Steed, Mrs. T. B. Sinclair, Mr. and Mrs. J. Fred. Smith, Mr. J. Y. Stanfield, Mr. and Mrs. Fred. Talbot, Mrs. and Miss Taylor, Mr. I. Taylor, Mr. Thos. Warrell, Miss Maria E. Warrell, Mrs. W. F. Woods, Mrs. L. Young and family, etc.

"THE HERALD" AT CORDOBA

Copies of THE HERALD can now be obtained in Cordoba at Casa Solari, 23 Calle San Martin, and also from the various newsagents and runners in the streets.

Subscriptions to the daily and weekly editions of THE HERALD can be paid either to Casa Solari, or to our correspondent, Calle Rivero Indarte 155.

The paper is also on sale at all the railway stations. Readers who cannot obtain copies from the bookstalls, or regular agents, are asked to communicate with us.

WIRELESS WITH THE STATES

HIGH POWER STATION FOR BUENOS AIRES.

The Government has recently granted a concession to the Federal Holdings Company of New York for the construction of a high powered (ultra poderosa) wireless station near Buenos Aires.

This station will be one of a series of high powered stations in other countries of South and Central America and will operate directly with similar stations in North America.

The system is the same as that which has recently been adopted by the United States Government for its long distance communications, the first station of that chain having recently been completed and placed in operation in Panama.

The same system is also in operation between Tuckerton, New Jersey, and Berlin, a distance of over 6000 kilometres, and between San Francisco and the Hawaiian Islands.

Plans are now being completed for stations in the Philippine Islands, Guam (a North American naval station in the Pacific Ocean), Alaska and other remote points.

A striking proof of the reliance that the United States Government places in the reliability of this wireless system is demonstrated by the fact that the great Panama-Pacific Exposition in San Francisco was opened by wireless waves which President Wilson set in motion by pressing a key in the White House in Washington. This key was directly connected with the powerful radio station at Tuckerton. From the great antenna of this station, two hundred and fifty metres in height, the waves travelled a distance of over 5000 kilometres to the antenna stretched over one of the tall buildings of the Exposition. The impulses so received automatically threw open the massive doors of Machinery Hall, caused the Fountain of Energy to play, and officially opened the Exposition.

The object of this wireless development is to place the countries of South America in direct and intimate connection with North America and thence to Europe and the Orient.

Up to the present time, practically all the news between the Argentine and the United States had gone through European Agencies. It seems as though the time had come when the relationship between these countries was becoming sufficiently close to justify more direct communication.

A material reduction in commercial and Press rates should tend to bring about this very desirable result.

UNDERGROUND EXTENSION

September 19.

NEW SERVICE TO VELEZ SANSFIELD.

To-morrow morning the Anglo-Argentine Tramway Company will inaugurate a new service of trains from the Plaza Mayo to Velez Sansfield.

It has been the custom to change cars at Caballito, but with to-morrow's innovation a direct service from town will be maintained. The coach which will proceed on its journey from the underground to Velez Sansfield will be always the first one on the train, and this particular carriage will be reserved solely for passengers travelling west of Caballito. Passengers travelling in future further than this latter station will pay a fare of 15 cents instead of the usual 10 cents now demanded. The fares as far as Caballito remain the same.

LAWLESS HURLINGHAM

SUBURB INFESTED BY THIEVES

Petty thefts, outrageous robberies, daring burglaries and the like seem to be daily increasing. The police are constantly being notified of these deeds, which for the past six weeks have chiefly been carried out in districts where there is a lack of public police protection. It is under the excuse of "insufficient assistance" that the police protect themselves when on occasion there is a public outcry against them. The latest suburban district to suffer is Hurlingham. Not only have some private houses been burgled, but a large number of small almacens, houses and shops have been the centres of operation. The police have been notified times without number, and their reply to date has been that they are aware that the robberies have been committed by a well organised gang. Matters have reached such a pass that demands have been made to the Chief of Police to issue orders of a severe nature to the officials at Hurlingham.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S INSTITUTE

SUCCESSFUL OUTING TO LICEO RIVADAVIA.

Favoured by perfect weather, a large number of the members of the Young People's Institute of the American Church paid a visit on September 18 to the Methodist Girls' School, Flores. Most of the party left Plaza Mayo station shortly after 2.30 p.m., and a few came out by other routes. The School is situated near Rivadavia, in one of the best parts of Flores, and is quite a landmark on account of the fine old box hedge which surrounds the grounds. After making a tour of the School buildings and grounds, the visitors "spread themselves out" to enjoy the open air and picturesque gardens, by indulging in a series of games and competitions. Refreshments were then served and thoroughly enjoyed. These were provided by the Principals of the school on whose kind invitation the visit had been made. After some further sociability, the guests left warmly expressing their thanks to the Misses Hiltz for their hospitality.

UNITED CLUB CONCERT

LAST EVENING'S ENTERTAINMENT.

On Sept. 18, at the headquarters of the United Club in Viamonte, some 30 members gathered together to enjoy a musical entertainment. Mr. F. H. Chevallier Boutell was in the chair, and in his opening remarks spoke of the excellent work done by the Club and the necessity for all members to support these concerts and other patriotic functions organised by the Committee.

A brief but highly entertaining programme was carried out in which the following gentlemen appeared:

Song: "Night," Mr. J. J. Jeffreys. Song: "Asleep in the Deep," Mr. Louis Beaumont. Song: "The Village Pump," Mr. Dinwoodie. Mr. Handley's exhibition of five minutes squad drill with 10 men. Song: "The Downcast Eye," Mr. Jeffreys. Recitation: "The Green Eye of the Little Yellow God," Mr. Dinwoodie.

Mr. Boutell in his closing remarks drew attention to his lecture in aid of the British Red Cross Society and reminded the members of the date, October 6 next. He asked for the fullest support.

APPEARED BEFORE A PRESIDENT

HONOUR FOR ENGLISH ARTISTS

A high honour has been paid the British artistic circle of Buenos Aires in connection with the festivities in Uruguay connected with the Presidential tour of the neighbouring Republic.

On the occasion of the visit to Colonia of President Viera—the first time in 27 years that the President of Uruguay had visited the river port—the programme for the concert at the official reception was supplied mainly by artists from Buenos Aires. The arrangement of the programme was entrusted to Mrs. Eidelberg, and the artists who assisted her were Madame de Mello, Miss Dorothy Stuart Small, Mrs. C. White, and Miss Sandoval. The concert company went to Colonia on Friday, September 10, as the guests of the reception committee, and stayed at Government House. The concert on Friday evening was an immense success, and a substantial sum of money was realised for the fund to build a sanatorium for tuberculosis sufferers. His Excellency the President and the official party were present, and the English artists received generous applause, all being encored repeatedly. They were subsequently presented to President Viera who congratulated them on their great success.

LOMAS LITERARY AND DEBATING SOCIETY

Lomas Literary and Debating Society brought their season to a close last evening with a delightfully enjoyable social, which was held in the school room attached to the Lomas Methodist Church.

A number of the Society's members and friends turned up to enjoy the excellent musical programme which had been arranged by the Social Committee. The entertainment was of a very high quality and every item was rendered in an efficient manner. The following was the programme:—Piano solo (Selected), Mr. Crispin; Song ("The Storm King"), Mr. Fairclough; Song, ("Goodbye," Tosti), Mrs. Honeysett; Comic Song, ("They Pulled it Back Again"), Mr. Humphreys; Recitation, ("The Jumble Sale"), Mrs. Herald; Violin Solo, ("Tales of Hoffmann"), Miss Woodwell; Song, ("Somewhere a Voice is Calling"), Miss Humphreys; Song, ("The Bandolero"), Mr. Thompson; Song, ("Bedouin Love Song"), and encore ("Until"), Mr. V. Reid.

Two guessing competitions also took place during the evening, entitled "A Mental Menu" and "Countries," the successful competitors being Miss Langley and Mr. Percy Sheppard, and Miss Penny and Mr. Sheppard, this gentleman having the luck each time.

An interval was made for refreshments and thanks are due to Mesdames Howard, Hansen and Herald for their work in connection therewith.

Among those present were the following: Mr. and Mrs. Hansen and family, Mrs. and Miss Langley, Mr. Humphreys and family, Mr. and Mrs. Herald, Mr. and Misses Triggs, Mr. and Mrs. Steward, Mrs. Caldwell and family, Mr. and Mrs. Burton, Mrs. and Masters Talon, Mr. and Misses Penny; the Misses Cribbes, Dodwell and Humphreys; Mesdames Honeysett, Hansen, Howard and Salva; Messrs. M. L. Wolcott, Jones (Chairman, Social Committee), Taylor, Adderley, Hazelton, Harrison, Thompson, Fairclough, Crispin and Reid.

COURT MARTIAL FOR STRIKERS

RUSSIA'S CURT INTIMATION.

Petrograd, Sept. 18.

Strikes having taken place resulting in the closing of several factories, the Military Governor of the city has posted proclamations summoning all employees on their allegiance to return to work after the dinner hour on Saturday under penalty of trial by Court Martial.

ROSS'S Belfast Ginger Ale

Mainly for Women

Conducted by "Egeria"

MADAME "ODETTE"

This time last year, Madame "Odette" was well known to readers of "The Herald." The lady went to England, in the hope of going to that place "somewhere in France," to do her "little bit" for the Empire in the capacity of war correspondent. She did not succeed in one way—the way she most desired, but she is there "by proxy" as it were, for she has sent her son, and so the personal interest of "Odette" is in the fighting zone somewhere.

Madame St. Lys is busy with her pen, and is, I understand, a contributor to several English publications. One little story she has sent which appeared in the "Evening Standard" and "St. James's Gazette." Those who enjoyed "Odette's" lyrics in "The Herald" will, I am sure, appreciate this one. It is entitled—

"THICKER THAN WATER."

I met him at a dance.
The German Squadron had come out on a visit and was being feted royally.

We were "sitting out" in the winter garden at the Plaza, dipping strawberries into champagne luxuriously—after the manner of Jos Sedley.

He could not dance much as yet. He ought to have had his arm in a sling still. He had fallen off the "yard-arm," I believe you call it—and had broken his arm.

He was a midshipman and the pet of the whole ship. From the captain down to the humblest tar they all idolised him—and he was an Englishman.

His father was English and his mother was English. But his father had become that strange hybrid thing, a "naturalised" German subject, and had insisted on his son's going into the German navy. Strange Englishman that.

And he was eating out his heart. His British blue eyes were full of distress as he poured it all out to me. The tears were not far off. Those British tears which you divine—and do not see.

"Thank God! There is no likelihood of a war now—or what should I do?" he said.

I was silent.

At that moment Captain Behrend came up and laid a kindly hand upon his shoulder.

"That's right—that's right—my young lady—you're taking care of him. He needs it. He isn't fit for the ballroom yet—with that arm of his. He is our 'baby' you know. We can't afford to let any harm come to him...." he ended up affectionately.

Three days later I saw him once more.

The great cruiser was moving slowly out of Argentine waters at Mar del Plata, and there he stood on deck waving farewell to me with his cap. A true British figure, in spite of the strange uniform, full of life—with all life before him.

* * *

But how little we know! And how relentlessly Fate—Nature—pursues her course, disdaining our human laws which we set up as infallible—which work such havoc to ourselves.

It was off Colonel—on that unlucky day—that one more hero died for the glory of England.

I have it from the captain himself, Captain Behrend, whose vision—true sailor, though of an alien race—reached beyond the right and wrong of our poor humanity.

"By God!" he wrote, "England has cause to be proud of her sons.

"From the day that war was declared Merryek was a changed fellow. He no longer joined in the frolic of

SOME WOMEN AND MANY THINGS

Miss Edith Sellers writes in the "Nineteenth Century" of the people's kitchens in Christiania and Vienna, thus. The steam kitchen in Christiania, established 57 years ago, pays a dividend of 6 per cent., and supplies meals for working people at a very low price. Perhaps the most important part of this concern is the department in which uncooked food of every description is sold at a price which brings in a fair profit, but is considerably below the price charged by retailers. This department is a great boon not only to working people, but to the thrifty among the middle class. The steam kitchen has become so popular that it now occupies the whole of a huge block of building, and does a business which is enormous for a town with a population of only 24,000. It has brought good wholesome food within the reach of even the poorly paid workers of Christiania.

The first people's kitchen was opened in Vienna 42 years ago; there are now fifteen, that is, one in each district of the city and one in a suburb. These kitchens pay their way, and a better dinner can be had there for a fraction over 5d. than can be had for 10d. in any self-supporting restaurant in an English town. Yet Vienna is one of the dearest capitals in Europe. We who are at the mercy of our tradespeople, who again are at the mercy of combines of wholesale dealers, are naturally unable to make our housekeeping money go nearly as far as women living in towns where it is possible to purchase food at a price which leaves merely a small margin of profit. The problem of meals will not be solved when all women are taught to cook well. We also need stores where we can get the best value for our money and where shopping can really become a science.

A recent report from Russia states that the women medical students of the third and fourth year have now been mobilised by the Government and sent to Red Cross and other hospitals.

the mess-room, though he went about his duty as conscientiously and unflinchingly as ever.

"Deep lines appeared on his boyish face. They were carved there by a fine and loyal spirit—by a soul wrestling with its Maker.

"Not a word was ever said. We all knew what must be the struggle in his breast. All on board understood. Silence was the only mark of respect and sympathy we could give. He understood....

"He was standing by me on the bridge on that fateful morning—I kept him about me as much as possible in those days—when suddenly we saw the smoke of the British cruisers on the far horizon.

"He went deadly pale. Claspings the rail, he remained with his eyes fixed in the distance....

"The decks were cleared for action. All was bustle and stir, and a tremendous cheer went up from the sailors on board.

"Suddenly a shot rang out....

"I saw him fall back against the rail—the smoking revolver still in his hand.

"Sir...." he gasped, pointing towards the horizon, and the light went out in his blue eyes—those loyal eyes—"Sir.... forgive me.... blood.... blood...."—it was trickling thickly over his tunic—"blood.... thicker than water!"

QUEEN MARY

In the course of his character-sketch of King George, Mr. Gardiner naturally devotes considerable attention to Queen Mary.

"The Queen," he writes, "like her husband, has the middle-class seriousness and sense of duty. She is almost the only woman in society who cannot be called 'a society woman.' Her manner is entirely free from the assertiveness which is the note of modern breeding. She speaks little, and without persiflage, irony, or any of the qualities most cultivated in drawing-rooms. The mother who, hearing the King speak, regretted that she had sent her daughter to an expensive boarding school to catch the authentic note of aristocracy, when, after all, the King himself spoke 'just like an ordinary man,' would have suffered a double measure of regret if she had heard the quiet, unaffected speech of the Queen. She was trained in an old tradition of womanhood, and has the air and interests of the mid-Victorian time rather than those of today. When with the present Bishop of Birmingham I had the duty of showing her round the Sweating Exhibition held at the Queen's Hall some years ago, I was impressed with the quiet thoroughness of her inquiry. She had obviously not come to see or to make a show, but to learn a lesson, and one could not fail to notice her plain sincerity, and her avoidance of those futile affectations of sympathy which are at once so banal and so popular. She left a clear impression of a real woman, with a grave bearing and no false sentiment. When she pats an orphan on the head or gives sixpence to a beggar I do not think she would want half a column of laudation in the newspapers to commemorate the fact that she shares the common sympathies of humanity.

"The influence of her steady, prosaic personality upon the King has been eminently good, and the happiness of their home life is a commonplace. Perhaps the court is less gay than it used to be, for the Queen prefers knitting to ceremony, and the King likes a book better than bridge. But what the court has lost in gaiety it has gained in many more substantial ways, not least in the matter of public respect. It was the home life of George III. which made him possible in spite of his mischievous policy. There was a certain truth in the saying of the wit that 'the people would never desert him so long as he went to church every Sunday and was faithful to the plainest woman in the kingdom.' King George's attachment to his wife is not the least of his assets in his account with his people."

MRS. OLIVE SCHREINER AT A WOMAN'S EXHIBITION

The results of excessive competition in the trades open to women were well evidenced in the Women's Exhibition lately organised at Caxton Hall by the East London Federation of the Suffragettes. It was opened by Mrs. Olive Schreiner, who for two minutes relaxed her rule of never making public speeches. She said it was humiliating to interview the swathed khaki workers who had been brought to the exhibition. The "Manchester Guardian" of May 11 reports: "The woman who sewed buttons on the soldiers' bandoliers earned 2½d. for every five dozen, and, working hard, earned 7s. or 8s. a week. The khaki shirt-maker earned 2s. 8d. a dozen. It was more than ordinary shops paid, she said, but the sewing was more elaborate. It cost 2d. for silk.... For an hour's finishing off soldiers' trousers, the pay is 2½d. This does not include cotton, and the carrying of the work to and from the home takes up time that is not paid for. For finishing an overcoat the pay is 6d. It takes about two and a half hours.

In view of the increased cost of living, one can hardly find words to express the iniquity of this kind of wage. It is strange that the feelings of patriotism evoked by the war should tolerate the sweating of women in work for our armies.

GERTRUDE ATHERTON

Who does not know or know of the Californian authoress? The lady as recently as last May was at death's door in New York; but she is now better and has of course something to say about the war. In talking about the probable effect the war will have on social conditions to an interviewer, Mrs. Atherton ventured the assertion that there is no danger that civilisation, which has advanced towards certain standards, will retrogress.

She expressed it as her opinion that the problem of repopulating Europe may be solved by international marriages, and last, but not least, the California author believes that at the close of hostilities an influx of immigrants to California may be expected, because of the prevailing general favourable conditions in that State.

Anent the question of repopulating Europe, Mrs. Atherton had this to say as a suggestion:—

"English women should intermarry with Russians after the war. The Russians don't like the traditional English women, but close acquaintance would reconcile them. That would be a wonderful combination—the English, solid, conservative, poised, philosophical; the Russian mystic, dreamy, spiritual. The reason the natives of Northern Italy are so superior to the natives of Southern Italy is because their blood is mixed with German blood. How far this mixing may be carried with impunity remains to be seen. A little Jewish strain is good for any nationality, and those English mixed with Jewish are the more mentally active. Mixed with Russian, they should once more be the greatest of the races.

"The children now being born in France of German fathers should be sent to German asylums—France will probably not want them, but Germany will welcome them to repeople the country. German children with Russian fathers should be sent to Russia. If all the war babies are sent back to the country of their fathers and reared by the Government they will probably be the better citizens for the mixture of blood."

Mrs. Atherton believes that as a result of the war men will be at a greater premium, but she doesn't think it will be the cause of any polygamy where it now does not exist.

"Men always have been at a premium, owing to the inherited attitude, and, of course, they will be at a higher premium than ever before. There has always been polygamy, but it is now clandestine, and I think it will never be open again. When civilisation advances towards certain standards, it does not retrogress. Even before the war women outnumbered men in England, and men outnumbered women in Russia. There is the solution."

In regard to immigration, Mrs. Atherton thinks there will be more Europeans coming to America than to other neutral countries, and that many of them will find their way to California.

"Of course, Germans won't care to go to Canada, and in South America work brings little pay. The good wages paid in the United States will probably bring many immigrants, especially to California. There necessary living commodities are cheap. In that climate lighting and coal are not so much in demand as in colder climates, and on that soil farming is easy. Anyone, who knows the least thing about farming can get a few acres for a small sum and make a comfortable living."

In conclusion, Mrs. Atherton ventured the assertion that women in Europe will get the suffrage just as soon as the war is over, if they demand it.

"I fancy even the German women will come out of their super-sentimentalised state and execrate the men—or man in general—as responsible for this hideous, baseless and futile war."

Land of Lilliput.

Conducted by Egeria

Estancia, "Martin Chico."

My dear Lilliputians,

My Lilliputian and I are still at Martin Chico, but not at "Recreo," as we are the guests of Majordomo and Mrs. Perrott, of Martin Chico Estancia for a few days.

Unfortunately the last part of our visit here has been spent in wet weather. The wind has been howling all day and all night; and the rain never stops, while the cold is intense. Nevertheless, we manage to enjoy ourselves, being as I have told you before weatherproof. On Sunday last we were still at "Recreo," when Mr. and Mrs. Perrott and three Lilliputians came to visit us. After lunch we made up a driving and riding party, and went over some of the fields to see where new avenues had been made and rows of trees planted, etc., but before we got back to the house, there came a terrific hailstorm, the hailstones being as big as pigeons' eggs. I have often heard people say that hailstones were as big as pigeons' eggs; but I always thought they were exaggerating a little; but now I have seen them myself, I can quite believe that others have done so. One Lilliputian, who was riding was soaked through, could she be otherwise? We who were in the coach escaped lightly with a slight wetting. After the hailstorm came the thunder and lightning and more rain, and it was not over when our visitors started for home; and ever since it has never stopped raining. On Tuesday a picnic arranged for on the Uruguayan Tigre didn't "come off" but two of us went to Martin Chico Estancia and spent a happy day "picnicking" inside instead of outside. And we got nothing worse than a shower of mud occasionally, from the horses' heels.

Mrs. Perrott, who has travelled a great deal in Europe, and who formerly lived some time in Russia kept us entertained with stories of her experiences there. She told us that it was customary to drive three horses in the vehicles—abreast—and the two outer ones always galloped while the centre one trotted. She was reminded of this because one of the pair in the coach would break into a gallop, as if he knew the storm was coming, and he was anxious to get back! What pleased me very much, one day, was to see that a Lilliputian in the camp had cut out the column prepared for you all each week. She had quite a collection of the stories, and knew them all too; so I feel sure that there are others of you who do the same. We all know how awkward it is to be in a country where people speak a language unknown to us; and you will appreciate the difficulties of the lady before mentioned in Russia. She was travelling on one occasion from Moscow to Kiev, when her travelling companion, a lady too, entered into a compact with the guard of the train to rob her, first of all accusing her of being a thief. During the night while Mrs. Perrott, who had only left the Land of Lilliput then, for a very few years, slept, the other occupant of the carriage must have gone through her handbag; and she eventually called the guard and told him that she had been robbed of a purse containing exactly the sum of money which Mrs. Perrott had. There was a great commotion; police were called and things were going badly for our fellow country-woman, when two Englishmen who were travelling on the train, came to see what all the trouble was about. They searched the compartment of the train in the interests of the accused lady; and found the other woman's purse, hidden under the cushions, so she had to say how sorry she was she had wrongly accused her fellow-passenger; but naturally she did not confess that she had purposely hidden her purse, in order to obtain what didn't belong to her, not caring what might happen either to her victim. This little story serves to show that a foreigner is handicapped unless he or she know the language of the country he or she decides to live in.

Britishers don't like to be called "foreigners" somehow. I have met many who grow indignant if the term be applied to them; which is strange, for the word simply means that people are outside their own country. But the Britisher almost invariably speaks of the "foreigner" as that person not British. When I was in North America I was often asked if I were not a foreigner. The person addressing me would say "you are a foreigner; you are English, are you not?" It seemed peculiar at first to be thought a foreigner in the United States, because the language spoken there is English, although the accent is slightly different to that of either Oxford or Cambridge; and foreigners to me previously had been those who spoke a different language, or myself a foreigner speaking English, while all around me people spoke in other tongues. But it was quite true, having left the British Empire I became a foreigner even in North America. I wonder if you all understand the significance of the word. I am sure if some of you Lilliputians were asked, "What is a foreigner?" you would answer "A person who doesn't speak English"; for that is the interpretation of the word given by many who should know better; but in centuries to come, maybe that will be the meaning given in English dictionaries.

Now I have often spoken to you of the beautiful birds to be seen here; and I told you in a letter written recently that the time for birds was not yet here. I meant then that the mating had not begun; for one still sees the Cardinales, the hawks, viente-veos, mudlarks, oven-birds, etc., but I came across an article the other day about the miracle of bird migration and it is indeed rightly called the miracle. The birds have their own habits and customs. They have their breeding-grounds, their winter-homes, the dates when they come and go to and from various parts of the world; and also the speed at which they travel. They have their own routes of travel, and they are governed by meteorological and geographical conditions the distribution of food and so on.

When I lived in the Land of Lilliput my mother used to sing a little song about the robin; and one line was "In April come he will." Do any of you wonder where he was before April? There is a little bird called the Arctic tern which makes an annual trip of 22,000 miles in barely 20 weeks of flight which means that if it took a straight course, it would cover more than 150 miles a day. But when you think that it has to find food you may guess it flies more than this distance every day of its flight. The tern, by its ability to fly like this, is able to enjoy more daylight and more sun-light every year than any other animal on the globe; because for 8 months it lives where there is no night, and for the other 4 months it lives where daylight is much longer than darkness.

Investigations about the manners and ways of these birds have been made now for more than 25 years, from Panama to the Arctic Circle by the United States Department of Agriculture, so a great deal of information is to be found, but I think this simple little letter will give you interest in bird life; and perhaps someday, some of you will be able to take the flight of birds, for models for new aerial machines. Who knows?

This week your story is called:—
TEACHER.

By "Cough Drop."

The other day I read a story in a magazine. It was about a teacher in America, who taught little Jews. One wrote the story, it was funny. I thought maybe I could write some stories too, about our teacher.

First I must tell you who I am. The neighbours call me the "Cough-Drop." I don't know why, one day a gentleman asked teacher.

"I don't know" she replied, "unless it is he is considered rather hot stuff."

"Hot stuff!" Why I am only a little boy of ten not very handsome, but fairly intelligent teacher says. My hair is auburn, so is the tip of my nose.

Ours is a country school five miles from—. It has only been open a year. Teacher was to have boarded with us but she doesn't. She told a friend we have too many inmates—perhaps you know what that means, I don't. She stayed one night, and afterwards told a neighbour the house was all that could be desired, but her heart failed her, when she contemplated her daily companions.

First, there was "me," then cocky—he screeches a bit, I don't think—the parrot, canaries, Juno and her six puppies, Blackie and her kitten, the chickens, etc. Ours is a poultry farm and we sure have some champion cock-a-doo-doo-dos. Evidently teacher doesn't count mum and dad, for she didn't mention them.

She said she is troubled with nerves, and was afraid they would be "fiddle-strings," should she domicile with us. She didn't tell mum all this but made some excuse and didn't come.

She got a cottage in—and walked the five miles each way. She did it for months, in the hottest weather and in the soaking rain.

The first time she came with the mail-carrier. She looked just the thing—white dress, white button boots, white hat and long white gloves (she doesn't wear white now).

It was before the school was completed so she had to go back to—and teach there for some time. Then she came again, but this time she walked and continued to do so for months, but at last she got a pony.

The day school opened, I remember quite well. After lessons were over teacher and the children who go—way, walked a long the road together until they came to our gate. Then as I turned in teacher said:

"Good afternoon Norman!" My name is Norman Albert Payne.

"Good afternoon teacher!" I replied.

She smiled, waited then enquired, "Where's your hat Norman?"

I was surprised, and thought "where it ought to be of course," but only said "on-me-ed."

"Well! I thought so too," she said looking quizzically at me. "Please remove it when you bid me the time of day." The other children just screeched like cocky, and for ever so long afterwards called me—On-me-ed, so you see the children of our school weren't very polite.

Well teacher walked and walked, until one day she came riding astride the dinkiest little pony you ever saw. My word! He was a beauty; fat as mud, with a new saddle and bridle. And didn't he just tear along too—he was fresh as paint.

When teacher assured us he didn't kick or bite, we all wanted a ride badly.

When we saw what he was like home time we weren't nearly so anxious. He danced all round when teacher was getting on, throwing his head up and down, and pawing the ground.

As soon as she was up, he tore off full gallop, and kept it up the five miles.

Teacher said she got home much quicker than she wanted, but if she hadn't Brownie would have arrived first, and there were no points in that.

Very soon the parents were greatly concerned about teacher, and prophesied Brownie would break her neck. They advised her to sell him before he did, but she was too fond of him to do that, and only laughed at their fears.

One day she met, and stopped to speak to Mr. and Mrs. Vane, on the way home.

Brownie was so restless that Mr. Vane advised:

"Don't give that pony of yours so much feed Miss Niel."

"Oh" said teacher, "he is so nice and round I wouldn't like to bring him down."

"Well," sarcastically, "he'll bring you down if you don't," with what teacher would call from us an "impudent grin."

Just as he finished speaking, Brownie in his eagerness to be off home, nearly danced over the lot of them (the children had come up in the meantime).

As they quickly dodged him, Mrs. Vane exclaimed: "I wouldn't ride the brute for a fortune!"

Teacher laughed loosened the rein, and Brownie with a squeal and a jump started off full tear, and was soon out of sight.

Mr. Vane saddled up and followed teacher on that day. He thought Brownie was going to get home first and teacher be left lying on the roadside.

Now teacher likes all the settlers round here except one. She said this particular one is like Mrs. Poyser's rooster, the said rooster being of the opinion the sun got up to hear him crow.

By that you can guess Mr. Whitlaw is a margin man, the difference between his opinion of himself, and other people's opinion of him, leaves a wide margin.

He adds to his attractiveness (?) by saying rude things under the impression they are smart.

Teacher often passes him carting bricks, and frequently looks another way, when she does so, for very often she hasn't even patience to wish him the time of the day.

This particular morning, though, was so bright, that Brownie was on his best behaviour, that teacher felt like Pippa, and sang her song as Brownie cantered along.

"God's in His heaven—All's right with the world."

Just then she looked up and saw Mr. Whitlaw in the distance on top of a load of bricks. She ruminated, "shall I view the distant hills as my 'bete noire' passes—or shall I bid him good morning?"

She was almost up to him and had about decided to give him a smile and pleasant "good morning," when Brownie shied suddenly, teacher was shied suddenly also, off though, and measured her length in the dust at the road side, Brownie looking on penitently at the havoc he had wrought.

Teacher is not given to swearing, but when she saw that fellow perched "way up," contemplating her with a bovine expression, and stolidly remarking:

"You are not hurt, Miss, are you?"

She muttered a little word of four letters under her breath, it was not jam but mighty like it.

After she had assured him, she was not hurt, she mounted once more and trotted along till she came to Mr. Vane's house.

There she stopped and asked for some eucalyptus, explaining she had been thrown and was sure her hip was black, blue and green, by the feeling.

Mr. Vane added insult to injury by the chortle, and the I-told-you-so expression on his face, and his wife generously brought out a full bottle and told teacher to keep it, for she had plenty more.

For a week teacher went round stiff as the bottle, and smelt like it too.

Mother is now calling:

"Norman, Norman, put that light out, it's time you were asleep, should have been long ago!"

For once, I agree with her, but another time I will tell you some more, especially about teacher's pets, for afterwards she came to live not very far from us.

With love from

EGERIA.

FIGHTING THE TURKS

A Thrilling Story

By a former Chubut Resident

The horrors of the grim fighting on the Gallipoli peninsula are frequently the subject of letters from members of the British Expeditionary force who have returned wounded from the firing line. Probably the most vivid communication from a former Argentine resident is one received by Mr. C. Mac-William, of Colonia, 16 de Octubre, from his brother, Private E. C. Williams, of the 12th Battalion, Australian contingent. Private Williams was at one time resident in the Chubut territory, and was recently wounded, and in the Royal Infirmary, Manchester (Eng.) Two of his brothers are also on active service. The letter, a copy of which has been sent to us for publication, reads as follows:

Manchester, June 3.

"To begin with our Brigade (the third) left Egypt for an unknown destination on March 2. The transport "Devanha" had our battalion. She was a very fast boat, and we were the first troops into a beautiful little harbour in the Greek Island of Lemnos which we reached in two days. If you have a map handy you will find it is somewhere between Greece and Turkey in the Aegean Sea. This was to be our base, and a large number of warships of all sorts were there.

Some Marines had already landed in the Gallipoli peninsula, with the object of capturing a fort. They were, however, driven back with some losses, and afterwards found a Sergeant-Major terribly mutilated. It was the intention to land our Brigade (four battalions) then, but the way the Marines were handled made them think better of it. The Turks and their German advisers were taken more seriously, and so we had to wait until sufficient troops were mobilised and the Navy had tried to "bust up" some of the forts.

We were on that transport for over seven weeks, and you needn't ask if we were "fed up." We used to go ashore in boats (and here I learnt to row), and carry out manoeuvres, route marches, etc., until we were sick of it. Then we practised climbing over the side of the ship; along "Jacobs' ladders" into the torpedo-boat destroyers. This had to be done with full pack, 200 rounds of ammunition and rifle (and on the last day 3 days' rations as well). It was a risky process, but I don't think there were any accidents. In the meantime transports kept on coming in to the harbour until they were as thick as bees; French and English. I have never heard exactly what our strength was, but it must have been 150,000 all told.

When on guard on the island I had some great sport with the French and the Senegalese especially. You never saw a more happy-go-lucky crowd than the latter; always smiling. The French only get a half-penny a day, and nearly dropped when we told them we were getting six shillings a day. I got a couple of shillings' worth of oranges and shared them round. Some refused at first, it was such a surprise to see a soldier spending two "bob," I suppose. They thought our short Lee-Enfield fine, and never got tired of telling us so. There were also a few Cuirassiers, and I had a chat with one of them—a very decent fellow who had seen a tremendous pile of active service in various parts of the globe.

I did enjoy that guard at the little port of Mudros. The natives were very hospitable, but of course there were any amount of spies among them. The day I was on guard all the natives had to come in to be enrolled, and you ought to have seen some of the old people; they were very amusing. Old shepherds in sheepskin coats, who had not been in for about 100 years, to judge by their appearances. They couldn't understand us pulling them up when on sentry-go; for going where they ought not. Then a patrol ran in five or six suspects, including an old priest, who was most amusing, and made us laugh heartily. He was such an amusing old joker. What a change wasn't it for a tiny little village to be turned into an important military camp all at once? You can imagine what a difference it would make.

Well, the great day came at last. For about five days previously our battalion was broken up; our company sent on the same boat as the Eleventh Battalion; "C" company somewhere else, etc. Its only since I came here that I learnt we had a spy among us, who was sending information to the enemy. Isn't it disgusting to hear this now? We wondered why they were splitting us up. I only hope the skunk got what he deserved.

On April 24 we sailed out of Lemnos escorted by destroyers and battle-ships. We anchored off the island of Imbros; had a hot meal at 9 p.m. (something new) and then got into our harness for the last time ready to climb over the side into the destroyer "Usk." We were lying about the decks like this until midnight, and then there was a move, and over we went, three or four ladders going at once, until we were packed like sardines on the deck of the "Usk." Everything on, of course, and rifle in your hand. The sailors brought us cocoa, and I managed to snatch odd winks in spite of being cramped up on the iron deck, and it was not too warm, either.

It was a lovely moonlight night, and so we had to cruise round until the moon went down, which was very late in the morning. I don't suppose any moon was ever watched as anxiously as we watched that old fellow. It did bob behind some distant land eventually. Where it was I don't know. Although I thought in my drowsy sleep that we had been moving I don't suppose we were very far from Imbros all the time. As soon as it dropped away we went full speed ahead, and soon dawn began to break, and I knew we were too late. I told old Company Quarter-Master-Sergeant and he agreed. Then the Gallipoli coast loomed into view. I can assure you my nerves were all of a tingle now and I wondered what sort of a reception we were going to have. Before we were properly stopped the bullets began to bump and "plonk" into us, and it was not pleasant I can assure you, to hear all the firing on the shore in the dim light of the morning.

We got the order to hop into the rowing boats and I can assure you that this wanted just as much facing as a bayonet charge. We were not allowed to charge our magazines until we got ashore, and we felt so helpless in those boats. It was something awful. The man on my left was hit through the hips. I got one through my haversack (which was on my back), through all my rations, and then into one of my cartridge pouches on the other side. Our Quarter-Master-Sergeant was hit badly, and so was the bluejacket in charge of the boat. In spite of all, these two were most cheerful. The latter cheered like anything and it put new life into me to see these splendid fellows bearing up so bravely. At last two more were hit in our boat. It was simply awful.

As soon as ever the boat struck the shore we jumped overboard into the water. I nearly went under with my load, but with the help of another man I got ashore, ran along the shingle like mad and dived into the scrub, and went full length you bet. Didn't want telling to get down that time!! First thing was to put ten rounds into my magazine and fix bayonet and then throw off my heavy pack, which left me with three days rations and the ammunition.

In the front of us were some almost inaccessible heights, and I wondered whatever made them land us in a place like this. We knew later on though. And in case I forget I better tell you now. Just to the left of us was a fine tempting-looking flat. It was our original scheme to land there I am told, but the Turks got wind of it so we changed our plans. They had trenches and machine-guns right on the beach at this spot, and in places had wire entanglements right in the sea. A few boats tried to land at this point, but not a soul got ashore I believe, and the boats were floating about later on in the day (a Sunday it was by the way), I have forgotten to tell you that our brigade was the landing party, and was, if necessary, To be Sacrificed to a Man, to cover the landing of the division! The "Tommies" had landed at the extreme south of the Peninsula, and the French on the Asiatic side. We landed almost opposite the Narrows on the West coast of the Peninsula.

To go back to my yarn. Luckily I happened to come across our Corporal (a fine little fellow), and several of our own section. So we commenced the climb all the time under a tremendous fire. We hung on to roots of trees and scrambled up the best way we could until we came to the top of one ridge, and then slid down a deep gully, climbed another very steep side until we came to the first trench. Luckily for us they did not wait; but cleared like blazes. Half-a-dozen men could easily have kept a whole battalion at bay, as we were blown and quite exhausted for a few minutes after the immense exertion of the tremendous climb. But evidently the "Unspeakable Turk" is well aware of the power of the good old British bayonet and has "no stomach for it." Anyhow we got a few of them and followed up the rest.

As if to make matters worse, the sun was just rising in our faces, and for some time we were absolutely helpless, for it was quite impossible to see the "bounders" against the sun. I had a few shots standing, but being shaky and having the bayonet on, I did not succeed in bagging any of them, although they were quite close. They took up another prepared position and gave us a warm time.

About the first to fall was our poor old Colonel, shot through the heart. He tried to write to his wife but did not finish it. Alongside of him they hit the Adjutant and a Major all close to me; and our Second in Command, (another Lieut.-Colonel).

From this on we didn't half catch it! They simply poured shrapnel into us, to say nothing of the fire of hundreds of machine-guns and rifles in thousands. We had no cover of course, and no time to dig in. There were only the bushes which are no protection against the bullets. One position we were in for a long time firing at long-range. They never spotted us until we got the order to get our trenching tools out and start to dig-in.

That was enough. The clack-clack-clack of the explosive bullets, the ping of the Mauser, the hiss and then the burst of the shrapnel, to say nothing of the rattle of the machine-guns. It was terrible. We had to retire to another hill. Talk about being exhausted!! We used to fall down ever so often scrambling up and down those hills. Nothing to eat or drink since we left the boat and the excitement was enough to settle anyone. What surprised me most was how cool I was. The fire didn't seem to worry me in the least, and our Corporal had to tell me once to "get down." Anyhow, late in the afternoon I stopped "one." They were right on top of us then and coming over the ridge in droves. The beggars had the neck to pass the order "Not to Fire" on them as they were "Indians." They are treacherous enough for anything. But it didn't "wash."

I was firing at eight or nine of 'em round a bush. I had to kneel to do so as they were quite close (not more than 100 yards I suppose). Anyhow I got such an ugly big tear in my left thigh between hip and thigh and over I went. I groaned a time or two, and then pulled off my putties and tied up my leg as tightly as I could. It did look an awful sight. Everyone was too busy to help me. My first thought was to get out as I knew that if they got hold of me it would be the end of me, and probably a horrible death. The brutes plucked one poor fellow's eyes out; to say nothing of other horrors too frightful to relate. So I began to crawl along on my stomach and later to hobble. I passed one poor fellow with a tremendous hole between his eyes and a pool of blood around him. It was ghastly. I managed to struggle along till I came across two of our fellows who insisted on helping me down to the beach. I argued against it as we were under fire all the way; and the order was that nobody was to leave his job to carry the wounded back. Hard as this may seem there was sound reason in it. Even with the help of these strong men I had an awful job to get down, and had to keep resting ever so often. They let me down over one ledge; one hanging on to my wrists and the other waiting for me down below. Then I had to sit down and slide along into those deep gullies and after that drag myself along a dry water course down to the beach. They fetched the stretcher-bearers then and I was not sorry either. I had had quite enough of it. They carried me on to the beach to the dressing station, and also where the troops and guns were landing. A doctor saw to me there; and then I had to lie on the stretcher until it was almost dark.

After the exertion of the day I was soon shivering with cold, but one good fellow gave me his overcoat. I had lost all my belongings of course.

As soon as they could, they took us on barges on to the Hospital ships. Hastily converted transports, that's all they were. No sooner were the troops out than they were filled with wounded. I forgot to say that while I was lying on that stretcher shrapnel was bursting all around us, and those who could, used to dive into dug-outs in the side of the hill. But I really didn't feel a bit frightened. While there I had an opportunity of seeing the Indian Mountain Battery. Fine big fellows they were and had some beautiful mules, just like racehorses in condition.

The barge I was put on was going back and forth to the destroyer "Ribble" discharging troops. The officer in charge said he could not take us to the ship until his job was finished. However he was good enough to take us on board and put us into the saloon and they were awfully kind to us there. The bluejackets were just mothers to us, and kept on calling me "Old dear," as they helped me along. It was an awful sight in that saloon and I was as sick as a dog. How long we were there I do not know; but eventually we pulled up alongside the "Itonus," and were hoisted up and laid on the decks and tables—in fact anywhere. Oh! what a sight! This was some time on Sunday night. We had to wait until Tuesday night until we had between 600 and 700 on board.

In the meantime we could hear the big guns booming; those of the Queen Elizabeth (Lizzie) especially. They had to shift us further out too, as the shells were falling all around us. Oh! the "Lizzie" did shake things up. One of our men saw a whole camp go up in the air and tops of hills would be clean swept away. But you will see all this in the papers so I will not go into details.

There were some awful cases on the "Itonus" and the groaning was terrible: we buried 19 poor fellows before we got to Alexandria. The best of our Company's officers was among them—shot through the head poor fellow. He had been through the Balkan War as a journalist, and would have been a great help in this present trouble, and this was his fate on the very first day. Our Captain was killed right-out. The last I saw of him he was lying behind a bush and telling us to crawl into the firing line.

Well, we got to Alexandria on the Thursday night, and the following day were removed into hospital. It was agony lying on that table without even a mattress, and I am sure there would be marks in it where my hip had been. (What?).

On the following Monday an officer came round our ward for men to go to England. Oh, joy of joys. To think of it. Had it not been for my "gammy" leg I would have jumped for joy. My luck was in again and my name was taken. Two Hospital ships had just brought over Indian wounded to Egypt, and I fancy we were just sent here to make up a load for the return journey!

I was on the "Goorkha" (Union Castle) where we had every comfort. It had been fitted up by an Indian Prince. The orderlies were all Indians; no nurses at all. A sowar (Trooper) out of the 26th (King George's Light Cavalry) used to dress my wound. He had left his Regiment to come away with the ship. He was such a smart fine fellow; a rough-rider expert with lance, sword, and rifle, and such a nice kind disposition. It took 12 days to get to England. I managed to get a look at Gibraltar on the way. I don't mind telling you that we quite expected a visit from a German submarine, but we didn't, and we were very glad when we saw the coast of dear old England once again. This was on Saturday evening, May 15. We went alongside on Sunday morning and were in the hospital train at Southampton before 11 a.m. My word, they do work things on some system here.

Imagine my delight again when we were told that we were going to Manchester, of all other places. Talk about being pleased; I was overjoyed. For as you will recollect, Manchester is just like home to me. Luckily there was a little narrow window opposite my bunk, and I could look out. I stared and stared until my head ached at this beautiful green England now at its best, and the old poem,

"Breathes there a man with soul so dead,

Who never to himself has said,

"This is my own, my native land, etc., etc."

never seemed to appeal to me more than then.

I didn't feel like this even when I returned home from Patagonia nine years ago. It was such a treat after four long years on my own in the lonely Australian bush, and more especially after what I had just been through. At Birmingham we had tea, cakes, bread and butter, chocolate, cigarettes, etc., etc., brought to us by nurses and St. John Ambulance men. Such kindness was unknown to us, and I know the tears were in my eyes. I couldn't help it. It was such a wonderful treat after the rough and tumble life we had been used to. We got to dear old Manchester about 6.30 p.m., and were rushed through to different hospitals in motor ambulances. We had such a welcome as we came through the streets; crowds of women and children cheering us poor things. Most of them no doubt have suffered by this cruel war in some way or other. After we pulled up at the entrance I asked a policeman where we were, and he said "In Oxford Road," quite close to Victoria Park, where I lived in days gone by. So you see I have been most fortunate all through.

We were the first to arrive from the Dardanelles, so we aroused more curiosity than usual. This is a tremendous place, and we got every attention and comfort, and such splendid food. What a change after what we have been used to, and you ought to see the stream of kind visitors who come to see us on visiting days and the

CHUBUT NEWS

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT].

Colonla 16 de Octubre,
Chubut.
Aug. 4, 1915.

Anniversary of Foundation of Colony

July 28 was the 50th anniversary of the arrival of the Welsh settlers in this territory. They landed at Port Madryn on July 28, 1865, with an idea of forming a new Welsh country, but, as we are all well aware the scheme fell through many years ago. There are only three persons in this Colony who came with the first settlers as young children, viz., John D. Evans, Richard Jenkins, and Mrs. Jones (Kansas). Even so we all felt very much interested in the memorable day, on July 28 and 29, most of the colonists gathered together in the chapel at Esquel, in order to hold a kind of an Eisteddfod. The young people had a football match, 16 de Octubre v. Esquel, which contest, 16 de Octubre won. On the first day there was some horse racing among the Latin people. On both days, the meetings at the Chapel commenced at 5 p.m., lasting until 7.30 p.m., under the conductorship of Mr. W. Lloyd Jones Glyn. Assisting on the platform were some of the National officers and friends. The male voice choir of 16 de Octubre, under the leadership of Mr. John Owens, rendered some fine music, as did Messrs. Robert Roberts and Tom Rowlands, as soloists. The accompaniments were played by Mr. F. H. Parry and Mr. D. Williams. The meetings were attended by 400 to 500 people, all of whom seemed well pleased in every way.

Patriotic Settlers.

A few months ago, the inhabitants of this colony subscribed the sum of $2000 m/n towards the funds of the widows and orphans of the war. A committee has now been formed, to appeal to the residents for another contribution. It is suggested that each should give one horse of the value of $50 or give $50 in cash. All are to deliver either their horses or monies to the committee at Esquel on August 21. Strong appeals in various languages have been made by the said committee who are formed of Mr. Richard Clark, as President, with Messrs. Thomas Freeman, John Owens, W. L. Jones Glyn, and W. C. Thomas. There is little doubt but that the appeal will be liberally responded to by the people in general.

stacks of things they bring us. Who worthy of the name of man wouldn't fight for such women, and such a grand old country as this? I really feel that I have not done half enough to deserve such kindness on all hands. They are going the right way to spoil us, I am afraid.

On the Tuesday following my arrival poor mother turned up. I had sent her a postcard, and no doubt she will tell you what a surprise it was for her. That was a trying moment, but she took it very well, poor thing, and weren't we glad to see each other again in spite of the circumstances. She looks well but aged a good deal since I last saw her over five years ago. I am glad to say my wound is healing nicely. It was a nasty big gash in my thigh; the muscles were exposed at one time, but all that has filled up now. At first they thought they would have to graft new skin on to it, but now it seems to be growing round the edges. It will take some time of course, but I don't growl, for I have been extremely fortunate in getting out of such an inferno as lightly as I did. From here I shall be going to a Red Cross home for a while, and then I hope to get a furlough before returning to the regiment.

There are people who boast about wanting to get back, but honestly I will say I wish it were all over. At the same time I will willingly and conscientiously do my share again when I am fit. I could not rest until this despicable enemy of ours is completely wiped out.

CORDOBA NEWS

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT].

September 14.

Blackheath Cup Golf Contest.

The members of the Cordoba Athletic Club held their Blackheath Cup Golf Tournament on Sunday last on the well appointed links at Alta Gracia, which were in excellent condition for the match. The members of the Golf Sub Committee, including Golf Captain A. D. Dunbar, T. G. Ferguson and S. T. Harris Smith are to be congratulated on the perfect arrangements which were made for the tournament. The 18 holes were played before breakfast, and resulted in Mr. Harry McCulloch winning the prize after playing very consistent golf. His 42 for the second round was one of the best scores of the day. Messrs. G. D. Munro, T. G. Ferguson, and Kenneth Struthers tied for best gross 87. The players finished in the following order:—

	Score.	H'cp.	Net.
H. McCulloch	90	12	78
G. D. Munro	87	8	79
T. G. Ferguson	87	6	81
K. Struthers (holder)	87	6	81
V. R. Sadleir	97	16	81
Wm. Robinson	106	24	82
A. D. Dunbar	90	6	84
Duncan Munro	96	12	84
Percy P. Schultz	100	10	90
G. A. Brigstocke	98	6	92
L. G. Babb	117	22	95
R. J. Cochrane	122	24	98
S. T. Harris Smith	115	16	99
G. E. Morton	133	20	113

Notwithstanding the fact that the Sub Committee had not seen all of the gentlemen play who had entered the handicapping left nothing to be desired, as the closeness of the score will testify.

After a most enjoyable breakfast at the Sierras Hotel a match play (four-somes) took place. Captain Dunbar's team composed of Messrs. Dunbar, G. D. Munro, K. Struthers, P. P. Schultz, V. R. Sadleir and R. J. Cochrane defeating Mr. Ferguson's team, Messrs. Ferguson, Brigstocke, McCulloch, Duncan Munro, G. E. Morton and L. G. Babb. Mr. Harris Smith played a single against Sr. Archaval, the former winning.

Mrs. S. T. Harris Smith kindly consented to preside at tea in the afternoon at the Hotel.

The players took the 6.30 train for Cordoba well pleased with the excellent day's sport.

Prince of Wales's Fund.

The Cordoba Committee in charge of collecting subscriptions for the Prince of Wales's Fund have forwarded a further remittance of $200 to the Treasurer to the Fund in London. Donations and subscriptions should be addressed to the Hon. Treasurer, Mr. A. D. Dunbar, Banco de Londres, Cordoba.

Football.

The first division league game, played on Sunday last between the University team and the league leaders, Central Cordoba, resulted in a victory for the latter by a score of 3—1.

News in Brief.

The benefit cine performance held at the "Plaza" Biografo on Wednesday night in aid of the Cordoba Lawn Tennis Club, which is composed of the younger members of our first Argentine families, was a distinct success, a very satisfactory amount being realised for the construction of new tennis courts near the Zoo at Sarmiento Park.

The banquet given in honour of Señor Luis Damond, one of the leading members of our French residents, at the Roma Hotel last week on the eve of his departure for the Capital, where he will embark for France to visit his two soldier sons who are fighting with the French army, was a decidedly successful function. A safe journey and speedy return were wished the mentioned gentleman over the "sparkling dry."

The extra trains to and from Alta Gracia which have been added to the schedule to accommodate the Cordoba golfers, by the Central Argentine Railroad, leaving Cordoba at 8.30 a.m. and Alta Gracia at 6.20 p.m. are very popular with our players.

MENDOZA NEWS

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT].

September 13.

Function in aid of Russian Red Cross Society.

To-night in the Municipal Theatre an interesting entertainment was given, a large number of ladies representing the Russian, French, British and Belgian communities having acted in concord with the laudable object of collecting funds for the assistance of the work of the Russian Red Cross. The programme organised was as follows: and the proceedings worked with a smoothness which could hardly be surpassed.

Part I.—Argentine National Anthem; Russian National Anthem; "El Guarda Ajujas," drama in 1 act, by the Italian Society; "Matinata," (Tosti) sung by Signorina O. Venturini; Recitation by Mme. Lagarde: "A Nos Soldats Morts."

Part II.—Italian Real March; Recitation by Sta. Angelica Ponce; "Les Saisons" (Mossé), sung by Mme. St. Paul; "Autumn," harp selection by Sr. Jandelli; "La Primavera," living picture, executed by the following ladies: Sta. Edelmira Campa Molina and Stas. Blanca Sanchez, Blanca Raffo de la Reta, Lidia Marienhoff, Pawlowsky, Ethel L. Pettygrew, Amalia Reta, Maria Tarantola, Beatriz Olbrich and Juana André.

Part III.—British National Anthem; "La Tombola," representation in one act; "Spanische Tänze Play-ers," (Sarasate), by Master Ponce Aguirre; "Lettre de Maman" (Rameau), recitation by Mme. Lagarde; "Vals Mineur," (Chopin), Sr. Resta; by Miss Ethel Pettygrew: Stas. Edelmira Campa Molina, Lidia Marienhoff, Pawlowsky, Sra. Lagarde, Stas. Blanca de la Reta, Blanca Sanchez, Amalia Reta and Maria Tarantola; Belgian National Anthem, sung by Mesdames Blanca André and Saint Paul; French National Anthem, by Mme. Saint Paul.

Excursion: Potrerillos.

On Sunday last there congregated at Potrerillos a large party of British and Danish ladies and gentlemen for the purpose of effecting an excursion to the hills. All arrangements worked well and the holiday did much to promote intercourse, and mutual goodwill among all the young people who took part. The ladies who particularly distinguished themselves in the scramble in the hills were Mrs. Sydney Forbes of La Puntilla, and Miss Margaret Arentsen, of Guaymallen, both of whom if they were to adopt the Swiss plan of walking slowly and rhythmically and pay attention to one or two other elementary rules would, in the writer's opinion prove themselves to be excellent climbers. Given suitable outfit, the ordinary excursions at Potrerillos are at least as safe as walks about the streets of Mendoza, with their numerous pitfalls for the unwary.

Britisher's night adventure.

Mr. Ben Hibbert, Mayordomo of the "Finca La Chilcal," relates an exciting experience which he had a few nights ago. Riding through Las Heras in the dark last week he was challenged by two men mounted on horseback whom he mistook for bandits; he immediately fired several shots with his revolver, only to find himself at once surrounded by the whole military guard; fortunately no injuries were sustained on either side. A Court Martial was held subsequently and happily the authorities took a very lenient view of the matter, dismissing the case and authorising Mr. Hibbert to carry arms on account of the nature of his duties.

Social News.

A daughter was born unto Mrs. William Groom on August 29; both mother and child are doing well. The girl will be christened Winifred.

Mr. Leslie Freeth has fully recovered from his recent indisposition and his tall and graceful figure is once more to be seen about the city and to the fore in all social activities.

N.S.S.O. CLUB ENTERTAINMENT

"LIVING PICTURES" AT ST. ANDREW'S.

The large audience which attended the N.S.S.O. Club's Concert and Living Picture entertainment at St. Andrew's large hall last night were delighted from the start to the conclusion of the programme with the excellence of the entertainment.

The effect of a full house on the acoustics of the hall is remarkable. Sound vibration in a building of this nature, with its severity of walls and roof is developed to a most irritating limit, unless the hall is filled or unless there is a sufficiency of drapery and decoration to cut short the limit of the sound waves.

Last night, however, so excellent was the size of the audience that sound properties did not enter into the entertainment except to an advantageous point.

The pictures were the feature of the evening, but the musical items supplied by Miss Dreyfus, Miss Cowes and Miss Dorothy Stuart Small, would have made a concert of exceptional merit in themselves.

There were recitations by Miss Ivy Bulman and quite a speciality by Miss Fleming, who for her guitar songs, most delightfully rendered was recalled no less than four times.

It can be remarked that the amateur talent amongst the British section of the community of Buenos Aires takes a high place. It is possible that some of the amateur performances held in Calcutta, Darjeeling, Shanghai and Calro may be more brilliant functions, but it is necessary to travel to the "end of the world" before more perfect individual musical and artistic effort will be found than in Buenos Aires.

The pictures shewn at St. Andrew's on Sept. 16 held an especially noteworthy element in the lighting effect. Apart from the arrangement, the dresses and general conception of these, it is possible to conceive that without perfect shading and lighting they could have been unartistic.

"Britain and her Allies" was represented by Miss Bruce (Britain), Miss McLean (Italy), Miss G. Brown (Belgium), Miss E. McLean (France), Miss Fleming (Serbia), and Miss Ivy Bulman (Russia), and was an excellently attractive representation. Miss Campbell and Miss Mackenzie were responsible for "Prince Charlie and Flora Macdonald."

"The Godmother" was another attractive setting in which Miss Gallagher assisted by Misses Vignolles, Miss McKechnie, Miss Bulman, Miss Fleming and Miss Hoch made the success of the representation.

"England, Scotland and Ireland" was represented by Miss H. McLean, Miss Campbell and Miss Browne respectively, and called forth much patriotic applause.

Miss Matthews, Miss McLean, Miss Hoch, Miss G. Baille and Miss Bulman were responsible for a most attractive representation of "The Fortune Teller."

"Britain and France," "Bed Time" and the final picture, "Sister Nations," were the work of Miss Marjory Browne, Ethel Anderson, Kate Petty, S. McLean, Vignolles, Hoch, Kirby and Vizet.

The last was an especially attractive item.

The entertainment was given in aid of patriotic funds but it was not quite decided which fund should especially benefit by the success of the evening. The Red Cross section is the most probable.

The musical part was exceptional, not only on account of the artists but perhaps more especially because each one excelled herself.

Miss Dorothy Stuart Small at the piano essayed Liszt's No. 10 Rhapsodie, but it must be said that while playing better than usual, her interpretation of Grieg's "Papillon" was infinitely superior to the former item.

Miss Dreyfus, a violinist of remarkable powers, was best in the first part

BRITISH HOSPITAL

AUGUST CONTRIBUTIONS.

The Committee of Management of the British Hospital held their usual monthly meeting on September 15, the following gentlemen being present:—

Mr. Thomas Lloyd (Acting Chairman in Mr. C. H. Pearson's absence), Messrs. A. G. Thornton, W. E. O. Haxell, A. M. Wilson, A. W. Boote, G. Lloyd Davies, J. Begg, Rev. Dr. J. W. Fleming, Rev. Dr. W. P. MacLaughlin, and C. Manifold.

The Hon. Treasurer reported that the expenditure for the month of August had been $20,447.67, making the aggregate for the eight months $182,424.52.

The number of patients treated during August was 334, as compared with 289 in the same month last year.

The following subscriptions and donations were received during August:—

SUBSCRIPTIONS.

	$ paper
Ferrocarril Entre Rios, Staff Collection	44.50
Buenos Aires Pacific Railway 2663.64
M. S. Bagley and Co.	200.—
H. A. Jacobs	25.—
G. B. Bradbury	50.—
Smithfield and Argentine Co., Staff collection	61.—
F. A. Vyvyan	25.—
N. S. S. O. Club	500.—
David Hogg and Co. Staff collection	71.—
Buxton, Olditch and Co.	50.—
Lever Bros., Ltd.	45.81
Estancia La Germania, per Runciman and Co., for years 1909, 1910, 1911, 1912, 1913 and 1914	600.—
Hopkins and Gardom	200.—

DONATIONS.

	$ paper
Anonymous (A. C. L.)	25.—
J. A. Chalk	50.—
Maggie Sloan	40.—
Kate McGoey	20.—
General donation boxes	42.—
Ward donation boxes	10.—
Agnes Manwell	20.—

of the programme on account of her choice in the second half.

"Russian Airs" which can be interpreted into "Variations of the Red Saragan" is a work Miss Dreyfus should leave alone. She is infinitely too good a violinist to waste her time on fireworks. The piece was one of high technical difficulty, but the plain, unvarnished air was rendered to perfection and was much more pleasing than a set of musical hieroglyphics however well played. Miss Cowes' singing was deservedly encored. She was especially good in "A Perfect Day." This little work is a gem in its way and was treated in a manner above criticism last night. It had a fascination of its own, greatly assisted by the audience.

Financially and artistically the entertainment was good and congratulations to the organisers are due. The crowded house recognised the merit of the concert to the full.

The programme was as follows:—

Part I.—Picture, "Britain and Her Allies"; violin solo: a) "Thais," (Massenet), b) "Serenade," (Drolla), Miss Dreyfus; picture: "Flora Macdonald and Prince Charlie"; song: "Just awa'yein' for you," Miss Cowes; picture: "The Godmothers"; recitation: "The Death of Minchaha," Miss Ivy Bulman; picture: "England, Scotland and Ireland." Interval of ten minutes.

Part II.—Piano solo: Miss D. Stuart Small; picture: "The Fortune Teller"; guitar song: a) "Carolina," b) "Los Hombres," Miss Fleming; picture: "Britain and France"; violin solo: "Aires Rusos," Miss Dreyfus; picture: "Bed-time"; song: "A Perfect Day," Miss Cowes; picture: "Sister Nations." Argentine National Anthem and "God Save the King."

Each item was encored.

BRITISH AGED AND INFIRM FUND

COMMITTEE'S ANNUAL REPORT.

The annual general meeting of subscribers to the British Aged and Infirm Fund will be held on Tuesday, September 28, at 5 p.m. in the hall of St. Andrew's Scotch Church, 352 Perú, Buenos Aires.

The annual report of the committee, which is now available, is as follows:—

The Committee has pleasure in submitting the annual report up to 30th June, 1915.

Sunset House has cost during the year the sum of $5,328.38 c/l. Some unusual expenditure was incurred owing to the illness of one of the inmates who fell ill and required extra attendance until her death which occurred after the close of our year. Although the upkeep requires a considerable sum of money, the Home enables the Committee to deal with some cases and to help suffering that it would be very difficult to alleviate otherwise. The Home continues to be satisfactorily managed by Mrs. Murdoch, and the thanks of the community are due to Mesdames Logan, Torre, Dey and Knight-Clarke who act as a Sub-Committee in Quilmes.

Revenue.—Owing to the many calls on the community receipts have fallen off somewhat, and a choice had to be made between reducing the amounts voted to the old people, or incurring a small deficit. The Committee decided not to decrease the grants but to trust to the generosity of the community to cover the shortage of income over expenditure for the year, amounting to $1869.02 c/l.—it would have been cruel to have reduced the pensions during such a bitter winter. The Hon. Treasurer, Mr. F. P. Simpson, 750 Moreno, will thankfully acknowledge any subscription, however small, towards this object.

Thanks are due to the following for special assistance or donations towards the objects of this Fund:—

Dr. Pennington for professional services free of charge to the inmates of Sunset House.

HERALD and Standard for free copies to the Home and free publications.

Mr. Lloyd-Davies for a valuable gift from the effects of the late Mrs. Corrales.

The London and River Plate Bank for charging a low rate of interest on overdraft.

	$ c/l.
Mrs. James Craik	57.30
Sale of Kimona (Mrs. J. Begg)	50.—
Mrs. Hope Gibson	300.—
Miss R. V. Dawney	60.—
Sale of handkerchiefs (Mrs. Morris)	32.—
Stanley Cutts	35.—
Diego Darbyshire	10.—
Mrs. A. W. Boote	30.—
Miss F. Ramsay Thomson (sale of work made by herself personally)	150.—
Mrs. James Dow	20.—
Mrs. Lough	50.—
Mrs. John McCrindle (of Ayr)	25.—
Mrs. Lisowski	2.—
N. Lanus	10.—

Total in cash . . . 831.30

In accordance with the Statutes, four members of Committee have to be elected to replace the retiring members, who are Messrs. Simpson, Bramwell, Begg and Manifold.

JAMES BEGG,

N. F. TRIBE, Chairman.
Hon. Secretary.

As some confusion has arisen regarding the list of subscribers published yesterday in the annual report of the above Fund, it should be noted that only subscriptions previous to June 30 were referred to. No publication has yet been made regarding the appeal for special donations to wipe out the deficit of last year's working, but it is intended to announce the result at the annual general meeting of the subscribers on September 28.

OUR ILLUSTRATIONS

Our illustrations this week require very little explanation. The first of them shows the desperate character of the fighting on the Peninsular of Gallipoli. As in Flanders, the trenches are only a few yards apart, and in the scene depicted a body of New Zealand troops are seen hurling bombs, made of jam tins filled with nails and scrap iron, at the Turks. In another section of this issue we have advised our readers of the special effort we are making to provide at least one motor-ambulance for the British Red Cross Society. Our pictures show, first, the class of car which is required, and, secondly, why it is required. The Society has over 1500 cars running, but owing to destruction by German shells or by wearing out, it is necessary to secure more cars from all sympathisers with the humane work of the organisation. A highly interesting picture is that showing the interior of the German trench in Flanders with the German troops playing at skittles. The elaborate nature of the trench with its timbered gallery will serve to suggest how difficult it is to make any advance upon the German positions. The enemy is certainly very thorough in everything connected with the war, and his transport arrangements are no doubt excellent. Each Army Corps Staff has a fleet of automobiles with travelling kitchens and every appurtenance. In the picture which was taken in Galicia we see the fleet of cars for one staff only. An animated scene is presented in the picture showing British troops marching across London Bridge on their way to the front. The last picture is truly a remarkable one. It was taken just outside the ancient walls of Byzantium, and it depicts a procession on its way to proclaim the Sultan "Gazi," which means "The Victor." It may be that news travels slowly, but we have yet to learn of the victory the Sultan has achieved that calls for this honour.

A TALK ON EUGENE FIELD

BY MR. HUNTINGTON AT THE
Y.W.C.A.

It was not a lecture, but a reading and an impression of the works of the American journalist Eugene Field, that Mr. Huntington gave on Sept. 17. This impression that the reader has received of Field's works was conveyed to the audience in a manner which left nothing to be desired, and there were occasions last evening when the impression given in Mr. Huntington's Talk were more effective than the words of the American journalist and poet with whom he dealt.

A comparatively large audience, and an entirely interested one, listened attentively to what the lecturer had to say. Without a note he briefly sketched the life work of the journalist and analysed his point of view, his teachings and the purpose of his works by examples in poetical and prose readings.

It was an interesting reading and study, and the congratulations Mr. Huntington received at the close were well earned.

A most pleasing interlude was provided by Miss Clutterbuck, a pupil of Mrs. Pamplin's, who sang two songs, the words of both being the work of the journalistic subject of the reading.

Both the songs were charmingly sung, but the most pleasing was "Wynken, Blynken and nod."

It had a peculiar affectation of words less pleasing than "Lullaby," but its melody was the more attractive. Miss Clutterbuck's singing was greatly appreciated, and if it may be said, this young lady has considerably improved in the past few weeks. It was altogether an evening of enjoyment, and Mr. Huntington's subject, one which is only too little known, was one which interested every hearer in the room.

IN THE TRENCHES AT GALLIPOLI. NEW ZEALANDERS ATTACKING WITH JAM TIN BOMBS.

“The Herald” Appeal for Motor Ambulances.

THE TYPE OF AMBULANCE “HERALD” READERS ARE ASKED TO PROVIDE.

WHY “THE HERALD” AMBULANCE IS WANTED—CAR SMASHED BY GERMAN SHELLS.

AN ELABORATE GERMAN TRENCH USED AS A SKITTLE ALLEY.

THE AUTOMOBILE TRANSPORT FOR A GERMAN ARMY CORPS STAFF.

TROOPS CROSSING LONDON BRIDGE ON THEIR WAY TO THE FRONT.

CEREMONY IN CONSTANTINOPLE. THE SULTAN PROCLAIMED "GAZI"—"THE VICTOR."

DANCING DISPLAY

A BRILLIANT SPECTACLE

AT THE COLISEO THEATRE

It would need a language richly stocked with adjectives to describe the scene at the Coliseo Theatre on Saturday, Sept. 18. The occasion was one arranged by Madame E. B. Reed and Miss Hughesdon-Smith, and represented the ninth annual exhibition of dancing inaugurated by these ladies and given by their pupils. The function was one of brilliance. During previous years, Prince George's Hall had been the venue of these performances, but for this year the size of the hall was found to be quite inadequate, and the Coliseo Theatre was taken. The house was filled to its limits, which demonstrates the attractiveness of the programme.

In the first place, the auditorium was in itself an attraction. Filled with the élite of Buenos Aires, and with hardly a vacant seat to be seen, it augured well for the ultimate success, which was in full evidence at the close.

Children of all age from 3 years to 17 took part in a programme of 42 items, and the organisation of such an undertaking was immense. From beginning to end every detail was gone through without the smallest hitch, and the greatest credit is due to those who furnished such excellent arrangements. The detail, the variety and the arrangement of the dances themselves was perfect.

There were individual items in the programme which were works of art; there were other varieties ranging from nursery rhyme dances to classical exhibitions, interspersed with displays of physical exercises and cleverly arranged calisthenic exercises of a humorous character. On occasion the stage of the theatre was too small for the purposes of the exhibition, and in the skipping rope dance the whole of the centre where the circus is held was occupied by the little ones in their dance.

The items given by the exponents from the Barker Memorial College, Lomas, under the superintendence of Miss Constance Jones were excellent. The "Backward Brigade" was a most amusing item. The girls danced, or rather performed, with their backs to the audience, with quaint and weird masks on the back of their heads and their hair completely hiding their faces. The effect was most entertaining and humorous, and the item in itself shews how originally and carefully thought out was the general effect.

It might be considered somewhat invidious to mention any one individual dance at the expense of another, but when the dancing of Miss Violet Bisset is remarked upon it is in no way at the expense of the others, but was a performance of superlative art. Her dance was "La Nuit," to Rubenstein's melody. It was not a copy of Miss Constance Stewart-Richardson's dance (which brought her fame at the Palace Theatre in London) because there were no two actions alike, but it must be said that Violet Bisset's dancing was the better. She was alive, there was a distinct sensation of "thrill" in seeing her dance. For so young a little lady it was a remarkable performance, and with the development of practice and of finish which only comes with experience it could be easily imagined that this artist—a word carefully chosen to express a meaning—would become great if she wished.

There were many other individual items of excellence, but considering the fact that 350 children took part in the performance, it would be indeed remarkable if the dancing of Miss Bisset was the standard.

Miss Angélica Vasquez was graceful and had a fine sense in her interpretation of the "Danse des Sylphes."

Miss Norma Witt distinguished herself in "Valse Pariste." She proved herself both a clever actress and a charming dancer.

There was another item which was perfection, and that was the dancing of a dainty little maiden, Miss Kathleen Furness, in the pizzicato movement from "Sylvia." For her age, this little lady is a most exceptional performer.

Miss Tassie Paton, Miss Julia Paimier, Miss Gladys Andrews, were other soloists each of whom in turn brought down the house.

Miss Irma Williams made her debut in the Rose Dance, and a very charming production it was.

The dresses were magnificent, not only for their gorgeousness, but for their arrangement of colour, their richness and fashion. The Wood Nymphs dance was a typical exposition of pretty dancing and dainty frocks.

The class-dances by the pupils from the English High School and Victoria College of Belgrano, and the Mazurka by the Belgrano Senior Class were remarkably well done. The Town Dancing Class distinguished itself in the Castanet Exercises, these being among the best rendered of the general class items. In the latter, Misses A. Vasquez and I. Villamil were very good.

The ballet classes gave two dances: "Wood Nymphs" and a waltz (Chopin), as well as some graceful movements to music of Gustav Lind.

The "Irish Steps," "Jockey Dance" and "Basket Drill" were each well rendered in their respective ways. Special mention must be made of the "Fairyland Dancers" and "Nursery Rhymes," by diminutive dancers not much more than babies, but all delightfully self-important.

The General March Round by all the pupils was a fitting finish to an excellently rendered programme and entertaining afternoon.

Special thanks are due to Miss Lucy Gordon, Mrs. Heslop and Miss Kerin for able assistance at the piano, also to Mrs. Alfred Davies and Miss Ada Shaw for violin obligatos, to the Misses Duckwerth Gardner and Reed Roberts, Bisset Lett and many others for marshalling the children and maintaining order behind the scenes, Messrs. F. C. Lee and G. Ellis Griffin for make-up and lighting arrangements, Messrs. F. F. Bideleux, W. Henderson, Trowell, Dinwoodie, E. F. Bideleux, Poulton, Booth, Matthews and others for help in various ways, to boy and girl scouts for distributing programmes and making themselves generally useful.

The programme was as follows:—"Dumb-Bell Exercises," Calisthenic Classes; "La Funaia," Town Class; "Wand Exercises," Calisthenic Classes; "A Dance of Youth" (Lescaut), Miss A. Nieva; "Free Movements," Calisthenic Classes; "Spanish Dance," Miss C. Rugeroni; "Advanced Wand Drill," Calisthenic Classes; "Trio," (Rosenkavalier), Misses E. Murchison and J. Dates and Master W. van Konyenberg; "Musical Bells," Beginner's Classes; "Waltz Ballet (Chopin), Belgrano Junior Class; "Bow and Arrow Dance," Master A. Murray Brown; "Oriental Dance," Intermediate Classes, soloist: Miss G. Andrews; "Skipping solo," Miss Adrianita Platt; "Minuet," English High School; "Eastern Dance," Miss Tassie Paton; "Indian Club Drill," Calisthenic Classes; "Rosette" (Quartette), Misses A. Vasquez, I. Villamil, G. van Wassenar and C. Rugeroni; "Kate Greenaway Dance," Victoria College; "Czardas" (Connelly), Misses A. Nieva and A. Woodgate; "Nursery Rhymes," Beginner's Classes; "La Nuit" (Rubenstein), Miss Violet Bisset.

Interval 20 Minutes.

"Jockey Dance," Belgrano Junior Class; "Castanets," Town Class; "Pizzicato," (Delibes), Miss Kathleen Furness; "Mazurka" (Chopin), Belgrano Senior Class; "Valse Triste" (Sibellius), Miss Norma Witt; "Irish Steps," Junior Classes; "Wood Nymphs" (Chopin), Belgrano Advanced Class; "Skipping Drill," Senior Classes; "Danse Des Sylphes" (Radeaglia), Miss Angelica Vasquez; "The Backward Brigade," Lomas Class; "A Rose Dance," Miss Irma Williams; "Junior Ballet Exercises," Junior Classes; "Gipsy Dance," Belgrano Beginner's Class; "Fairyland Dances," Miss J. Palmer; "Theme Slak," town class, soloist: Misses A. Vasquez and J. Villamil; "Tarantelle," Devoto Class; "Canaries," Miss G. Andrews; "Basket Exercises," General Classes; "Graceful Movements," Advanced Ballet Classes; "Grand March," All Pupils.

Among those present were:—

Dr and Mrs Ap Iwan, Mrs Adrogué, Mr and Mrs Allen, Mr Diego Alvear, Mr and Mrs Anderson, Mrs Andrews, Miss Anthony, Mr Aurell, Mrs Ayliffe, Mr and Mrs Baines, Mrs de Basualdo, Mr and Mrs Banham, Mrs Bayne, Mr and Mrs Beni, Mrs de Bernasconi, Mr and Mrs E. Bidelein, Mr and Mrs Bisset, Mr and Mrs Boggs, Mrs Bourke, Mrs Bowman, Mr and Mrs Boyer, Mr and Mrs Bradford, Miss Breed, Mrs. Bridger, Mrs F. Bridger, Mrs Bryans, Mr and Mrs Brown, Mr and Mrs Mateo Browne, Mrs. Buchanan, Miss Bugge, Miss Burgis, Miss Callis, Mrs Cameron, Mrs Caprile, Mrs Cassell, Mrs Cassini, Mrs de Castillo, Mr and Mrs Castillon, Mr and Mrs Cava, Mr and Mrs Chick, Mr Alfred Chiswell, Mrs James Chiswell, Mrs Christian, Mrs Clark, Mr and Mrs Codd, Mr and Mrs Conder, Mrs Colvin, Mr and Mrs Cooper, Mr and Mrs Cowlshaw, Mrs Crawford, Mr and Mrs Croll, Miss Cronin, Mrs de Crotto, Mrs del Cerro, Mrs Dodds, Mrs Darbyshire, Mrs Dean, Mrs J. L. Denton, Mrs Lionel G. Dodds, Miss Mary Earline Denton, Mr and Mrs A. T. Drysdale, Mr and Mrs Deschamp, Mr and Mrs Dixon, Mrs Dumford, Mrs Dandridge, Mr and Mrs A. Davies, Mrs de Diebel, Mr and Mrs Esell, Miss Edwards, Rev. Fleming, Mrs Figueron, Mr and Mrs Furness, Mr and Mrs H. Ford, Miss Gripper, Mrs de Gunther, Mrs de Garrido, Mr and Mrs Grunmbach, Mrs Stanley Gibson, Mrs Goodfellow, Mrs Griggs, Mrs Groby, Mr and Mrs Gaudier, Mrs del Grosso, Mr and Mrs Gray, Mr and Mrs Gould, Mr and Mrs Gonzalez, Mrs Hart, Mrs de Holl, Mr Hirst, Mrs Harloe, Mr and Mrs W. K. Hughesdon-Smith, Mrs Van Houten, Miss Ellen Heger, Mrs Hartley, Mr and Mrs Hardenburg, Mrs Hughes, Mr and Mrs Maitland Herriot, Mrs Hope, Mr and Mrs Heger, Mrs Hardy, Mrs Hart, Mrs de Hofer, Mrs Humphreys, Mrs de Hanmann, Mr and Mrs Hobert, Mr and Mrs Hertel, Miss Constance Jones, Mrs Juncker, Mr and Mrs Jacobs, Mr and Mrs Jones, Mrs de Kaech, Mr and Mrs Kirby, Mr and Mrs Konquenberg, Mrs Klaffenbach, Mrs Kruger, Mr and Mrs Lodi, Mrs Lutz, Mr A. G. Laughton, Dr and Mrs Levy, Mrs de Lucina, Mrs Legarde, Mrs Correa de Lund, Mr and Mrs Lett, Mr and Mrs Lloyd, Mr and Mrs Lopez Peña, Mr and Mrs F. C. Lee, Mr and Mrs Laidlaw, Mrs Moore, Mr and Miss Munro, Mrs Mouch, Mr and Mrs MacDavid, Mr Charles Menbruyth, Mr and Mrs MacHardy, Mrs and Miss McCrudden, Mrs Martinez, Mrs Martin, Mrs Macdonald, Mrs Moliné, Mr and Mrs Marston, Mrs ayne, Mrs McCrindle, Mrs Munroe, Mr Mayne, Mrs McCrindle, Mrs Munroe, Mr Murchison, Mrs Mackenzie, Mrs de Morillo, Mr and Mrs Measures, Miss Annie Nolan, Mrs Noble, Mrs Newbery, Mrs Nieva, Miss O'Leary, Mrs Orton, Mrs Olivet, Miss Ogan, Miss Slater, Mrs Orton, Mrs Pilling, Mr Pilling, Mrs Prentice, Mrs Pigeon, Miss Pontant, Mrs de Uiccaluga, Mr and Mrs Prescott, Mrs Pepper, Mrs Penny, Mrs Perry, Mrs Platt, Mrs Pfeiffer, Mr and Mrs Palmer, Mr and Mrs Pezzoni, Mr R. Pousati, Mrs Pommey, Mr and Mrs Pixton, Mr and Mrs Paton, Mrs Frank Roberts, Mrs Rodman, Mrs Ranger, Mrs Raquelle, Mr S. R. Robertson, Mr and Mrs Rugeroni, Mr and

VICTORIA SAILORS' HOME

SUCCESSFUL CONCERT

Miss Madge Wilkinson's concert at the Sailors' Home on Saturday night was a huge success. There was not even standing room inside the hall and many of the items were heard by members of the audience standing in the corridor. The programme was as follows:—

Part I.

Piano duet, "L'Impétuosité," Messrs H. and J. Wilkinson.

Song "When they ask you what your name is," Miss Stella Grindrod; encore, "If my lips could only speak."

Violin solo "Serenade du XVIIeme Quatuor (Haydn), Miss Vera Shaw; encore, Pierni's serenade.

Song "I like your old French Bonnet," Miss H. F. Collins; encore, "Love me and the world is mine."

Trio, violin, 'cello and piano, "Le Trot de Cavalier" (Spindler), Misses Common and Wilkinson and Mr. H. Wilkinson; encore, "Berceuse" (Jocelyn).

Song "Up from Somerset," Miss Kathleen Knight; encores, "Sunshine of your smile," "Because," and "If your love concerns."

Comic song, "Potted Poetry," Mr. W. Kennedy.

Part II.

Piano duet, "Qui Vive," Messrs. H. and J. Wilkinson.

Song "They all love Jack," Miss Stella Grindrod; encore, "I wonder if you miss me sometimes."

Violin solo "Simouette Madrigal," Miss Vera Shaw.

Song, "Two Eyes of Grey," Miss H. E. Collins.

'Cello solo, "The Broken Melody," (Van Biene), Miss M. Wilkinson, "Au Bord de la Mer."

Song, "My Hero," Miss Kathleen Knight, "Until."

Comic Song, "Joshua," Mr. W. Kennedy.

"God Save the King."

SERVICE FOR THE WOUNDED

THE LACROZE TRAMWAY'S SPECIAL CAR FOR MILITARY MANOEUVRES.

The coming military manœuvres seem to have attracted most serious attention, or perhaps it would be better expressed by stating that the approaching manœuvres have been recognised as serious at least in one direction.

Dr. Teófilo Lacroze and Dr. Luis Rocca, representing the Lacroze tramway service, have offered to the Minister of War (and the offer has been accepted) a service of special trams from Campo de Mayo, fitted up as hospital carriages for the "wounded."

These coaches will be used especially for this purpose and will run from Campo de Mayo to the Military Hospital.

The Government have offered their thanks, through General Allaria, to the Company.

Mrs Rodgers, Mr and Mrs Reynolds, Mr and Mrs Ratcliffe, Mr and Mrs R. H. Roberts, Mr and Mrs R. W. Roberts, Mr and Mrs G. Roberts, Dr and Mrs Reynolds, Mrs A. Rugeroni, Mr and Mrs Rene, Mrs Sampson, Mrs Sanpe, Rev. and Mrs F. Soanton, Mrs Seckl, Mrs Simons, Rev. F. H. Somerville, Mrs Sheralds, Mrs Sheil, Mrs Sempran, Mr and Mrs Symonds, Mrs Simpson, Mrs Sproat, Mrs Sotham, Mr and Mrs Sharpley, Mrs Smith, Mrs Schafer, Mrs Strass, Mr T. Schlesinger, Mr and Mrs Schuchard, Mrs Rhoorda Sunt, Mrs Sullivan, Mr and Mrs Solte, Mrs Torres, Mrs Tuckholme, Miss Thomas, Mrs Tornquist, Mrs Thomas, Mrs Taylor, Mrs Tims, Mrs Tupholme, Mr and Mrs Taylor, Mr and Mrs Turner, Mrs Ueko, Miss Valiente, Mrs Villamil, Mrs Vasquez, Mrs Vallebona, Miss Jenny Wood, Dr. S. Wollman, Mr Walker, Mrs and Miss Williams, Mr and Mrs van Wassenaar, Mr and Mrs Witt, Mrs Wilkins, Mr and Mrs Woodgate, Miss Warrell, Mr and Mrs Ward, Mrs John G. Zimmermann, Miss Zander.

TE AGUILA ES EL MEJOR

Sports and Pastimes

THE TURF

PALERMO

A vast enthusiasm was displayed in the meeting that took place at Palermo on Sunday, and it was not to be wondered at, that the people turned out in their hundreds and thousands to witness the twice postponed Jockey Club Stakes and the great race for the Gold Cup.

The various stands were nothing but a sea of faces and the enclosures were packed with thousands of strange faces from all parts of the country. The weather left nothing to be desired, and the track had quite recovered from its drenching, and was in the best of condition. Ladies in dresses, the height of fashion, men in their Sunday best, strolled about airing themselves, as did the brass bands, especially in attendance for so great a day.

From a point of view of the racing man, these latter were nothing but an annoyance. It always seemed that they discoursed music just at the wrong moment, in the middle of a parade or some such entertaining moment, and we would suggest that in future, when a band is considered necessary, that the least the authorities can do is to prevent any music during parade. We can hardly imagine Ocurrancia as a lover of Wagner, and Packoy, after his recent attack of indigestion, might easily have suffered anew from stomach ache, when he heard the opening bars of a Tango. Everything has its uses and its proper place, but music in the middle of the horses parading is both out of place and could easily create serious inconvenience.

It was a magnificent day's racing in spite of the horrible way in which the general public were made to suffer in the opening events, and in fact generally throughout the programme.

The race for the Gold Cup was for so important an event somewhat tame. Only seven horses went to the post and the result was a comparatively easy win for Smasher. There were two surprises in the race. One the forward running of Lusitano and the second the hopeless failure of La Natita, the public favourite. Lusitano known to be a horse of stamina and staying powers, was nevertheless a surprise. Undoubtedly favoured by the method of running the race, which was distinctly slow, we do not think that under different conditions, he would have been so prominent. The race was run just as though it had been a handicap event of importance, nothing more. As for La Natita's exhibition, we were surprised at her failure, considering the event was run in a manner that should have exactly suited her, and which should have given her every chance of using her fine finishing powers to perfection. She was well placed throughout, running third to Pan Pan and Duc de Fleury, with Smasher fourth and Calambour last.

It must be said that Mingo Torterolo rode a masterly race, full of prudence and good tactics, but without doubt had La Natita been in proper fettle, he would have had a great race for premier honours at the finish. As it was she put up one of the worst exhibitions of her career.

The Derby was an event which created infinitely more interest, which had been so much stimulated by two postponements. Ocurrancia in this race shewed once again what a remarkable animal she is, by mopping up the field with the greatest ease and winning in a manner we had always predicted she would win in.

At the time of the Premio Rivadavia we gave an honest opinion as to the cause of her losing and by the manner in which she won the Jockey Club Stakes on Sunday, she has done much to prove us right. We have never vacillated in the smallest degree concerning her, even after her defeat and again we can reiterate that our opinion has never been exaggerated. People can talk their heads off concerning the staying properties of Val d'Ors, but surely there is another side to the question, that a phenomenal filly like Ocurrancia, must be recognised as such and that there are times in the turf's history when all blood reckonings have been upset and when phenomenal horses have appeared, and entirely discounted the accepted value of their blood. Ocurrancia may or may not be one of these, but it is sufficient to remember, she wins her races with immense predominance, has never yet shewn a sign of being a non-stayer, and that those who came to back against her, only empty their pockets, and will continue to do so. There is no reason whatever to doubt that some slight lack of health and over-confidence, and none too good riding lost the filly the Premio Rivadavia, and thus spoilt a wonderful record. Once again Picacero proved what a very fine colt he is. He has never looked better than he looked on Sunday. He was superb and he once again proved our oft-repeated opinion that he is the best colt of the year. Never mind the stories of groggy legs and faults galore. It will be time to look around after Picacero has cracked up for something to beat him.

Ardouin rode a poor race on this son of Bridge of Canny, a false start upset him least of all, because he was the one that practically did not start. But of all the animals in the race, Picacero ran the best, under conditions of poor jockeyship and judgment. There is no animal at Palermo that can hope to run last by several lengths, against such peaceful horses as there were in this race, and come through the lot at the finish, and do better than Picacero did. Nothing surprises us in Packoy's failure, nor in the fact that Capullo beat Melik. It is a great pity that this first splendid colt is small. A little bigger and what a fine animal he would be! So the Derby is over, and but one more remark is necessary. Mingo, by winning, scored both big events, and made not the smallest mistake in his riding and judgment. The time may be ignored. The horses were not out for world's record beating, but for beating each other, and the 1½ lengths, Ocurrancia won by, were sufficient, but we can say she had a lot up her sleeve, and if Packoy had even made the pace infinitely faster, there would have been no difference in the result, and only the time would have been changed. The other events on the programme chiefly provided some shockers. Sincera once again wiped the field, and got her head in front at the finish to score her third surprise win of the year, but this time she was not allowed to pay more than $18.20. La Commune ran second and ran an improved race. She gave Tejuela no chance.

Gallina Ciega's victory over Orviola was quite reasonable, and yet she was not thought to be as good as Huarmi, who ran nowhere. Vanity needs a long rest. The spasm of the meeting was Lord French's head victory over Gringoire. Juez de Raya the favourite, was never in the hunt, but too much attention should not be paid to this. Pichuleo ran a poor third in front of the consistent Strap, who also suffered from jockeyship, as did Juez de Raya.

The remarkable way Solis whacked a strongish field by several lengths in a hack canter, and in the remarkable time of 2-3 3/5, was the fourth surprise of the meeting. Banderale ran second and Palo Errao third, but miles behind.

Farruco put up a good race when he beat some good stuff in Full Hand and company, and furthermore the public made him a hot favourite. Andrade and Espartillar could not give the weight away to the classy son of Fulmen, although Full Hand very nearly beat him.

Torterolo got an immense reception when he came out on Stagno after winning the two classics, but in spite of this the great G. P. apparently thought him incapable of winning three straight races, and their surprise was great when he romped home on the erratic Stagno a length and a quarter in front of Debutante. It was peculiar to notice that Wotan and Cantarina exactly shared favourite honours with 11,604 tickets each, a most remarkable fact. Wotan ran exceedingly badly.

Penitelo put up a great race for the public in the last event. He won from start to finish, and was exceedingly well ridden by young Blanco.

Hidrato with his usual habit came along lengths behind the field, and came with a hurricane finish down the straight to get within three-quarters of a length of Penitelo, who had run at least eight lengths ahead the greater part of the distance. Hidrato is an unlucky horse. Our opinion is that his immense finishing powers could be used to much greater advantage, and that his habit of letting the others get so many lengths ahead (in all his races he is the same), might be altered to advantage. It was a wonderful day, when all is said and done.

LA PLATA

Although quite put in the shade by the Palermo meeting, the racing at La Plata on Sunday afternoon was excellent, and the last encounter of the day provided a magnificent finish between Gacetilla and Cherobaya, who dead-heated only half a head in front of Torterolo. Cherobaya won in the run off.

Another fine finish was when Ardilla won a head from Bayonne. The Herald was fortunate in selecting 4 winners and a placed horse in their first favourites, and four places amongst their second fancies.

The results in general were as follows:

PREMIO ACROBAT, 1400 metres.—1. Glou Glou 54, T. Grigera; 2. El Triunfo 44; 3. Octavio 55.

Dividends: $11.30 and $3.60; 2nd, $4; 3rd, $2.70.

Won by 1½ lengths; 1 length.

Time 1.27 3/5.

PREMIO ADRIANO, 1200 metres.—1. Bonci 52, N. Lopez; 2. Floweret; 49; 3. Caraway 48.

Dividends: 1st, $4.90 and $2.70; 2nd, $3.60; 3rd, $5.80.

Won by 1¼ lengths; half a length.

Time 1.14 3/5.

PREMIO AFILADOR, 1400 metres.—1. Ardilla III. 56, T. Grigera; 2. Bayonne 51.

Dividends: 1st, $4.70 and $3.60; 2nd, $4.50.

Won by a head; a neck.

Time: 1.27 4/5.

PREMIO ALCURNIA, 1600 metres.—1. Duquesita 50, J. M. Peña; 2. Villemil 52; 3. Coquin 55 (carried 52).

Dividends: 1st, $4.90 and $3; 2nd, $7.40; 3rd, $4.30.

Won by a length; three-quarters of a length.

Time: 1.41 2/5.

PREMIO ALSACIA, 2000 metres.—1. Saltarin 44, O. Gonzalez; 2. Guirry 50; 3. Camorsito 48.

Dividends: 1st, $9 and $3.30; 2nd, $10.10; 3rd, $3.90.

Won by 1¼ lengths; a head.

Time: 1.20 2/5.

PREMIO ARNUERO, 1300 metres.—Dead heat between Cherobayá 50 ks. C. Fenucci and Gacetilla, 50 ks., O. Gonzalez; 3. Torterolo 43.

Dividends: Cherobayá $16.80 and $10.90; Gacetilla $12.20 and $8.40; 3rd, $4.

The 3rd half a head behind.

Time: 1.20 2/5.

Match.—Cherobayá won by two lengths in 1.22 2/5. Dividend: $3.25.

ROSARIO

The running of Socarrona at Rosario on Sunday was excellent, she scored twice out of the seven events. The track was in good condition, and the weather ideal, and once again the meeting passed off without any unpleasant incident. The detailed results are appended:

PREMIO NAPOLEON, 1300 metres.—1. Socarrona 52; 2. Topacio II. 53; 3. Narvaez 53.

Also ran: Industrial 53 (4), Yankee II. 56, Verdi 54, Gun 50, Diabolina 52, Colla 52, Arequipa 48, Culata 48, Hélix 50.

Dividends: $7.20 and $2.75; 2nd, $2.55; 3rd, $4.75.

Won by a neck. Time: 1.20.

PREMIO NAVARRO, 2000 metres.—1. Everest 52; 2. Don Gabriel 50; 3. Ormilla 46.

Also ran: Tric Trac (4), Dincer 55, Duna 53, Fantome 53, Vinicio II. 52, Sopotón 52, Mamoré 52.

Dividends: $8.45 and $3.80; 2nd, $4.65; 3rd, $3.90.

Won by half a neck. Time: 2.6 3/5.

PREMIO NELESENA, 1200 metres.—1. Rey Negro 56; 2. Alcazar 56; 3. Hermetica 54.

Also ran: Blondin 56 (4), Pinotto 56, Olazábal 56, Sandfly II. 56, Carita 54, Motherless 54, Silk Stockings 54.

Dividends: $14.50 and $3.90; 2nd, $4.35; 3rd, $2.60.

Won by two lengths. Time: 1.14 2/5.

PREMIO NESTA, 1300 metres.—1. Socarrona 48; 2. Formosa 53; 3. Pou-poule 49.

Also ran: Apple Tart 56 (4), Rivadavia 53, Tango 52.

Dividends: $10.10 and $4.40; 2nd, $3.85.

Won by a length. Time: 1.19.

PREMIO NIAGARA, 2000 metres.—1. Farward 60; 2. Tommy Atkins 58; 3. Macabeo 48.

Also ran: Royal Nose 52 (4), Opuento II. 58, Sinai 56, Old Sam 56, Sunchales 52, Freyre 42.

Dividends: $10.35 and $4.75; 2nd, $4.40; 3rd, $11.15.

Won by two lengths. Time: 2.20 1/2.

PREMIO REMATE, 1000 metres.—1. Galana 51; 2. Miruca 47; 3. Pink Bramble 51.

Also ran: Pagaré 46 (4), Ganadero 52, Week Day 53, Berlin 53, Breceaneca 49, Pantomima 48, and Vogler's M.

Dividends: $10.55 and $3.15; 2nd, $2.55; 3rd, $2.75.

Won by three-parts of a length. Time: 1.13 2/5.

PREMIO NITRATO, 1600 metres.—1. The Libel 48; 2. Cleipan 57; 3. Suzana 46.

Also ran: Gigantea 53 (4), La Goredetti 50, Button Hole 49, and Trinchera 40.

Dividends: $7.65 and $3.50; 2nd, $3.30.

Won by half a length. Time 1.40.

CLASSIC RACES IN BRITAIN

(To the Editor.)

Sir,—Would you please answer me the following question in Sunday's (tomorrow's) HERALD—with thanks, as I wish to get a correct reply and exact. Thanking you in anticipation.

How many Classic Races are there each year in England at ordinary times, and what are they?—Yours etc., Sept. 18.

"FISHOOK."

(Strictly speaking, the "classie" events in Britain are the Two Thousand Guineas, One Thousand Guineas, Derby, Oaks, and St. Leger—all three-year-old events. If, however, the question is gauged from the Palermo standpoint, there are a number of other events, all of which attract classic animals, and are regarded as of very great importance. Naturally none of these are handicaps. The principal races in this category are:—The Woodcote Stakes, Middle Park Plate and Dewhurst Stakes (two-year-olds), Eclipse Stakes (the most valuable event in Britain), and the Jockey

JOCKEY ASSAULTS OWNER

EXCITING AFFAIR IN SANTIAGO.

No little excitement has been caused in sporting circles by the latest communications from Chili concerning the attempt on the life of Don Roberto Vial, one of the most prominent owners and sportsmen in the Republic and much added curiosity has been given the affair owing to the fact that it was the leading jockey of his stud and a well-known rider, who is responsible. The details telegraphed from Santiago contain the following:

Sr. Vial is the proprietor of the Stud Burlesco, which has been turning out the winners of all the principal events in Chili. His official jockey is Daniel Reyes, one of the best riders across the snows. Reyes' success during the two years that he has been employed as official jockey to Sr. Vial seems to have been too much for him, and latterly he has given way to drink.

As this is a fatal defect in a jockey, Sr. Vial decided to displace him. The ground on which the Stud Burlesco stands at one time belonged to Reyes and was purchased by Sr. Vial for $15,000. The arrangement was in the form of a pension.

Reyes who lived at the stud with his family, by his alcoholic desires and gambling soon had his family in misery and the $15,000 purchase price was paid to his wife and children in monthly sums to maintain them. The eldest daughter furthermore had an amount of $5000 settled upon her by Sr. Vial.

The result of the business deals between the two resulted in Sr. Vial owing some $20,000 to Reyes, but owing to the monthly payments to his wife and family the amount has been reduced to $6000.

A day or so ago Reyes called upon his late employer and demanded his wages. It was explained to him that for two months he had not been in Sr. Vial's employ and no wages were due. He then demanded his money. Sr. Vial replied that when Reyes called upon him he should do so in a fit condition. Reyes angrily drew a knife and made a savage attack upon his late patron. The latter defended himself until his son Arthur Vial, a lad of sixteen, hearing the tumult and seeing what was happening went to call for help. Reyes was disarmed by Don Guillermo Matte and handed over to the police.

The public hearing of the matter collected in great numbers and it was only with difficulty that the police could save the jockey from being lynched.

Shortly afterwards his wife arrived on the scene and begged for her husband's pardon from Sr. Vial.

The affair is being much discussed and the escape of Sr. Vial is stated to have been a very narrow one.

DEATH OF ORMA

SIRE OF FLYING FOX.

London, Sept. 17.

The Duke of Westminster's celebrated Orme, the sire of Flying Fox, died at the Eaton Stud, aged 26 years.

Orme did not run in the 2,000 Guineas, nor in the Derby, on account of being poisoned by some miscreants while training.

Club Stakes, for 3-year-olds and upwards. Resembling the Palermo "Carlos Pellegrini" are the great Cup events: The Coronation Cup (Epsom), Ascot Cup, Goodwood Cup, and Doncaster Cup. In speaking of classics, it should be remembered that at Palermo there is a "classic" at every meeting. In England, however, there is also the "big" race of the day, but it is not regarded as a "classic." This latter term is applied simply to the great events of the year.—Ed. THE HERALD.

FOOTBALL

FIRST DIVISION CHAMPIONSHIP.

POSITION OF THE CLUBS.

	P.	W.	L.	D.	Pts.
San Isidro	17	16	—	1	33
E. de La Plata	19	12	3	4	28
Platense	20	12	4	4	28
River Plate	16	12	1	3	27
Independiente	20	11	5	4	26
Racing	12	11	—	1	23
Porteño	15	10	3	2	22
Estudiantes	20	10	8	2	22
F. C. Oeste	18	6	4	8	20
Hispano-Argentino	21	8	9	4	20
Bánfield	20	8	9	3	19
A. de Quilmes	15	8	7	—	16
S. L. de Almagro	18	7	9	2	16
G. y Esgrima	19	6	9	4	16
Belgrano	22	7	13	2	16
Huracan	14	6	5	3	15
Boca Juniors	17	5	7	5	15
Estudiantil Porteño	18	7	10	1	15
Quilmes	14	4	6	4	12
Tigre	17	4	9	4	12
Kimberley	19	5	12	2	12
Atlanta	20	6	14	—	12
D. de Belgrano	20	4	13	3	11
Comercio	17	1	13	3	5
Floresta	18	1	14	3	5

QUILMES (3) v. COMERCIO (0).

The above match played at Quilmes on Sunday afternoon resulted in Bonat, Grundall and Raggi scoring for the homesters, who throughout the game showed themselves superior, by keeping up a constant pressure on Comercio's goal. Play was only fairly interesting, many corners and much bad shooting characterising the game. The teams were as follows:—

Quilmes.—C. F. Pearson; A. Cerutti and J. D. Brown; H. Reid, J. Pollini and E. Durante; B. Bonat, T. Rowstron, P. Raggi, H. Grundall and C. Guisano.

Comercio.—L. Carles; M. Paganini and E. Galliazzi; C. Russo, G. Romero, L. Galtam; L. Pravoto, A. Bourdieu, Dolhagaray, A. Pedemonte and J. Gervasio.

Mr. Hasler was the referee.

ESTUDIANTES (3) v. ARGENTINO DE QUILMES.

Played at Quilmes on Sunday, Estudiantes, due to good play by Ochandio, who scored twice, and Barrera who scored once, were enabled to claim an easy victory over the homesters.

The goal-keeping of Croce for the Estudiantes was excellent, he was unbeatable, and this did much to give his side the victory.

C. A. Berghmans lined up the following teams:—

Argentino de Quilmes.—A. L. Rondono, R. B. Martinez, José Ortega, Atilio Corbona, José Molachino, Miguel Ginebra, Felix Cabana, J. Escobar, P. Polomeni, J. J. Pozo.

Estudiantes.—M. Croce, J. Susan, A. Spinelli, M. Madero, O. Ivanezovich, H. Vaccari, C. L. Anizuela, A. E. Ochandio, L. Thomas, J. M. de la Barrera, A. Pavlosky.

RIVER PLATE (0) v. SAN ISIDRO (0)

The River Plate, fourth team on the championship list, met the champions, at Darsena Sud, on Sunday. As expected, a fine game resulted, and for the first time in the championship this year San Isidro did not succeed in winning, and a pointless draw resulted.

As an exhibition of football it was however excellent, and the Saints played well, and in general could justly lay claim to having most of the game. River Plate's defence was good, and but for this they must have met with defeat. A vast crowd assembled to see the match, which provided fast and good football from start to finish.

The following teams turned out:—River Plate.—C. Isola, A. Chiappe, E. Calneggia, G. Garcia, A. Peruzzi, A. Lanatta, R. Fraga, A. Riso, A. Ameal, N. Rofrano, H. Rivas.

San Isidro.—Wilson, A. Bruno, J. Rossi, A. Olivari, J. Morroni, G. Badaracco, E. and J. Fernandez, S. Sayanes, M. Marini, J. Alzina.

Referee, H. Alfano.

ESTUDIANTES DE LA PLATA (2) v. BELGRANO (1).

After a fine encounter at La Plata on Sunday afternoon the home team who had Belgrano for visitors, upheld the reputation and position gained this year as second on the league by defeating their visitors by 2 goals to 1. The teams were as follows:

Est. de La Plata.—Duarte Indart, Ovidio, Pastor, Galup Lanus, Girotto, Aranguren, Tolosa, Islas, Lascano, Lamas, Garcia, Valenciani.

Belgrano.—Reddel, C. Morgan, Brown, Pena, H. Morgan, Cox, A. Morgan, Hughes, Martin, Oliva, Boyd.

The game was a series of attacks and counter attacks, and play was fast throughout, and it was the combination of the Estudiantes which won them the match. They were, however, lucky in that one of their goals scored by G. Lanus was from "hands" in the penalty area. Martin scored for Belgrano, and Valenciani for the students.

The results of other games played on Sunday were as follows:—

Copa de Honor—

Racing..... 2 Central Cordoba 0
Tiro Federal... 1 Boca Juniors . . 1

Championship—

San Isidro..... 0 River Plate . . 0
Estudiantes... 3 A. de Quilmes . 0
Banfield..... 0 Huracan . . . 0
G. y Esgrima... 4 S. L. de Almagro 2
Independiente.. 3 D. de Belgrano . 0
Platense..... 3 Tigre 1
E. de La Plata.. 2 Belgrano 1
Porteño..... 3 Atlanta 1
F. C. Oeste.... 2 Kimberley 1
Quilmes..... 3 Comercio 0
H. Argentino... 3 Floresta 1

SWIMMING

EXTENSION MOVEMENT AT Y.M.C.A.

The advantages of the gymnasium and swimming bath of the Young Men's Christian Association, 161 Paseo Colon, will in a few days be extended to boys between the ages of ten and sixteen. Any boy of respectable parentage may obtain membership in the "seccion niños," and should his father be a member of the Association he will enjoy considerably reduced terms.

The new movement comes into force on October 1st. Every juvenile member will have the right to attend either on three mornings or on three afternoons per week for two hours each time. He will receive gymnasium and swimming instruction, and take part in gymnasium games, basket ball, wrestling, boxing, etc., and should he require private lessons in boxing, fencing, wrestling, or swimming he will be able to obtain them from Professors Willie Williams, Saunier, Tiraboschi, or Saracco, for a trifling additional charge.

With the advent of summer the swimming pool will be in increased demand—and even in midwinter there are over a hundred swimmers per day, so greatly is the warm water swim appreciated—and any boy joining immediately will be able to thoroughly enjoy the pool when the hot weather sets in.

No boy is allowed to commence his membership without first undergoing a physical examination to determine that he is sufficiently robust. The terms of subscription are so adjusted that no heavy outlay is involved, and parents and youths are invited to make personal application for full details.

THE LITERARY STAFF.

"Is the editor in?" asked a stranger as he sauntered into the office at nine o'clock in the morning.

"No, sir," replied the attendant kindly, "he does not come in so early. Is there anything I can do?"

"Perhaps so. Are you connected with the literary department of the paper?"

"I am, sir."

"Oh, what do you do?"

"I empty the waste-paper baskets, sir."

GOLF

NORTH v. SOUTH.

On the San Andres links on Sunday the annual encounter between the North and South was celebrated, and resulted in a fairly easy win for the Southerners by 9 matches to 6.

Mr. C. A. Watt, the captain of the North, was unfortunately ill, and with him and Mr. G. W. Hamil absentees, the North were naturally somewhat weakened.

Mr. A. Kidd, the San Andres champion, did not play up to his usual good form, and had to admit defeat at the hands of Mr. H. Buchanan in the singles.

The links were in excellent condition and the weather was perfect. Results as follows:—

SINGLES.

North.		South.
H. Smith..... 1		S. W. Lewis . . 0
H. Dorning..... ½		J. D. Nelson . . ½
H. Buchanan... 1		A. Kidd 0
W. D. Gardom... ½		E. Gibson . . . ½
H. W. Smith.... 0		S. Smiles 1
J. A. Brown.... 1		H. G. E. Hickey 0
C. B. Bradbury.. ½		R. E. Bailey . . ½
T. G. Ferguson.. 0		J. H. McCrum . . 1
J. E. Traill..... 0		W. Cowes 1
G. Leitch..... 0		F. Elortondo . . 1
	4½		5½

FOURSOMES.

Dorning and Traill..... 0		Cowes and Gibson 1
Leitch and Bradbury.... 0		Elortondo and Nelson 1
Brown and H. W. Smith.. 1		Hickey and Smiles 0
H. Smith and Ferguson.... 0		Lewis and McCrum . . . 1
Buchanan and Gardom..... ½		Bailey and Kidd ½
	1½		3½
Singles..... 4½			5½
Total..... 6			9

SECOND DIVISION CHAMPIONSHIP. FINALS.

SAN ANDRES II. v. LOMAS II.

The finals for the championship of the second division, played at Palermo on Sunday afternoon between San Andres II. and Lomas II. resulted in an easy win for San Andres. It was in the foursomes that Lomas had a rough time, and only Messrs. Cowes and Brown were able to score a win.

San Andres won by 12 matches to 6. The details of the play were as follows:—

San Andres.		Lomas.
H. D. McMaster ½		H. T. Mawson . ½
H. L. Kidd..... 0		T. Johnson . . . 1
R. E. Anderson. 1		H. Martindale . 0
T. W. Black.... 1		T. G. Duncan . . 0
H. K. Loos..... 0		H. B. Gibson . . 1
R. McCrum.... 1		A. H. Gibson . . 0
S. Argente..... 0		J. B. Campbell . 1
H. B. Tabor.... 1		A. T. McMorran 0
J. J. Pratt..... 1		G. Armstrong . 0
W. E. Knightley 1		E. Brown 0
H. F. Bulman... 0		W. Cowes 1
H. L. Prettyman 1		H. L. Stevens . 0
	7½		4½

Kidd and Loos..... 1		Johnson and Martindale . 0
Black and McMaster... 1		Armstrong and Stevens 0
Tabor and Prettyman... 1		A. H. Gibson and Mawson 0
Knightley and McCrum.... 1		H. B. Gibson and McMorran 0
Anderson and Argente..... ½		Campbell and Duncan ½
Pratt and Bulman..... 0		Cowes and Brown 1
	4½		1½
Singles..... 7½			4½
Total..... 12			6

PACIFIC RAILWAY v HURLINGHAM

A friendly match between these clubs was played at Hurlingham on Sunday, this being the third encounter of the season. A fairly fresh breeze was blowing, but the links were in splendid condition, and the

LAWN TENNIS

The lawn tennis season is now in full swing again, and last week end's play was favoured by perfect weather, which brought out a large attendance at the various clubs which are indulging in their Spring or other Tournaments. Belgrano, San Isidro, Quilmes, Olivos, and other clubs are going strongly, and in all their tournaments the perfect weather enabled them to make considerable progress.

BELGRANO ATHLETIC CLUB.

ANNUAL SPRING TOURNAMENT.

On Saturday and Sunday the Belgrano Courts presented an animated appearance, although some of the more prominent players were absent at Rosario, where they had gone for match play.

Miss Anderson is just as good as last season, but Miss C. Sastre has improved.

By the following results of play to date, an idea of the excellent week-end progress made can be judged. The arrangements left nothing to be desired.

Ladies' Singles.

Miss Sara Lanusse beat Miss D. Peralta Ramos, 6-3, 13-11.

Miss Anderson beat Miss Turnbull, 6-2, 6-3.

Ladies' Doubles.

Miss D. Peralta Ramos and Miss Baliero beat Miss del Campo and Miss Wiimaert, 6-2, 6-0.

Mrs. Crawford and Miss Turnbull beat the Misses Capdepon, 9-7, 7-5.

Misses Anderson beat Miss Stockdale and Miss C. Goodliffe, 6-0, 2-6, 6-2.

The Misses Lanusse beat Mrs. Mackenzie and Miss Smith, 6-3, 10-8.

Mrs. Keen and Miss Lily Moss beat Miss Keen and Miss Capdepon, 6-3, 6-4.

Gentlemen's Singles Scratch.

C. H. Smyth beat Van der Ham, 6-2, 6-1.

Prescott beat Hutton, 6-1, 7-5.

Gentlemen's Single Handicap, Class "A."

Hoewel beat De Meyier, 6-2, 6-2.

Mackinnon beat Poynton, 8-6, 6-1.

Mackinnon beat Hutton, 6-4, 7-5.

Urquiza beat Van der Ham, 6-4, 6-1.

Knight beat Cullerne, 6-4, 7-5.

Mixed Doubles.

Miss Kitching and Presscott beat Miss Viola Kitching and Cullerne, 4-6, 6-1, 7-5.

Miss Kitching and Prescott beat Mrs Dorning and Griffin, 6-3, 8-6.

Miss Capdepon and Allchin beat Miss Kitching and Prescott, 9-7, 6-4.

Miss Lily Moss and Heriot beat Miss Bulman and Hansard, 6-2, 10-8.

Miss Dumas and Dumas beat Miss weather favourable for an enjoyable day's golf. After some close play Hurlingham ran out winners by 8½ matches to 6½.

Details as follows:—

SINGLES.

Hurlingham.	Pacific Rly.
H. Powell-Jones 0	A. C. Luck . . 1
R. L. Rumboll . . 0	H. Brodhurst . . 1
E. L. Rumboll . . ½	H. Griffiths . . ½
N. W. Jackson . . 1	H. Nicholls . . 0
W. G. Mackern . . 1	A. H. Barnett . . 0
W. T. Greig . . . 1	C. O'Ryan . . . 0
T. Birmingham . . 1	W. A. Watson . . 0
R. W. Denton . . . 0	B. H. Smyth . . 1
A. E. Shaw 0	E. Tebbutt . . . 1
E. Buckland . . . 1	A. Crow 0

FOURSOMES.

Hurlingham.	Pacific Rly.
E. L. Rumboll and Powell-Jones . . 0	Luck and Broadhurst . . 1
R. L. Rumboll and Greig 1	Barnett and Griffiths 0
Jackson and Denton ½	Smyth and Nicholls ½
Buckland and Mackern 1	O'Ryan and Crow 0
Shaw and Birmingham . . ½	Watson and Tebbutt ½

Singles 5½	4½
----------------------	----

Total 8½	6½
--------------------	----

Lanusse and E. B. Sansot, 6-4, 5-7, 6-4.

Men's Doubles.

Brothers Etchepareborda beat Marsh and Turner 6-0, 6-2.

Rugeroni and Van der Ham beat Bessler and Niebuhr, 6-1, 6-3.

Rowe and Tribe beat Cañas and Milberg, 6-3, 2-6, 11-9.

Lang and Fierro beat McHardy and Bruce, 6-2, 6-2.

Men's Singles Class "B."

Fierro beat Hansard, 2-6, 6-4, 6-2.

Magrane beat Farran, 6-0, 4-6, 6-4.

Duranona beat Magrane, 6-3, 6-0.

Mackechnie beat Sansot, 6-2, 6-1.

Podesta beat Medici, 6-4, 6-2.

Hughes beat Turner, 6-3, 5-7, 6-2.

SAN ISIDRO ATHLETIC CLUB.

OPEN SPRING TOURNAMENT.

Before an excellent week-end attendance San Isidro proceeded with play in its open Tournament. Only a few matches were down for decision, which considering the perfect weather was a mistake, and play could have been enjoyed in the morning just as well as being confined solely to the afternoon.

A very good match between Miss Escalada and Miss Viola resulted in a win for the former.

Messrs. Russell and Gallishaw had a very hard struggle in the Class A Singles, and after a match lasting nearly 2 hours Mr. Gallishaw just managed to win. Appended are the details of play.

Ladies' Singles.

Miss M. I. Obarrio beat Miss C. Maschwitz, 9-7, 7-5.

Miss I. Heale beat Mrs. Babington, 8-6, 6-1.

Miss C. Escalada beat Miss S. N. Viola, 2-6, 6-3, 8-6.

Mixed Doubles.

Miss C. Escalada and B. Crawley beat Miss I. Anderson and W. Russell, 6-1, 9-7.

Miss C. Maschwitz and J. de Urquiza beat Miss M. I. Obarrio and Mr. T. Dodds, 8-6, 6-4.

Miss I. Heale and J. Watson beat Mrs. Babington and J. Morgan, 0-6, 6-4, 6-4.

Gents' Doubles.

L. de Urquiza and C. A. Barreiro beat E. W. Mills and A. R. Arriola, 6-3, 7-5.

O. G. Babington and D. G. Davidson w.o. C. and F. Madero.

W. Russell and J. Parry beat A. Anderson and S. Hogg, 6-4, 6-1.

Gents' Singles "A."

P. Gallishaw beat W. Russell, 4-6, 6-2, 7-5.

E. S. J. Parry beat P. Rene, 6-4, 6-2.

Gents' Singles B.

A. R. Arriola beat A. Maschwitz, 6-1, 3-6, 6-4.

W. B. Spufford beat R. Gimenez, 2-6, 6-3, 6-4.

QUILMES L.T.C.

SPRING TOURNAMENT.

Much progress was made in the Quilmes Spring Lawn Tennis Tournament on Saturday and Sunday. Favoured by ideal weather and a good attendance, the following results were registered:—

Ladies' Singles.

Miss F. M. Williams -15 beat Miss M. Rogers scr. 6-4, 6-5.

Miss D. M. Williams -15 beat Miss C. G. Percy -15/3, 6-3, 6-5.

Mrs. C. J. Bell -16 beat Miss G. Jacobs -15, 6-3, 6-3.

Gent's Singles.

D. A. D'Aguiar -15 beat R. H. Croker -13/6, 6-2, 6-4.

G. C. Crispin -5/6 beat R. Veitch, -1/6, 3-6, 6-2, 6-4.

A. D. Bell -15/2 beat A. W. Woodhouse -15/1, 6-1, 6-2.

B. G. Moverley -14/6 beat J. S. Wood -15/3, 6-5, 6-5.

B. Hoare -5/6 beat C. E. Lovett -13/6, 5-6, 6-2, 6-4.

S. U. Leonard -3/6 beat P. Marrs -13/6, 6-2, 6-2.

Gent's Singles.—Class B.

E. Pite -5/6 beat A. S. Hawtrey -15/3, 6-0, 4-6, 6-2.

W. E. Youell -1/6 beat R. J. Buck -15, 6-2, 6-4.

P. J. N. Rowstron -14/6 beat H. W. Williams -15, 5-6, 6-1, 7-5.

W. R. C. McKelvey -15 beat G. Wood -15, 6-1, 6-5.

Rowstron beat Youell, 6-4, 3-6, 6-2.

Hall beat McKelvey, 0-6, 6-2, 7-5.

S. Remsin -14/6 beat T. G. Steed, 1-6, 6-4, 6-2.

Gents' Doubles.

Woodhouse and Moverley -12/6, beat Buck and Lee -15, 6-4, 6-5.

Bell and Mackill -15/1 beat Renison and Hawtrey 15/4, 6-3, 6-3.

Leonard and Marrs -15 beat Sinclair and Smythe, scr., 6-2, 6-5.

P. Marrs and Lovett, scratch, beat Croker and Veitch, scr. 3-6, 6-2, 12-10.

Crispin Bros. -15/2 beat Hoare and Knight -40, 6-4, 6-4.

Youell and Pite -15/3 beat Bell and Hall -15, 3-6, 6-1, 6-2.

Mixed Doubles.

Miss Jacobs and Mackill -15, beat Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Bell -15, 6-1, 6-3.

Miss Lovett and Marrs -15 beat Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Knight -30, 6-3, 6-4.

Miss Sinclair and Buck -13/6 beat Miss Hall and Bell, scr., 6-3, 6-5.

Ladies' Doubles.

Misses M. and D. Rogers -13/6 beat Miss F. M. Williams and Miss M. Davenport, 5-6, 6-2, 6-4.

Misses M. and D. Rogers -13/6 beat Miss F. M. Williams and Miss M. Davenport, 5-6, 6-2, 6-4.

Misses M. and D. Rogers -13/6 beat Miss F. M. Williams and Miss M. Davenport, 5-6, 6-2, 6-4.

Misses M. and D. Rogers -13/6 beat Miss F. M. Williams and Miss M. Davenport, 5-6, 6-2, 6-4.

Misses M. and D. Rogers -13/6 beat Miss F. M. Williams and Miss M. Davenport, 5-6, 6-2, 6-4.

Misses M. and D. Rogers -13/6 beat Miss F. M. Williams and Miss M. Davenport, 5-6, 6-2, 6-4.

Misses M. and D. Rogers -13/6 beat Miss F. M. Williams and Miss M. Davenport, 5-6, 6-2, 6-4.

Misses M. and D. Rogers -13/6 beat Miss F. M. Williams and Miss M. Davenport, 5-6, 6-2, 6-4.

Misses M. and D. Rogers -13/6 beat Miss F. M. Williams and Miss M. Davenport, 5-6, 6-2, 6-4.

Misses M. and D. Rogers -13/6 beat Miss F. M. Williams and Miss M. Davenport, 5-6, 6-2, 6-4.

Misses M. and D. Rogers -13/6 beat Miss F. M. Williams and Miss M. Davenport, 5-6, 6-2, 6-4.

Misses M. and D. Rogers -13/6 beat Miss F. M. Williams and Miss M. Davenport, 5-6, 6-2, 6-4.

Misses M. and D. Rogers -13/6 beat Miss F. M. Williams and Miss M. Davenport, 5-6, 6-2, 6-4.

Misses M. and D. Rogers -13/6 beat Miss F. M. Williams and Miss M. Davenport, 5-6, 6-2, 6-4.

Misses M. and D. Rogers -13/6 beat Miss F. M. Williams and Miss M. Davenport, 5-6, 6-2, 6-4.

Misses M. and D. Rogers -13/6 beat Miss F. M. Williams and Miss M. Davenport, 5-6, 6-2, 6-4.

Misses M. and D. Rogers -13/6 beat Miss F. M. Williams and Miss M. Davenport, 5-6, 6-2, 6-4.

Misses M. and D. Rogers -13/6 beat Miss F. M. Williams and Miss M. Davenport, 5-6, 6-2, 6-4.

Misses M. and D. Rogers -13/6 beat Miss F. M. Williams and Miss M. Davenport, 5-6, 6-2, 6-4.

Misses M. and D. Rogers -13/6 beat Miss F. M. Williams and Miss M. Davenport, 5-6, 6-2, 6-4.

Misses M. and D. Rogers -13/6 beat Miss F. M. Williams and Miss M. Davenport, 5-6, 6-2, 6-4.

Misses M. and D. Rogers -13/6 beat Miss F. M. Williams and Miss M. Davenport, 5-6, 6-2, 6-4.

Misses M. and D. Rogers -13/6 beat Miss F. M. Williams and Miss M. Davenport, 5-6, 6-2, 6-4.

Misses M. and D. Rogers -13/6 beat Miss F. M. Williams and Miss M. Davenport, 5-6, 6-2, 6-4.

Misses M. and D. Rogers -13/6 beat Miss F. M. Williams and Miss M. Davenport, 5-6, 6-2, 6-4.

Misses M. and D. Rogers -13/6 beat Miss F. M. Williams and Miss M. Davenport, 5-6, 6-2, 6-4.

Misses M. and D. Rogers -13/6 beat Miss F. M. Williams and Miss M. Davenport, 5-6, 6-2, 6-4.

Misses M. and D. Rogers -13/6 beat Miss F. M. Williams and Miss M. Davenport, 5-6, 6-2, 6-4.

Misses M. and D. Rogers -13/6 beat Miss F. M. Williams and Miss M. Davenport, 5-6, 6-2, 6-4.

Misses M. and D. Rogers -13/6 beat Miss F. M. Williams and Miss M. Davenport, 5-6, 6-2, 6-4.

NEWS FROM STEFANSSON

A LOST ARCTIC EXPLORER.

New York, Sept. 17.

A cable from Seattle reports receipt of a message from Stefansson and his expedition to the Arctic by way of Nome. The party turned back on April 17, 1914, for Camp Separation.

Trading schooners and whalers in the Arctic this summer were asked to keep a bright lookout for the explorers. Last month vessels returned from Nome after trading along the Alaskan and Siberian shores reported that no trace of Stefansson or his party had been found. There still remained hope that he had taken refuge on Wrangell Land, where survivors of the Karluk took refuge when the ship was crushed in the ice 18 months ago.

A circumstantial account was also given by natives that last winter when hunting seal at Icy Cape they saw a white man marooned on an ice floe drifting S.W. towards Wrangell Island. The date when the man was seen is presumed to have been January or February this year. The hunters turned out on the ice to attempt a rescue, but before they could reach him a strong offshore wind sprang up separating the floe from the shore ice and driving it out to sea. The ice was moving steadily S.W., and, unless the wind shifted, would touch Wrangell, where were food caches and from which the Karluk survivors were rescued.

OLIVOS LAWN TENNIS CLUB.

SPRING TOURNAMENT.

The matches held over from last week, when weather spoiled the play, were all played off on Saturday and Sunday, and considerable progress was made in the other games. The results of the tournament plate to date are given below:—

Mixed Doubles:

Miss Geary and Logan beat Miss McKoen and Broome, 6-1, 6-3.

Miss Viera and C. Quesado beat Miss C. Casares and N. Quesado, 6-4, 6-3.

Mrs. and Mr. Buelinck beat Miss Mitchell and Valentine, 6-4, 7-5.

Miss N. Casares and Lush beat Miss O'Connor and Browne, 6-2, 6-4.

Ladies' Doubles:

Miss Griet and Miss Regnier beat Miss M. Casares and Miss O'Connor, 7-5, 0-6, 6-4.

Men's Doubles:

N. and C. Quesado beat Lister and Darbyshire, 6-3, 6-1.

Valentine and Lush beat Taylor and Pratt, 3-6, 6-3, 6-1.

Sheridan and Parsons beat B. Feehey and Keenan, 6-4, 6-4.

Ladies' Singles:

Miss Perkins beat Miss Griet, 6-1, 6-1.

Men's Singles, Handicap:

F. Candegabe beat Pratt, 6-4, 6-1.

Singles:

Bonauno beat Chiswell, 6-1, 6-2.

Logan beat Ibbotson, 6-3, 6-3.

Browne beat Taylor, 9-7, 7-5.

The American Tennis Tournament, due to start on Sunday last at the Marmol Lawn Tennis Club, has been postponed until later in the season.

FERNET-BRANCA

Tonic, bitter, appetizer and digestive

HOFER & Co., B. Aires.—Sole Agents

CONCORDIA NEWS

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT].

September 17.

Weather.

After a couple of days of fine weather last week the wind changed on Saturday and brought torrents of rain, the weather continuing extremely disagreeable till Wednesday. The River Uruguay has again risen and the camps are now suffering from too much water, especially up north. A spell of fine weather will be necessary to give the country in general a chance to dry, otherwise sheep will have to do the best they can in long grass. At present it is clearing up, but conditions do not appear very reassuring.

Victoria Park.

On the night of September 15, in the London and River Plate Bank house, the annual general meeting of the Victoria Park committee was held. Mr. S. W. Roberts took the chair in the absence of Mr. McCloud. The Treasurer's report was read and passed. During the election of the new committee, the Chairman made a speech pointing out that in the past, when matters were not very bright-looking, several members of the British community had done yeoman service in keeping the Park going, and suggested the names of the new committee. Mr. Sketch proposed and Mr. Bates seconded that the gentlemen named be elected en bloc. Mr. MacCrea objected, saying he considered that the voting should be done by ballot. To this the Chairman pointed out that he could not see his way to agree to ballot voting, as undesirable persons might be elected on the committee, and he would resign if it was insisted on that ballot voting take place. In view of this statement, Mr. MacCrea withdrew his motion. Mr. Neville upheld Mr. MacCrea, as he could not see the danger in ballot voting, and after further discussion a show of hands was called for, the following being elected as suggested by the Chairman, there being nothing against any of those proposed: — Honorary President, Mr. J. McLoughlin; Honorary Vice-President, Mr. Birdsall; President, Mr. Robert H. F. Stuart; Vice-President, Mr. S. W. Roberts; Treasurer, Mr. D. McCorquodale; Secretary, Mr. E. J. Cain; Substitutes for the committee: Mr. R. MacKenzie and Mr. A. Kelso. During the meeting the Chairman took the opportunity to mention that the Park was entirely free to all the British community. Voluntary subscriptions only were called for, and he expressed the hope that such support would always be forthcoming when necessary. In the near future it is intended to make some improvements, such as the cleaning out of the stream that runs through the grounds, and the doing up of the Pavilion. Questioned by Mr. Walton if the Park could not absorb the Tennis and Cricket or Football Clubs, the Chairman replied that, according to the Statutes, that could not be done.

Warriors All.

To the many friends of those who left long ago for the war, the following details may be of interest:—Dr. Ridgway is at present a lieutenant in the Medical Service, serving in a base hospital in France. For good work done he has been promised his captaincy next month. Mr. Geo. Ridgway, late Locomotive Supt. of the N. E. A. Railway, has obtained a commission in the Mechanical Transport Dept., and is at present in London, where he is on duty from early morning until late at night inspecting machinery, etc. going over to France. Little is known of Lieut. M. K. Smith, who obtained months ago a commission in the R.H.A., beyond the fact that he has been in France for several months. Mr. Fitzgerald, who joined the King Edward's Horse, is also in France, but, due to the Censor, very little is known of him. Mr. Paterson has only recently been sent over to France. He obtained a commission in the Surreys, but changed into a

BETTING ON ZERO

Germany's Financial Gamble

NEW STAKES ON THE BOARD

(Exclusive to THE HERALD)

Dr. Helfferich, Germany's Minister of Finance, is a magnificent exponent of the game of bluff, and his recent opinions cabled to the United States, are quite in accordance with the scheme designed from the outset to sustain German credit. In so far as Germany itself is concerned, that scheme is far from breaking down; from the view-point of the outer world however, it has collapsed already. Germany's financial arrangements remind one very forcibly of a reckless gambler imbued with a firm belief in the eventual success of his own luck. Instead of going all over the cloth in search of lucky numbers, he plays 'en plein' consistently, backing one number in hopes of making the 35-1 coup that shall repair all anterior losses. The only thing that can possibly save Germany from the crushing weight of financial defeat is a heavy war indemnity, and it is on the prospect of that indemnity being obtained that all Germany's war finance has been based.

Self-Supporting Germany.

Dr. Helfferich, and various other financial and economic authorities in Germany lay great stress on the fact that Germany is self-supporting. The mask of starvation and shortage of materials has now been thrown aside. It failed as a means of impressing the neutral nations, and especially the United States, hence is no longer serviceable. Admittedly Germany is self supporting, and likely to be able Cycle Corps. Mr. Cunningham has been sent to the Cameroons. He is a lieutenant in the Royal Engineers. He was sorry he was not given a chance to have a go at the enemy in Flanders. Mr. J. L. Harper left for Nyassaland as Engineer-in-Chief of the Government railway over six weeks ago. Mr. Trevor Bright, who could not get anything to do from the War Office owing to his being over age, tried his luck in Canada, which did not turn out successfully. A month ago he left England to take up the post of Chief Accountant of a railway in the South-East of Spain. Mrs. Walker, who was for over a year in Monte Caseros and left to take up nursing, being on the Military Reserve, is at present in a hospital in the South of England. She tended a wounded soldier who saw the death of Mr. P. E. Tarver. The soldier was only about a hundred metres behind the dug-out where Tarver and ten others were when a shell went right into the middle of them and blew the whole lot to atoms. Mr. Hilyard, who was with Mr. Leslie near Curuzú Cuatía for some time, is at present on a destroyer patrolling the East Coast of England. He remarked that the life is somewhat monotonous, as the enemy takes care to show as little of himself as he dares. The Jack Tars really envy the Tommies in the trenches, as there is something doing on land, whereas the trying vigil on sea one day after another is felt.

Cattle Shows.

The Concordia "Feria" will be held this year on October 2. At the recent show held in Salto (R. O.), some very good prices were obtained. Sr. L. Iguarán bought from Sr. Vidiella a fine Durham bull for $1000; Sr. Vidiella also sold a red Durham bull to Sr. A. Bortagaray for $1,000. Sr. A. Ruete bought from Sr. L. F. Acevedo Hereford bull No. 24 for $620, and Sr. B. Solari sold to Sr. J. M. Amaro Hereford bull No. 19 for $1000. It is calculated that the total sales reached the respectable sum of $160,000, to exist and carry on the war for many months to come. That does not however preclude one from enquiring into the cost of such support. This is admittedly heavy, far heavier than in times of peace. Germany owes to Germans. True, Dr. Helfferich, but she is paying in German paper, and when the war is over that paper will be at a considerable discount outside Germany. In the meantime German firms outside Germany are closing down, or amalgamating with those houses that still have some liquid capital available for re-stocking from other parts of the world. German foreign trade is dead, broadly speaking though certain industries, dyes, drugs, and so forth, are in a state of suspended animation, carrying out some few transactions by the leave of the Allied Governments.

"All Money Belongs to the State."

It may not have occurred to everyone that the above sentence, taken from a recent speech in the Reichstag by the aforementioned Minister of Finance, is not at all reassuring to the average commercial German, foreshadowing as it does something far more absorptive than ever was dreamed of by the Socialist party. And it is significant that in the same speech Dr. Helfferich found it necessary to assure his countrymen that the burden of interest and amortization for the total of German war indebtedness would be borne for many a decade by others, not by Germans. Chi vivrà verrà, the new war credit brings Germany's total expenditure to the sum of £2,000,000,000. There is to be no provision whatsoever made for meeting interest charges on this loan. During the war, says Dr. Helfferich, "we will not increase the gigantic burdens of the people by new taxation."

The New Loan Spent Already.

In the semi-official comments on the third war loan issued by Germany there are also instructive pointers. Leaving out the childish gibes at the British method of advertising, and so forth, it is clear that Germany, imitative as ever, has followed Great Britain in regard to the facilities offered to small investors, as in many other minor points. Even the post office is employed on lines scarce distinguishable from those adopted at home. Where the greatest difference lies is in the application of the funds. For whilst the British loan was to anticipate future expenditure, the German loan will have to meet thirteen and a half milliard of marks which the government already owes to manufacturers and others. This is £675,000,000. Indeed the issue of the loan only confirms the belief that Germany has exhausted all sources of temporary borrowing, whilst the general situation of the credit institutions in that country becomes worse from day to day. It would be untrue to say that Germany is on the verge of a general financial collapse, but failures such as that of the Mittelrheinische Bank, a concern very closely bound up with the industrial interests of Westphalia and capitalized in over a million sterling, are clearly indicative of severe strain in German financial circles. The fact that German reports declare the Mittelrheinische Bank to have been absorbed by the Disconto-gesellschaft interests does not alter the position in the slightest. The rift is there, and without being unduly optimistic one has every right to believe that it is ever-widening, and that nothing, short of a complete German triumph and a heavy war indemnity imposed on all the Allied nations, will serve to mend it.

BOYCOTT GERMANY

Rome, Sept. 20.

The Turin Franco-Italian League has published a report on the best ways whereby to do away with the interchange of commerce with Germany after the war, forming a great commercial union for combatting German trade. The idea has been well received.

B. A.'S ENGLISH-SPEAKING POPULATION

(To the Editor.)

Sir,—We notice in a publication issued by the National City Bank of New York, Vol. 1, No. 10, July, 1915, page 37, the following:—

"Approximately, what is the English-speaking population of your city? Ans. 7,500 English-speaking people including a few hundred American."

We shall esteem it a favour if you would verify these figures and put the editor of the publication right.

Yours, etc.

AGENCIA COATES.

At first glance it would appear that the figures given are certainly incorrect, but this idea may be modified by an explanation of what is meant by the "City." For instance, when we read that the population of London is over seven millions, we understand that what is meant is the population of the metropolitan area of London. The population of the City proper is numbered in thousands, not millions. If by "City," as applied to Buenos Aires, the metropolitan area is meant, then the figures given by the publication referred to are not, in our opinion, correct. The Federal Capital, or the City of Buenos Aires, includes Belgrano, but most of the other suburbs in which numbers of English-speaking people reside are not in the city, though they are in what might be called the metropolitan area. We cannot get the official figure of the last census, but we estimate that the English-speaking population of the metropolitan area of Buenos Aires is over 20,000.—Ed. B. A. H.

"LEGAL" METHODS IN ROSARIO

IRREGULAR POLICE PROCEEDINGS.

Section number one of the police of Rosario are at the moment coming in for some very severe criticism on account of their methods in a case of swindling.

A few days ago a well known feather merchant of the city, Sr. Mucci was the victim of a clever swindle by which he lost several hundreds of dollars. The police arrested the swindler and subsequently set him at liberty and refused to accept the charge made against him by Sr. Mucci.

Now they have re-arrested the man and charged him with larceny on their own account and without the intervention of the feather merchant. As there was no larceny the charge is bound to fail and the man go free.

This illegality and this refusal to accept Sr. Mucci's charges has been so much commented upon that the chief of police has found himself obliged to enquire into the matter with the result that there is much uneasiness felt in police section No. 1.

THE SUGAR HARVEST

RISE IN PRICE ALREADY NOTICED.

From time to time the fullest details have been published concerning this year's sugar harvest. Reports as to the damage done by the weather, details of milling, output and exportation have duly been dealt with. The hopes, which at the time were considered unreasonable and too optimistic, that the poor harvest would not affect the market, owing to stock in hand, do not seem to have been realised. Sugar is rising in price, and it would appear that the Republic may have to face a similar situation to that of 1912. Best quality sugar has already reached 55 cents. per kilo, and efforts are being made to explain how this and the possibility of a further rise has occurred. Beyond the poor harvest and the too optimistic calculations there is no explanation necessary.

There is some agitation in progress to approach the Government with a view of obtaining a reduction on the sugar tax. The outlook is not promising.

Agricultural & Pastoral

CAMP NOTES

(By our Agricultural Editor).

Cattle values have been on the downward grade for the last fortnight, and the quotation is now less than thirty cents a pound. It would be interesting to interview some of those fortunate cattle owners, who refused the extreme quotation for their fat steers. Prices are still very high, though the freezers are not competing as freely as formerly at the cattle market.

Several lots of big Paraguayan steers were recently placed on the market, and realised satisfactory prices. These animals had been shipped to Entre Rios from Asuncion, and had been rested and freshened there previous to being placed on the Buenos Aires market. Experts calculate they would slaughter more than 500 pounds of clean meat, which is a very good weight for this class of animal.

Horse shipments are weekly on a more reduced scale, as prices on the home market, are not, at present remunerative to shippers. This has consequently caused a slump in values, which was not entirely unexpected by those in touch with the horse trade.

The demand for pigs has not assumed the great proportions anticipated by many local native papers, nor has the slaughtering of this class of animal by Armour's made any appreciable rise in values from former quotations. Pigs on the local market are worth 27 cents for good quality maize fed animals, which is a very low value considering the scarcity and high prices ruling for other classes of stock. No little difficulty is being experienced by buyers, who are in quest of suitable weighted pigs for the home markets. Most of the freezing companies at one time or another have interested themselves in endeavouring to handle pigs to advantage, either for exportation as frozen, or as the cured product to be sold on the local market, or for export, though it would appear to be unnecessary to export bacon and hope to get a higher price than is charged the consumer here. I have never seen any statistics dealing with the percentage of pigs seized by the meat inspectors, as unfit for human food, though from personal experience I found that a very high percentage are affected with tuberculosis. This means a big loss to the purchasers of such beasts in their live state; and it means they have to make allowance for the possible seizure of a large number, and they fix the price to provide for reduction of the anticipated gain on the operation.

When at the docks one day last week, I was surprised to see a large consignment of porkers awaiting shipment to Britain, it was said. I am not conversant with the sanitary regulations regarding the introduction of live pigs into Britain, though the shipper of these animals has no doubt got certain assurances, regarding their landing. Given facilities for their importation into Britain, with a fair margin of time for slaughtering at the quarantine port, I consider they would offer good prospects as a profitable shipment, considering they would be easily fed and would increase in weight on the voyage. This is assuming, of course, that the necessary deck space could be obtained at a nominal rate. Now that the horse trade is practically suspended, if shipping pigs alive can be successfully accomplished, I see more probability of a rise in values than through the operations of the freezers.

The trade for imported Shorthorn bulls has experienced a considerable decline in values, since the opening sales, and more than one importer will regret having failed to close with a prospective buyer, when a good margin of profit was offered. It is no doubt very tempting to hold on to a good animal and anticipate a higher price at the public auction. When values are rising, the possibilities at public auction are always favourable; but on the other hand when trade is going back, the public appear to be listless and no coaxing of any auctioneer will draw the bids. The profits for the sales to come are not very encouraging for importers.

Mr. J. Hay, who has so worthily represented Mr. Robert Duncan, in charge of his imported bulls, has booked his passage by the s.s. Avon. The extraordinary success attending the first auction sale of Mr. Duncan's importations, was in no small way due to the painstaking care, and expert knowledge of the man in charge, who showed the bulls in a perfect state of preparation, which is as necessary to a successful sale in this Republic as that the bulls themselves must be of a good stamp. It is well known how imported animals lose flesh in the quarantine depot; and how rigid has to be the preparation for the successful showing of animals in their best bloom within the very short period intervening between their leaving the quarantine station and their being sold. "Jeannie" has mastered all this, and his many friends wish him no less success in the ensuing season's sales, as he has achieved this season.

THE ZEBU-SHORTHORN CROSS

A breed likely to become popular in Paraguay and Matto Grosso, is the Zebu-Shorthorn cross. The chief merits of this cross do not appear on the surface; they lie in the fact that cattle so bred are immune to tick fever, and are therefore suited to those territories where fever is prevalent. A little while ago experiments were made with this cross in Western Australia, and we have at various times referred to the extent zebu cattle are being used in Texas on account of their immunity from tick-conveyed diseases. The information here published was contributed by Mr. A. Despeissis to the Department of Agriculture in Western Australia as follows:

"I was collecting information regarding the purchase and shipment to this State of heavy milking Maltese goats, and while discussing the matter of 'Maltese fever,' which these animals are likely to carry, some interesting experiments, consisting of crossing zebu cattle (Bos indicus), popularly known as 'Brahmans,' with ordinary cattle, were brought to my notice. The object of these experiments was to ascertain whether either zebras themselves or their crosses are immune against 'tick fever,' or 'piroplasmiasis,' which is very severe in portions of Algeria.

"The fact which suggested the experiments was that Madagascar, a French colony heavily stocked with hump-back cattle (a strain of zebu), was free from tick fever, although the tick insects themselves abound there; moreover, in the South African colonies where the humped-back cattle are not bred, European cattle are severely affected by 'red water.'"

"One permanent remedy, nowever, now seems to be suggested as the result of the experiments referred to, i.e., the infusion of zebu blood into ordinary cattle subject to infection.

"The attention of a landed proprietor near Bone having some years ago been drawn to the fact that a couple of zebras he possessed and

Do not wait for the last moment to treat your Horses against the STOMACH BOT
DO IT NOW
USE OUR SPECIAL CAPSULES. Write for Catalogue

CALASTREME & RATTI

Veterinary Establishment,
MAIPU 247, BUENOS AIRES.

their crosses were always in good condition, whilst the cattle round suffered greatly or died from the attacks of cattle ticks, led to a careful investigation being made, with the result that it was found that zebu and their crosses are not so susceptible to the attacks of cattle ticks, and although the micro-parasites of the blood may occasionally be seen on microscopical examination, no ill effects follow.

"This method of fighting piroplasmiasis has for some years been followed with success by the Bank of Algeria on one of their domains. It is also stated that in the tropical plains of Brazil cattle-rearing has of late been taken up again since the accidental infusion a number of years ago of zebu blood into Shorthorn cattle led to the breeding of immune crossbreds. . . .

"The secretion from the sebaceous glands of their skin has a peculiar odour, which seems repugnant to insect life. The hide, though it may be as thin as in European breeds of cattle, appears to be much tougher; the hair is quite short, and does not provide favourable shelter for the development of ticks.

"Young bulls," says Lieut.-Col. Gunn, 'sell from 80 to 150 rupees. Several fine animals have been exported to South America. During 1906 buyers came from Brazil, and about 200 young cattle were taken away to that distant country, where the breed has become very popular.'

"This cross seems to be to the ox what the mule is to the horse; it partakes of the qualities of both parents, but, however, remains fertile.

"To the ox it owes its succulent flesh and humpless back; to the zebu the smaller bone and quick growth, greater activity, hardness, and resistance to tropical diseases.

"The zebu is a tropical ox, and exists there where it has been proved other cattle are carried away by disease. It is not affected either by the damp heat or by prolonged drought, which favour such diseases as piroplasmiasis, but it cannot stand too much cold. It will prove a useful animal for the tropics, while in milder climates, it is not wanted. Three bullocks of the cross-breeding of the Zebu and the Shorthorn are cited as typical examples. They were bred by Mr. W. McKenzie Grant, in Western Australia, and were sold to Messrs. Emanuel Bros. The cattle were sired by a Derrimut Shorthorn bull, the dam being a Brahman cow, a little hump-backed animal weighing 350 lbs. or so dressed, and standing eight or nine hands, and which had for many years occupied an exhibit pen at the Zoological Gardens, South Perth. The size of the three beasts was a source of wonderment to a large gathering of stock breeders and dealers. The respective live weights of the trio were as follows:—2240 lbs. (six years old), 1840 lbs. (five years old), and 1750 lbs. (four years old). They were very quiet. The dressed weight of the two smallest was 1036 and 1026 lbs. respectively, that of the heaviest 1270 lbs.; the hides about 90 lbs. green. The beef the butchers pronounced A1; 2 to 3 in. of fat all over the carcass; not

FIGHTING THE LOCUST

GOVERNMENT WORKS OF DEFENCE.

Information which has been received in the Department of Agricultural Defence concerning the work in progress against the invasion of the locust states that it is proceeding briskly and with the same good results as last year. The sectional agricultural commissioners with the co-operation of the honorary local delegates have localised all the places where the pest has appeared. The latest telegrams from Santa Fe, Cordoba, Entre Rios and Corrientes state that the late rains and lowered temperature has done much to hinder the advance of the locust. The rains have done immense good and have quite neutralised any damage that had already been received to flax and to wheat, and has greatly favoured a new and strong germination of the seed.

The barrier which is being erected round the maize plantations will be completed in the first few days of October. The cost of this work is being borne by the colonists at the rate of 2 cents per metre.

In Rafaela, Rufino, Rosario, San Francisco, Cordoba and Pergamino work is actively proceeding on the erection of 23,000,000 metres of zinc barrier which the Agricultural Defence committee has on hand.

This evening Sr. Varona, the sub-inspector general of this body will leave the capital to inspect the work. Dr. Calderon, the Minister, Sr. Equila the Director, and Sr. Badano the Inspector General of Agriculture, have perfect confidence in the works of defence which they are ordering with energy. The agriculturalists in the invaded territory are co-operating with the government whose work they are regarding with enthusiasm.

DR. ORTIZ RESTING

MINISTER TO TAKE A HOLIDAY.

Dr. Ortiz, Minister of Interior, is about to take a rest from his official duties and his portfolio will for a time be held by Dr. Murature in addition to his own, although in the lobbies of Congress it is alleged that he is actually resigning on account of ill health.

He will go to Bella Vista for a short time to recuperate.

very much kidney and eaul fat.

"I have purposely dilated on this important discovery, which affects the 600,000 head of cattle we have in the north and north-west, and particularly the half-million head known to be already in the Kimberleys. Indeed, this matter is one which affects the whole of the tropics, where the cattle tick decimates the herds."

If this method of combating the plague is found successful (as it appears to have been in countries such as Brazil and Uruguay, its value to Australia and other tropical zones would be enormous.

PLEA FOR THE COLONIST

C.H.N.G. REPLIES TO HIS CRITICS

(To the Editor).

Sir.—It seems that there was a mistake in my letter to your paper, through presumably a misprint in the table of equivalents, as both Mr. Liverpooldian and Mr. R. Rois give the Quarter (English) at the same figure of 480 lbs. though I make that to be 217.76, a small item. Would your correspondent Mr. Liverpooldian, who seems to be well up in matters of export, kindly give the figures for exportation of maize on the basis of 4.45 put in puerto Rosario, and selling in England at 31/4 per quarter. According to his figures, the exporter's loss is $0.16 per quintal plus expenses, calculating on the above figures. Will he also comment on maize selling in Italy at 34 to 35 francs or $15.90 paper; this figure was given to me to-day by a local buyer, and as maize is sold by the quintal in Italy, it is easier to calculate. At this figure, it seems that this exporter makes $6.68 taking the freight at 65s. per ton, even more than in my estimate which is wrong as regards the British quarter. In answering F.M.B. "Every man is out to do the best he can for himself"; he should have added "as long as he can get the best cleanly and with justice to others." The answers to his questions are the following as far as an average can be struck: The rental is generally 28 per cent to 30 per cent "troja y parva," and in a good many cases the land is rented by the colonist at $25 per square. Contracts for three to five years; the ground to be sown with cereals. The colonists get the thrasher that suits them best, as it is generally the owner of the thrasher that buys the maize. There are no taxes except $5 for a sulky, and $8 for a chata or waggon, paying these if he takes them into the town, these sums being for a year; the maize buyer or colonist paying freight to carters for the necessary cartage. The colonists can do what they like with the land once the crop is harvested, and they are allowed as many pigs, etc., as they can keep, providing they cultivate the land in due season; in some cases they are restricted to three or four for their own consumption, and for other animals the same. In 50 per cent of cases the land is fenced, and in the rest circled with barbed wire. Very few colonists are restricted to a given almacén, though in some cases it is done indirectly by means of valés given by the local buyer for the crop, but this the colonist need not accept, as there are buyers who pay cash, and even lend money in advance without any security but the coming crop, the colonist selling his crop where he cares to and paying interest. Of course the silent undertaking is that he sells to the lender. There are no "colonizadores"; the colonists generally renting from owners; at the same time there are no big camps, or rather the majority of camps round Casalegno are not more than 1000 to 1500 squares, and these can be counted on the fingers. The figures given in THE HERALD on August 4, are based on my own colonists, who pay 24 per cent the first year, and 25 per cent for the remaining four; crop in troja, or parva; and colonists, any number of them, offer me 30 per cent to 32 per cent as the land is fresh and well manured, having been some time under alfalfa. The only conditions are that the land must be cross ploughed every year, and pigs must be kept shut in. With these details, the figures above mentioned can be appreciated. F.M.B. ends with a reference to the broker. Certainly the broker should make his living, but in a different manner, if the Government would take up some scheme as proposed in my last letter to your valuable paper; the Government

Luis Costantini

Agriculturist & Seedsman

TREES, AGRICULTURAL, AND HORTICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS.

WE OFFER OUR LARGE STOCK OF FRUIT, FOREST AND ORNAMENTAL TREES AT VERY MODERATE PRICES.

ASK FOR OUR CATALOGUES.

Seeds from the well-known firms of:—

VALMORIN, ANDRIEUX AND CO., OF PARIS.

CHARLES SHARPE AND CO., OF SLEAFORD.

Also FROM OUR SPECIAL PLANTERS IN ITALY.

Implements for Agriculture and Horticulture from the celebrated firms of:—

C. F. SKELTON AND CO., OF SHEFFIELD; and

DITTMAR FRERES, BUENOS AIRES.

HEAD OFFICE AND WAREHOUSE AT RIVADAVIA 6717 to 25.

U. T. 919 FLORES.

OFFICES AND GARDENS AT RIVADAVIA 5956.

U.T. 196 FLORES.

LARGE GARDENS IN LUJAN, F.C.O.

Cabaña 'Lujan' y 'Las Hermanas'

= DE =

R. HERRERA VEGAS É HIJOS

LUJAN, F.C.S.

J. M. GUTIERREZ, F.C.S.

Carneros Lincoln y Oxford Down.

Toros Hereford y Durham. :: ::

FLORIDA 832 - BUENOS AIRES

CHILIAN BOUNDARIES

QUESTION TO BE DISCUSSED BY SENATE.

The committee for the consideration of constitutional affairs formed by certain Senators of the Chamber and consisting of Messrs. Gonzalez, Olachea, Alcorta and Irigoyen have presented a note to the Executive on the question of the boundaries between Argentina and Chili.

A covenant was signed on July 28 last between the Chilean representative, Dr. Larrain, and the Minister of Foreign Affairs, Dr. Murature, by which it was agreed that the British Government should act as arbitrator in deciding to whom belonged the Picton Isles, Nueva and Lenox and others cited in the document.

This arrangement has resolved the only point of controversy existing between Chili and the Argentine. To-day the Chamber of Senators discuss the matter.

would need brokers; but, by working on a much bigger scale, their percentage would be cheaper to each colonist, and they themselves make more profit. If Mr. F.M.B. cares to verify the figures given, I shall be pleased to receive him any Saturday to Sunday, and he can ask the colonists round all the questions he cares to. With the greatest interest, the comments by Messrs. Liverpooldian or Roberto Rois re the exportation expenses etc. on maize, will be awaited, if one of them will be so kind to furnish the information.

Yours, etc.

C. H. N. G.

Casalegno, Sept. 9.

RAILWAY TARIFFS

THE 10 PER CENT INCREASE

COMMONSENSE AND EQUITY

Robbing a railway, or defrauding the customs authorities, is in the eyes of many people hardly a crime, being classed by them among the venial offences that only matter if found out. Hence the popular outcry against the 10 o/o tariff increase for goods and passengers which the Argentine railways are about to impose finds an abundance of support among the unthinking members of the community. Yet if governmental pressure, aided by popular excesses, is able to force the recision of the proposed increases, then it may be said very bluntly, but with small fear of contradiction, that the days of railway expansion, and all that this phrase implies, are over for a long time to come, in so far as the Argentine Republic is concerned. The capitalist from Europe who has hitherto provided the means for opening up Argentina's vast expanse of arable or pastoral land has first and foremost invested his funds in railway development, and on the continued success and profitable exploitation of the iron road rests the question as to whether he shall go further and turn money into mortgages, or property, or cattle, or whether, owing to the steadily dwindling returns on railway shares, he shall look elsewhere for safe, and profitable, investment.

Now it cannot be denied that practically all the capital invested in Argentine rails is foreign. The Argentine leaves such stock severely alone. Why is this the case? Simply and solely because the return is neither as rapid nor as large as he cares to see. There are lines, such as the Southern, the Western, and the Central Argentine, which have paid up to the 7 o/o limit for years, but the average for 1912 and 1913, spread over all the Argentine lines was 4 1/2 o/o, whilst last year it fell to 2 1/2 o/o, in round numbers. Small wonder if the London financial press, studying the returns of the various companies, declares that the actual market quotations for Argentine railway stocks are not depreciated, but on the contrary represent more or less an equitable valuation at the present time. This opinion moreover is based on conclusions arrived at after taking existing Argentine legislation on the subject of railways as being permanent, including the Mitre law with its 3 o/o levy on nett returns as a set off to freedom from all other taxation. When one recollects that the judicial reading of this measure has saddled the companies with millions of unforeseen charges, including municipal taxes and the new pension scheme; when moreover one realises that pressure is being brought to bear on the companies to refrain from exercising their right to raise tariffs when the profits fall below a certain percentage, one can only wonder at the shortsighted action of those who would very literally kill the goose that lays the golden eggs. It is not necessary to enumerate at this time of day what the railway has done for Argentina; the railway system that owes practically the whole of its efficiency to foreign capital and foreign management. Ghastly failure has ever attended native attempts at railway enterprise, whether one takes the existing state lines as an example or the more recent cases of the Rosario Puerto Belgrano line, or that famous white elephant, the Meridiano V route. Those who have any knowledge of the inner working of the great British lines in this Republic know how serious the position is to-day, and one can only hope that the powers that be will be guided by justice and commonsense in this matter of the tariffs. If on the contrary questions of political expediency are allowed to over-ride the very straightforward case of the companies, their shareholders may be the immediate sufferers but their losses will be as a bucket in the ocean when compared to what the Argentine Republic and its inhabitants stand to lose by such shortsighted policy.

CAMPAIGN AGAINST THE COCHINEAL

Yesterday the Ministry of Agriculture received notices from Tucuman in which an account was given of the excellent results recently obtained in the campaign against the attack of the cochineal spider on the mandarin. Thousands of trees have been treated by the process, and in each case success has been secured.

The Government report says that 2415 infected trees have been cured in the province alone, while on the plantations of Dr. Araoz 200, Meliton Camano 1400, De la Croix 1400, Eusebio Bousqman 500, José Gonzalez 750, and Nougues Bros. 460. Trees amongst a great number of other plantations in smaller quantities have been successfully treated.

SUPPRESSING THE FACTS

DOUBTFUL INNOVATION BY HEALTH AUTHORITIES

The authorities of the Asistencia Publica and the heads of the Sanitary Department have decided to introduce an innovation in their weekly bulletin published, concerning the recording of infectious diseases. This innovation consists in the suppression of the record of infectious cases notified.

All that the official record now gives is a statement of deaths and a comparison with deaths occurring in the equivalent week of the preceding year.

This determination to suppress these figures is not one likely to inspire public confidence, nor is it one that should be adopted under any circumstances, and is bound to be regarded with suspicion, even if with-

Our Point of View: "Herald" Leading Articles of the Week.

INSULTING THE NATION

FRIDAY, September 17, 1915.

Earl Kitchener has delivered his eagerly awaited pronouncement to the House of Lords; Mr. Asquith has made his long expected statement to the House of Commons; and the nation now knows—what? The answer is simple. Britain and the world know precisely as much as they knew before either speech was delivered, and, with the exception of the statement as to the progress of recruiting, they have not been furnished with any information that was not accessible to everyone many weeks ago.

If we were to pretend that either oration was great, that it was important, or that it was inspiring, we should be guilty of gross insincerity. Neither speech merited one of these encomiums, and both were insulting to the intelligence of the public. It would, of course, be idle to pretend that the Premier and the War Minister have departed from convention. Each re-affirmed the solidity of the Allies; both paid handsome tributes to Russia's skilful retreat in Poland; and, once again, confidence in the ultimate defeat of Germany was expressed. But to this sort of patriotic flag-waving there is no end. Every citizen of the Empire believed that the war would be fought to a successful issue; all knew that Prussian militarism could not be allowed to triumph; and no one for a single moment imagined that the British people would not be prepared to make every possible sacrifice to ensure victory, cost what it might.

Had the situation been wholly favourable to the cause of the Allies and had the German defences been breaking down, inspiring statements and utterance of patriotic platitudes would have been excusable and desirable, for there would have been little else on which the Premier could have spoken. But to-day only a deliberate disregard for the necessities of the occasion can have led Mr. Asquith to adopt the attitude that he has adopted during this week. For Earl Kitchener there is the excuse that he is a working organiser and that deeds rather than speech-making occupy his time; moreover, he could not be expected to say those things that the Premier had decided to leave unsaid.

No one, of course, for a moment expected or desired that Mr. Asquith should furnish information that might be of value to the enemy; least of all could it be wished that he should take any step that might cause unnecessary dissension in the family circle. Admitting this, we would at the same time suggest that the Premier, in going as far as he did, left himself open to serious criticism. His speech contains samples of all the old verbiage, vacillation, and evasion to which the country has been compelled to submit for many months. Admittedly, he told us that 3,000,000 men had responded to the call for recruits. This news is gratifying and inspiring. The Premier then stated that there had been a falling off in recruiting during the past month; furthermore, Lord Kitchener remarked that the problem of how to provide the necessary reserves for his great army was engaging attention.

The first query that enters the average mind is: "What is to be done to counteract the decline in recruiting, and how are the necessary reserves to be provided?" It is on these points that the Premier was expected to make a pronouncement and it is his omission to do so that calls for censure. If the Government had decided to maintain an attitude of secrecy, why were its members not effectually muzzled? If Lord Selborne—a Member of the Cabinet—was authorised to say that the response to the call to the colours had been unequal and that women would replace agricultural workers next year, why did not the Premier amplify the statement by giving fuller information? If Mr. Lloyd George was empowered to allege that conditions were unsatisfactory and that the workers would have to do more in order to end the war successfully, why did not the Premier say specifically what those workers would be called upon to do?

Regrettable though it be, the fact remains that the Government is misgoverning the people to-day in just the same way that its predecessors did during the first months of the war. Possessing no real and courageous leader, it is like a collection of vessels without rudders—all drifting in different directions and in no way responsive to the helm. Every member of the Ministry appears to have been granted a roving commission; pessimism and optimism, praise and censure, persuasion and verbal-coercion, are doled out at will. To attempt to collate the statements of ministers and therefrom to glean a clear conception of what the situation really is savours of the impossible. A studied summing-up could have been delivered by Mr. Asquith, and it was from him that we expected it on Wednesday; but he disappointed. Platitudes, and little else, form the only provender for the public known to Britain's rulers. How, then, can those rulers expect the public to regard the situation in all seriousness, and how can final victory be achieved at the least possible cost? The day of awakening is at hand, and the muddle-through policy of Britain's mis-Government will not be readily forgotten by the mass of the electorate. Unfortunately, incompetence at Westminster is meanwhile costing the nation heavily in money and lives.

THE CALL FOR REPRISALS

SATURDAY, September 18, 1915.

If that which is bad could ever be termed a good thing, then we would say that the Zeppelin raids of last week were the most satisfactory of the series. In taking this view we do not do so because we believe that London should have been raided or that we are in sympathy with any policy of cold-blooded murder. Our attitude is based on the belief that whereas murders in provincial England would have, and indeed have been purely local in effect, the wanton destruction of life in the Metropolis has had an unprecedented effect on public opinion and that the impression created will have far reaching results in the strengthening of the determination of the British people to force the war to a successful termination.

The immediate results of the raid are now apparent. Not only has there been the anticipated stimulus to recruiting, but the great London dailies are calling for reprisals. This call is increasing in volume from day to-day and as a result a great protest meeting is to be held in the Capital of the Empire.

Had any responsible organ of public opinion suggested reprisals in the early days of the war, it would have been charged with adopting an un-British attitude and the suggestion that all that is foul should be left for the Germans to practice. War, terrible though it be, was regarded as a great game in which every participant should play according to well-defined rules. That was not the German conception of things, and now, even though reluctantly, we are compelled to meet the Kaiser's subjects with weapons just as deadly as they themselves employ. If murder is to be part of modern warfare, then that murder must not be one-sided; if every law of humanity is to be disregarded, then it must not be so only

THE POLITICAL "PLOT"

SUNDAY, September 19, 1915.

Politically, the past week has been one of the most momentous since the commencement of the war. On Monday The Globe urged the British people to force the Government into a state of activity; Mr. Asquith followed with his inept statement on the situation generally; the Commons vigorously debated Conscription; and at the end of a crowded week comes the announcement that a sensation has been caused by the discovery of a plot within the Cabinet to precipitate a General Election and oust the present Government. The credit for the discovery belongs to the London Daily News, which is regarded as the principal Liberal organ in the Metropolis. According to this journal, the younger and more virile members of the Ministry are determined to resign should the Government not adopt Conscription. Such a step would, of course, compel Mr. Asquith to hand his resignation to the King, and, unless the unexpected happened, an appeal to the country would be inevitable. The rebellious group responsible for this at the expense of Britons. "Frightfulness" has been introduced by Germany; let her, then, be repaid in "frightfulness."

This view would have been defensible even had there been any probability of the new conditions being maintained to the end of the war; but we believe that there need be no fears on that count. From the early days of August, 1914, when the territory of Belgium was violated and non-combatants were butchered by the hundred, Germany has possessed the advantage of being able to instil terror into the hearts of the defenceless without fear of reprisal. That immunity from unlawful attack has made her audacious. From rapine in Belgium she passed to child-murder at Scarborough; from poisoning in Flanders she passed to bomb-throwing on country villagers and defenceless townspeople. She has proved time and again that no crime, however brutal, however appalling, is beyond her possible sphere of activity. In effect, the German has announced to civilisation that he is something less than a man, let him therefore be visited with the consequences of his own acts, if only as a deterrent.

We sincerely believe that the British raids on undefended German cities, now openly advocated by the London Press, would be an excellent preventive measure. Only immunity from reprisals has allowed Germany to pursue without fear her policy of wilful and wholesale murder. Germans resident in their own country have been allowed to gloat over the massacre of the innocent in other countries, they have distorted Lusitania crimes and Zeppelin raids into "victories," and to-day they undoubtedly support the Government which plans and orders the execution of such attacks. The pressure of public opinion can be unpleasant as well as stimulating, and retaliatory measures against cities within easy reach of the French frontier would speedily lead to a cry for the cessation of illegal aerial warfare. Innocent people would necessarily suffer, but it is no part of the Briton's duty to sympathise with the relatives of his enemy while that enemy is endeavouring to bring sorrow into the Briton's own household. Too long have many Englishmen been willing to spare a tear for any people but their own.

The matter has now become one of self-preservation. It is to save the lives of the women and children resident in Britain that strong measures must be adopted against Germany. No longer can she be allowed to murder with impunity. Fear must be struck into her own heart. Then, and then only, will she be prepared to cease a policy that is not only valueless from a military point of view, but is contrary to the usages of civilised warfare.

policy include Mr. Winston Churchill, Mr. Bonar Law, Sir Edward Carson, Lord Curzon, and—most important of all—Mr. Lloyd George.

There is nothing reprehensible about the scheme of Britain's men of action to remove the slumberers from Downing Street, and, indeed, only the Daily News and those who place party before the State can regard the plan as surprising. We have already expressed our opinion of Mr. Asquith's recent speech, in which he succeeded brilliantly in saying nothing. In some quarters it was reported that the oration had created a favourable impression. Probably it did; but only upon those who think as Mr. Asquith thinks, or who do not think at all. It is a regrettable fact that the Premier has now grown too old to be of utility to the Empire in a time of grave crisis. The extreme gravity of the situation has been clearly stated to the public by Mr. Winston Churchill, who, in a remarkable and distinctly pessimistic utterance, has told the nation plainly that if the war is to be waged to a successful conclusion, the whole of the national resources must be thrown into the scales. The strange feature of the whole deplorable affair, however, is that Mr. Asquith should have endeavoured to please the people with a series of meaningless platitudes, and that immediately afterwards Mr. Churchill should have been despatched to sound the warning note and to tell the truth about failure all along the line.

Coming at the same time as the announcement by the Daily News, the speech by Mr. Churchill is significant. It suggests that the rumoured "plot" does exist, and that the really useful men in the Cabinet are determined to give a clear lead to the nation. The most remarkable, yet at the same time most satisfactory, feature of the upheaval is the desertion of Mr. Lloyd George to the ranks of the conscriptionists. That he should be associated with the rebellious minority makes it all the more obvious that there is deep cause for the desire to force Mr. Asquith and his supporters from office. We believe that cause to be nothing less than the muddle which has characterised the Government's conduct of the war from the outbreak of hostilities. Mr. Lloyd George is the one man of the Cabinet who has risen above the pitiable standard of pre-war party politics, and has shown some statesmanship in the national crisis. He has proved himself to be a man of action, of indefatigable energy and of robust courage. He has not dealt in platitudes, but has told the nation plainly what lies before it. This is what is needed. Any politician can make speeches, exhorting the people to be of good heart, to pin their faith blindly on Britain's victory, to trust the Government implicitly, and to believe that everything is right.

The one unfortunate feature of the crisis is that the United Kingdom should be faced with a General Election at the present time. Indulgence in elections at a period of national danger savours somewhat of fiddling while Rome is burning. Nevertheless, the political system of Britain leaves the malcontents no option, if the Cabinet refuses to adopt their views; and the result is that the nation has to submit either to have its affairs muddled by incompetent Ministers or to face a brief political revolution which will oust those incompetents from office.

No statement has yet been made by any of the Ministers at whom the Daily News charges are levelled, but there appears to be—superficially at any rate—little reason to doubt the authenticity of the allegations made. Not even the splendid maunderings of the Hide-the-truth-press or the blessed half-truths of foreign correspondents in London can hide the fact that a change is necessary. If the minority have the courage to go forward with their programme, they will meet with the support of every Briton who has the Empire's interests at heart.

NOW—OR NEVER?

TUESDAY, September 21, 1915.

Despite the optimistic assurance of M. Pashies, the Serbian Premier, it would be foolish to disguise the fact that the Balkans will in all probability furnish the next great theatre of war. Whether or not the area involved will be extensive, or whether it will be confined to Serbia is a question that is not yet settled; and, whereas, a few months ago, the whole of the indications were that the Central Empires would be confronted by a united group of States, to-day the situation is one of plot and counter-plot. So much so, indeed, that it is difficult to say what will be the final grouping of the Balkan nations, and whether the task of the Teutons will be simple or insurmountable.

The great problem at the present moment is provided by Bulgaria. Has King Ferdinand concluded the much-heralded treaty with the Turks? Will the bond formed by such a treaty, if and when concluded, be sufficient to restrain Bulgaria from attacking the Ottoman Empire? Upon the answers furnished to these questions depends the future of the Dardanelles operations and the ability of Russia to carry on the war for an indefinite period.

It would be unwise to place too much reliance in the Berlin-inspired statements to the effect that a Turco-Bulgarian rapprochement has been effected; it would be still more foolish to believe, in the absence of conclusive evidence, that the Bulgars will fall upon Serbia. For many days we have been insistently told that Turkey has ceded the territory demanded by King Ferdinand as the price of neutrality. Just as frequently has the statement been denied. The probability is that Bulgaria's ruler is engaged in the gigantic and dangerous pastime which has for years been his one obsession. Ferdinand sincerely believes that he is a skilful diplomat, and, despite the fatal experiments which led to the second Balkan War, it is undeniable that he is still prepared to pit his brains, and those of his counsellors, against the mental skill of the diplomats of both camps. If he can obtain the formal annexation of a portion of Turkey, then he will still be at liberty to negotiate with the Quadruple Entente and with the Central Empires. His principal plan is to upbuild a Greater Bulgaria, and there would appear to be little doubt that the moment when he can do so has now arrived.

Bulgarian support would be invaluable to the Austro-German cause, especially if a continued Russian retreat compelled Rumania to follow the path of an on-looker. The value to the Allies of a league of the whole of the Balkan States is apparent. Not only would the downfall of the Turkish Empire be a matter of weeks, but it would be possible to strike a blow at the heart of Austria-Hungary.

Everything, then, hinges upon Bulgaria; and not even the confidence of Serbia's Premier is sufficient to disguise the fact that the immediate future of the little Balkan kingdom is dependent upon the decision arrived at by King Ferdinand and his Ministers. Even though the Bulgars adopted an attitude of neutrality similar to that of Luxembourg, the effect on the general situation would be serious. The crushing of Serbia could not be a lengthy process and the arrival of Teuton men and munitions on the Gallipoli Peninsula would effectually destroy any hopes the Allies might have of reaching Constantinople in the near future.

This view of the impregnability of the Dardanelles is not based upon any unduly pessimistic outlook on the progress of the campaign in the Near East. Nearly a year has elapsed since we emphasised a point that has since been confirmed by almost every knowledgeable man, from General Hamilton downward; viz; that an unaided fleet was useless and that Constantinople could only be taken by an expeditionary force. To-day we clearly see, also,

FACING THE INEVITABLE

WEDNESDAY, September 22, 1915.

There is a text for the whole of the British Nation, and an incentive to the waverers in the British Cabinet to do their duty, in the speech made in Paris by Mr. John Hodge M.P., a Labour member. Speaking presumably on behalf of the working men of Britain, Mr. Hodge said:—"We wish to beat the Germans by voluntary effort, but if the Government thinks it necessary that we have conscription, we shall have it." Linking this statement with one made by Mr. Lloyd George, in which the Minister asserted his belief that the country would not oppose conscription, and that in any case opposition would not come from the working classes, and we are provided with complete confirmation of our own opinion, expressed weeks ago, that the Nation can really be relied upon to make any sacrifice to assure victory, and that all that is wrong is that the Cabinet is afraid to lead the Nation.

It is quite clear, and has been clear for a long time, that the British Government knows that conscription must come, but up to the moment it has not had the courage to say so definitely, and to act accordingly. Apparently the old fear prevails that the British people would revolt, or take panic, were anything so drastic as conscription, suddenly introduced. Did we not know that many members of the British Government are entire strangers to the real sentiment of the people they govern, this attitude would be a perpetual source of mystery to us. It is a striking fact that the few men in the Cabinet who have always been in favour of giving the people the truth through their newspapers, of trusting the Nation to the fullest extent, and who to-day are openly urging conscription, are the men like Mr. Lloyd George who have come from the people, are of the people, and know and trust the people. These men know that in a moment like the present the mass of the people are prepared to follow wherever they are led, provided the lead means action, and the leaders themselves know whither they are leading.

We have said a dozen times that the Nation has merely to be told that conscription is necessary for it to answer "Then give us conscription." Apparently the Government cannot understand this spirit, and so it wavers and falters, and finally founders into a slough of indecision. We believe in conscription as necessary for the present crisis. It does not matter, however, whether we believe in it, or whether we do not. Neither does it matter whether the British that the difficulties which have confronted the Allied armies on the Peninsula during the last five months have proved conclusively that no body of men which could at present be spared would be sufficient to overcome the Turkish resistance were the Sultan's troops re-inforced by the Teuton armies.

The problem appears to us to be one of urgency. If the men at present in the Dardanelles area are insufficient to make rapid progress to Constantinople, the hopes of the Quadruple Entente must be centred on the reconstitution of the Balkan League and an immediate attack on Turkey from the north. Once Constantinople fell into the hands of the Allies, the position of Russia would be enormously improved and a new period would automatically confront the Central Empires. On the other hand, if the threatened thrust through Serbia to Constantinople be carried out by the Austro-German armies, the war must be prolonged, an already serious situation would become increasingly grave, and the crushing of Germany a task that might involve the expenditure of the last possible sovereign and the spilling of every available drop of blood. The Allies must determine the question now; delay is distinctly dangerous.

BRITAIN'S BURDENSOME BUDGET

THURSDAY, September 23, 1915.

It is customary for partisans to acclaim every Chancellor of the Exchequer a "great statesman" when he introduces his first Budget. The awakening generally follows and the formerly "great" is abused throughout the country. This will probably be the fate of Mr. Reginald McKenna, whose War Budget was presented to the House of Commons on Tuesday. Mr. McKenna, however, deserves more than a little criticism, while, by no stretch of imagination can he be justly termed "great." Mr. McKenna was probably faced by the most difficult problem that ever confronted a British Finance Minister. It is also possible that he has done his best to solve that problem. But the best is a poor one.

With the proposed taxation of war profits no reasonable man will quarrel. We have more than once pointed out that it was unfair to the nation that although Britain's sea-power had enabled her to continue her sea-borne commerce without serious interruption, an army of profit-mongers had seized the opportunity to enhance the prices of commodities to such an extent that the inhabitants of the British Isles were practically in the position of residents in a besieged city. The case of the coal-owners, also, is too well known to need repetition. Of course, it is stated that on the London Stock Exchange some apprehension exists as to the advisability of the taxation of war profits. That was to be expected, for the cries of "ruining the country" and "stopping investment" were heard when Mr. Lloyd George decided to tax the wealthy instead of the poverty-stricken. The views of the Stock Exchange on meapeople in the majority are favourable to it or are not. The point is that the British people will accept anything, no matter how unpalatable it may be in principle, provided it means victory. It is for the Government to make up its mind whether conscription be necessary. When it has made up its mind then its plain duty is to say so, and without further ado proceed to apply conscription.

The British people, at least those of them who have consistently opposed compulsory military service in time of peace, are in much the same position as the patient who is faced with the prospect of undergoing a surgical operation which he may not fancy or to the performance of which he may have some rooted conscientious objection, just as some people conscientiously object to vaccination. If the operation be necessary to save his life, the sensible man will waive his objections and submit himself to the surgeon. He will submit all the more readily if the surgeon be emphatic and confident, but he will probably find a new surgeon if the man who tells him the operation is essential merely reiterates that opinion and then loses his nerve and delays the operation.

That is what the British Cabinet is doing. Most of its members have for months been telling the British people that conscription stares them in the face, and that it will be enforced unless the military situation improves. The answer all along has been that which Mr. Hodge has indicated, "If the Government says conscription is necessary, let us have conscription." But the Government has not shown itself possessed even of the nerve to say what is necessary though conscription has been threatened continually. The Government has shown by its changeable conduct either that conscription is not so essential or if it be, that the Cabinet has not the nerve to carry it out. The procrastination is dangerous, alike to the Government and to the Nation. Well might every patriot say, in regard to conscription, with Shakespeare, "If it were well that 'twere done, then 'twere well that it were done quickly."

asures affecting the mass of the people are rarely of value.

While it will be readily admitted that the proposed increased duty on tobacco is entirely justifiable, the question naturally arises: Why were beer, wines and spirits omitted? Not many weeks ago we were informed that King George had decided not to consume alcoholic liquor for the duration of the war; the British working men were alleged to be incapable of attending to the national needs because they were drink-sodden; industrial troubles were said to be due to drink; in fact, every shortcoming in Britain that might have delayed the "great offensive" was laid at the door of excessive indulgence in alcohol. The remedy was said to lie in partial or complete prohibition, and Mr. Lloyd George was to have framed the anti-liquor bill. As is well known, the strength of the liquor interests was too great even for Mr. Lloyd George and the matter was shelved. It was, however, anticipated that when the question of paying for the war became an acute one, the liquor trade would be called upon to make good a large portion of the surplus. This would have been a justifiable step, for liquor is a luxury; moreover in times of national stress it is an evil. There were thus two sound reasons for increased taxation. Mr. McKenna has ignored them. Why?

The deplorable feature of the Budget is that it is totally lacking in justice or imagination. While liquor is unburdened, a colossal increase is levied on sugar; tea and coffee are heavily taxed; and the wretched clerk with £130 a year is called upon to pay income tax. Were it not that we are compelled to assume that Mr. McKenna has endeavoured to present a reasonable Budget, we might be excused for believing that his financial measure had been designed expressly for the purpose of throwing an inexcusably heavy burden on the shoulders of those who are unable to pay and that he had deliberately sought to create discontent.

When a nation is called upon for that additional effort which brings victory it is essential that such a nation should be happy and contented. Everyone should pay for the war, but there should be no inequalities in the distribution of the burden. These are points that ought to have been obvious to Mr. McKenna. Apparently, they have escaped his notice. Food prices have already increased to an alarming extent in Great Britain; the domestic Budget provides a problem not easily solved by the housewife from week to week, and, even in the natural course of events, that problem would grow increasingly difficult as the war became more prolonged. The new financial measure, however, will precipitate the severe crisis which would inevitably be felt in the poorer homes, and the burden will, in time, become almost insufferable.

We dislike the mantle of gloomy prophecy, but we fear that the ill-conceived and unjust provisions of Mr. McKenna's unstatesmanlike effort will bring a large harvest of discontent and will make the Government's task of pursuing, unhampered, the path to victory a far from happy one.

BOGUS ROBBERY AT MONTEVIDEO

JEWELLER'S SELF INFLICTED BITES.

A police report from Montevideo relates that Don Andrés Continé, a jeweller, was assaulted, robbed and bitten on his arrival home on Monday night. He was robbed it appeared of a large sum, a quantity of jewels and other valuables. Unfortunately it has since transpired that he was in great money difficulties inasmuch that he contemplated suicide. The robbery was counterfeit and the bites apparently a little local colour to give conviction to the narrative.

It is instructive to observe that in later editions, the unfortunate jeweller is no longer Don, but plain Andrés Continé, defaulter.

Public Opinion as expressed in the Argentine Press.

NATIONALITY AND NATURALIZATION

(La Prensa.—September 16).

In his address to the Faculty of Law, Dr. Zeballos dealt at some length, says La Prensa, with the situation of the large number of foreigners who occupy governmental posts, ranging, according to the speaker, from that of the Minister of Foreign Affairs to humble servants of the Municipality. He pointed out that under the Argentine Constitution, foreigners were eligible for all posts with the exception of a few high political offices, showed how general was their employment, and bore witness to the fact that with very few exceptions they had proved worthy servants of the state. Then going on to compare European legislation, and remarking that the major portion of the foreign employees in the Argentine government service were Italians, Spaniards, or Uruguayans, he observed that very few of the latter were aware that in accordance with Uruguayan legislation, the acceptance of foreign government employment meant that they had lost, ipso facto, their Uruguayan citizenship.

The attention paid by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs to diplomatic intervention on behalf of such persons Dr. Zeballos stigmatised as a mistake, saying that the Argentine government ought to declare them as having automatically become Argentine by employment and domicile. He also laid stress on the fact that such automatic naturalization would bring in to the Argentine family some 800,000 persons, the flower of her immigrants, people of property and position. Such individuals might be classified under two heads; those who in accordance with the laws of their natal land had lost their nationality, and those who, though they may legally retain their original nationality, have in fact become identified with this country. In the first case the procedure would be automatic, whilst in the second, a tacit option of a year should be given in order that those concerned may take steps to maintain their original nationality, neglect to do so within this period implying their immediate incorporation as Argentines.

CANCELLING THE LEGATION BONDS

(La Nación.—September 16).

Law 9481, which suspended the normal working of the Caja de Conversión, has, says La Nación, brought in its train many unforeseen complications in connection with circulation and the exchanges. Designed, conjointly with Law 9483, to prevent the export of metallic currency, or private hoarding, events have proved these measures to be unnecessary, and even retro-active, since one of the great difficulties of the present situation lies in the superabundance of paper currency. After outlining the working of the new laws, "La Nación" goes on to point out that the bonds extended in favour of the Caja de Conversión on account of deposits made in the legations can only be cancelled by gold payments, which means that the bank or the public has to obtain gold under abnormal conditions in order to aid its operations in exchange by buying up legation bonds. A simple concrete example illustrates the incongruous nature of a measure that whilst it allows paper to be issued against gold deposits, refuses to allow the selfsame paper to be used to cancel the debt, thus inflating the circulation.

Suppose a trader to deposit $100 gold in a legation. For this he receives a bond which he changes at the Caja de Conversión here for $227

BOVINE PHYSIOLOGY

(La Prensa.—Sept. 18.)

The recent address given by Dr. Fynn before the Argentine Rural Society bears out, says "La Prensa," the remarks that have been made in its columns from time to time relative to the health and system of breeding in the Argentine herds. The points may indeed be taken one by one as favourable or unfavourable to the breed or to the industry considered as a whole. Hygienic conditions, for instance, are of the first importance for Durhams, a type of hybrid particularly liable to be affected by stalling, the sedentary existence predisposing this type to certain aspects of disease, against which only perfect sanitation, a light dry soil, and sufficient exercise can be regarded as preventive. In the second place comes the question of contagion, arising from overcrowding, easily realised when it is borne in mind that the germs of bovine tuberculosis increase rapidly when there is an undue scarcity of light and fresh air. The question of "stalling" is admittedly a debatable point in this climate, and it is also recognised that inbreeding is conducive to tuberculosis. Hence a conflict is planted at the very outset between the desire to have healthy herds and at the same time obtain the amount of weight and fatness deemed requisite by breeders, such fatness being biologically admitted to be a latent state of disease.

Foreign markets, however, demand fat cattle, which means inbreeding, and the problem resolves itself into devising some means whereby this need may be met without unduly affecting the health of the herds. This ideal the Rural Society is trying to attain, recognising that health depends on heredity, surroundings, individual condition, rest and exercise. It is impossible to imagine a type of cattle at once fine, fat, and upstanding, that shall be healthy and yet condemned to a purely sedentary existence, overloaded with flesh that of itself is a proof of delicate condition. The problem of reconciling market interests with those of the herds in general is a difficult one, and, concludes "La Prensa," it is satisfactory to see that the Rural Society recognises the importance thereof, and that in the meantime specialists are giving their attention to the investigation of these and kindred problems met with in the development of the country's mother industry.

paper. When however he seeks to withdraw the bond, or the $100 gold in the legation which it represents, he has to provide, not the $227 paper which he received, but $100 gold, the paper remaining in circulation and unnecessarily increasing the total circulating medium in this country. Hence since gold cannot be had save by extraordinary means, an agio is to all intents and purposes set up, which as "La Nación" says, is easily understood when one remembers that the gold in the Caja, excluding from the calculation the legation deposits, has grown by $13,000,000 gold between March and August of the current year. This increase is traceable solely to the cancellation of bonds, since that is the only reason the trader has for taking gold to the Caja to-day. The Banco de la Nación is the most severely affected by this ruling, and the correct and legal procedure would be for the bonds to be cancelled by the payment of their vane equivalent, a course that would both relieve a congested currency and free the exchange market. In conclusion, seeing that it is proposed to allow the executive to make use of the funds deposited in the legations for its own ends, it ought to be equally feasible to allow traders to cancel the gold bonds in paper notes.

ANGLO-ARGENTINE TRADE

(La Nación.—Sept. 18.)

The Minister of Foreign Affairs has received from the Argentine Consul General a report on the general trade movement in France for the first half of the current year which is of considerable interest. The total trade reaches 5,000,603,000 francs, exports being 1,449,846,000 francs and imports 3,550,757,000 francs for the period under review. In so far as Argentina is concerned, France has imported goods to the value of 94,869,000 francs, and has exported 37,108,000 francs worth of manufactures. Comparing these figures with those for the corresponding period of 1914, there is a diminution in the sale of Argentine products of 75,943,000 francs, or roughly 41 per cent.

In Argentine purchases of French goods the decrease stands at 30,641,000 francs, or 45 per cent., whilst the chief items of Argentine manufacture imported by France have been leather goods, taken to the value of 4,448,000 francs. Shipping interests between this country and France also show a heavy diminution, which in itself is amply sufficient proof of the paralysing effect that the war has had on our trade. The diminution amounts to no less than 65 per cent. Finally, whilst during the first half of 1914 only 208 horses, valued at 229,000 francs, were shipped to France, this year 12,542 horses were shipped, with a total value of 14,142,000 francs, or an average of 1128 francs per head.

THE BANKRUPTCY LAW

(La Nación.—December 17).

With the end of the session in sight there is no chance of Congress discussing the reform of the bankruptcy law, which, says La Nación, is doubly regrettable owing to the important interests involved and the urgent need for a change in the present system. Argentine commerce, through its representative organs, has protested against the actual law, and even though there may not be universal agreement as to the individual changes required, everyone is agreed that something must be done to limit the fraud and bad faith that do as they like under the present defective system. The execution of the present law is far more faulty than its theoretic principles. Many traders, suddenly overcome by misfortune, have had reason to bless the system of provisional arrangements with their creditors, yet at the same time this right has been so shamelessly abused as to have become a business. Bankruptcy too, far from being a moralising measure, is nowadays frequently regarded as a means of extortion, of gain, and at times, of vengeance, justice, unable to intervene, standing aside.

As is well known the idea of the present law was based on leaving creditors to settle their affairs for themselves. In practice this has resulted disastrously, and it has not been a very pleasant thing for the courts to have to stand aloof and eventually sanction settlements that they well know are simply scandalous. It is not easy to draw up the perfect bankruptcy law; even England has found that out, and has again and again had to alter her method of procedure. This is just what Congress has not seen fit to do. However as there is no hope of radical reform this session, justice must do the best it can to support those creditors who refuse to lend themselves to fraudulent measures. Only the other day a creditor's meeting appointed as liquidator an undischarged bankrupt, an individual on whom there weighed a criminal charge. The judge in the commercial court declared this nomination null and void, but, as La Nación concludes, the case is not unique.

INCREASED RAILWAY TARIFFS

(La Nación.—September 19).

In a lengthy and impressive article La Nación deals with this burning question of the hour, pointing out that despite popular agitation the verdict of justice must be in favour of the railway companies, since from the legal point of view the ability of the latter to prove their right to the increase closes all further debate. The financial arrangements of the companies are governed by Art. 9 of the Mitre Law, wherein it is textually stated that:—"The passenger and goods tariffs shall be subject to Government intervention when the average gross receipts of the line for three successive years exceeds 17 per cent on the capital in shares and debentures, always provided that expenses are not more than 60 per cent of the gross receipts." In other words the companies have the right to fix their own tariffs whilst their net return on capital is 6.80 per cent or under. That is the law, and in judging the present case it only remains to be found out whether companies are getting more than this 6.80 on their capital investment, or no. If they are, then the suggested increase in tariffs is illegal, and the Government ought to intervene; if they are not, then the companies are within their rights, and public loyalty and economic justice ought to support them. This latter position is the true one, and La Nación admits it, at the same time stating that the publication of railway returns for the years succeeding 1910 shows a steady descent in nett profits, specially striking during the last period for which returns have been issued. Between 1910 and 1914 there has been a drop of close on two points in railway interest. Thus whilst in 1910 the average yield was 4.68 per cent, in 1914 the figures were 2.90 per cent. Between 6.80 per cent and 2.90 per cent there is a difference of 3.90 per cent, to which the companies are in reality entitled by law if they care to increase their tariffs accordingly.

Nor must it be forgotten, says La Nación, that these are average returns. The fact does not detract from the main argument, but rather strengthens it. Thus whilst it is true that in 1912 two companies, the Central Argentine and the Western, nearly reached the maximum of 6.80 per cent, in earlier years both these companies suffered diminished traffic that meant a couple of points off their interest return. Moreover some of the railways that are included in the returns show a still worse average than that quoted. But be this as it may, however one looks at it, there is no getting out of the fact that all these concerns are working for a profit which is far below that to which they are legally entitled. A brief analysis of the figures available will show very clearly that even the projected 10 per cent advance cannot give the companies that difference of 3.90 per cent on their nett profits. The total capital invested in Argentine railways may be taken at two thousand five hundred million; the 10 per cent increase on tariffs will bring in about $20,000,000; thus even supposing all this money allocated to dividend, there would be but 0.80 per cent more for distribution, bringing the total average per cent to 3.70. This, as will be seen, leaves a big margin when compared with the legal limit of 6.80 per cent, and, as La Nación justly remarks, if this difference had to be made up, the increase on actual tariffs would have to be 46 per cent in lieu of the proposed 10 per cent. Even if this extreme step was taken the Government would have no right to interfere, legally speaking. Hence there is every reason to refrain from objecting to the 10 per cent increase, always supposing that the increases are imposed in strict accordance with railway economy. In respect to certain classes of goods the increase may be little or nothing, the while other articles

MENDOZA AND CALIFORNIA

(La Prensa.—September 17).

Some time ago, says La Prensa, it drew attention to the fact that the great attraction of this country for the American capitalist lies in the enormous superiority of this soil for intensive culture when put under irrigation. Comparing California and Mendoza one finds that the former, in 1914, had 133,518 hectares under vines, 68,782 hectares were for wine; 44,506 hectares for raisins; 20,230 hectares for fresh grapes. The area destined to wine produce 1,461,774 hectolitres, slightly less than in 1913, and the average wine yield is about 21½ hectolitres per hectarea. Turning to the figures for Mendoza one finds an area of 58,424 hectares under vines, chiefly for the wine trade, only 8 per cent being used for the production of fresh table grapes, whilst raisins are not made. These 58,424 hectares, yield 5,000,000 hectolitres of wine, or 85½ hectolitres per hectarea, which is four times that of the Californian vineyards.

These figures, as La Prensa justly remarks, are ample evidence of the extraordinary fertility of the irrigable lands of Argentina. Moreover it must be remembered that in Mendoza irrigation has not been carried to anything like the pitch that it has reached in California, where the last drop of water is secured and utilised. The works in Los Angeles, particularly the great aqueduct 388 kilometres long, which brings the water from a mountain valley to irrigate an area 5,643 hectares in extent, and in its course furnishes motive power for electrical generating stations by means of turbines, cost $26,000,000. Compare this, La Prensa continues, with some Argentine schemes now under construction, say the Neuquen and Vidal valley scheme. It will bring the water to some fifteen or twenty thousand hectares of fiscal land. Yet the cost will be but a quarter of the great work just inaugurated at Los Angeles. Ten years contributions by the cultivators will suffice to pay it off. Similar works throughout the provinces would work marvels, but to achieve them the provinces must have less personal aim in their politics. Indeed, concludes La Prensa, there is no need to go abroad for example; Mendoza itself is proof and to spare. The colossal wealth that has been formed in twenty years through the Mendoza vineyards springs from the construction of two small dams, one on the Mendoza river, the other on the river Tunuyan, $800,000 was the cost of the former! Calculate, if it be possible, the hundreds of millions that this modest investment has produced.

TWO MURDERERS CAPTURED

END OF A CHASE IN RIO NEGRO.

It is satisfactory to record the capture of one of the authors of the atrocious murder recently committed at Linninyeo. Comisario Lesiux, in command of the police at Maquinchas, has secured Ireneo Linares, alias El Nato, who with another ruffian, José Freyre or El Pierna, assassinated four residents of the locality and the wife of one of them. The victims were riddled with carbine bullets, robbery being the motive of the crime. Both are fugitives from Viedma Jail where they were confined for previous killings. Had these ferocious convicts been executed many murders would have been averted, but the incurable sentimental folly of Judges will probably turn the captured miscreants loose in a short time to commit further crimes.

may be able to hear even more than the figure quoted. Moreover there are other weighty reasons which tend to support the measure, reasons of a financial and economic kind that render the whole question one of the most serious matters that the country has had to confront for many years, and this aspect of the affair La Nación promises to discuss at some future opportunity.

TRADE AND CREDIT

(La Prensa.—September 21).

The changes brought about by the European war in various fields of commercial activity have led, says La Prensa, to a discussion on the trade systems in use here, and a tendency has also been shown to operate on a cash basis. This La Prensa does not consider feasible, owing to the fact that the importers here have been accustomed to buy from Europe on relatively lengthy terms of payment, and this is not a merely arbitrary measure, but follows logically on the customs of the country. In this Republic the importers are closely connected with the traders in the provinces, and as the bankruptcy returns show, these relations are all based on the granting of credit. If in the internal trade of the country credit is summarily suppressed the consequent derangement of trade would be so great that a return to the old regime could not be avoided for very long.

It is easily explained when one remembers that the retailer, whilst buying on credit himself, also gives credit to a very large percentage of his clientele. An economic system thus built up does not, as may readily be perceived, rest solely on one or two of the principal factors thereof, the factor of the distributor must also be taken into account. Hence La Prensa believes that there is small chance of the attempt to alter conditions in the import trade proving successful. Cash against goods may be all very well in countries dowered with other mercantile systems; countries where the factories and the distributors are side by side. It will not however be adopted in this Republic, where the custom of credit is not merely a matter of tradition, but also meets real needs. Ignorance of this market is probably the cause that has given rise to the attempted implantation of new methods, but their immediate failure shows that they are not required, and the experiment is not likely to be repeated.

THE PARLIAMENTARY SESSION

(La Nación.—September 21).

To refer to the utter futility of the parliamentary sessions held during the present year is but crying over spilt milk, says La Nación. It is general knowledge that seldom has the action of Congress been less efficacious. It would perhaps be interesting if one were to analyse the causes of this phenomenon, and certainly the matter is deserving of study, even though it may be too late to apply a corrective. What is of importance, La Nación continues, is to decide upon the best course to be pursued under the circumstances, seeing that Congress is about to close with the Budget Law still in an embryo state, the report of the commission hardly likely to be ready before the end of the current month, and the whole affair in such train that however much members may be agreed as to the advisability of avoiding any discussion, a prolongation of Congress beyond the statutory period is unavoidable.

La Nación argues for extraordinary sessions, on various grounds, with the Budget as the only subject of debate. Given the intense interest of the legislators for purely political matters relative to the coming election, merely prolonging the session without limiting its scope would not do anything save feed fuel to political debate. Past experience has shown that extraordinary sessions, with a long agenda list, have never given any result save that of prolonging the sterility of the ordinary session, and at the present time it is safe to assume that the deputies and legislators would utterly neglect the business before them in order to foment their political and party interests. Hence the advisability of calling special sessions destined solely to the passing of the 1916 Budget.

HEALTHY HOUSES

(La Prensa.—September 22).

The lengthy debate in the Chamber of Deputies over the proposed construction of cheap dwelling houses for the working classes, may, says La Prensa, be looked upon as exceedingly interesting, inasmuch as it brought up much information calculated to contribute to the satisfactory solution of one of the most important urban problems. Not that there is anything new, save in the shape of outside experience, to be added to the discussion of the dilemma involved in the difficulty of creating at one and the same time cheap dwellings and healthy dwellings. As La Prensa justly remarks, the expression, "cheap dwellings" ought not to apply merely to the housing of a minority of the population, and the acceptance of this idea means the gradual transformation of our scheme of urban building. If it is to be merely an official experiment on a relatively small scale then the matter diminishes in importance.

There is no denying that the health of the population depends principally on healthy dwelling places, hence all building schemes ought to start with the basic idea of benefiting the sanitary and hygienic conditions of the community. Carrying this idea further one gets a plan for future building operations wherein extensions beyond the city area are projected in order that every room may be able to have its proper quota of light and air. It goes without saying, continues La Prensa, that these conditions can never prevail whilst individual houses are run up, small and ill adapted to benefit by the light and air that is available when collective building is decided upon. In the latter case, when a house is built in accordance with well-recognised hygienic principles, everything is altered; the area employed is ample, ventilation thorough, light abundant, and a large inside patio gives room for garden ground, in itself an important source of air and light.

COMPULSORY SERVICE

(La Nación.—September 22).

Every day that passes, says La Nación, increases the amount of discussion that is going on in Great Britain regarding the question of compulsory service. Opinion is very divided, even, if all reports are true, in the cabinet itself, and a solution acceptable to all will not easily be found. As Mr. Lloyd George has said, it must first be proved that the voluntary system has broken down, and as that cannot be said, the party in favour of conscription can only repeat the arguments repeated for many years past, by Lord Roberts and in a certain section of the Press. As a matter of fact the King has the right to call on all his subjects to defend the national soil in the event of invasion, but that is not the question to-day. Armies are needed for abroad, not for home defence, though actually the defence of Great Britain is being fought out on the Continent. The adversaries of conscription argue that on Great Britain lies the weight of sea power, and the financial strain of maintaining the other Allies in funds. Add to this compulsory service and the consequences to British industries might well be disastrous.

There is however a far higher argument to be brought forward, remarks La Nación. Compulsory service means an attack on the liberty of the subject, a possible militarisation of Great Britain. And those who adopt this reasoning find it illogical for their country, which is admittedly fighting German militarisation, to place itself under the same yoke. Moreover a volunteer is worth two pressed men. Hence as La Nación concludes, the discussion is endless. Nothing short of extreme need will induce the opponents of conscription to accept any measure of the kind, even although the introduction of the national re-

BANDITS WIPED OUT

EXCITING ENCOUNTER WITH POLICE.

An exciting encounter between the police and a band of robbers occurred early yesterday morning in the Province of Salta, and resulted in the death of three of the band and the wounding of one of them. For some considerable time past the band had been carrying on their nefarious business in the Province, until they were not only terrorising the neighbourhood, but were also bringing the police into such bad repute that various complaints had been made in high quarters. An affair which occurred in the neighbourhood of Rosario de Lerma brought the matter to a head. The bandits evidently for the purpose of robbery visited the house of Señor Mariano Valenzuela. Finding him prepared, they killed him and seriously wounded his wife, before they were able to commence the robbery.

A peon who was employed by Sr. Valenzuela was in league with the gang, and enabled them to enter the house. There were four in all. Armed with knives and revolvers they did not hesitate at the first show of resistance to shoot down Señor Valenzuela and his wife. The police were quickly on their track, and rounded them up in a ditch some distance from the scene of their crime, and alongside the highway. A regular fusillade of Winchester rifle-fire was opened upon the bandits, who returned the fire without injuring any of the pursuing police. A few volleys and the gang was obliterated, only one man being captured alive, and he seriously wounded. A great number of valuables were discovered on their persons, together with revolvers, Winchesters and knives. The population of the neighbourhood are commending the promptitude of the police.

CORNISH PRIDE

(From The Sphere.)

The lil' grey port climbs upwards,
A hundred houses or so,
An' watches across the harbour
Where gulls wheel to and fro.
But few be the boats to moorin's,
An' few the fishermen be,
For we've sent a hundred an' fifty
To fight on land an' sea.

Some be to Bodmin Barracks,
An' some to Maker Fort,
But mos'ly they'm in the Navy
That 'listed in the Port.
So some in the North Sea watches,
An' some in the mine-fields sweep,
An' some be gone in the Monmouth
To the last quiet sleep.

The men on the lost Majestic
Still live to thank the Lord,
But them on the old Goliath
Took Cap'n Death aboard.
'Tis just the luck o' fightin',
Glory or Kingdom come,
So we lifts our prayers for the livin'
An' wishes them safe to home.

We'm not such a place as London
With millions o' men to send,
But we'm givin' our best for the country,
An' bravely bidin' the end.
We know that the toll be heavy,
An' Peace at a price be bought,
But we'm proud of our hundred an' fifty
In the lil' grey Cornish Port.

BERNARD MOORE.

gister may be but a first step towards that end. Liberals, radicals, trades unionists, and socialists are against it; Ireland will have none of it; many conservatives are opposed to it. Hence an attempt to implant conscription by force is bound to have serious results, especially in view of the satisfactory returns provided by voluntary enlistment.

A "HERALD" MOTOR AMBULANCE

Special Appeal to Our Readers

Magnificent Response from the Capital

A remarkable result has been achieved by THE HERALD through the medium of its daily issue, in appealing for funds to provide an ambulance for the British Red Cross Society.

Up to the moment of writing this matter for the WEEKLY HERALD, the whole amount has been practically subscribed. As, however, two motor ambulances are required, of which THE HERALD was to provide one, and as the appeal has not reached the majority of subscribers and readers of the WEEKLY HERALD, we believe we are well justified in placing the matter before them, and asking their support in finding funds to purchase the second car.

Our appeal was first published in the daily edition of THE HERALD of Friday, September 17. We asked our readers to let us have $6000. For the benefit of our WEEKLY subscribers we reprint the original appeal as follows:—

A MOTOR AMBULANCE IS WANTED WILL YOU HELP TO PROVIDE IT?

The question was asked of us in a letter received from Mr. F. H. Chevallier Boutell, Delegate of the British Red Cross Society in Argentina, soliciting our aid.

Mr. Boutell put his request to us as follows:—

"The British Red Cross Society is sadly in want of motor ambulances to save precious lives and rescue the suffering. Would it not be possible for THE HERALD to raise the necessary funds by subscription and to send a HERALD motor ambulance to aid our boys in the hour of need? We have 5,000 volunteers, more or less, at the front. Could there be a better way of showing them how we are thinking of them in every detail and doing our best to 'chip in' with them and give them a hand? It is not much that is wanted to defray the cost of a car fully equipped—about $8,000, paper. Can you, and will you, raise this sum for the purpose? I am certain you can and will. I beg your generous support."

We could have published this letter in the ordinary way, as a letter to the Editor, and then have left the matter to our readers. We believed, however, that the appeal was one of such importance that our duty called for a special effort. As the result of an interview with Mr. Boutell, we decided to direct the strongest possible appeal to you, and to ask you to take this matter up with all the enthusiasm you can.

You have already done your share towards providing funds for the many patriotic objects placed before you from time to time, but this is a special occasion. You have never failed to respond generously to any appeal made directly to you by your paper. You have won the reputation by generous giving of being public-spirited, and ever sensitive to a call upon your sympathy. You have by your liberality on a score of occasions provided THE HERALD with the means whereby it has been able to accomplish a great deal of public good. You have helped it to fulfil the mission which the Proprietory and Editors believe to be that of a paper which understands and appreciates the power given it by a strong and loyal body of readers and supporters. You have made THE HERALD what it is to-day and through you it now wields an influence which is courted by any organisation in need of assistance, in the belief that if THE HERALD is behind a public movement, that movement is assured of success.

Believing in you, and confident of our strength, we have pledged your enthusiastic support to the proposal put forward. In your name we have guaranteed the Delegate of the British Red Cross Society in Argentina, that within the briefest possible time, readers and supporters of THE HERALD will provide at least $6,000, the sum which Mr. Boutell has since informed us is the minimum amount required to purchase a fully equipped motor ambulance.

You may provide more. We are confident you will not provide less. The car is to be your car. It will be added to the Society's fleet as THE HERALD Readers' Motor Ambulance. When in operation it will be tangible evidence to many Argentine volunteers that they have not been forgotten by those who hailed them as brave men and good citizens of the Empire when they set out from this country to defend their Empire's cause.

We are assured that the need for such ambulances is desperately urgent. The Red Cross Society has already provided about 1,500 of them for service on the blood-stained fields of Flanders. Scores have been destroyed by German shells. Scores have been worn out literally in the service of the nation, conveying an apparently endless stream of sick and wounded men—many of them your relatives, or your friends—from the trenches to the hospitals. In this humanitarian work, the work of alleviating the pain and suffering of brave men who are fighting for you, for us, and for all that we cherish as Britons, the Red Cross wants help—all the help it can get from everywhere. WILL YOU HELP?

We have answered for you. We believe you can raise the money. We shall receive subscriptions from all, and in amounts differing from hundreds of dollars to a few cents. We want this fund to be truly representative of THE HERALD readers. It would give us more satisfaction to be able to record that everyone of you did something, than it would for us to secure the amount by a few large subscriptions, and realise that our appeal had not touched scores of our readers. There are many other funds to which you have subscribed and will subscribe, but this fund is peculiarly your own. It conflicts with none other. It is your special and extra effort to do something for Britain and for the boys who are standing up for her on a dozen battlefields. The class of motor ambulance wanted is that shown in the illustration on this page.

We leave the matter in your hands.

BRITISH SOCIETY'S SUPPORT.

One of the most pleasing evidences of the cordial reception of our proposal was the following from the British Society in the Argentine Republic:—

The Editor

THE HERALD

Dear Sir:—We have noted with pleasure the spirited manner in which, at the invitation of Mr. Chevallier Boutell, you have appealed to your readers to provide the funds necessary to purchase a Red Cross Ambulance, and at a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Society it was resolved to subscribe the sum of $50 of the Society's funds towards this object.

The Committee believe that in so doing they are acting in accordance with the wishes of the majority of their members. Every effort calculated to promote the Allies' cause must receive the fullest possible support.

We enclose our cheque herewith and trust you will very soon succeed in raising the amount required.

Yours truly,

ARTHUR GEORGE PRUDEN,
Chairman.

WM. WATSON, Hon. Treasurer
P. A. GRASSICK,
Hon. Secretary.

It gives us peculiar pleasure to receive such a letter. The spontaneity of the British Society's support, moral and practical, demonstrates the broadmindedness of that organisation, and is conclusive proof of the truth of our statement yesterday that this special fund conflicts with none other. It is this kind of action, and this mutual co-operation and generous appreciation, that are essential to the closer welding of the British community in Argentina.

LIST OF SUBSCRIPTIONS.

"Escocia"	$100.00
A. J. Marshall	20.00
"P. P."	6.00
"N. N."	10.00
Sidey and Poels	50.00
Percy Bell	50.00
Alejandro Shaw	50.00
Herman Krabbe	25.00
F. H. Chevallier Boutell	100.00
H. Hallam Hipwell	5.00
E. Berry	10.00
Tomás Bell	100.00
T. Tallon	5.00
Joan and Carol	1.00
Olga and Hilda	1.00
"Mancunian"	10.00
Dr. Leonardo Pereyra	100.00
Dr. Martin Pereyra	100.00
Dr. R. Herrera Vega	100.00
Dr. M. Herrera Vega	100.00
Alejandro Funes Lastra	10.00
Antonio Agrelo	10.00
Juan Shaw	50.00
"M"	100.00
E. C. Boas	10.00
J. A. Drysdale	100.00
Cara-Dura	6.00
Mrs. F. H. Chevallier Boutell	100.00
Emilio N. Casares	50.00
"Mac"	10.00
John Macdonald	100.00
Edmund Perkins	100.00
Edward Morgan	20.00
Aliado	25.00
Mrs. M. Eldelberg	10.00
The British Society	50.00
"Patriota"	2.00
Enrique Thompson	50.00
Juan Larrazabal	50.00
Alfredo Shaw	10.00
"M. M."	10.00
Christopher Hope	100.00
C. H. Pearson	50.00
C. Manifold	25.00
"L. J. D."	5.00
"A. D."	5.00
T. D. Gill	10.00
"R. C."	2.00
"V. F."	1.00
"M. McW."	2.00
"W. B."	2.00
"4 B's"	1.00
E. M. Pixton	10.00
M. M. Venter	20.00
Rev. Dr. McLaughlin	10.00
Mabel Martin (for Sale of Fancy Work)	45.00
C. W. Martin	10.00
Mrs. C. W. Martin	10.00
G. Hopkins	5.00
Two Welshwomen	10.00
"Mancuniana"	10.00
"Tres Mancunianitas"	10.00
"Windmill"	500.00
"Scotland Yet"	5.00
Little French Girl	1.00
Frederick Miller	100.00
"M. O'H."	5.00
"M. K."	5.00
W. E. Thompson	5.00
"W"	2.00
J. Hilton	10.00
Juan Lalor	100.00
An American Well-wisher	2.50
Mrs. M. F. B. Farran	20.00
H. George Roberts	20.00
C. T. Pryor	100.00
H. B. O'Meara	10.00
Agustin Smith	10.00
J. Blanco	10.00
Mrs. C. S. de Bell	50.00
"Las Marías"	50.00
J. H. S. W.	10.00
"Pobre"	1.00
Henry H. Fisher	25.00
R. W. Macdonald	20.00
David Cavendish	5.00
Robert Fisher	20.00
Misses Mildred and Dorothy Slater	30.00
Oscar and Bory Ossovsky	5.00
M. E. N.	10.00
H. J. Sanderson	10.00

George E. Leslie	20.00
J. C. Wigg	50.00
T. S. Boadle	50.00
"F. S."	50.00
Mrs. G. A. Ellison	50.00
G. A. Ellison	50.00
Mrs. C. W. Drabble	100.00
Miss Drabble	100.00
C. W. Drabble	100.00
E. G. Drabble	100.00
"Limelight"	25.00
Albert M. Haynes	50.00
James Fraser	10.00
G. B. Pearson	20.00
Joaquin Anchorena	50.00
P. E. Cunradi	50.00
Alberto Brooks	20.00
C. P. Lumb, Jr.	100.00
F. C. Cook and Co.	100.00
H. E. Oxenford	10.00
La Plata Cold Storage	100.00
L. D.	10.00
Charles I. W. Dawney	50.00
Ambulance "T"	5.00
Mr. & Mrs. R. J. Kimber	10.00
E. de L.	5.00
Mrs. E. W.	6.00
F. E. B.	5.00
Mrs. J. King	20.00
"P. W."	5.00
G. J. Clayton	10.00
H. B.	10.00
Mrs. H. E. Wolden	50.00
R. Prentice	20.00
H. Gordon Nordaby	50.00
J. Dey	25.00
H. Dunford	10.00
Herbert Sinclair	10.00
S. Douglas Mackay	25.00
James Wyllie	10.00
C. C. Day	5.00
R. Woodruff	5.00
Sola and Carthy	5.00
Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Carthy	10.00
Miss Bede Mitchell	5.00
L. H. Alexander	10.00
Harry Scott	25.00
T. S. Lough	50.00
J. K.	10.00
C. D. M.	50.00
"Cardiffian"	3.00
E. C. and A. G.	5.00
An Irishwoman	10.00
C. E. Baines	10.00
Dr. Victor E. A. Fenton	25.00
L. E. Grimson	5.00
Mrs. David Hogg	20.00
Miss Lila Hogg	10.00
Miss Evelyn Hogg	10.00
Miss Sylvia Hogg	10.00
Ivan Logan Kay	10.00
Samito John Kay	10.00
Winifred B. Kay	10.00
Maud Logan Kay	20.00
Frank Phillips	20.00
Alex. and Alan	5.00
J. W. Mackinnon	50.00
B. E. R. Kreutzer	10.00
J. Thomson	5.00
G. A. Scharenberg	10.00
Robt. G. Best	20.00
Guillermo Dunn	100.00
J. H. Kidd	20.00
Charles J. Shaw (Monte- video)	40.00
Alan Cunningham	20.00
G. H. Shepherd	5.00
J. H. W. Cook	5.00
H. Strachan	5.00
Gurth Kimber	0.50
G. T. Bayley	10.00
Pobre No. 2	1.00
"S."	5.00
Another	50.00
Wathoe	25.00
Margarita Scott	5.00
Nora	2.00
Gaston, Eduardo & Clarence	1.50
A. A.	2.00
W. H. Beale	15.00
Rose Cox	1.00
B. W. Gardom	50.00
Louis and Charlie	5.00
G. H. Shepherd	5.00
C. R. T.	3.00
Self Reliance	3.00
L. G. Babb	5.00
E. Buchanan	50.00
W. Newbo'd	100.00
A. G. Thornton	25.00
W. E. O. Huxell	25.00
"Jam"	10.00
V. D. C.	20.00
Thompson Muebles Ltda.	50.00
George Matheson	20.00
Don Machattie	20.00
N. A. Machattie	10.00
Mrs. David T. Herald	10.00

Total $6018.50

AEROPLANE "RIVER PLATE"

Message from the Army Council

ANOTHER CRAFT REQUIRED

The British Society has received the following letter from Sir Reginald Tower:—

British Legation,
Sept. 19, 1915.

Dear Sir,
I have this day received a telegram from Sir Edward Grey in the following words:—

"Army Council gratefully accepts aeroplane given by the British Society in the Argentine Republic." It is a pleasure to me to communicate this to you as Chairman of the British Society.

Yours very faithfully,

REGINALD T. TOWER.

Arthur Geo. Pruden, Esq.,
Chairman,

British Society,

News is now awaited respecting the date of delivery of the aeroplane and arrangements will then be made for its christening.

As was announced the £2,250 for the first aeroplane was forwarded a few days ago and the statement of account is now as follows:—

Total acknowledged for Aeroplane No. 1 $31,488.83

Cost cabled to London
£2,250 at 47½ plus cable $25,684.15
Postages, printing, cables etc. 304.68

$25,988.83

Balance towards Aeroplane
River Plate No. 2 $ 5,500.00

The amount of $304.68 given as the cost of printing subscription lists, postages and cables may have to be adjusted later when all accounts have been received. It will, however, only be a question of two or three dollars and the British Society is now ready to receive subscriptions for the second aeroplane starting with this surplus sum of $5,500.

Subscription lists may be obtained on application at the Offices of the Society, 536 Cangallo, and each one will be stamped and signed by the Hon. Treasurer, Mr. W. Watson. It is hoped that subscriptions will be sent in quickly and generously.

BELGIAN RED CROSS FUND

RESULT OF CONCERT, $4301.

The President of the Belgian Red Cross Committee, M. D. Gullmot, sends a letter of thanks to the HERALD for notices in connection with the fiesta at Prince George's Hall on Sunday, September 12.

The total result was $4,301.30 which, enables the Committee to remit a further sum of 10,000 francs to the Belgian Red Cross.

The Committee thank the generous and sympathetic of all nationalities who have rallied to the assistance of the cause.

EXCHANGE OF NURSES

STRANGE POLICY ALLEGED TO HAVE BEEN FOLLOWED BY RUSSIA.

New York, Sept. 17.

A Vienna despatch via Berlin says that the Danish Red Cross Society has informed the Government that Russia is willing to enter into an agreement to permit Austrian nurses to visit the prison camps in Russia and vice-versa, and negotiations are proceeding to that end.

BRITISH PATRIOTIC COMMITTEE

58TH LIST OF SUBSCRIPTIONS.

GENERAL FUND.

Previously acknowledged	$146,887.96
E. Sainsbury	25.00
W. N. Cordes	5.00
D. Jacobs	5.00
E. Charman	2.00
J. F. Macadam and Co.	250.00
Gibson Brothers	1,000.00
Per London and River Plate Bank:—
G. F. Miles	20.00
C. H. P. Dashwood	100.00
T. B. F.	25.00
Per British Bank of South America:—
A. Hawtreys	15.00
Per London and Brazilian Bank:—
A. S. Miles	50.00
	$148,384.96

NATIONAL RELIEF FUND.

PRINCE OF WALES'S FUND.

Previously acknowledged	$133,685.52
Directors and Staff of Messrs. Agar, Cross and Co., Ltd. (Eleventh monthly subscription)	563.00
Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Gardner	30.00
Per BUENOS AIRES HERALD—Miss L. Hamer	2.30
Per London and River Plate Bank, Ltd.:—
Lcach's Argentine Estates	265.25
	$134,546.08

BELGIAN RELIEF FUND.

Previously acknowledged	$4,426.10
Robert Dixon	150.00
	$4,576.10

RED CROSS FUND.

Previously acknowledged	$18,883.30
Results of entertainment at Quilmes, on August 30th, in aid of Allies' Red Cross Fund, per Mrs. Dey	541.40
	$19,424.70

Subscriptions should be sent to the Hon. Treasurer, Mr. Thomas Lloyd, Calle Sarmiento 459, or paid in to the London and River Plate Bank, Ltd. British Bank of S. America, Ltd. London and Brazilian Bank, Ltd. Anglo-South American Bank, Ltd. For general information, subscription forms, etc., application should be made to the Honorary Secretary, Mr. H. E. Powell-Jones, Calle Sarmiento 643.

LEGATION DESPATCHES

Increased Artillery Activity

NINE AIR COMBATS

The following telegram has been received by His Britannic Majesty's Minister at Buenos Aires, from the Foreign Office, London:

Sept. 22 (2.20 p.m.)

Sir John French reports that enemy's artillery increased its activity on our front during last two days, we replying effectively. On the 20th our guns set fire to Houthulst Forest, causing big explosion. On the 19th, there were nine air combats, two hostile aeroplanes being driven to ground in German lines, one enveloped in flames and engine of other alight.

TOO MUCH "OLD BUCK"

SOLDIER'S VIEW OF GERMANY IN NOTE TO ANGLO-URUGUAYAN

The following letters, from British soldiers to Uruguayan subscribers to the Overseas Tobacco Fund, have recently been received:—

Mr. A. Raba.
Mercedes.

Dear Sir,
I received the cigarettes and tobacco you sent to us. I was very pleased to accept such a gift. It is really very good of you to send such presents to our soldiers and believe me your kindness is very much appreciated by the troops.

Yours very sincerely,

(Signed) Sapper N. Wood.
33271 B. Troop
2nd. Indian Field Squadron,
Royal Engineers,
2nd. Indian Cavalry Div.
I. E. F.

Mr. R. Braceras.
Mercedes.

Dear Sir,
I am taking the liberty of scribbling on this addressed P.C. to thank you for the tobacco and cigarettes you have so kindly had sent for distribution at the Front.

Sorry I cannot give you any idea of the life as a soldier out here as room will not allow but any time should be delighted to answer any further correspondence.

Again thanking you.

Yours truly,

(Signed) Driver W. S. Tarry.
11 W. R. Field Ambulance
11 W. R. Division, B.E.F.

Mr. P. Marquez.
Mercedes.

Dear Sir,
I am now taking the pleasure of writing to thank you for the cigarettes and tobacco you sent for distribution at the Front. I can assure you they were very welcome.

Hoping to hear from you again.

I remain, yours faithfully,

(Signed) E. Teesdale.
108 Heavy Battery, R.F.A.
B.E.F.

Mr. F. A. Mela.
Mercedes.

Dear Sir,
We received your gift of cigarettes and tobacco. It will be a very welcome smoke. We shall soon be on the move again for the line. At present we are having a rest after a fortnight in the trenches.

Thanking you very much.

We remain, yours truly,

(Signed) Pte. E. Grimoldi, 2nd. Indian Field Squadron; C. Trask, 2nd. Indian Cavalry Division, I.E.F.A.

Mr. T. D. Bruce.
Mercedes.

Dear Sir,
Being one of the boys that happened to get a packet of tobacco and finding one of your cards attached to it, I send it to you tendering my thanks for it is a real treat to write to anyone when we have time. Shall be pleased when we hear of your country joining in the fray. I think it will be with the Allies for Germany has given her too much old buck.

I remain, yours faithfully,

(Signed) Pte. H. C. Driscoll.
2397 B. Company, 6th Batt.
British Expeditionary Force.

Mr. R. Elhoriburu,
Mercedes.

Dear Sir,
Many thanks for the tobacco and cigarettes which we received. All are exceedingly grateful to you for your thoughtfulness.

I remain, yours sincerely,

(Signed) Pte. E. Burns, No. 2487, B. Company, 2nd Welsh Reg. British Expeditionary Force.

NOTES FROM PARAGUAY

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT].

Asuncion, Sept. 19.

The Weather.

After several days of preparation, last Wednesday we had a wet day! It did not exactly rain, but the plants and vegetables got wet, and they needed it badly; but it did not make the river rise. The latter is slowly disappearing from view. If a good rain does not come soon, it will be a very serious matter, and some fear an epidemic. It is a blessing the cold weather continues—after a few very warm days. If doomed to have a drought, a cool one is preferable.

The Port Works.

We are to have a port. That is the most important item of news. No matter if there is a river or not, or anything to export or import, the Senate has passed the bill. A number of people will get busy now. There has been a good deal of opposition, some of the members declaring that schools and school-buildings were more needed, but although there was a small demonstration, it ended quietly, considering the love of these people for a fight.

Concert.

To-morrow evening a concert will take place in the Italian Hall to celebrate the 20th of September. The proceeds will go to the Red Cross Fund.

Tourists.

Some few tourists are still with us. Some who have returned to Buenos Aires, and the cold damp weather have written that they wished they had stayed longer in Sunny Paraguay. It is strange more have not come this way to avoid the damp, cold weather reported in Buenos Aires, especially when Europe is out of the question at the present moment. There are three good hotels here—for Asuncion—the Hotel Paraguay, for those with plenty of time; the Hispano-American, for those in a hurry, being very central. Hotel St. Pierre for those neither one thing or the other, and who have a keen look out for the inner man, being famed for a good table. A tip for those who do not know which to choose.

Service was held both morning and evening at the Anglican Church, Mr. Limb officiating, a special prayer being offered for Mr. John Brown, of Villarrica, who has been, and still is, seriously ill.

Tennis.

The Asuncion Lawn Tennis Club was quite busy to-day, both courts being full. All the other clubs and sports societies continue to flourish, a new one having started this month. Two of the clubs are planning a trip to San Birneidino to end up the season, but no date is fixed yet.

Dr. Albert Hale, of Buenos Aires, is said to have arrived on to-night's international train, which latter appeared to have a number of passengers from Buenos Aires.

Mrs. Louis Bennett, of New York, leaves by to-morrow's train for Buenos Aires, where she will sail for Valparaiso and continue her journey around South America.

RUSSIA'S POLITICAL PRISONERS

RELEASED BY ORDER OF THE TSAR.

New York, Sept. 16.

A Hague telegram states that Tsar Nicolás has decreed an amnesty for 100,000 prisoners, under sentence for political crimes. His Imperial Majesty has acceded to a petition of some members of the Duma who thought it indispensable that the Sovereign should show his clemency and thus help to unite all inhabitants of the Empire.

CATTLE MARKET

ENTERED: 4,844.

Pigs	607
Prices: 27 to 33 cents per kilo.
Summary of Purchasers.
La Plata	1,316
Sansinena	966
La Blanca	357
Armour	146
Smithfield	113
Argentino	22

Total 3,100

Prices for WednesdaySALES.*Juan Lator—

From Casares: 10 bullocks at $241; from Exaltacion de la Cruz: 20 steers at 216, 30 do. from General Paz at 211; from Cordoba: 12 cows at 139; from R. Paz: 11 cows at 141, 6 at 147; from Entre Rios: 2 cows at 112, 13 steers at 125, 17 at 146, 7 at 83, 2 calves at 60; from Santa Fe: 11 steers at 200, 5 at 145, 2 at 154; from Mercedes: 2 steers at 149, 8 at 212, 2 bullocks at 203, 5 heifers at 88; from Santa Fe: 3 heifers at 77.50, 10 young steers at 96, 16 steers at 106, 3 at 150; from Azul: 3 steers at 147, 13 at 195, 5 at 130; from Rio Negro: 20 steers at 66.50, 23 at 60, 7 steers at 110, 4 at 70; from Azul: 7 steers at 143, 2 eows at 140, 9 at 155, 7 calves at 68, 7 heifers at 75.50; from Suipacha: 9 heifers at 125, 2 at 81, 2 at 93, 7 cows at 104.50, 2 at 79; from Pampa Central: 18 cows at 167; from Suipacha: 9 eows at 139, 6 young steers at 145, 2 bullocks at 250, 2 at 196, 2 cows at 139; from Casares: 3 eows at 116, 2 heifers at 108, 3 at 137, 7 at 86.50, 6 young steers at 115.

Pedro y Antonio Lanusse—

From 9 de Julio: 4 cows at $156.50, 8 at 138, 8 at 121; from Belgrano: 2 eows at 47.50, 1 at 144, 6 steers at 159; from Cañuelas: 8 cows at 128.50, 10 at 140, 14 at 137.50, 13 at 150, 8 at 98, 2 at 68.50, 2 heifers at 68.50, 1 stag at 121; from Lobos: 15 cows at 139.50, 2 at 110, 5 at 84.50, 1 at 130, 20 heifers at 119, 20 at 113, 6 calves at 31.50; from Azul: 1 steer at 171, 15 at 175, 5 at 154, 1 young steer at 129, 2 cows at 185, 2 at 151, 2 heifers at 131.

Salaberry y Berceche—

From 9 de Julio: 2 bullocks at $255.50, 2 at 210, 1 at 105, 1 steer at 171, 4 young steers at 156; from Pampa Central: 13 young steers at 90, 6 at 76, 11 heifers at 69.50; from Entre Rios: 6 calves at 52, 5 at 44.50, 7 at 56, 6 at 60, 5 at 58, 6 at 71.50, 1 at 75, 8 at 70, 5 cows at 91.50, 2 at 120.50, 1 heifer at 90, 5 at 136, 1 bullock at 144.50, 1 bull at 180, 2 steers at 167.

Gioja y Etchart—

From Suipacha: 4 heifers at $95; from Bragado: 18 bullocks at 203, 20 cows at 129, 13 steers at 195; from Carlos Tejedor: 20 steers at 220; from Mercedes: 2 stags at 125, 8 cows at 106, 6 heifers at 84; from Chacabuco: 2 bullocks at 215; from Carmen de Areco: 18 cows at 143, 38 do. from Carlos Casares at 180; from Santa Fe: 82 steers at 187, 2 bullocks at 230; from G. Mitre: 6 bullocks at 217.

Casallares, Cendoya y Cia.—

From Mercedes: 1 steer at $140.

Estrugamon y Cia.—

From Chacabuco: 11 cows at $106, 4 young steers at 135, 4 steers at 215; from Zuisola: 22 cows at 175; from Chacabuco: 12 steers at 215, 16 bullocks at 200, 3 stags at 180, 7 eows at 175, 19 at 175, 21 at 145, 15 heifers at 95, 10 calves at 84.

Enrique Carriquiry y Cia.—

From Azul: 12 cows at $132.

Benitez y Murru—

From Santa Fe: 10 cows at $170, 14 at 145, 11 at 140, 5 heifers at 138, 8 at 112, 17 calves at 92.

Unzué, Alzaga y Cia.—

From Navarro: 2 cows at $150, 15 at 175; from Santa Fe: 20 steers at 120; from Entre Rios: 11 steers at 145, 25 at 147; from Santa Fe: 30 steers at 116, 3 at 150, 57 at 205.

Nicolás A. Calvo—

From Lincoln: 25 steers at $176; from Cordoba: 10 steers at 169, 12 at 161.

Luro Hermanos—

From Santa Fe: 4 cows at $105, 9 young steers at 70, 9 steers at 100, 7 at 138, 15 at 110.50, 9 at 99, 14 at 105, 17 at 116, 12 at 128.

Bargo, Laseurain y Etchegaray—

From Lamadrid: 25 cows at $142; from Cordoba: 3 heifers at 110, 6 at 70, 11 calves at 58, 10 at 54.

Julio L. Peña y Cia.—

From Santa Fe: 9 bullocks at $200, 6 steers at 200, 2 at 185, 2 stags at 175, 6 young steers at 165, 14 at 160; from Tandil: 3 stags at 185, 2 at 155, 2 bullocks at 155, 4 young steers at 140, 13 cows at 135; from Matanzas: 3 steers at 105, 3 young steers at 65, 5 heifers at 65.

Bunge y Born—

From D. Alvear: 42 cows at $128.

Bracht y Cia.—

From 9 de Julio: 4 cows at $127, 5 at 101.50, 4 bullocks at 198, 2 heifers at 78, 6 bullocks at 221, 5 at 205, 12 steers at 176, 15 at 168, 9 at 153.

Anárís Maraspin y Cia.—

From Cañuelas: 2 bullocks at $225, 5 stags at 143, 4 steers at 140, 2 bulls at 100, 4 young steers at 88; from Pampa Central: 18 steers at 170, 17 cows at 150, 6 heifers at 93, 3 calves at 75.

Soc. Cooperativa de Hacendados—

From Villegas: 58 cows at $160; from Junin: 21 steers at 240, 24 cows at 115, 10 heifers at 95, 10 calves at 76.

Delfino Hermanos—

From Tandil: 76 cows at $147, 80 steers at 198.

Juan Anasagasti—

From Pampa Central: 10 cows at $160, 2 heifers at 140.

Giralt y Amadeo Lastra—

From Marcos Paz: 6 cows at $122, 6 heifers at 85.

Palacios Hermanos—

From Entre Rios: 4 bullocks at $180, 80 steers at 140.

José Maria Trelles—

From Tandil: 35 cows at $140, 2 heifers at 105, 4 young steers at 112.

Nale, Repetto y Cia.—

From Carlos Casares: 5 steers at $106, 6 young steers at 70, 3 calves at $64.

Videla Hermanos y Cia.—

From Santa Fe: 8 cows at $75, 6 heifers at 65, 6 calves at 35.

M. J. Guiraldes y Cia.—

From Armour: 12 steers at $207.

Juan Elordy y Cia.—

From Santa Fe: 51 cows at $61.

Echeverria y Garat—

From M. Cazon: 8 cows at $135, 3 calves at 32.

Accanie y Bellini—

From Pergamino: 5 calves at $50, 6 bullocks at $225, 18 steers at 200; from Rodriguez: 6 steers at 210; from General Pintos: 3 young steers at 110, 5 cows at 92, 3 heifers at 85, 13 calves at 80, 28 cows at 170.

Marzano Hermanos—

From Salto: 6 bullocks at $225, 5 steers at 175.

Crotto Hermanos—

From Azul: 16 cows at $144, 7 at $124.

Mihura Hermanos—

From Entre Rios: 40 steers at $190, 2 cows at 128, 5 heifers at 120.

BACTERIOLOGICAL INSTITUTE

LIGNIERES HERMANOS

(Adolfo Marcelo & Luis Lignieres)

Vaccine & Serums for Stock

VACCINE for CARBUNCLO, MANCHA, TRISTEZA, ENTEQUE, TUBERCULINAS, LOMBRIZ - TIFUS EQUINO. Etc., Etc.

Rats Exterminated by Virus

The Vaccine, and Serums are personally and exclusively prepared by Adolfo Marcelo and Luis Lignieres, which ensures successful results.

ORDERS AND INFORMATION TO:

748 Pueyrredon 748 - Buenos AiresMr. Joseph Shepherd

1 HATTON GARDENS, LONDON.

Exporter of High-Class Pedigree Animals.

HEAVY DRAUGHT-HORSES SUITABLE FOR EXPORT PURCHASED

Local Representative:

Mr. A. Machattie,

San Martin 254, Buenos Aires.

SHEEP MARKET

ENTRIES: 4,032.

Local butchers	1,750
La Plata	710
Las Palmas	584
Sansinena	545
La Blanca	543
Argentino	100

Total 4,232

Prices for WednesdaySALES.*Salaberry y Berceche—

From F. Madero: 198 cord. mat. at $6.00.

Coop. de Hacendados—

From Bocayuva: 26 ovejas mat. at $19.80, 41 at 17.50, 129 cord. frig. at 10.30; from Pehuajo: 50 cord. frig. at 9, 78 cord. mat. at 5.80.

Juan Lator—

From S. Spiritu: 60 eap. mat. at $23.40, 75 at 21; from De la Canal: 55 cap. mat. at 22.50, 69 at 21.50.

Gioja y Etchart—

From Castilla: 146 cap. frig. at $16.50, 30 ovejas mat. at 14, 14 eord. frig. at 10.90.

Pedro y Antonio Lanusse—

From Rivadavia: 40 cap. mat. at $23, 10 cap. frig. at 19.

Ignacio Goñi é Hijos—

From Cereales: 41 ovejas mat. at $17.10, 57 bgos. frig. at 14.50.

Juan Apheca y Cia.—

From Cereales: 89 cap. frig. at $15.50.

Miguel Ardoain—

From Doblas: 50 eap. frig. at $17, 330 at 13.20.

Florencio y Alfredo E. Lanús—

From Riglos: 100 eord. frig. at $12, 27 bgos. mat. at 11.40.

Eduardo Jolly

From La Verde: 40 cap. mat. at $23, 10 cap. frig. at 19, 25 cord. mat. at 4.50, 45 at 3.90.

Cueullu y Cavo—

From Del Carmen: 40 ovejas mat. at $14, 23 cap. frig. at 15, 42 at 18; from D. Alvear: 67 ovejas mat. at 22, 85 cap. frig. at 20, 136 eap. mat. at 22, 24 ovejas mat. at 18.10.

Bunge y Born—

From Chasico: 47 ovejas mat. at $25, 20 at 19, 121 eap. frig. at 17.60, 50 cord. frig. at 11.50, 37 at 9.50.

Mihura Hnos.—

From E. Rios: 104 ovejas mat. at $11, 15 bgos. mat. at 9.50, 20 cord. mat. at 5.30.

Patricio Ham—

From Triunvirato: 30 ovejas mat. at $21, 113 at 16, 10 cap. frig. at 18.50.

Accame y Bellini—

From Colon: 36 cap. frig. at $19.20, 15 bgos. frig. at 15.

Alejandro Schoo y Cia.—

From Blandengues: 77 cap. frig. at $18.60, 19 ovejas mat. at 15.

Juan Elordy y Cia.—

From Cereales: 100 cap. frig. at $17.70.

RAILWAY TRAFFICS.

The subjoined traffic returns for the week ending Sep. 11 are compared with the co. responding week of last year

Railway.	Gross Take	Increase or Decrease	Inc. or Dec. per mile	Miles Open	Aggregate from July 1st.	Increase or Decrease
	£	£	£	1914	1915	£
Central Railway	114,000	+ 12,000	+ 4 9 5	3,262	3,307	+157,000
Southern Railway	83,000	+ 20,000	+ 4 19 10	3,729	3,792	+116,000
Pacific Railway	91,000	+ 27,000	+ 7 11 1	3,517	3,534	+168,000
Western Railway	42,000	+ 5,000	+ 1 17 0	1,792	1,867	+ 74,000
Arg. North-Eastern Railway	7,052	+ 2,595	+ 2 13 11	667	752	+ 17,410
Central Cordoba	30,300	+ 12,359	+ 10 8 5	1,186	1,186	+ 31,194
Central Uruguay	15,726	+ 3,757	+ 3 16 10	978	978	+ 36,961
Entre Rios Railways	9,100	+ 2,000	+ 2 14 10	730	730	+ 14,300
	$	$	$			$
Province of Buenos Aires.	122,171	+ 33,667	+ 42.61	790	790	+518,891

GRAIN MARKETTERMINAL CEREAL MARKET.*First Ring.

No operations.

Second Ring.Maize.

For November — 200 tons at $1.77.

REGISTERED CONTRACTS.

(Delivered in Buenos Aires).

Maize.For October—800 tons at $4.68, 200 at 4.73 and 200 at 4.73. Total 1200.
For November—200 tons at $4.80.Official Prices.*Wheat.For September Darsena. . . $11.55
For October Darsena. . . 11.65
For January Darsena. . . 9.75Linseed.For September Darsena. . . 10.90
For October Darsena. . . 11.05
For November Darsena. . . 11.10
For January Darsena. . . 11.20Maize.For September Darsena. . . 4.60
For October Darsena. . . 4.65
For November Darsena. . . 4.75CHAMBER OF CEREALS
QUOTATIONS.*Prices in the Bolsa de Comercio.100 kilos waggon Darsena.
(Available).Linseed. 10.70
Wheat for bread. 11.70
Do Barletta for Europe. . . 11.00
Do do for bread. 10.90
Do do (Export Europe). . . 10.70
Do do (Export Brazil). . . 11.40
Oats Bahia Blanca. 5.60
Yellow maize. 5.50NATIONAL PRODUCE EXCHANGE.

(Rosario de Santa Fe).

First Ring.Maize.For November—200 tons at $4.55 and 600 at 4.54. Total 800.
For December—600 tons at $4.65.Second Ring.

No operations.

Official Prices.Wheat.For October. 11.95
For November. 11.65
Available. 11.85
For January. 9.40Linseed.For October. 10.35
For November. 10.60
Available. 10.30
For January. 10.80Maize.For October. 4.50
For November. 4.60
For December. 4.70
Available. 4.45In Rosario.Wheat No. 1. 12.20
Wheat No. 2. nominal
Linseed. 10.45
Maide. 4.35MEAT EXPORTS

The Sansinena Company have despatched to Bordeaux by the Amiral S. de Lamornaix 4760 quarters of frozen beef.

La Plata Cold Storage Company sent by the Highland Scot to London, 13,520 carcasses of mutton, 235 of lamb and 5,606 quarters of chilled beef. By the Demerara the same Company has sent from La Plata to Liverpool 20,316 quarters of frozen beef.

The Armour Frigorifico sent to Liverpool by the Demerara 3749 each fore and hind quarters frozen beef.

The Smithfield and Argentine Meat Company advise that they have despatched by the Vestris for New York 1688 fore and hind quarters of frozen beef. By the Highland Scot for London, the Smithfield and Argentine Meat Co. Ltd. have sent 1037 fore and 1035 hind quarters frozen beef.

La Plata Cold Storage Company advise despatch by Vestris from La Plata for New York of 1143 quarters frozen beef, 6000 carcasses of mutton, 2122 carcasses of lamb, and 5086 carcasses of chilled beef.

La Blanca Company have shipped by El Paraguay for Liverpool, 10496 quarters of frozen beef.

SALE OF SHORTHORN HEIFERSDISAPPOINTING TRADE.

Wednesday, Sept. 22

Yesterday afternoon, the Messrs. A. Bullrich and Co., sold that select lot of imported heifers belonging to Mr. A. J. Marshall, Bridgebank, Stranraer. Trade could not be reported as encouraging for the importation of such sweet class of heifers, which could not be considered as otherwise than a decided bargain to their purchasers, who from the sale list appear to be principally British firms. These animals would be quite likely to make quite as high prices in the land of their origin, without the extra risks and expenses incurred before they are submitted to auction in this Republic. Previous to the sale of Mr. Marshall's heifers, a select consignment of Lincoln rams were submitted for auction, when a very satisfactory trade was experienced at the splendid average of $794 a head.

1 Shorthorn heifer, "Queen of Beauty," sold to Sr. Bernardo Wirsch at $3,200.

1 Shorthorn heifer, "Bridgebank Amelia," sold to Sres. Drabble Bros. and Co., at $3,000.

1 Shorthorn heifer, "Bridgebank Helen," sold to Sres. Drabble Bros. and Co., at $3,000.

1 Shorthorn heifer, "Bridgebank Angeline," sold to Sr. Bernardo Wirsch, at $2,100.

1 Shorthorn heifer, "Bridgebank Annie," sold to Sr. Bernardo Wirsch, at $1,600.

1 Shorthorn heifer, "Bridgebank Rosette," sold to Sres. Degregory Hnos., at $3,700.

1 Shorthorn heifer, "Bridgebank Comely Empress," sold to Sres. Drabble Hnos. y Cia., at $2,700.

1 Shorthorn heifer, "Bridgebank Cecilia," sold to Sr. Mariano Casares, at $2,500.

1 Shorthorn heifer, "Bridgebank Ada," sold to Sr. P. A. Dawney, at $1,800.

1 Shorthorn heifer, "Bridgebank Silvia," sold to Sres. Drabble Hnos. and Co., at $2,500.

1 Shorthorn heifer, "Bridgebank Acacia," sold to Sr. P. A. Dawney, at $1,800.

1 Shorthorn heifer, "Bridgebank Butterfly," sold to Sr. Mariano Casares, at $1,700.

1 Shorthorn heifer, "Bridgebank Fairy," sold to San Juan Land Co., at $1,600.

1 Shorthorn heifer, "Bridgebank Goldie," sold to Sres. Drabble Bros. and Co., at $2,600.

1 Shorthorn heifer, "Bridgebank Daisy," sold to Sr. Felix G. de Alzaga, at $1,700.

1 Shorthorn heifer, "Bridgebank Red Rose," sold to Sr. Mariano Casares, at $2,000.

1 Shorthorn heifer, "Bridgebank Rita," sold to Sr. Mariano Casares, at $1,200.

The foregoing heifers gave an average price of $2,282.

On account of Messrs. E. N. Casares and Sons:—

1 Shorthorn cow, "Fantailich Princess," sold to Sr. Martin Alzaga, at $900.

1 Shorthorn cow, "Laton Amelia," with bull calf, sold to Sr. M. Alzaga, at $950 each.

1 Shorthorn cow, "Stella of Bardrill," with heifer calf, sold to Sr. Gabriel Giralt, at $450 each.

1 Shorthorn cow, "Red Rose," with heifer calf, sold to Sr. Pedro Estanquet, at $500 each.

1 Shorthorn cow, "May Queen," with heifer calf, sold to Sucesión Felipe Martinez at $620 each.

Australian Wool ExportsPERMITTED TO ALLIES, CANADA AND THE STATES.

Melbourne, Sept. 21.

The Commonwealth is permitting the export of crossbred wools to the Allies, to Canada and to the United States.

PHILIP & CARRUTHERS

Camp and Live Stock Agents

Calle Cangallo 456

BUENOS AIRES

U.T. 3881 Avenida

WANTED: Heavy Horses suitable for Exportation.*On Sale: Imported and Camp Bulls of all Breeds, Rams, Pigs, etc.*SALE OF IMPORTED BULLS

On September 17 Messrs. Yriondo and Co. submitted to auction, a number of Shorthorn bulls, imported by the well-known firm of Messrs. Sidey and Poels. There was a large attendance of estancieros and interested spectators; but trade has to be reported as slow, considering the merit of many of the animals in the catalogue. "Luino," a winner of many prizes in Scotland, passed into the ownership of Sr. Guillermo Alston, "La Carlota," who can be congratulated on acquiring this magnificent animal at the very moderate price of $8,900. "Harbinger" was sold to Sr. Miguel A. Carcano; price $1900. "Harbour Master" was sold to Sr. Juan José Edwards, on commission; price $2000. "Admiral" was sold to Sr. Jacolio Sardoy; price $2100. "Rozelle" was sold to Sr. Miguel A. Carcano; price $1600. The other animals catalogued realised prices on the two thousand dollar line.

Following the sale of bulls, Mr. Miller's sheep were next put up for auction when trade can be reported as animated, and late values were obtained, the highest price being $2200, for a very good sheep, which had many admirers.

"MARSHALL" SHORTHORN SALE

Messrs. Adolfo Bullrich sold on Sept. 16 a select lot of ten Shorthorn bulls imported by Mr. A. J. Marshall, of "Bridgebank," Stranraer, Scotland, some of them being bred by him, and the others coming from well known herds. The following were the buyers and the prices realised:—José Cardinale ($2,100 and $2,000); Aranje ($2,000); Muranda ($2,100, $2,000 and $1,900); Juan Frazer ($2,500); E. Cardosa ($1,900); Degregory Hnos. ($2,000), and E. Caprili ($1,900).

SALES OF IMPORTED SHEEPHIGH PRICES REALISED.

Two important sales of imported sheep were conducted on Sept. 16 by Messrs. Adolfo Bullrich and Co., and high prices were realised. Thirteen young Lincoln rams, lambed last year, bred by Mr. Fred G. Battle of Potter-Hanworth, Lincolnshire, realised an average of just on $640, the highest price being $1,600 for "Battle 751" and the lowest $450.

A lot of ten Romney Marsh hogs, sold for Messrs. L. H. and G. W. Finn brought prices ranging from $340 to $410.

"The Open Door"BRITAIN'S FUTURE POLICY IN CHINA.

London, Sept. 22.

Sir Edward Grey, British Foreign Minister, has formally announced that in China Britain's policy in the future will be, as it has been in the past, the maintenance of the "open door."

It has been feared in some American commercial circles that, on account of Britain's close relations with Japan, this policy might have been modified.

Satisfaction has been expressed at the assurance.

TROUBLE IN TURKEYFOMENTED BY RELIGIOUS TEACHERS.

London, Sept. 21.

Athens sends statements based on information from Constantinople that there is great agitation among the Moslem Priesthood, who show an inclination to give trouble to the Young Turk Party and Enver Pasha. Among the Mullahs generally there is profound distrust and anger against the German officers and it is feared that the people, incited by their religious teachers, will rise against them.

It is known that this attitude of the priesthood has made a strong impression upon the Sultan and will probably create fresh complications.

PERFECT FENCING

— from the —
ONLY Factory for Wire
Moulding.

C. DELVEAUX,
Rivadavia 2247, Bs. As.

U.T. 3618 Mitre

PASSENGER LISTS

N.S.N.C. HIGHLAND PRIDE.

The Nelson liner Highland Pride arrived on September 21 in the North Basin from London. Among the saloon passengers were:—

Mr. and Miss Brown, Mrs. M. L. Buckley, Miss A. M. Cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Deakin, Miss E. G. Hudson, Mr. William Hardy, Mr. Arthur Kirk, Mr. B. B. Kent, Mrs. Kyle and family, Mr. H. O'Neill, Mr. and Mrs. Pilling, Mr. G. G. Rudd, Mr. E. Rudd, Mrs. J. Rehel, Mr. H. E. Walker, Mr. and Mrs. H. Werchmeister, Miss C. Knowles, Mr. Benigno Canga, Mrs. Ignacia Martin, Mrs. Hodges and family, etc.

R.M.S.P. DARRO.

The following passengers arrived late on September 20 on the R.M.S.P. Darro:—

Mr. Marcelino Aguilar, Mr. Frederick Barton, Mrs. R. Boedo and Misses Lucia, Genoveva, Ramona and Ester Boedo, Mr. Bertram Chatlesworth, Mr. Francisco S. P. Correa, Mr. Pablo Correa, Miss Maria Fernandez Diaz, Mrs. J. Fraser and Fly, Mrs. A. A. Gray, Miss A. M. Gragon, Mr. F. S. Hodge, Mr. B. A. Hutchinson, Mrs. I. Kleiner, Miss Elen Lawrence, Mr. and Mrs. V. Longo, Mr. Julio Mirani, Mrs. C. MacDonald and Miss F. Donald, Mrs. D. S. Nelson, Mr. J. Otegui, Master S. Sykes, Mr. N. L. Tweedie, Mrs. M. J. Thomas.

R.M.S.P. AVON.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Woodman Burbridge, Mr. and Mrs. D. Banks, Mr. and Mrs. G. S. Barker, Mr. J. Borel, Mr. C. H. Bennett, Mr. G. Barrell, Mrs. A. Catarini, Mr. and Mrs. R. da Cunha and Mr. M. A. da Cunha, Mr. and Mrs. J. de Castro, Mr. V. Cappadona, Mr. A. V. R. Dunne, Mr. A. Danon, Mrs. E. M. Elliott, Mr. V. Fogli, Mr. A. C. Gardiner, Mr. A. Garrido, Mr. A. E. Hartley, Mrs. M. L. Henderson, Miss I. Jones, Mr. L. J. Koller, Lieut. F. L. Merriman, Mr. J. S. Milton, Mr. W. T. Nolting, Mr. A. O. Northman, Mr. R. Patterson, Mr. H. A. Porter, Mrs. F. Phillips and Miss Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Pickles, Mr. and Mrs. G. Pellas, Mrs. F. Poggi, Miss L. Reynolds, Mr. and Mrs. Raison, Mr. W. Salter, Mr. C. J. de Souza, Miss J. A. Tournier, Miss F. Verbist, Messrs. J. and M. Violin, Mr. H. E. Walter.

HOMEWARD FIXTURES

The following vessels (says the "Times of Argentina") were fixed last week to load homeward:—

s.s. Grangemoor, 5000, 10 per cent., Oct. (no reduction), San Lorenzo, U. K., grain, 60½.

s.s. Silksworth Hall, 6000, 10 per cent., Oct., Bahia Blanca, London, oats, 62½.

s.s. Alcana, 5000, 10 per cent., Oct., (no reduction), La Plata, New York, grain, 36½.

s.s. Hova, 6000, 10 per cent., pr. (no reduction), San Lorenzo, New York, grain, 38½.

s.s. Farringford, 4500, 10 per cent., pr., San Lorenzo, U. K., grain, 57½, option New York, 38½.

s.s. Don Emilio, 5300, 10 per cent., pr., (no reduction), San Lorenzo, U. K., grain, 56½.

s.s. Roddam, 5000, 10 per cent., Oct., berth terms, n/a Villa, New York linseed, 38½.

A 4500, 10 per cent., s.s. Nov. can. (no reduction), San Lorenzo, Bristol, grain, 60½.

Deckspace s.s. Glenfinlas, pr., Buenos Aires, La Pallice, horses, £9 10 0.

Sailer Edith Jones, 1600, Oct.-Nov., Buenos Aires, Philadelphia, bones, £2,350.

IN THE OFFICE CHAIR

*"And in some corner of the hubbub coucht
Make game of that which makes as much of thee."*

OMAR KHAYYAM.

More Shekels.

Thanks to Mr. Self Reliance for his contribution to the Motor Ambulance Fund. One seems to have met him in "The Pilgrim's Progress," but there are others at large apparently from the same parts, but of a very different sort. Among these we seem, during the last few days, to have had glimpses of Mr. Envy, Mr. Feeblemind, Mr. Blindman, Mr. Malice, and Mr. Supercilious, but one cannot be certain. Mr. Envy and Mr. Malice have been recognised, however, and the others are usually joined to that fellowship. They will let Mr. Self Reliance alone, for they love him not, nor any that be of his way of thinking.

*"Guilt was my grim Chamberlain,
And ushered me to bed;
And drew my midnight curtains round,
With fingers bloody red."*

Readers of Ingoldsby may remember in the famous "Legends" one piece, "The Devil's Dinner Party," at which Sir Guy le Scroop had the undesired honour of entertaining "The Great Muckle Deil himsel" and 9999 other fiends, including all the best Society of the most exclusive circles of Hell. In respect to the character of the guests, Grand Admiral Von Turpitude's banquet to the Commanders (the surviving Commanders, a reduced number) of the submarines operating in the murder area, bears a considerable resemblance to that festive gathering. Not that they will, as did the Fiends of the Pit, get intoxicated. They are too careful for that, but the resemblance consists in the congregation of beings round one table who have committed deeds so atrocious that they will be quoted for ages as parallels to Judas for treachery and to Herod for bloody-mindedness. And what kind of spirits can the presence of such creatures attract to the habitation in which so many are at once assembled. The final instructions for "modification" (save the mark!) of the campaign, will not be issued until the laggards, who are still out, arrive. Some will never come. The Deep Sea and the Cannibal Fish have them.

*"And lang lang may their leddies sit,
Wi' the gowd kaims in their hand;
Before they see those traitors fause
Come sailing to the land."*

"This is Miching Mallecho—it means mischief."

Ferdinando of Bulgaria, that astute schemer, and the State of which he is King, are at present the "Cynosure of all (political) eyes." In the troubled days that succeeded the deposition of Alexander of Battenberg, whose services met an evil recompense, the present Tsar of Bulgaria was an Austrian officer, emptying his pitcher of beer in front of the Vienna cafés like others of his class. It is, indeed, reported that he was so engaged when the report of his high destiny was brought to him, and forgot to pay for his drink in consequence. From what one has seen of his political abilities and his genius for intrigue, it is very unlikely the amount was ever collected. He is a very dark horse, and like Napoleon III. at one period, "only the Devil knows what he means," but the fate of the too clever may overtake him yet, of falling between two stools, or waiting too long and backing the wrong side at last. At present his intention looks very like "seconding a villain and a murderer," and stabbing Serbia in the back.

Financial Prestidigitation.

Subsequent explanation or correction may modify the opinion, but at present Mr Mackenna's Budget does not appear to be one to glad the heart of the people. It indeed has very much the appearance of pressing unduly on the poor and those of the Middle Class, whose life is one long struggle. Tea, coffee, chicory are necessities of life to them, so, strangely, are Patent Medicines also. So to many is tobacco, while the increase on sugar is simply staggering. Nor is the abolition of ½d. postage a popular measure. The income Tax example also given is most unequal, for if the man with 55s. per week pay 12½ per quarter, he with £5000 per annum should pay not 1029 shillings or £519, but something in excess of £84, a vast disproportion. With the taxes on Imported Motors (which have been expected), imported bicycles, hats, glass, etc., no one need quarrel, they are war taxes or they might be said to have a strong resemblance to Tariff Reform; nor need the taxes on War Profits be objected to (except by the profitters). One cannot please everybody, but some features in this Budget are likely to please nobody.

TO "BRITON"

(With Compliments from a Conscience-stricken culprit). — Vide THE HERALD, Friday, Sept. 17).

Oh, greatly it grieved our worthy friend "Briton" The sad "lapsus linguae," he recently lit on! With true journalistic and shocked indignation, He scorneth "donate"—but (oh, no!) not "donation"! His pure soul inflated with righteous inflation, His heart palpitates with annoyed palpitation: Yet the world still gyrates with its usual gyration, Located in space in the same old location, Situated as always in that situation, It continues rotating in daily rotation, Though not lubricated with his lubrication Of ink, emanating with strong emanation From "Office Chair" quarters, which, in condemnation, Culminates with a "whooping," "slipshod" culmination: Now with this termination I'll here terminate, And these verses to "Briton" "present"—not "donate"!

[Times are hard and the smallest contributions will be thankfully received.

If the talented author of the above wishes to intimate his desire to "donate," "present," give away or in any other manner, wise or description of way bestows anything of value upon the said Briton, who being a North Briton declines to accept anything not coming under the aforementioned definition—he is hereby, affectionally entreated to step up lively.]

BRITON.

SHIPPING NOTES.

NIPPON YUSEN KAISHA.

An extraordinary meeting of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha, was recently held at Tokio. The directors of this Company have adopted a conservative policy for many years, and instead of paying large dividends, which the earnings would have justified, have built up the reserves of the Company under eight different headings until on 31st March, with a paid-up capital of £2,200,000, the reserves totalled no less than £4,624,569. Under the proposed reconstruction the capital of the Company is doubled, and a bonus declared of £825,000, or 37½ per cent., while the directors and auditors are to have £20,000 divided between them. £10,000 is to be spent in souvenirs to be presented to the employees, agents, etc., a bonus of £135,000 is to be divided amongst the employees ashore and afloat, and £50,000 is set aside as a reward and relief fund for seamen, firemen, etc.

Buenos Aires Herald

Weekly Illustrated Edition

CORRIENTES 672

Proprietor: THOMAS BELL.

All communications for the Editorial Department should be addressed to The Editor. Business letters should be addressed to The Manager. It is particularly requested that correspondence of an editorial or business nature should not be addressed to Mr. Bell, or to anyone personally, otherwise delay and inconvenience will result.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

WEEKLY.

Town or Camp:

Yearly $ 14 00
Half yearly " 7 50
Quarterly " 4 00

Other Countries:

Yearly (f1.13s.0d.) . . . $ 19 30 m/l
Half-yearly (17s.6d.) . . . " 10 00
Quarterly (8s.7d.) . . . " 5 50

DAILY.

Town or Camp:

Yearly $ 20 00 m/l
Half-yearly " 11 00
Quarterly " 6 00
Per month " 2 00

Other Countries:

Per annum (f3.7s.3d.) . . $ 38 50 m/l
POST FREE; PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.

THE MAILS.

TO ARRIVE IN SEPTEMBER.

- 24.—French by SEQUANA.
25.—Dutch by ZEELANDIA.

TO LEAVE IN SEPTEMBER.

- 24.—Brazil, Cape Verde, Spain, Portugal, France and Great Britain by AVON. Mails close at 8 a.m. Double postage till 4 p.m.
25.—Brazil, Greece, Egypt and Italy by LUISIANA. Mails close at 8 a.m.
25.—Malvinas, Punta Arenas, Chili, Central America and Panama by ORIANA. Mails close at 4 p.m.
28.—London direct by HIGHLAND PRIDE. Mails close at 8 a.m. Double postage till 4 p.m.
30.—Brazil, West Indies, Central and North American by VAUBAN. Mails close at 8 a.m. Double postage till 4 p.m.

BIRTH.

PINSENT.—Rosario de Santa Fe, at Calle Entre Rios No. 251, the wife of Sidney Hume Pinsent, of a son. 819 k19

MARRIAGE.

DULEY-HUDSON.—On Wednesday, 22nd instant, at St. Saviour's, Belgrano, Charles E. W. Duley, only son of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Duley of Tunbridge Wells, to Ettie Gladys, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Hudson of Tunbridge Wells, Kent. 978 k23

DEATH.

PENNINGTON.—On the 16th September, at Quilmes, Mrs. Mary Ellen Pennington, mother of W. A. Stuart Pennington of San Fernando, in the 89th years of her age.

CONTRABAND OF WAR

U.S. GOODS ON NORWEGIAN SHIPS.

London, Sept. 16.

The Prize Court has given sentence condemning as contraband the greater part of the American goods found on board of four Norwegian steamers. According to the manifests, these were worth some millions of dollars, and will all be confiscated.

HEAVY LOSS TO PACKERS.

New York, Sept. 16.

Referring to the action of the British Prize Court, the Chicago meat cargoes confiscated in certain Norwegian steamers will be a total loss to the Packers who despatched them according to Mr. Thomas Wilson of the Morris Packing Company as, no advance payments had been received on the shipments.

Buenos Aires Herald

ILLUSTRATED WEEKLY EDITION

39th Year. New Series, No. 585

Buenos Aires, Friday, October 1st, 1915

Price 30 Cents

GERMANS LOSE THREE ARMY CORPS

Disastrous Result of Three Days Battle

BRITISH FORCES CONTINUE THE OFFENSIVE IN FLANDERS.

German Lines Show Signs of Weakening

SINCE THE FIRST DESPATCHES WERE PUBLISHED ANNOUNCING THE EARLY SUCCESSES OF SIR JOHN FRENCH'S ARMY, THE FOLLOWING OFFICIAL STATEMENT HAS BEEN RECEIVED BY THE BRITISH LEGATION IN BUENOS AIRES FROM THE FOREIGN OFFICE, LONDON:

September 27th (12.30 a.m.)

"There has been severe fighting to-day on ground won by us yesterday, the enemy making determined counter-attacks to the East and North of Loos.

"The result of this fighting is that, except just North of Loos itself, we hold all the ground gained yesterday, including the whole of Loos itself.

"This evening we retook quarries North West of Hulluch which were won and lost yesterday: We have in this fighting drawn in the enemy's reserves, thus enabling the French on our right to make further progress.

"The number of prisoners collected after yesterday's fighting amounts to 2600, nine guns have been taken and considerable number of machine guns.

"Our aeroplanes to-day bombed and derailed train near Loffres, East of Douai and another which was full of troops at Rosult near Stamand. Valenciennes Station was also bombarded."

FRENCH OFFICIAL STATEMENT

Paris, Sept. 27.

The official announcement of recent operations in the north of France is as follows:

"On the morning of September 25 we commenced an important action in the Champagne district. Our long range guns had previously cannonaded at various points the railway at the back of the German lines, and destroyed the stations of Bazencourt and Challerouge.

FIRST LINE TAKEN WITHOUT AN EFFORT.

"After a violent bombardment of the enemy's trenches and defence works, our troops with a magnificent dash assaulted the German lines between Suippe and the Aisne along a front of 25 kilometres. The attack was made simultaneously along the whole line, passing south of Auberville, north of Souain, north of Perthes-les-Hourllous, Massiges and Ville-sur-Tourbes. The whole of the enemy's first line of defence was taken without an effort.

FRENCH ARTILLERY ADVANCES.

"By the afternoon the ground conquered covered a length of 25 kilometres and a depth of 3 to 4 kilometres. Our artillery immediately advanced.

"The second line which was hastening to reinforce the attacking first line commenced to-day the attack on the second German position which extends to the south of Py, a distance of over 15 kilometres. The whole of the line was engaged in the action. Our troops, excited by the success of the first attack, are full of courage and confidence.

17,000 GERMANS TAKEN.

"The number of unwounded prisoners captured in the Champagne region amounts so far to 17,000. The abundant war material abandoned by the enemy in his flight has not yet been inventoried, but up to the present 24 guns have been sent to the rear.

SOUCHEZ IN HANDS OF THE FRENCH.

"At Artois yesterday we took Carleul castle, the village and cemetery of Souchez and the enemy's first lines north of Neuville, capturing 1,000 prisoners, including 18 officers. This afternoon we have pressed forward towards Givenchy and Farbus. The action is continuing.

BRITISH ARMY'S SPLENDID SUPPORT.

"The British army took possession during the day of the German trenches south of the La Bassée canal, gaining four kilometres of ground along a front of over six kilometres. They have occupied the village of Loos and a strip to the west of Hulluch, and have taken 2500 prisoners, five field guns and many machine guns.

"The total number of unwounded prisoners taken by the Allies in two days comes to over 20,000."

London, Sept. 29.

Despatches received by the War Office report that the Allies are continuing the offensive in Flanders with appreciable success.

There are good reasons to expect that very shortly they will have made progress of great importance. The losses sustained by the British to-day have not been of great numerical importance.

GERMANS LOSE THREE ARMY CORPS.

Paris, Sept. 29.

The French Government has allowed the publication of the following particulars concerning the result of the recent battle in the north of France and Flanders.

The Germans were not only compelled to abandon strongly entrenched positions along a considerable extent of front, which they had been ordered to defend to the last, but they have sustained losses in killed, wounded and prisoners, the total of which exceeds the effective strength of three army corps.

The number of prisoners captured by the French is now over 23,000. Seventy-nine guns have been taken to the rear of the French lines, and 17,055 prisoners, including 316 officers have passed through Chalons to the concentration camps.

The field of battle is now being cleared up, and the arms of all kinds with great quantities of war material left by the enemy in the trenches are being collected and sorted out.

FRENCH SUCCESS NEAR SOUCHEZ.

Paris, Sept. 29.

The official bulletin issued by the War Office this afternoon states:—

"In the Artois region the progress reported yesterday to the east of Souchez continued. At the end of the day and during the night we pushed on fighting fiercely until we occupied Hill 140, the culminating point of the Vimy hills and of the orchard gardens to the south of that point.

"The number of unwounded prisoners taken during this action was over 300, belonging chiefly to two divisions of the Guard.

ENTHUSIASM IN ENGLAND

WIDESPREAD REJOICINGS

New York, Sept. 27.

The London correspondent of the "New York Herald" telegraphs:—

"There is extraordinary enthusiasm in England over the news of the victory won by the Allies in the West. Last night thanksgiving services were held in all the churches in the country, Catholic, Protestant and Dissenting, which were attended by thousands of people.

"Military men consider that the British advance north and south of La Bassée eclipses the battle of Neuve Chapelle. The general opinion is that it is the most brilliant action since the defeat inflicted upon the Germans at the battle of the Marne.

FRENCH TROOPS SHATTER GERMAN WALL OF IRON.

"However, although it is true that the British advance is a great feat, it loses part of its importance in comparison with the victory gained by the French in the Champagne, where the wall of iron opposed by the Germans was smashed into fragments by the valiant French army which penetrated the enemy's lines to a depth of three miles, capturing over 20,000 soldiers.

"The German losses, according to the tales told by the prisoners, have been terrible, both sides fighting with extraordinary recklessness.

BRITISH AND FRENCH FIGHT SIDE BY SIDE.

"North of Arras French and British fought side by side and caused terrific losses on the enemy, compelling them to abandon positions which had been considered impregnable.

"All reports agree that during the two days of desperate fighting which is still going on the Anglo-French forces displayed an undoubted superiority.

"In the Champagne district the fighting goes on ceaselessly all along the front. To the north of Massiges more groups of Germans surrendered. The total amounted to about a thousand during the night in that sector alone.

"There has been no action of importance elsewhere along the front.

"The enemy violently cannonaded our trenches south and north of the Aisne, in the regions of Duboit, Saint Mard, Troyon and Vrilli. We replied energetically."

BRITISH OFFENSIVE IN THE YPRES ZONE.

Amsterdam, Sept. 29.

The fighting in Flanders continues with extraordinary violence. The British are attacking in great force in the Ypres zone and are inflicting very heavy punishment on the enemy. At the same time the British North Sea flotilla continues to bombard the German positions along the Belgian coast.

ANOTHER BRITISH VICTORY

Announced in the House of Commons

TURKS DEFEATED IN MESOPOTAMIA

Sultan's Troops in Full Retreat Towards Baghdad.

London, Sept. 29.

It is officially announced that the British have won a great victory in Mesopotamia.

The Turks are in full retreat towards Baghdad.

ANNOUNCEMENT IN THE COMMONS.

London, Sept. 29.

The important success won by the British troops in Mesopotamia was in the region between the Euphrates and the Tigris. The British forces are in full pursuit of the fleeing Turks.

This new success of the British arms was announced in the House of Commons to-day by Mr. Chamberlain.

Advices from Athens state that an important British campaign is under way in Asiatic Turkey, with, as its first objective, the seizure of the routes of communication with the Baghdad district.

Other despatches from Athens say that an allied expeditionary force is assembled on the islands of the Aegean ready to be landed in Greek territory for assisting the Greeks and Serbians against the Bulgarians.

Turks Dispersed

RUSSIAN SUCCESS IN THE CAUCASUS.

Petrograd, Sept. 29.

A despatch from headquarters at Tiflis states that the Russian army in the Caucasus has been reinforced by several fresh divisions of troops and large quantities of munitions.

There have been several engagements in which the Russians have not only repulsed the enemy's counter-attacks, but have gained ground along the greater part of their front.

There has been an encounter in the Olti region, the Turkish cavalry which was scouting having been dispersed with the loss of many of their number and much of their war material.

CHAOS IN CONSTANTINOPLE

NO GAS. ELECTRICITY, NOR WORK.

London, Sept. 23.

A telegram via Switzerland from Constantinople states that the life of foreigners in that city is nearly intolerable. There is no gas, nor electricity, nor candles. 2000 workers at Krupps in Constantinople are idle owing to lack of raw material from Berlin.

Australians for Turkey

12,000 MEN PASS ALGECIRAS.

Madrid, Sept. 29.

Advices have been received from Algeciras that several British transports escorted by warships with 12,000 Australian troops for the Dardanelles have touched at that port.

Relieving Russia

EFFECT OF THE ALLIES' OFFENSIVE IN THE WEST.

London, Sept. 29.

Military critics here have noted the almost instantaneous relief afforded to the Russian front between Dvinsky and Osmiana by the assumption of the offensive by the Allies in the West, which has resulted in the withdrawal of the whole of the German Guard corps from Vilna. They expect that this transfer will be followed by others of like character.

This relief is very welcome. General Von Eichhorn's thrust across the Russian communications in the Molodchino region was still serious, and its danger to the Russian retreat had not entirely ended.

General Kuropatkin has been appointed to the command of an army corps.

BERLIN LESS HOPEFUL.

Amsterdam, Sept. 29.

Discussing the situation in the East in the columns of the "Berliner Tageblatt," Major Moraht says:—

"Our battlefront in East Galicia and north-east of Volhynia is restricted at present to a defensive. Here General Ivanoff has undoubtedly been fortunate. He understood how to render harmless our threatening flank movements on the north and south battlefront. The Volhynian triangle of fortresses must be conquered later.

GERMAN ARMY CORPS LOST IN RUSSIAN SWAMPS.

London, Sept. 29.

The "Times" publishes a telegram from its correspondent in Petrograd confirming the intelligence that the 41st German army corps was overtaken and surrounded by floods in the Pinsk lagoons district, and that almost every man was drowned.

GERMANS RETAKE LUTSK.

London, Sept. 29.

The Russian troops continue to hold their own in the Dvinsk region of northern Poland, and to win new successes in their aggressive campaign in Galicia.

In the Dubno-Lutsk district the Germans have been reinforced and have recaptured the fortress of Lutsk.

Allies Reinforced

IMPORTANT DEVELOPMENTS EXPECTED ON GALLIPOLI PENINSULA.

Athens, Sept. 29.

Despatches from Tenedos announce that the British warships have been bombarding the Turkish fortifications with short intervals.

Fresh expeditionary troops were landed this morning on Gallipoli. The offensive of the Allies is progressing slowly, but an action on a large scale is expected very soon.

Germans Weakening

POSSIBILITY OF WITHDRAWAL ALONG THE WHOLE FRONT.

London, Sept. 29.

The military critics agree in considering that the results of the Allies' offensive have been excellent.

The French have consolidated the positions they gained in the Champagne; they are threatening new and important German lines and are constantly receiving abundant reinforcements.

It is daily noticeable that the German ranks are getting weaker, and a withdrawal along their whole front is imminent.

The heroism of the French troops has elicited the warmest praise in the military circles of this city.

Germans Insane and Dumb

APPALLING EFFECT OF ALLIES' ARTILLERY FIRE.

Paris, Sept. 29.

Among other interesting details of the recent engagement in the Champagne region, it is stated that the great offensive was commanded personally by Marshal Joffre, who was seated at a long kitchen table at a small hotel in the rear of the firing line. With him were his adjutants and telephone messengers with the receivers glued to their ears, taking reports of what was going on at the front and giving orders to the officers of the attacking columns.

For twenty-four hours the French Commander-in-Chief sat there without intermission, conning over the situation and eating nothing. Suddenly he jumped up with a laugh and exclaimed:—"Good! It is all over. And now let us have something to eat."

Observed from a distance, the field of battle presented a most fantastic appearance. The scene was lit up by green tinted lights, the rays of which penetrated the murky atmosphere and revealed the troops engaged in a Titanic struggle where in quarter was neither asked nor given. From the wide circle surrounding the arena of battle tongues of flame flashed from batteries concealed by the undulations of the ground.

In this battle the Germans were beaten, and thoroughly beaten. The attacking forces were divided into three columns, those on the right and left advancing while the centre remained where it was, waiting until the two wings, like a gigantic forceps, began to converge. When the wings had advanced far enough, the centre, which was to administer the coup de grace, also advanced picking up regiment after regiment which had been taken in the toils.

One of the most awful details of the battle was the great number of German artillerymen who had gone out of their minds in consequence of the terrific bombardment of the French batteries. The French wounded say that they saw groups of German soldiers huddled together beside their guns without trying to fire a shot. Some were dumb; others sat with chattering teeth, while others uttered unmeaning cries.

Supplies for Germany?

SCANDINAVIAN STEAMERS DETAINED IN SCOTLAND.

London, Sept. 29.

The authorities at Leith have detained the Danish steamer California, bound from New York to Christiania with general cargo.

At Kirkwall the Swedish steamer Helsingborg has been detained. She was bound from Port Arthur, Texas, to Aarhus with a cargo of cotton-seed.

The Rush for the Trenches

WOUNDED SOLDIER DESCRIBES FRENCH ASSAULT ON GERMAN POSITIONS.

Paris, Sept. 29.

The "Echo de Paris" publishes a statement by a soldier who was wounded in the recent battle in the Champagne region. Describing the operations, he says:—

"My regiment was acting as support. For three days there had been an appalling din of artillery firing, as day and night the big guns hurled shells without respite against the enemy's positions.

"We infantrymen who were waiting for the end began to get impatient. On Saturday we ate a hearty meal and then looked over our arms. Finally at noon our chiefs shouted 'Forward!'

"We began to yell like men possessed. With a single bound we were out of the trenches. It was pretty hot in front of us. The boys who had gone ahead were doing good work and were already beyond the German trenches; but we reached, in our turn at the double, trenches which were filled up to the brim with dead Germans.

"Further on we saw enormous craters in which many Germans had been buried by the falling earth. Here and there a boot was protruding, and we tugged at them to see if any were living; but we did not stop long but pushed on.

"To our right we saw a strong contingent of Germans in a sheltered pit with machine guns; but they did not last long, for we fell upon them with the bayonet. It was a pretty stiff bit of bayonet exercise, but seeing themselves done for the survivors held up their hands. Some of them, although prisoners, continued firing, and my left hand was pierced by a revolver bullet fired pointblank by an artilleryman. My captain knocked him down with a blow in the chest."

The German Version

"BRITISH PURSUED TO THEIR OWN TRENCHES."

New York, Sept. 20.

A despatch from Berlin to the United Press Agency, sent via The Hague, says:—

"The first rush of the Anglo-French armies in the West was met and stopped, and the second rush promises to be dealt with even more effectively. We have every confidence that what was planned as a great offensive movement will crumble into mere trench warfare before the end of the present week.

"In spite of the check administered by the Germans on Sunday night and early on Monday, the Allies are expected to return to the attack. The opinion prevails here that the onslaught against the German positions will last for at least a week, unless a disaster like that experienced by the British at Neuve Chapelle halts operations.

"Neither the British nor the French have dented the German line. The successes they attained during the first few hours were due solely to their long artillery preparation. On the second day, no such easy task confronted the French infantry. Their artillery had not caused great damage to our second line of trenches, and from behind these works the Germans maintained themselves without yielding ground.

"In the north, the British were halted before they reached our wire entanglements, thrown back by our fire and then pursued to their own trenches. There were no further gains in any sector from Arras to the North Sea."

BERLIN VIA BUDA-PEST AND BRESLAU

Masterly Strategic Move by the Allies

RUMOURED LANDING IN MACEDONIA

Important Developments Anticipated at the Dardanelles

New York, Sept. 29.

A despatch from Athens via Paris, says:—

"It is believed here that we are on the eve of the most important operation of the war, namely the landing of troops in Macedonia to begin a march, not so much on Constantinople as on Berlin.

"Two offensive forces are gradually closing in. The Mesopotamia expedition is approaching nearer Baghdad, and from Suvla Bay and the Gaba Tepe line the attack upon Constantinople may begin at any moment."

RUMOURED LANDING OF ALLIED ARMY.

New York, Sept. 29.

A wireless from Berlin reports a rumour that the Anglo-French troops sent to support Serbia have landed at the port of Kathria near Salonica.

The strength of the contingents is unknown.

GREECE EAGER FOR WAR.

London, Sept. 29.

The "Evening Mail" says that Bulgaria has not replied to Sir Edward Grey's friendly warning; but despatches from Athens and other points say that a change has been noted at Sofia and events are now less likely to take a turn unfavourable to the Entente.

Mr. Compton Mackenzie, the brilliant young author of "Carnival" and other novels, writes from Athens:

"My opinion is that the cooperation of Greece with the Allies will begin the last chapter of the war. One more gap in the iron ring round Austria and Germany is being closed. The final victory will be fought out on the plains of Hungary. The way to Berlin lies through Buda Pest and Breslau.

"The successes of the Allies on the western front are having a visible effect upon the situation. In Greece the people are enthusiastically in favour of war. The Government's opposition to military measures is no longer evident. Part of the element which has heretofore resisted Greece's cooperation with the Entente has done so in the fear that they would be unable to win the war."

Teuton Bombmen

ATTEMPT TO DESTROY ITALIAN LINERS AT NEW YORK.

New York, Sept. 28.

Owing to suspicions which had been aroused the harbour police here visited the vessels lying in the anchorage and discovered eight dynamite cartridges which had been placed on board steamers of the Sicilian-American line.

It is believed that an attempt was made to blow up the steamer San Guglielmo which left the night before last for Naples with 800 reservists aboard.

Allies Victory Unexpected

DEEP IMPRESSION IN BERLIN.

London, Sept. 28.

It is reported from Copenhagen that since the 15th instant telegraphic and postal communication with Germany has been subject to specially strict censorship. The same proceedings have been adopted in regard to wireless communications with the United States, which, it is stated, have been interrupted by an obstruction at Sayville.

The latest war news from both fronts has produced a great impression in all Germany, especially in Berlin. The victory in the western arena was unexpected, as the Press had not presaged the probability of an offensive in those regions. Uneasiness and uncertainty prevails in the country.

Welshmen Not British!

STRANGE GERMAN BELIEF.

London, Sept. 29.

A Mr. Francis Gribble, a writer of advanced age, who had been detained for some time in the concentration camp at Ruhleben, where the British civilians are kept, has just arrived in London, having been released. He says that among the British prisoners are several Argentines who used to figure in British society in Berlin, and that, according to what he has been told him by German officials, they are compelled to sleep on the ground.

Mr. Gribble also states that several Welshmen were released on the ground that the Germans did not consider them British.

He says it is a significant fact that many of the youths of the last class are not being made to pass a medical examination, as the military authorities require over 200,000 recruits.

British Transport Sunk

RESCUED INDIANS LANDED IN GREECE.

Athens, Sept. 29.

The Government has consented to the landing, en route for Malta, of the Indian troops rescued from the British transport Ramazan, 2477 tons, which was sunk by a German submarine in the Mediterranean.

Driven from Home

CONSTANTINOPLE BANKS TRANSFERRED TO ASIA MINOR.

New York, Sept. 28.

A telegram from London to the "Evening Sun" reports that the leading banks in Constantinople are removing their funds to Asia Minor, and that the inhabitants along the coast of the Sea of Marmora have been ordered to hold themselves in readiness to move.

EXIT "LITTLE WILLIE"

Von Mackensen Assumes Argonne Command

ROYAL BURGLAR'S MILITARY FAILURE

Amsterdam, Sept. 28.

It is reported that Marshal von Mackensen will be appointed to take the place of the German Crown Prince in the command of the army operating against Verdun.

BLIND OBSESSION LEADS TO USELESS SACRIFICE OF MEN.

London, Sept. 28.

A German officer who has just been brought to England as prisoner has prophesied that the command of the Crown Prince's army will be taken by von Mackensen, who will leave the army in the East so well entrenched for winter that the Russians will be unable either to dislodge them or to break through.

The officer said that the Crown Prince repeatedly ordered attacks which were known to be foolhardy by other experienced officers, but he would not listen to advice. On two occasions prominent members of his staff pleaded with him not to sacrifice men in view of certain repulse, but the Crown Prince paid no heed.

The officer added that it is not surprising that the Crown Prince has broken down, as he was constantly on duty and refused to take proper rest. He was blindly obsessed with the desire to smash the enemy's lines, with the result that a serious nervous condition set in.

Sufficiency of Munitions

STATEMENT BY MR. LLOYD GEORGE.

New York, Sept. 29.

According to a telegram from London, the British Minister of Munitions, Mr. Lloyd George, declares that however great may be the expenditure of ammunition by the Allies in the course of the present offensive, there is not the least danger that they will run short of projectiles.

He says that there are such abundant stores of materials that the Allies can contemplate fearlessly the possibility of the severest battles of the war being fought.

The announcement has given very general satisfaction, as there had been an impression that owing to the enormous expenditure of ammunition of late it might be necessary to increase still further the output of the factories.

Don't Rejoice Too Soon!

FRENCH ADVICE TO THE PEOPLE.

Paris, Sept. 28.

The "Journal des Debats," referring to the successes recently obtained by the Anglo-French armies, says:—

"We have learned by long experience not to rejoice too soon. We must be careful not to be premature in shouting 'Victory!' But the success we have obtained, capturing a considerable extension of German trenches and numerous prisoners, is certainly such that we can confront with confidence the continuation of this new phase which is opening upon us.

"These results do honour to the valor of our army and that of Britain, and will put heart into not only ourselves and our allies, but into all those who throughout the world offer prayers for the triumph of the rights and the independence of civilised nations."

Italians Advance

ENCIRCLING OF TOLMINO.

Rome, Sept. 29.

"La Tribuna" publishes a report from its correspondents in the eastern sector of operations announcing that during the current week the Italian forces manœuvring to the south-east of the entrenched encampment of Caporetto made a successful advance against the Austrian positions extending between Caporetto and Tolmino. They succeeded in establishing advanced positions near Libussina, a place situated some three kilometres to the right of the Isonzo river.

The object of this movement was to reinforce the columns operating on the north of Tolmino, gradually accentuating the encircling movement of the stronghold.

The invading troops are now engaged in reinforcing the positions they hold in case the enemy attempts a counter-offensive in that sector with the object of preventing the Italians from cutting the most direct line of communications between Plezzo and Tolmino.

Italian Naval Disaster

EXPLOSION ON A BATTLESHIP.

Rome, Sept. 29.

A telegram from Brindisi announces officially that, owing to causes which have not yet been ascertained, a fire broke out in the after part of the Italian battleship, Benedetto Brin, 13,200 tons, which was followed by an explosion in the powder magazine. It appears certain that the catastrophe was not due to external agencies.

The telegram adds that 8 officers and 379 of the crew have been rescued. Rear-Admiral Rubin de Cervin was one of the victims who have so far been identified.

(The Naval Annual gives the complement of the Benedetto Brin as 1,000 men).

The German-Made War

REVELATIONS BY ITALIAN AMBASSADOR.

Rome, Sept. 28.

In a speech at Naples last Sunday the Italian Minister, Signor Barzilai, informed his audience that the former Italian Ambassador at Constantinople, Marquis Garrioni, on returning from Turkey, told him that a fortnight before the Austrian ultimatum was despatched to Serbia the German Ambassador, Count von Maggenheim, informed him that the Note would be such as to render war inevitable, and that it received the assent of Germany.

In reference to the motives that impelled Italy towards the Entente, Signor Barzilai recalled the debts of gratitude that Italy had contracted towards France, Russia and England, declaring: "We must be with England, whose friendship for Italy is of the nature rather of a religious dogma than a political canon." He also stated that Austria intended to attack and destroy Italy after she had settled with Serbia, and that documents had come to light proving Austria's machinations in the Balkans.

Italian Successes

Rome, Sept. 28.

Telegrams from Udine announce that there have been affairs of outposts in the Carinthia Zone, especially at Dosso Casina, Malga Pie, Monte Rombon and Monte Potoce, wherein the Austrian troops were defeated and compelled to retire.

The Italians are reinforcing some of their advance posts.

BULGARIA'S ALTERED ATTITUDE

Pro-German Ministers Resign Office

RUMOURED RESIGNATION OF THE CABINET

Situation Increasingly in Favour of the Quadruple Entente.

London, Sept. 29.

Bulgaria has changed front again. Although only a few days ago she appeared so completely identified with the Teutonic cause, and on the verge of entering the war beside the Central Empires, she appears to-day in little likelihood of fulfilling this promise.

The mobilisation of Greece's army, and the knowledge that Rumania is ready to take a similar step has helped to bring about this situation; but it is probable that she found the strongest argument for non-action in the statement made in Commons by Sir Edward Grey.

PRO-GERMANS LEAVE THE CABINET.

Despatches from the Balkans to-day show that the pro-German element and Government have suffered a severe reverse. Two of the strongest pro-German members of the Cabinet, Tacheff and Bakloff, have resigned. The reason officially given was a divergence of views on internal questions; but the real cause is the situation that has arisen through the Greek mobilisation.

It is reported from Sofia that the Ministry will be reorganised and that M. Ghenadieff, who is the head of the anti-German party, will be called upon to join the new Cabinet. The King is understood to have asked M. Malinoff if he would form the new Cabinet.

The conditions, both astern and in front, are daily growing more favourable for the Russians, and the victories of the Allies in the West must have also a strong influence in Bulgaria. It also appears that these military developments have postponed the intended German drive through Serbia to the Bulgarian frontier.

MINISTERS RESIGN.

Paris, Sept. 29.

A Havas telegram from Athens reports a rumour that the Bulgarian Ministers of Trade and Finance, MM. Blakoff and Tacheff, have resigned office, not being in accordance with the policy of the Premier, M. Radoslavoff.

RUMOURED RESIGNATION OF THE CABINET.

New York, Sept. 29.

A telegram from Sofia says that there is an insistent rumour that the Bulgarian Minister, Radoslavoff, has resigned, and that he is to be replaced by M. Malinoff, a decided partison of the cause of the Allies.

If the news is confirmed, the resignation of the Radoslavoff Government will probably represent a triumph for the diplomacy of the Allies, and may entirely alter the course of Bulgarian policy which has of late inclined towards the Central Powers.

The decided attitude of Greece and the declaration of Sir Edward Grey are believed to have influenced King Ferdinand in his decision.

The despatch adds that King Ferdinand has requested M. Malinoff, a former Premier, to constitute a new Cabinet.

M. Malinoff is noted for his Russo-phil proclivities.

ALARM IN BULGARIA.

Rome, Sept. 29.

A telegram to "La Tribuna" from Sofia says that Bulgaria is alarmed by the prompt mobilisation of the Rumanian forces.

Diplomatic circles consider that the German machinations in the Balkans have failed.

It has been ascertained that recent events in France forced the Teutons to reduce the contingent needed for the invasion of Serbia and adopt a defensive attitude.

AGREEMENT WITH CENTRAL EMPIRES.

Paris, Sept. 29.

The "Temps" has received a despatch from Salonica which says that it is authoritatively known that Bulgaria has made an agreement with the Central Empires whereby she is to enter the war on October 15.

Bribing Bulgaria

TURCO-GERMAN MACHINATIONS IN SOFIA.

Paris, Sept. 29.

The "Matin" says that the Turco-Bulgarian treaty was ratified on the 22nd instant, the representatives of Turkey attaching their signatures only upon receiving proof that the decree for mobilisation of the Bulgarian army had really been issued.

As a further precaution, Turkey made a stipulation that the Dedegatch railway should not be turned over to Bulgaria until October, leaving fourteen days for the Bulgarian mobilisation.

The territory is not to be ceded until October 11, so that Turkey and Germany may see what disposition has been made of the Bulgarian army.

Meanwhile, the Germans are in command of Sofia, as of Constantinople. A Teutonic Minister is reported to have expressed deep indignation because the strategic railway to Lompalanka, on the Danube, has not been completed.

Berlin Bulgarians

EXHORTED TO REMEMBER "GREAT EXAMPLE OF GERMANY."

New York, Sept. 29.

Berlin reports that the Overseas Agency says that two special trains filled with Bulgarian students left Berlin yesterday to join the army. The son of the Bulgarian Premier, M. Radoslavoff, will depart to-night.

The departure of the Bulgarian students was the occasion of a great demonstration by the German students. M. Nikitrow, Counsellor to the Bulgarian Legation, bade the Bulgarian students to remember the great example of Germany.

Professor Kastner, President of the Germano-Bulgarian Association, expressed the conviction that King Ferdinand would soon be ruler not only of Bulgaria, but of all Bulgarians.

Invasion of Serbia

TEUTON ARMIES PREPARING FOR GREAT OFFENSIVE.

London, Sept. 29.

To-day's newspapers publish a despatch from Athens which announces that 300,000 Austro-German troops have commenced to move against the Serbian frontier in the direction of Orsova.

CONFIDENCE IN ABILITY TO REPEL TEUTON INVASION.

New York, Sept. 29.

A telegram from Nish published by the "Sun" says that the Serbians are supremely confident that the 300,000 Teuton forces which have begun their expected advance against the Serbian frontier will be repulsed.

The despatch adds that a new Commander-in-Chief for the western armies will soon be appointed, von Hindenburg being mentioned as likely to be the man selected for the purpose.

Munitions for Serbia

PASSAGE UP THE DANUBE.

Paris, Sept. 29.

Bucharest reports that four Russian steamers and sixteen tugs passed up the Danube to the Serbian port of Prahovo with cargoes of war material.

Persecuted Armenians

GERMANY'S MORAL RESPONSIBILITY.

Washington, Sept. 29.

Information has been obtained that President Wilson is considering the advisability of making a plea to Germany on humanitarian grounds to intervene with a view to stop the Armenian outrages.

The President feels that there is no legal ground upon which this Government can protest either to Turkey or Germany; but he proposes to make the plea to Turkey's ally in the belief that Germany dominates Turkish policy.

So far, no Americans are known to have suffered with the Armenians, and the President feels that no action is possible other than by directing the attention of Germany to the situation.

In addition to massacres, the Armenians have been banished and their property burned or confiscated. Unofficial reports on the Armenian trouble continue to reach the State Department. It is officially stated that these reports have been generally confirmed by Press despatches from Turkey.

Germany's War Loan

THIRTEEN THOUSAND MILLION MARKS.

London, Sept. 24.

The total subscriptions to the new German war loan as given by Reuter's correspondent in Amsterdam is 12,930,000,000 marks. From information received at Amsterdam from Berlin the amount will probably be increased.

"Fashoda" Marchand Wounded

FAMOUS GENERAL SHOT DURING RECENT FIGHTING.

Paris, Sept. 28.

It is announced that General Marchand was seriously wounded in the fighting in the Champagne region, the bullet injuring the dorsal vertebra.

The Press publishes sympathetic articles extolling the great qualities of this officer, who distinguished himself so greatly in Africa, and has been lending such valuable aid on the French frontier.

ALLIES' NEW LOAN

Arrangements Now Completed

TERMS ANNOUNCE'D IN CHICAGO

New York, Sept. 29.

It is reported from Chicago that at a banquet given last night it was announced that the loan which the Anglo-French financial commission has been negotiating had been definitely arranged.

The head of the commission, Lord Reading, has confirmed the report. He said that the proceeds of the loan would be employed exclusively in the United States in order to stabilise international exchange and maintain the volume of American exportations.

The amount of the loan will be 500 million dollars for five years with 5 per cent interest. The British and French Governments undertake to raise no other loan abroad, and the bonds will be payable at the end of the five years, or can be exchanged for others bearing 4½ per cent interest, redeemable in not less than fifteen or more than twenty-five years.

The bonds will be issued to the public at 98, and will be placed on the market by a group of financial firms among which will be that of Morgan and Company.

SPECULATIVE HYSTERIA ON WALL STREET.

New York, Sept. 29.

A special despatch from London to the "Evening Post" says that if it be true that the underwriters of the Anglo-French loan are to receive 5 per cent. notes at 96 the terms of the credit will be strongly criticised in Britain. It is even possible that there may be a rush of subscriptions from British investors, in spite of the position of international exchange.

In Wall Street there was another seething stock market to-day, in which speculative hysteria ran riot. War stocks continued their violent gyrations in response to numerous rumours that a steel merger is impending. The probable success of the foreign loan and favourable war news combined to keep the bull movement going. In view of the proportions of the upward movement which has carried the whole market to the highest prices of the year, many individual stocks reached the highest levels in history.

Conservative Wall Street houses have begun to caution customers against excessive buying of war issues. They think that the advance has gone altogether too far. The commissions of the brokerage houses are piling up as never before.

ANOTHER 500 MILLIONS IF NECESSARY.

New York, Sept. 29.

Nearly all the newspapers refer in complacent terms to the successful negotiation of the loan by the Anglo-French financial commission. They declare that if necessary another 500 million dollars will be subscribed.

Submarines in the Baltic

UNDER SUPERVISION OF RUSSIAN ADMIRALTY.

London, Sept. 29.

The policy of the British Admiralty in regard to the work of the British submarines in the Baltic was explained in the House of Commons to-day by Mr. Macnamara, Financial Secretary to the Admiralty, who said in response to a question:—

"The House will realise that much gallant and successful work is being done by these vessels, but the responsibility of deciding what shall be made public regarding their proceedings in the Baltic must rest with the Russian Admiralty."

"Commander Noel Lawrence is the officer who has been decorated by the Russian Government for a successful torpedo attack upon the German battle cruiser Moltke."

MEAT SUPPLIESHOW BRITAIN FOUGHT THE TRUSTS*STATEMENT BY MR. RUNCIMAN

London, Sept. 23.

To-day in the House of Commons, Mr. Runciman declared that the Board of Trade does not allow the American Meat Trust to get all it asks for, nor does it permit shipowners to get all they want. Steps have been taken by the British Government to secure an abundance of meat from Argentina and Australia, and a good supply was assured. Had such measures not been taken, there would have been a really dangerous shortage during the next twelve months. The total of the Board of Trade operations in regard to meats would amount to about £50,000,000. The French Government, he added, had such confidence in the Board of Trade that they had placed the entire business of supplying French meat requirements in the hands of the Board of Trade.

Circumstances, said Mr. Runciman, had necessitated the Board entering the contest with a comparatively small number of commercial houses controlling the beef trade. The Argentine supply, he added, was in the hands of half a dozen very powerful firms, mainly controlled in America. When the Government tried to make contracts and found prices excessive, the only way it could deal with the matter was by requisitioning the whole tonnage carrying beef from South America to this country.

These requisitioned ships were sent to Australia where the Australian Government took control of the whole beef and mutton produce of the country, and loaded up the ships at cost price. Britain had supplied her own and the French Army, and had a considerable surplus which was being sold to benefit the civil population.

He further expressed himself well satisfied with the wheat outlook. The crops to be imported by Europe from the United States, Canada, Australia and Argentina were larger than for years past. Reverting to the Meat Question, Mr. Runciman referred to the statement attributed to Arthur Meeker, in a letter by Herr Dumba to Baron von Burian that, he had not played his last trump yet, and if Britain could not get meat from either the United States or Argentina, she would soon give in, he said that, as we had got both the meat and the ships, we had no intention of giving in.

ROUNDING-UP THE HUNSBRITISH GOVERNMENT ORDER.

London, Sept. 27.

German, Austrian and Turkish subjects of military age in the United Kingdom are being rounded up by hundreds by the police to-day, in response to an order issued by the British Government.

About a thousand of them, many of them holding responsible positions, will be affected before the round-up comes to an end, which will be tomorrow.

DOCTORS NEEDEDSHORTAGE OF 2,500 IN BRITISH ARMY.

London, Sept. 24.

Sir James Barr, Vice-President of the British Medical Association and Colonel of the R.A.M.C., is appealing for physicians for the armies going abroad and says that 2,500 doctors are needed. The only course open will be to apply to the United States to complete the number as this country cannot do so. He announced that conscription is coming.

DESTROY ST. PAUL'S!HUNS OUTRAGEOUS DESIGN

London, Sept. 24.

A Home Office statement on the German reports of the recent Zeppelin raids points out the numerous deliberate falsehoods and inventions contained in them. For example, the allegation that an anti-aircraft gun had been placed under cover of St. Paul's can only be characterised as an intentional lie; apparently trumped up as an excuse for the infamous attempts of the German airships.

BRITAIN'S WAR COMMITTEEA "COALITION WITHIN A COALITION."

London, Sept. 27.

The Prime Minister has announced that a special committee of the Cabinet has been appointed to take charge of the general control of matters in connection with the war.

The committee is composed of himself, Lord Kitchener, Messrs. Lloyd George, Balfour, Sir E. Grey, Lord Lansdowne, Messrs. Bonar Law and Winston Churchill, and will act as a sort of Executive Committee, absorbing the functions of the Dardanelles Committee of the Cabinet.

BRITISH FLEET IN ACTIONBELGIAN COAST BOMBARDED.

Amsterdam, Sept. 27.

The British North Sea flotilla continues to bombard the German positions on the Belgian coast.

It is known that the bombardment of Zeebrugge on Friday caused damages of great importance. The Germans rapidly abandoned their more advanced positions and retired inland after having suffered very heavily.

British aviators also bombarded the railways and stations, and destroyed several trains with German troops on board, and various ammunition magazines are stated to have been blown up. Fires and explosions occurred at several points in the town of Zeebrugge.

The fire of the British naval guns struck Lisseweghe station five miles from Zeebrugge.

The bombardment is being continued with violence, and the British flotilla has been reinforced by several units.

RUAD ISLANDS OCCUPIEDBY FRENCH SQUADRON.

Paris, Sept. 24.

It is announced that warships belonging to the French squadron have occupied the Ruad islands to the west of Crete.

THE WINTER CAMPAIGNANGLO-FRENCH PREPARATIONS.

Paris, Sept. 24.

General Joffre has been conferring with the Minister of War and several of the General Staff regarding the preparations for the coming winter campaign.

It is stated that the Anglo-French armies are in excellent condition and will be in a position to undertake the most important operations with every chance of success.

Most efficacious measures have been taken to prevent the troops from undergoing the same hardships they suffered last winter. The trenches have been transformed into commodious dwellings by the work of engineering specialists.

HELP BELGIUM!APPEAL BY LORD MAYOR OF LONDON.

London, Sept. 24.

The Lord Mayor to-day appealed to the people, and said that we were not yet half awake to the tragedy of Belgium. Even Mr. Hoover's wonderfully efficient Neutral Committee cannot feed a half million of the destitute people on less than fivepence per head daily, which amounts to £21870 weekly. He was convinced that the City of London will not rest content until it has taken the place it usually occupies in every great benevolence. The Lord Mayor then announced the formation of a strong committee, including Lord Bryce and a host of other prominent men to manage the fund which appeals to every class to subscribe. The Lord Mayor concluded that if food was not sent that the Germans would undoubtedly leave the Belgians to starve, or would shoot them down if hunger strikes occurred.

UNDER THE HUN HEELLILLE INHABITANTS FINED FOR REFUSAL TO AID GERMANS.

Amsterdam, Sept. 25.

The inhabitants of Lille having refused to make sandbags for the German defence works, the Germans broke open the municipal safe and helped themselves to 375,000 francs as representing the value of the bags, and have imposed a war tax on the city of 31 million francs. For each day of delay in paying the tax a fine of 100,000 francs will be added.

VON BISSING, THE BRUTEHARSH HUN RULE IN BELGIUM.

London, Sept. 23.

Reports from Belgium via Amsterdam state that the German authorities continue the most ferocious severities. For smuggling letters out of the country via Holland, many Belgian citizens have been tried by Court Martial at Antwerp. Of these three have been sentenced to death and thirty-three others to hard labour imprisonment, the terms ranging from fifteen months to ten years. Those condemned to death were Police Commissioner Alexis, Monsieur Joseph Backelman architect, and Monsieur Alexander Frank, merchant.

BOYS AND OLD MENREINFORCEMENTS FOR AUSTRIA'S ARMY.

Geneva, Sept. 24.

Intelligence has been received that the Austrian Government is forming volunteer corps which include mere boys and men who are past the military age. These troops are required to replace the garrisons which are being despatched to take part in the campaign against Serbia.

The Austrian Government is striving to collect as many men as possible, comprehending that a scarcity of troops may be a factor of great importance in the campaign.

THE MURDERER'S WAILGERMAN ZEPPELINISTS OBJECT TO RAID ON STUTTGART.

New York, Sept. 23.

A wireless from Berlin via Tucker-ton says that the "Deutsche Tageszeitung" (Reventlow's organ), raises a bitter cry of complaint and vituperation against the "cowardly" French raid on Stuttgart, which it asserts lies wholly outside the zone of military operations. The French action was indefensible, as they used German marks on their aeroplanes.

SOCIALIST ARRESTEDPEACE PROPAGANDA PROHIBITED IN BERLIN

London, Sept. 24.

The "Standard's" Copenhagen correspondent reports that at Berlin the police have seized all copies of pamphlets edited by Dr. Liebknecht and other Socialists entitled "The War and the Proletariat" asking that the war shall cease, as it is ruining the workers, Industry and Commerce, and declaring that Belgium ought not to be annexed. The despatch adds that many Socialists and journalists have been arrested.

"INFLUENCING" THE PRESSGERMANY'S WASTEFUL PROPAGANDA.

London, Sept. 23.

The "Pall Mall Gazette" referring to the German campaign of Press corruption, says, Germany has made great efforts to prove herself the friend of the Press. In newspapers published as far apart as Christiania and Peking, the Teutonic purse is always open. It appears that something like £3000 weekly has been spent in Spain propitiating a section of the Press but it is beginning to dawn on Germany that this prodigality is unjustified and that general opinion everywhere is about 75 to one against her.

RIGHTS OF THE JEWSPROPAGANDIST WORK IN THE STATES.

New York, Sept. 25.

A movement is in progress among the Jewish inhabitants of the United States to organise an international strike if, in the future of peace conferences, the rights of the Jews are not fully recognised. Some of the most important bankers in the country who are of Jewish origin are taking part in the agitation.

The Jewish Committee in this city has received numerous messages from all parts of the States as well as from abroad expressing sympathy with the propaganda.

SWEDEN AND THE WARDE TROLLE'S TALL TALK.

Stockholm, Sept. 24.

The feeling of Sweden towards the United States and the attitude of the American Government in regard to the belligerents is indicated by the remarks of the former Swedish Foreign Minister, Baron De Trolle, on the subject.

The ex-Minister said:—"Sweden desires to observe strict neutrality, which from her point of view means helping neither side in either a military or an industrial way to the exclusion of the other. In this respect she differs from the United States who are supplying England alone. Sweden does not consider this neutrality."

"Sweden cannot and will not surrender to the English demands by restricting her commerce in order to help England in her industrial war against Germany. If she did, not only would Sweden suffer industrially herself, but she would become virtually the ally of England. The last consideration is the more important, since Sweden would then no longer be a strictly neutral nation."

"Logically therefore we should hold up supplies destined for Russia so long as England's stoppage of our imports of raw material interferes with our industries and our trade with Germany. We are sorry that Russia should be forced to wait for her supplies which have accumulated here; but while our ships are being held by the English prize courts we think that our action is entirely justifiable."

NO SUBMARINES!

GERMANY LOSES 80 PER CENT OF PIRATE CRAFT

WHY MODIFIED POLICY WAS ADOPTED

Paris, Sept. 23.

To-day "Le Journal" commenting on the sudden German flexibility and willingness to modify its undersea campaign, says that the real reason is that 80 per cent. of the German Government submarines have been destroyed and its under-water warfare brought to a complete failure in two months. Before Germany consented to modify her methods of savagery, sixty-seven submarines, of which twenty-eight were of the very latest construction, have been sunk and their crews destroyed by the British Navy since May 5. This is stated positively on authority.

Even if Germany could replace these perished vessels as fast as they are destroyed, she cannot prevent the demoralisation of the officers and crews of these vessels. While it is declared that they are as brave, efficient and well trained as those of any other nation, the German naval authorities cannot keep secret from them the sinister long list of vacancies, the dozens of submarines which vanish like bubbles from the sea. This has induced a practical panic. The men believe and feel that they are being sent blindfold to destruction without knowing how or when it may seize them.

This accounts for the accommodating spirit.

WILLIAM P. FRYE CASE

GERMANY'S NEW ORDERS TO SUBMARINE COMMANDERS.

Washington, Sept. 23.

The last Note from the German Government respecting the sinking of the American sailing vessel William P. Frye declares that the commanders of the submarines have been ordered not to destroy American ships carrying conditional contraband. The submarines will allow the vessels to continue their voyage without hindrance if it be impossible to take them to a safe port.

The question relative to the interpretation of the treaty of 1828 between the United States and Prussia will be submitted to arbitration, and the proposal of the States that experts be appointed to determine the amount of indemnity to be paid has been accepted.

DIPLOMATIC VICTORY FOR THE STATES.

New York, Sept. 23.

The "Herald's" Washington correspondent says a highly important diplomatic victory has been won by the United States over the rights of American merchant vessels. By agreement with Germany when carrying conditional contraband such vessels will not be destroyed. Shipping carrying absolute contraband will still be liable to attack but not without due warning given.

In the case of the William P. Frye Germany is evidently anxious to avoid a breach with the States and concedes certain points for which Washington had contended. Vessels carrying conditional contraband are to be permitted to continue their voyage if German warships cannot carry them into port.

NEW PIRATE CHIEF

ADMIRAL HOLTZENDORFF'S APPOINTMENT.

New York, Sept. 25.

A despatch from Berlin announces that in consequence of the modifications introduced in Germany's submarine campaign Admiral Holtzendorff has been killed in action in west rial Naval Staff.

BRITISH TRANSPORT SUNK

BY A GERMAN SUBMARINE

ALL LIVES SAVED

Paris, Sept. 27.

It is reported from Marseilles that on the 17th instant a German submarine sank the British steamer Natal south of the island of Crete. All the crew were saved.

TROOPS AND CREW SAVED.

Marseilles, Sept. 27.

The British steamer Natal which was torpedoed and sunk by a German submarine south of Crete had 2665 on board, all of whom were rescued.

GERMAN CRUISER SUNK

RUMOURED SUCCESS BY BRITISH SUBMARINE.

London, Sept. 24.

A despatch from Copenhagen reports the destruction of a German cruiser, type not indicated, off Fals-terbo in the Baltic. It is presumed that she was torpedoed by a British submarine. Observers saw a vast column of water rise from the sea in an explosion, the roar of which was heard, and fall on the vessel which quickly disappeared. It is known that several British submarines are operating in those waters, for fear of which the Germans announce that they are laying a new minefield there.

AUSTRIANS BOMBED

RAID BY ITALIAN AIRMEN.

Rome, Sept. 23.

The papers announce that two Italian aeroplanes flew over the region of Trieste south of Duino station in order to reconnoitre the enemy's positions and report as to the positions of the Austrian reinforcements which have recently arrived there.

The aeronauts threw a number of bombs in the Austrian encampment and returned to their base uninjured by the heavy fire of the enemy.

COLD IN THE ALPS

MAY CAUSE SUSPENSION OF HOSTILITIES.

Geneva, Sept. 23.

The "Lausanne Gazette" says that intense cold has set in in the region of the Alps and is causing great difficulty to military operations on both sides. If the weather continues, an almost total suspension of hostilities may be expected before long.

TURKISH TRANSPORTS SUNK

BY ALLIES' AIRMEN AND SUBMARINES.

Paris, Sept. 24.

It is officially notified that an Allied aviator has bombed and sunk a Turkish transport in Nafara Bay. British submarines have destroyed two others in Akbacht Bay in spite of enormous difficulties.

GERMAN PRINCE KILLED

IN GALLIPOLI FIGHTING.

New York, Sept. 24.

According to a telegram from Berlin the "Lokal Anzeiger" announces that Prince Frederick of Thurn and Taxis has fallen in battle on the Gallipoli Peninsula.

DRIVEN INTO DESERT TO DIE

GHASTLY FATE OF THE ARMENIANS

APPALLING ATROCITIES BY THE TURKS

London, Sept. 25.

The Turks are said to be gradually but effectively exterminating the Armenians.

"The Times" correspondent at De-deagatch says the method pursued is diabolically inhuman.

"From each Armenian village daily persons are taken away, as many as a train can carry.

"When they reach Konier or some adjacent station they are turned out.

"An escort is supplied over Mount Jaurus and once on the other side, they are supplied with enough food for a few days, and told to continue their journey to the neighbourhood of Mosul, where they will be safe.

"The region is arid desert, and as soon as they reach it, the marauding Kurds and Bedouins swoop down, rob, pillage and kill the helpless men, women and children. Those not slain die of hunger or thirst. Not one has ever reached their intended destination. Should they try to escape in another direction the Turkish shepherds have orders to fire on them at sight. Consequently many distracted mothers drown their children in the Euphrates rather than see them suffer. Some sell them for what they will bring before starting to save their lives.

A well known American missionary who arrived in Constantinople in the first week of September said that he had seen at least fifteen thousand Armenians collected around a station waiting to be sent on such a sinister journey from which some would never return. American Missionaries scattered through Asia Minor, particularly in the Armenian districts are gradually leaving on the Ambassador's advice.

These massacres are exercised on the ground that the Armenians assisted the Russians. At the occupation of Van an eye witness's report in addition to thousands killed, half a million were deported, and many imprisoned. Women and children are sent into slavery, or forcibly converted to Islam. Children are sent out alone along the roads where the helpless creatures perish of hunger or fall victims to robber bands. Massacres have taken place in the provinces of Kharput and Diarbekir and specially at Mardui. Women from the province of Erzeroum were left for days on the Kharput plains and died of famine and thirst. Never in his blood stained history has the Turk been more ferocious and cruel than now under the enlightened Yung Turk party. Along the Black Sea Armenians have been forced to become Musulmans by threat of death and atrocious torture. At Chabikarbissar which resisted disarmament, the place was bombarded and the Bishop was killed. The whole country is strewn with whitening bones and mummified corpses. As is known the Sheikh-ul-Islam himself has resigned as a protest against these atrocities.

APPALLING ATROCITIES BY TURKS.

New York, Sept. 25.

Dr. Simband Gabriel, President of the Armenian Association in the United States appeals to the Government to intercede on behalf of his persecuted countrymen in Asia Minor.

The Doctor publishes information derived from trustworthy sources from which it appears that out of a population of 1,500,000 souls, 450,000 have been massacred and 600,000 are

WAR ON CHILDREN

GERMAN AIRMEN RAID SWITZERLAND.

Berne, Sept. 23.

Two German aeroplanes entered Swiss territory and dropped bombs on Crasdermont, a child being injured. The invaders were chased away by Swiss airmen.

The incident is considered serious, and the Government of the Confederation will undoubtedly send a strong protest to the Berlin Foreign Office.

COPPER IN RUSSIA

DISCOVERY AID TO MUNITIONS MANUFACTURE.

Paris, Sept. 24.

Information has been received from Petrograd that copper has been discovered in the region of Elizabetpol, the mines being of such richness that 130,000 tons of mineral were taken out in a month and were at once utilised in the making of munitions.

TEUTONS IN COMMAND

BULGARIAN ARMY SHARES FATE OF TURKISH AND AUSTRIAN FORCES.

Sofia, Sept. 25.

It is stated in military circles that the Bulgarian army is ready to take the field. There is a rumour that German and Austrian offices have been incorporated in the Bulgarian General Staff.

The recently organised divisions of reservists will be reviewed by King Ferdinand.

THE MEXICAN MIDDLE

CARRANCISTS' COLLISION WITH U.S. TROOPS.

Washington, Sept. 25.

General Funston has informed the Department of War that he has received a despatch from Colonel Ballard on the Mexican frontier reporting that a detachment of the 12th regiment of cavalry was attacked near Progreso yesterday morning by a body of Mexicans, supposed to be Carrancistas. An American soldier was killed, and Captain Anderson and another soldier wounded.

Reinforcements are to be sent as rapidly as possible and Colonel Ballard will furnish the Government with a detailed report at the earliest opportunity.

homeless or have been taken away elsewhere.

The massacres which occurred during the régime of Abdul Hamid are said to have been insignificant in comparison with those of recent date wherein whole villages have been practically wiped out; but as Armenia is so distant and communication so difficult, but scanty details have come through of this awful tragedy.

Unless the neutral countries, especially the United States, act on their behalf, and that soon, there will be but few Armenians surviving to tell the tale of woe.

POSSIBILITY OF MIGRATION TO THE STATES.

Washington, Sept. 25.

According to information that has reached the Department of State from the American Foreign Missions Board, several philanthropists in the country have signified their willingness to provide funds for bringing to the United States the persecuted Armenians who desire to emigrate.

What the attitude of the Turkish Government might be towards such a movement has not been disclosed. The Department of State will make no inquiries until more definite details are available.

ROSARIO NEWS

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT].

September 28, 1915.

The Weather.

The eminent Señor Martin Gil pulled my leg this week by saying that through a piece of smoked glass a spot on the sun would be visible to the otherwise unaided eye. Perhaps the spot was at lunch; certainly I did not discern it. But the weather forecasts have been amply fulfilled, and the week-end was of that ideal character which provides glorious sunshine by day, and remembers to give the gardens a good soaking by night.

Rosario Golf Club: Red Cross Afternoon.

There must have been over a hundred present at the Golf Links on Sunday afternoon, when the ladies approaching and putting competitions organised in aid of the Red Cross Society by Mrs. A. Murray Hudson, assisted by Miss Gay, took place. The entertainment was a great success, and the contests were followed with the keenest interest. First prize was won by Mrs. J. P. Crouch, and second by Mrs. Karck. There were also competitions for non-golfers, in which the awards went to Miss Watson and Mrs. Benedict; and a number of races for the children, who more or less all won: that is, the prizes went practically all round.

The net proceeds amounted to $202, made up as follows:

164 tickets at $1	$164
Collected for teas, etc.	46
	$210
Less expenses of groundsman and waitress	8
	$202

If only all statements were as simple and satisfactory! A cheque for the above amount has been forwarded to the Red Cross Society.

Many thanks are due to those ladies who gave the prizes and contributed towards the refreshments and flowers, and indeed to all who assisted in making the afternoon such a great success; and Mrs. Murray Hudson and Miss Gay deserve a special vote of thanks for having initiated such a pleasant social function.

The Mixed Foursomes Competition.

I mentioned last week that a Mixed Foursomes Competition had been held, prizes for which were presented by Mr. A. Lace and Mr. F. W. Boardman. I am now in possession of the complete scores, and as they afford some index of the progress made by local golfers during the season they may be given:

Mr. and Mrs. Karck -2-1 equals -3.
Mrs. Lee and J. J. Gilles -3-3 equals -0.
Mrs. Van Horne and A. Martin -0-0 equals -0.
Mrs. J. P. Crouch and T. H. Taylor -0-2 equals -2.
Mrs. Middleton and C. H. Parr -1-3 equals -2.
Mrs. Murray Hudson and A. K. Clarke -2-4 equals -2.
Mrs. Goss and S. L. Cox -2-0 equals -2.
Mr. and Mrs. R. W. O. Le Bas -2-1 equals -3.
Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Krell -4-0 equals -4.
Miss Gay and Wandsworth -2-2 equals -4.
Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Montgomery -4-4 equals -8.
Miss Barnes and A. S. Barnes -7-5 equals -12.

Those who know will see how some of the tyros have come along in this game of games. The tie for second place is to be played off at a date still to be fixed.

The finals for the Ladies' Monthly Handicap will be played off on Saturday; and the Finals of the Men's Monthly Handicaps (three rounds medal play) on Sunday. In each case there will be first and second prizes, and the awarding of these will take place at the conclusion of play on Sunday afternoon.

The Continuous Handicap is progressing, and as the close of the season approaches, excites greater interest.

All the members are looking forward to the visit of a team from San Andres Golf Club, who are coming up on Sunday, October 10th, to try conclusions with the local stalwarts.

The Anglo-German Hospital.

The Comision Liquidadora are offering the premises of the erstwhile Anglo-German Hospital for sale, basing their expectations on the valuation recently made of the site and everything upon it, namely $171,000 odd. There have been one or two inquiries, but so far without result.

Cereal Markets: Freights Advance.

Wheat has been a quiet market, but the small business which has been done has been at rather better prices for local consumption, and there has been also some inquiry for Brazil; though probably the most sustaining feature of the market is the pending deal for October delivery, in which there is the possibility of a mild squeeze, unless the quantity of actual wheat to be done should prove too much for the "bull" clique.

Maize.—With a steady market, a fair business has been done during the closing days of the week under review. We close firm with an advance of quite 15 cents during the past two days. This advance was probably commenced by a forced demand in response to improved prices in Europe. It is doubtful whether this will be carried much further, as there has been a strong advance in freights during the week, from 53s. 9d. taken last week for the "Alfalfa," early October loading, to 60s. paid to-day for the mid-October steamers. This registers an advance of 6s. 3d., which practically absorbs the improvement in the maize markets of England and France.

The country has been visited again by a general rain, which seems to have literally "poured contentment" over the agricultural districts. Even Bahia Blanca, Pampa Central, and Rio Cuarto districts have been included in this storm, although they were missed in the previous ones. The prospects for wheat must be considered AI, whilst maize planting is being carried on under exceptionally favourable conditions.

The S.A.M.S.

The departure of the Rev. J. A. Rickards and the arrival of the Rev. S. C. Deacon in his place, are imminent, and the South American Missionary Society will experience the first important change for five or six years. Mr. Deacon arrives on October 1, and will take charge of the work; while Mr. and Mrs. Rickards and their son George, expect to leave for Buenos Aires on October 12, and proceed to England shortly afterwards.

One of Mr. Deacon's first tasks will be that of setting about the removal of the heavy debt still remaining upon the High School Building. The very idea of an institution which puts up three successful candidates for the Cambridge Locals being allowed by the parents of its pupils to remain in debt, passes comprehension!

The Pension Scheme.

I hear—I wish on better authority—that the absurd pension scheme is to be postponed for a year, to enable the Government to make something in the nature of a concrete statement of the other side of the proposals. So far the only side they are clear about is that which concerns the picking of pockets; the question of sharing out the booty has not been dealt with in any published statements, other than those

CONCORDIA NEWS

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT].

September 28.

Patriotic Dance.

The Concordia Concert and Dance Committee have announced that a dance will be given in the rooms of the Argentine Social Club next Saturday evening at 9.30 p.m., tickets being sold at the reasonable price of $2. As this will be the last dance which the Committee will give this season, it is hoped that all those who wish to help will apply for tickets. For the benefit of those who may come in from the camp for the "Feria" which opens on October 3, and may not have time to obtain tickets from the members of the committee, they can obtain them at the entrance door of the Club. As the Imperial Club orchestra has been engaged, the music can be guaranteed good. Light refreshments will be served free. The profits, if any, will be given to a Patriotic Fund to be decided later by the Committee. The Committee is composed of the following gentlemen: Messrs. Morley, Kingsbury, Todd, Williams, Colls and Neville.

Garden Party.

The Women's Association will give a garden party next Saturday at 2.30 p.m. Mr. and Mrs. Fred. Dickinson have kindly lent their grounds for the occasion. An entrance fee of $1 will be charged, but it is expected that those who attend will take part in the various competitions which will take place, and for which small entrance fees will be charged. There will be knock-out tennis mixed doubles championship, bridge, shooting, etc., the profits to go towards the Red Cross Fund. Light refreshments will be given free. A motor charabanc will leave the railway station at 2.30 p.m. for the grounds, and will make other trips according to the demand. The Honorary Secretary, Mrs. Neville, or the following ladies: Mesdames Sketch, Dickinson, Fielder, and the Misses Birdsall, Roberts, etc., can supply all details if applied to. All English-speaking people are cordially invited.

POLITICAL QUARREL

PROBABILITY OF A DUEL.

Doctor Tomas de Veyga, a national deputy, on his return from Salta, sent his seconds to Doctor Lisandro de la Torre, on account of certain expressions used by the latter in reference to Dr. de Veyga at a democratic meeting lately celebrated at the Victoria Theatre.

The incident is exciting much comment in political circles. Doctors Araya and Castellano are representing the challenger, but Dr. de la Torre had not decided upon his representatives at a late hour last evening.

which forecasted the scheme some two years ago.

Rosario Football League: Semi-final of the Copa de Honor.

On the Gimnasia and Esgrima ground, the semi-final of the Copa de Honor was played off on Sunday between the "Tiro Federal" and the "Boca Juniors," Tiro Federal being victorious, four goals to nil. There was a large turnout of spectators; but the game did not arouse much excitement, the home team from the beginning showing too marked a superiority.

Alfredo J. White

Solicitor and Accountant

Cordoba 1321, Rosario

Tel. No. 5191

MENDOZA NEWS

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT].

September 27.

Departure.

On Saturday last, Mr. R. Tyler departed from Mendoza by the mail train. He will proceed to England by an early steamer and offer his services to the War Office. Mr. and Mrs. Tyler, who have resided in Mendoza for several years, received a hearty send-off at the station from a large circle of friends and colleagues.

Obituary.

The death of Sra. Enriqueta de Anderssen, which occurred in this city on September 24, has been much lamented in all circles. Mrs. Anderssen was held in high esteem by the British community here, and she was much admired for her artistic attainments and for her active interest in local works of charity.

Sport.

At the invitation of the Mendoza Boxing Club, Angel Rodriguez, Uruguayan Champion, will appear in this town early next month to fight Jack Murray for the South American championship. The match will in all probability take place on October 9, the winner to net $1000 and the loser $500.

Visitor.

Mr. S. F. Warr arrived here from San Rafael on Monday last.

Y.W.C.A. BENEFIT CONCERT

MRS. PAMPLIN'S PUPILS AT ST. ANDREW'S.

A pronounced success artistically, and from the appearance of the hall, gratifying financially, describes the concert last night at St. Andrew's Church Hall, on behalf of the Y.W.C.A. Mrs. Pamplin arranged the programme, in which several of her pupils took part, and, although it was incomplete owing to the unexpected absence of Sra. Asuncion de Forcade from indisposition, it was an excellent one and well rendered.

There were probably from 250 to 300 present. Among the hits of the evening were Miss Mabel Gallacher's rendering of her songs, the violin solos of Sta. Gabriela Dreyfuss, and the delightful piano, 'cello and violin trio, by Madame Herz and Mlles. Carmen and Fannie Wolff.

Miss Gallacher has a rich, round and full contralto, with deep chest notes, and was heard to great advantage in all the songs she rendered, and specially in the aria from "Samson and Delilah" and "O come to me in the Summer Night," which she repeated in reply to an encore. Senorita Dreyfuss rendered Bach's aria for the violin, and after a Csardas with its thin elfin, puck-like music, both delightfully. Subsequently by request she played again "Meditations."

The violin, 'cello and piano trios were "Tannhauser," "Reverie" by Schumann, and "Gavotte" from Don Juan, the last an exquisite rendering. Mrs. Queenie Clarke sang "Sylvain" and "The Rosy Morn," and though apparently a little nervous, she has a good voice, and full compass.

Miss Mildred Cowes gave pleasing renderings of "Au Printemps," "Ah, qui brule d'amour," and Brahms' "The Serenade."

In her three numbers, which concluded the concert, Mrs. Pamplin was at her best. "Chant d'amour" is the equivalent in sound of a dainty eighteenth century vignette. "He shall feed His flock" is sufficiently familiar, and the singer did full justice to it. The encore for "From the land of sky-blue water" was well deserved, and the song itself has charms including that of novelty. It certainly lost nothing in Mrs. Pamplin's rendering.

BATTLE OF DOCK 4

Marineros v. Police

AN UNEDIFYING SPECTACLE

It appears that on Tuesday afternoon about 4, the guardians of law and order in the neighbourhood of Dock 4 relieved the monotony of ordinary duty by indulging in an exciting skirmish which had to be finally quelled by a police reinforcement.

Two policemen of the Comisario 22 were conveying a couple of electricistas to the lock up when they encountered an officer of marineros of the Prefectura who reproved them for maltreating their prisoners. The police agents replied insolently and defiantly; whistles were blown; up came some marineros; the agents drew their cutlasses and began to strike right and left. The marineros replied with their sword bayonets. It was a regular battle and was witnessed, to the great scandal of public order by about 300 persons. The Prefectura officer was hurt, so were a marincro, by having a revolver barrel jabbed into his ear, and a policeman. The swords used in this homeric conflict have been badly twisted and will no doubt be sent to the military museum as examples of the sort of steel supplied from Solingen by German sword cutlers. The Prefectura is drawing up one report, the Police another. It is not stated whether they will present those to each other or to themselves. Probably the result will be the same.

MISSIONS TO SEAMEN

WESTERN TELEGRAPH CONCERT

A concert arranged by the staff of the Western Telegraph Company under the special guidance of Mr. C. H. Turner, was given last night at the St. John's Mission to Seamen.

Although the audience was smaller than usual it was not a whit less enthusiastic than other audiences and this in no way surprised, on account of the excellence of some of the items.

Mrs. A. E. Lawton sang most charmingly and was repeatedly encored. She was the only lady singing at the concert and in her song "My dear Soul" she was heard to great advantage. Mr. L. S. Plank was excellent and Mr. Back most amusing with his comics. All the others too were good and could not complain of the applause they gained.

In general the concert was highly successful and entertaining and the only point was the smallness of the audience, but in this respect it can be said that those who stayed away missed a thoroughly jolly evening and the staff of the Western Telegraph who arranged and gave the entertainment entirely amongst themselves deserve every congratulation for their effort.

THE DAY OF POOR CHILDREN

AN APPEAL.

An affecting appeal is made by the Committee of the Patronato de la Infancia for efficient assistance. At the present time, with restricted incomes in some cases and increased demands and claims in nearly all, the action of such worthy and benevolent societies as this and the Argentine Philanthropic Schools, run some risk of being neglected; yet their importance is immense. Among the numerous noble activities of this Society, the very first is quite sufficient to more than justify its existence.

"To protect children against abandonment, ignorance, misery, disease, orphanhood, lack of care, ill treatment and evil and immoral contact and examples." A strong appeal is therefore made to remember the Day of the Poor Children October 2.

POLICEMAN MURDERED

Shooting Affair at Mercedes

SEQUEL TO A STREET BRAWL

The town of Mercedes, in the Province of Buenos Aires, has been the scene of a murder of a police agent named Felix Salem by Pedro Nuñez, a man well known to the police of the district.

The origin of the affair is unknown, but the two men were in violent altercation in the street and Nuñez was seen to draw a revolver and fire point blank at the "vigilante." The latter died shortly afterwards in hospital, while his murderer fled and has not yet been captured. The neighbourhood is considerably disturbed about the affair and is demanding an increased police service.

Fire on a Liner

Naples, Sept. 29.

Captain Pavy of the French steamer Sant' Anna, on board of which a serious fire broke out recently while the vessel was at sea, has made the following statement to the Government:—

"On the night of the occurrence a number of Italian reservists were playing cards over No. 2 hatch at about 11 p.m. when there was an explosion. Immediately the quarters of the reservists, who were sleeping in an adjoining compartment, and the passage way, were filled by smoke and vapour described as asphyxiating gas.

"I immediately sent the S.O.S. signal and ordered the lifeboats to be got ready and the passengers to come on deck. I found forty persons overcome by the gas fumes, but they soon revived. I gave orders for getting the fire under control, and I sent officers among the reservists to urge them to behave like Italian soldiers and face the danger, as they must be relied upon to preserve order.

"Shortly afterwards there was a second outburst of smoke. The heat was so intense that the deck plates were considerably warped.

"The Ancona arrived eight hours after this. It is remarkable that not a single life among the 5,000 persons who were transferred to her was lost. Later in the day many vessels answered my wireless call, but I informed them that assistance was no longer required. The discipline displayed by the passengers was excellent considering the heavy sea that was running."

Ceylon in Revolt

LURID STORY FROM BERLIN.

New York, Sept. 29.

According to a radiogram from Berlin, the Overseas Agency in that city says that private reports from Ceylon declare that the entire island has been in a state of rebellion since June last. All the tea plantations have been destroyed and more than 2,000 persons shot.

In the rioting in Colombo the struggle was terrific, fighting going on in the streets and shops being ransacked. The damage done is estimated at over ten million marks, and sixty persons were shot there while 1800 were arrested.

The monsoon season was the worst the island has experienced for a century, and the superstitious Mahometans regarded it as the punishment of Allah. The English Press agency however reported that the disturbances had no unusual significance.

WRITERS AND THE WAR

NO. 2.

George Bernard Shaw

"G. Bernard Shaw; an Epitaph: by John Palmer," is the title of a work appearing in the latest list of forthcoming books. Ordinarily the announcement would have attracted attention primarily because John Palmer is the most prominent of revolutionary dramatic critics; to-day its importance lies in the fact that in the opinion of many people it is impossible to write anything on Shaw excepting an epitaph. To what extent this view is general cannot be said with any certainty, but there is little doubt that Mr. Bernard Shaw's popularity is very much less than it was in the several years immediately preceding the outbreak of hostilities; and should the war be of long duration not the least of its results will be the semi-extinction of Shaw as an essayist and dramatic writer. An epitaph, therefore, is the most fitting form for any monograph which might be penned on a man who once made history in the preserves which have been regarded as being peculiarly his own.

The cause of the great change in the popular opinion of Bernard Shaw are in the first place the war and secondly his own attitude towards the questions which the European imbroglio has brought into prominence. Possibly Shaw himself will not complain of the attitude of the public; more probably he will continue to exult in his own superiority to the common mind. And the ludicrous thing about the whole situation is that Shaw, as usual, will be right and the public wrong. For Shaw has not changed; he is to-day the Shaw of the early nineties and the Shaw of eighteen months ago. The change has been in the minds and feelings of the people, and Bernard Shaw, who is not an opportunist, has declined to change with them. Therefore he must be stoned into the darker recesses of semi-oblivion.

The position of Shaw to-day hinges largely around the "brave little Belgium" campaign and his own hostility to that which he termed, in effect, a "policy of cant." When Britain entered the fray by the side of her allies she announced that she did so in order to defend the treaty which von Bethmann-Hollweg had described as "a scrap of paper." Subsequently Belgium was devastated and her civilian population tortured and murdered. The popular mind in Britain then became still more inflamed against Germany and, if possible, Belgium became still braver.

A normal man would have been content to have used his talents in condemning a callous crime and his philosophical gifts would have been devoted to the critical examination of the Prussian's soul, or lack of one. But Shaw was Shaw. He knew Belgium was both "brave" and "little" so why waste time over her? He needed a greater field over which to travel so he irritated the crowd by pointing out to them that if patriots they were nevertheless hypocrites. He stated a thing that may or may not have been true. He suggested that for Belgium as Belgium, Britain did not care two straws, and that we were not so greatly interested in saving King Albert's kingdom as we were in crushing Kaiser William's empire. The crushing process, he continued, was principally due to a desire to break the power of a rival, and rivalry had been brought about by the usual gross incompetence of European diplomats from Sir Edward Grey downwards. This, in short, was the attitude adopted by Shaw; although he required a special supplement of the "New Statesman" in which to expound his intensely unpopular views.

To some slight extent of course,

Shaw was wrong. In his anxiety to point out Britain's shortcomings, he forgot the greater shortcomings of Germany. In his desire to emphasise the incompetence of the European diplomats, he omitted to credit Sir Edward Grey with having attempted to avert the great conflagration in the last days of July. What he did do, in effect, was to suggest that a nation that had misgoverned Ireland and had been guilty of the Denshaw crime should not utter humanitarian platitudes about Belgium. Shaw, with, perhaps, some reason on his side, declined to be an average Englishman; he preferred to be a superior Irishman. He saw the faults of the country in which he lived and flaunted them in the faces of its people. This he had done on innumerable occasions in the past, and, as a result, had gained in prestige and in wealth. It was only when he attempted to pursue the same policy at a moment when the Empire was faced by the gravest crisis in her history that he met with a rebuff from which he will probably never be allowed the opportunity of recovery.

Having thus sketched the attitude of Bernard Shaw towards the great upheaval, I would urge again that it is scarcely rational to hurl at his head the epithet of "Traitor!" Shaw is not an Englishman; he is a super-Irishman. Such commonplaces as "loyalty" have no meaning for him: his kingdom is the great world of humanity and the only ruler whom he acknowledges is intellect. He would probably feel just the same sorrow at the death of a man in Berlin as he would at the death of a man in Billingsgate. From the "patriotic" Briton's point of view, such an attitude is a crime in itself; but a strict believer in ethics would have no alternative but to admit that Shaw is right where the majority of people are wrong. They are wrong, and nearly all of us are wrong. By some strange freak nature has provided a world in which, almost the whole of its inhabitants are wrong and only very few are right. We—that is the majority of us—hold certain views. We are prejudiced; and very naturally prejudiced. The man who can tower above this state of gigantic mediocrity is the exception. He is very rarely discovered: and to-day, possibly, the only known specimen is George Bernard Shaw. But Shaw's views are among the things that are inacceptable at the moment. We do not desire philosophy, logic or ethical discussions. We desire to believe that however many mistakes she may make, however much hypocrisy there may be in Britain, she is still right in every instance. That spirit is necessary if a war is to be won. Mr. Shaw should have either accepted that view or have remained silent until the signing of a treaty of peace. He has hurled the brutal, the unpalatable, and—more important still—the untimely, truth at our heads. The consequence is that he must suffer for his indiscretion, and, although there may remain a small band of Shavians after the war, the once-popular idol will no longer receive homage at the hands of the mass of the British people.

H.L.L.

AGRICULTURAL PROSPECTS

OPTIMISTIC REPORTS FROM THE WEST OF THE PROVINCE.

Most optimistic reports are being received, concerning the agricultural prospects in the west of the Province of Buenos Aires. The recent rains have benefited this year's sowings to a great extent, and it is reported that the prospects have never been more favourable.

The rise in temperature too, has been most favourable to germination of wheat. Oats are in a like case. Pasturage, however, is poor, but fruit on the other hand, could not be better.

Being yet early, these reports must be regarded as optimistic.

CATTLE PRICES AND THE MEAT TRADE

AN INDUSTRY ENDANGERED

THE "FREEZERS" STANDPOINT

No. 1

In a stock-raising country such as Argentina undoubtedly is, the interest of an important section of the public lies in the cattle prices realised from day to day. A fall is regarded pessimistically and hopes are expressed that not long will elapse before prices once again take an upward turn. This, of course, is a very natural outlook; but there are two sides to every question.

When reviewing the extraordinarily high prices paid for animals during recent weeks, has the average man ever considered the danger of the marked and sudden increase on the future of one of the country's most important industries? Has it been realised that Argentina's pre-eminence in the meat export trade has been due largely to the fact that she could consistently undersell her rivals in the open market? Has the lesson provided by the falling-away in the North American meat exports been taken sufficiently to heart? More important still, do the mass of those anxious for the commercial development of the Republic know that the increased prices in the Argentine will once again bring the United States and other rivals in the field, and that that which was rapidly becoming almost a monopoly is in danger of slipping from the hands of the great Argentine meat exporting houses?

These are all questions that demand serious consideration before a reply is given, and, at the outset, it may be said that the argument in favour of the Frigorificos is one which, even though it may be combatted, is not to be thrust lightly aside.

Since the latter days of July, the writing on the wall has been plain, for it was at that period that the rises in the price of fat stock locally became pronounced.

In July, the Frigorificos were paying 25 to 26 centavos a pound; in August, the average had increased to 34 and 35 centavos a pound, while during the latter month, in extreme cases, the remarkable figure of 40 centavos was reached.

It is true that in the present month there was a sudden fall, and in the Liniers market prices as low as 24 centavos were reached. Latterly, however, the market has stiffened, and 30 to 34 centavos has again been reached during the past week.

These fluctuations indicate an instability in the meat business which compels investigation. Reference to the export statistics for August shows that, in addition to an increase to the United Kingdom, there was a very considerable addition to the quantity exported to the Continent, although a fall has to be recorded in the exports to the United States. For purposes of comparison, the following tables may prove of interest:—

July.
Exported to:	Quarters	Sheep
United Kingdom	320,141	81,803
Continent	14,983	5,300
United States	30,078	10,619
	365,202	97,722
August.
Exported to:	Quarters	Sheep
United Kingdom	380,978	94,551
Continent	63,437	19,085
United States	15,838	9,285
	460,253	122,921

At first sight, these figures do not appear to call greatly for criticism. Nevertheless, it is interesting to endeavour to discover the cause of the unprecedented increase in prices. The explanation appears to lie in the fact that buyers experienced considerable difficulty in obtaining the quantity required for the fulfilment of their immediate shipping obligations. The consequence was that only the payment of exceptionally high prices induced stock owners to market stock that, under ordinary conditions, would have been retained for finishing-off and sale in the months of November and December.

Admitting that this was the cause of the rise in prices, what led to the almost equally sudden fall?

In frigorifico circles it is commonly reported that prices had increased to such an extent that a loss of anything from £3 to £5 was experienced in the case of every animal purchased for the fulfilment of contracts with the British Government, the Continent, and the United States. Furthermore, even the small quantities of beef placed on the British market as "chilled" and which had for some time been bringing an average price of 7d. to 7 1-4d. a pound for sides, was being supplied at a loss.

Obviously it was impossible for the frigorificos to continue on such a basis, and the solution was supplied by the British Government. It may be remembered that the Government control the whole of the freight space in the refrigerating steamers. Therefore, when the prices attained absurd proportions, they found a remedy by withdrawing the vessels Dorset and Drina from the Plate service for September. This reduced the quantity of meat to be supplied to the British Government during this month from 25,000 tons to 18,000 tons; moreover, for October it is understood that still further reductions will be made and the available vessels will be sent to load in more favourable markets until such time as selling prices in the Argentine market—which are now greater than those of other stock producing countries—are forced down to a normal basis.

This, in short, is the position as it exists at the present moment. Regarded superficially, it may be assumed that the difficulty is a passing one, and is fraught with little danger. Nevertheless, the problem presents a number of points which will have to be considered carefully, and not the least of these is the tendency to gamble on the possibility of making a profit which, however, must automatically vanish under certain conditions. This phase of the situation, however, demands separate treatment, and will receive consideration in Tuesday's edition of THE HERALD.

A Foolish Gamble

DEALERS AND THE FRIGORIFICOS

No 2

In the initial article on the influence of cattle prices on the future of the meat trade in Argentina, it was pointed out that effective measures were being taken by the British Government to counteract the sudden increase in the cost of stock. This fact draws attention to another phase of the problem.

Cattle dealers, like business men engaged in other trades subject to fluctuations in prices, are never averse to investment in what appears to them to be a promising gamble. This is precisely the course they have adopted locally.

The upward tendency of prices during recent months has led many dealers to purchase stock at extravagant rates in the belief that the frigorificos will continue to pay present, and even higher prices. What is to be the effect of that speculation if prices are brought down to normal?

No one, of course, will combat the assertion that the stock owner should receive a fair return for the money which he has expended, and for that reason he is entitled to obtain full value for the stock which he may place upon the market. Nevertheless, there are several points which might well have been considered before reckless speculation, even in minor instances, was indulged in.

The most important of these is the fact that once the price of meat from Argentina has equalled, or exceeded, that charged by other countries, the Argentine semi-monopoly will tend to disappear and she will be compelled to compete with equally favourably placed rivals. This is shown by the fact that when the local prices commenced to evince even a slight increase, other countries with an available surplus of meat for export at once entered the European market. The figures for July are illuminating:

UNITED KINGDOM BEEF IMPORTS

From Argentina	514,252 Cwt.
" Australia	181,049 "
" United States	191,160 "
" New Zealand	50,624 "
" Uruguay	38,334 "
" Other Countries	225,622 "
	1,201,041

These figures show that while Argentina still leads the way, other countries have meat for export and are only awaiting a favourable turn of the market to unload their surplus on Europe. The question then involved is which country can supply the required quantities at the lowest price. Ordinarily, the advantage should rest with the Argentine, but, as has been pointed out, the inflation of local stock prices destroys that advantage and, inevitably, the proportion of shipments from Argentina must lessen, while that of her competitors will tend to increase as time goes on. The danger of such changed conditions to speculators is at once apparent.

One other point, too, is the possibility of demoralisation in the local cattle market. The temporary shortage of stock has been due to the weather experienced during this winter and the fact that animals, in many instances, are being held for the summer months.

With the threatened heavy increase in supplies, the dealer must face the probability of the marked influx causing a fall in cattle prices with a suddenness as great as that which heralded the recent increase.

This "slump" in the market might also, conceivably, be brought about artificially by the diverting of more steamers to countries where conditions may be more favourable.

Naturally, it is not possible to forecast definitely what will happen; but it is obvious that the frigorificos are not prepared to continue to pay the prices which have been hitherto demanded. A reduction in cost must come. That reduction may be brought about by natural causes, such as the overstocking of the market, or it may be deliberately brought about by the withdrawal of freight space. In any case, however, the effect on the Argentine cattle industry would be far from beneficial. The ordinary stock owner would suffer because of the inflated prices received by those who sold at an earlier period, and the speculator would lose on a venture which had been embarked on without sufficient regard to the exigencies of the trade. The sooner, therefore, prices once again rest on a normal basis, the better for the stock owner, the dealer, and—it almost goes without saying—the frigorificos. The members of the latter industry, at any rate, are believed to have the situation well in hand.

EAST COAST MURDERS

COMMITTEE CONSIDERS CLAIMS.

London, Sept. 25.

The East Coast Raid Committee appointed in January submitted to-day to the Treasury reports on fourteen German raids previous to July 15, including the bombardments of Hartlepool, Scarborough, and Whitby by German warships. The number of claims admitted for personal injuries is 698; 178 of these refer to the dead. Cases of injury to property number 10,297. Investigations are proceeding.

FOR THE RED CROSS

Allies Function at Harrods

A BRILLIANT SPECTACLE

It was a happy thought on the part of the management of Messrs. Harrods (Buenos Aires) Limited to combine the opening of their annex in Calle Paraguay with a festival in aid of the funds of the Red Cross Societies of the Allied Nations. In ordinary circumstances, the inauguration of the extensive additions to the mammoth emporium in Florida would have attracted a large and fashionable gathering. Under the additional stimulus provided by the knowledge that attendance would also assist the Red Cross, the success was accentuated, and the function on Sunday last was indeed a brilliant one.

Messrs. Harrods spared no expense or trouble on their part to produce results well worthy of the object they had in view, and the funds of the Allied Societies will benefit to a very large extent. It is understood that over $10,000 was taken in admission charges alone. The spacious first floor was turned for the occasion into a handsome salon which was thronged during the afternoon by a representative gathering of Buenos Aires society. The salon was tastefully arranged and decorated with the Argentine and Allied colours, and an improvised stage was placed in a favourable position. Diplomatic and Consular representatives of nearly all the Allies were present, and among those noticed were H.B.M. Minister, Sir Reginald Tower; the French Minister, M. Henri Jullien; the Italian Minister, Comm. Victor Cobiainchi; the Minister of Belgium, M. Chas. Renoz; the Russian Chargé d'Affaires, M. Eugene Stein; H.B.M. Consul-General, Mr. H. B. Mackie.

An excellent programme was provided in two sections, and during the interval tea was served in the tea rooms in the customary style for which Harrods have become noted. Before the conclusion of the programme, an auction of dolls was conducted by Sr. Lagos, and, as the bidding was spirited, the funds were considerably augmented.

The programme presented consisted of the following items:—Orchestral overture, "William Tell"; dances by Srtas. Lita Caprile, B. Klappenbach, and Ana Nieva; song, "Romance of Russia" (Paskino), Sra. Cabib; song, "Eternamente" (Mascheroni), Sra. Bertana; violin solos, Sr. D. Aldo Forini; selections from "Aida," orchestra; song "Le Réve de Manon," Dr. Douglas Sibbald, accompaniment, Mrs. Sibbald; harp solo, "Impromptu Caprice" XX. (Tedeschi), Srtas. Chalat; song, "C'era un ré, il ré di Thule," Srtas. Sadurri; classical dances, Mlle. Verbist; "Sambre et Meuse" (Planquette), orchestra.

The financial result is extremely gratifying. No less than $2713.82 is credited to each one of the five nations which associated at the function, a cheque for that amount being made out to their respective representatives. This gives a total of $13,569.10 gross, or the 10 cents may be deducted; as Mr. Mantalini said, "The halfpenny be dem'd." Even with that deduction the result is magnificent and reflects credit on all concerned, and not least on the energy, kindness, patriotism and excellent management of Messrs. Harrods' which has made it possible.

ITALIAN RESERVISTS

Rome, Sept. 25.

The steamers Tomaso di Savoia, America and Dante Alighieri have arrived at Genoa with 6,000 reservists from the United States.

The steamer Re Vittorio has also arrived with 1,000 reservists from Buenos Aires.

PATRIOTIC FUNDS

BRITISH PATRIOTIC COMMITTEE

50th LIST OF SUBSCRIPTIONS

GENERAL FUND.

Previously acknowledged	$148,384.96
Per La Plata Dist. Branch: H. C. Arkell $10, W. Borman 5, A. Dick 10, J. Eiriz 1, R. C. Osborne 10, Puleston, Boas and Co. 60, M. C. Roan 15, A. H. Quirk 5, Volunteer, ex-Capt. 10	126.00
Per Administration Staff, F.C. Central de Córdoba: H. H. Thornton $10, M. M. Cowes 10, J. H. Talbot 10, W. A. Elders 10, C. E. Trench 5, A. Spalding 5, S. Sterling 5, G. W. A. McQueen 2, A. H. Heinert 2, E. Mackay 3, L. Beaumont 2, L. J. Knight 10, F. M. Martin 5, L. S. Stooks 10, E. Birmingham 3, T. B. Carman 3, C. R. O'Brien 3, R. S. Stuart 10, R. Monkman 5, A. G. Goodliffe 5, W. Ryan 5, H. Griffin 2, H. Bribbs 2, D. Dowling 2, R. Montgomery 10, A. Thomas 10, G. H. Wallace 10, A. Rogers 5, R. Logan 5, A. C. Robertson 3, E. Pellens 5, M. Goodbar 2, A. C. Bradford 2, G. E. Davies 2, J. Wilson 2, D. Murchison 5, J. P. Grandidier 2, J. Anderson 2, A. Seggoid 1, D. J. Kiernan 1, E. Hansen 5, A. J. Leeson 5, A. Thaarup 2, A. J. Hains 4, D. P. Levy 5, A. Morera 3, F. Haslop 2, J. Mackintosh 3, W. T. Scott 2, M. Loane 2, J. N. Truman 2, J. A. Nuza 3, W. J. F. Dawson 2, A. M. Cariboni 2, F. E. Bosch 1, R. Lagerquist 5, G. H. Horrocks 10, A. Hepburn 2, H. C. Whitechurch 1, F. Torres 1, Denis Bolger 2, D. R. Henderson 5, A. Huistendal 2, O. A. Reboursin 5, C. R. Galceran 2, L. Aguirre 5, H. Hugeroni 10, N. T. Lopez 2, José Leiro 2, H. A. Willis 10, T. Simmons 10, A. H. Kohring 10, E. P. Griffin 3, G. C. Bernard 5, J. C. Finlayson 5, A. Fones 2, J. Vojtechovsky 2, D. V. Joyce 5, A. Hepburn 10, E. Quinteros 2, L. Espeche 2, P. Ruis 2, P. Balckenende (h) 2, T. J. Vera 2, V. C. Bertorini 10, C. W. Duffil 5, E. Adamson 5, C. Cullen 5, M. G. Pavlovich 5, J. Collingwood 2, F. Vildoza 1	400.00
William H. Logan	50.00
Dr. Petty	30.00
Per Traffic Dept., F. C. Sud. General: F. B. 1, P. Fagan 2, C. A. Kladt 1, F. MacMahon 1, A. R. Tallon 3, J. S. Targett 3 (total $11); (Local assistance to Britishers): D. J. Bleasdale 5, T. J. Gouk 10 ($15)	26.00
J. B. Williams	20.00
W. Lowe Brown	200.00
H. H. Slater	70.00
Grand total to date	$149,326.96

NATIONAL RELIEF FUND.

PRINCE OF WALES'S FUND.

Already acknowledged	$134,546.08
Per La Plata and District Branch: Mrs. B. Burns $15, S. W. Churchouse 5, U. Fletcher 10, S. G. Griffiths 5, J. Graham 5, E. W. Illesley 5, E. S. Lawrence 5, J. W. Maxwell 5, G. Massard 5, F. B. C. Potter 5, C. Smeedon 5, S. Thornton 5, F. H. Vigor 10, F. K. Williams 10, A. Willats 5, J. H. Wiley 5, A. Ycomans 5	110.00

Engineer and Staff F.C. Sud. Traffic Dept., F. C. Sud.: C. Barrow 15, A. V. Bennet 5, G. E. Brown 10, G. W. R. Coleman 10, W. Cook 5, F. Coupe 2, H. Cruise 5, F. J. Deck and Fly 40, R. F. Elder 5, C. R. Fones 2, W. George 5, R. Giraffi 5, T. Gregory 25, C. A. Hall 10, H. E. Hopson 10, Mrs. H. E. Hopson 5, A. Mackintosh 10, A. MacLuskie 10, A. E. Martin 5, E. A. Matthews 5, S. A. Matthews 2, P. Miqueu 5, E. D. Moffat 1, W. J. Morris 5, C. Page 10, P. T. Philp 10, A. G. Porter 2, G. H. Shepherd 5, J. B. Simpson 5, D. Sinclair 10, L. C. Tregonning 10, B. A. Vanoli 2	419.50
Grand total to date	$135,341.58

RED CROSS FUND.

Previously acknowledged	$19,424.70
William H. Logan	50.00
Total to date	$19,474.70

BELGIAN RELIEF FUND.

Previously acknowledged	$4,576.10
William Logan	50.00
Total to date	$4,626.10

OFFICERS' FAMILIES' FUND.

Almacenes Sud Americanos, Gath and Chaves, Ltd. . . $1,000.00
Subscriptions should be sent to the Hon. Treasurer, Mr. Thos. Lloyd, Sarmiento 459, or paid in to the accounts opened in the London and R. P. Bank, Ltd.; British Bank of S. A., Ltd.; London and Brazilian Bank, Ltd.; Anglo-South American Bank, Ltd.
For general information, subscription forms, etc., application should be made to the Hon. Secretary, Calle Sarmiento 543.

AMOUNTS REMITTED TO DATE.

Prince of Wales's Fund	£11,250
Red Cross Fund	2,335
Belgian Relief Fund	330
Overseas Warship	100
Officers' Families' Fund (by grant from General Fund)	500

ROSARIO AND DISTRICT SUBSCRIBERS.

The following is the eleventh list of contributions received by the Patriotic Committee of Rosario for the Prince of Wales's Fund:—

	$ m/l.
Amount already acknowledged	57,624.95
Mrs. G. Van Oppen	20.—
J. E. Traill, Traill, F. C. C. A. (monthly)	25.—
Robert Hope, San Eduardo, F.C.C.A. (monthly)	100.—
Edw. M. Show (monthly)	50.—
Mrs. Miller	3.—
A. E. Milner, Villa del Rosario, F.C.C.A.	20.—
Collected by Douglas Martin, Traffic Supt. F. C. C.A.:— C. O. Driscoll, Casilda, $20; G. R. Sunderland, Casilda, 10; C. Morris, Cañada de Gomez, 5; F. Groves 5; T. H. Logan, Tucuman, 30; F. J. Smith Cañada de Gomez, 10; J. Tudor, E. Palmer, T. G. Farrell, C. de Gomez, $1 each; R. Symonds 10, C. E. Symonds 2, J. Mackintosh 10.	105.—
Collected by Wm. J. Martin Rosario Waterworks:— M. Nilson $5; E. Kulp, P. Olsen, B. Raineri, each; $2; A. Andresen 5, S. Hansen 5, O. S. Wendel 3, O. Thorkelsen 2; M. Villar, A. Ensick, J. Andresen, L. Holling, C. Pedersen, M. Richard, each $1; H. Buchanan 20, F. Caranti 5, G. Schaub 5, T. Thomson 50, Miss F. O. Martin 10	122.—
Collected by F. W. Darch, British Vice-Consul, Villa

Constitucion, F.C.C.A.:— s.s. "Wearside": F. K. W. 10, J. G. Jones 3, J. Pegg 3, M. Dyer 2; Setwell, J. Lacey, E. Lacey, S. Hagidakis, J. Nicholas, J. Luxen, B. Etrolli, A. Carrberry, P. Petersen, A. Green, J. Johnson, A. Rees, H. Jones, M. Nash, C. Yiemotes, J. Carrusse, D. Hegonani, P. Katrekis, D. Lymer, E. Goinioles, J. Nicolaidis, N. Bliziolis, E. Dentrinos, $1 each 41.—
s.s. "Florence Pile": P. Mitchel $5; E. H. McKern, C. G. Brinkman, Fred. N. Henderson, A. D. Lowe, Frank Meikle, $2 each; O. Lawson, J. Khiahagias, J. Sinclair, V. Mortonan, J. Mabride, J. Johnson, A. Palmers, A. Gence, J. Akram, $1 each 25.—
s.s. "Anglier": J. Winchester $10; P. Lawson, E. M. Wahlstrand, W. Miller, C. Babackas, $5 each; I. and H. Brayley $10; J. Wilson, W. Manning, F. Williams, A. Frank, J. Woodward, W. Morgan, M. Williams, J. Devey, G. Bjorksten, J. Sully, Joe Minske, W. Dougan, J. Scott, J. Lillico, S. Epifanio, C. Gilchrist, J. Bell, A. Llewellyn, J. N. McLeod, $3 each 97.—
s.s. "Tremeadow": Thos. A. Kemp 5.—
s.s. "Eastville": Robt. McKay $5, W. Cowell 3; Jas. Gram, J. L. Baxter, C. Beck, E. Jackson, H. Dobinson, P. Barbattis, $2 each; apprentices A. Abrahamson, W. Kus, S. Vasilika, E. Smith, E. Collin and H. Henriksen, $1 each; Macdonald, Jas. McGregory, T. Kerr, J. Carriellus, $0.50 each 29.—
s.s. "Westbury": R. Smith, P. Cameron, W. J. Williams, $5 each; J. Knight, H. Hogman, $3 each; J. Robinson, C. Robertson, E. Clapham, H. A. Hansen, James Carthy, $2 each; Robt. Davidson, L. Anderson, H. M. Grund Bosen, D. Kathurty, A. Glsson, $1 each 36.—
s.s. "Trowbridge": Captain 23.—
Total 58,325.95

FOR THE FRONT

VOLUNTEERS FROM L. AND R. P. BANK.

Messrs. Bulman, Denton, Dey and Smeltzer are members of the staff of the London and River Plate Bank who have volunteered for active service. Their departure for the front will make the total of volunteers from the Argentine branches of the bank, 33.

Standing—C. G. Bulman, L. Denton. Sitting—G. L. Dey, W. A. Smeltzer.

"HERALD" BELGIAN FUND

Amount previously acknowledged	$2,642.40
Mrs. E. W.	6.00
J. Manning	2.00
F. S.	2.00
A. L.	1.00
E. C. H.	0.50
J. Wyllie	10.00
Joseph J. Brooking	9.00
Mary Esther and Betita (6th donation)	4.60
W. K. Cunningham, for May	50.00
Mrs. Cochrane (for May)	5.00
J. Manning	2.00
H. B. (for May and June)	10.00
Pito-Pico	20.00
E. W.	2.00
F. S.	2.00
A. L.	1.00
"Jam"	50.00
A. L. L.	10.00
G. A. Scharenberg	20.00
George Clarke	10.00
Miss Z. S.	10.00
W. K. Cunningham (for June)	50.00
Miss Cunningham (for June)	5.00
Mary Esther and Betita (7th donation)	4.60
J. Manning	2.00
"Jam"	25.00
F. S.	2.00
A. L.	1.00
W. K. Cunningham (for July)	50.00
Miss Cunningham (for July)	5.00
Mrs. Cochrane (for July)	5.00
H. B. (for July)	5.00
Mary Esther and Betita (8th donation)	4.60
J. Manning	2.00
A. L. L.	5.00
H. B. (for August)	50.00
Miss Cunningham (for Aug.)	5.00
Mrs. Cochrane (for Aug.)	5.00
F. F.	10.00
F. S.	2.00
A. L.	1.00
A. L. L.	5.00
Mary Esther and Betita (9th donation)	4.60
Total	$3132.30

AEROPLANE "RIVER PLATE NO. 2."

LIST OF DONATIONS

Balance brought forward	$5,500.—
Miss H. J. Forbes	5.—
Joseph Burke	5.—
J. Dobson	5.—
S. Forsyth	5.—
P. Boyce	5.—
Walter Johnson	10.—
Mrs. W. Johnson	10.—
George Dodd	5.—
Alfred Smith	5.—
Juan Benitez	3.—
G. Dodd	2.—
T. N. S.	5.—
A. J. Sykes	20.—
S. A. Rogers	20.—
V. H.	2.—
J. E. Green	10.—
Collected by W. S. J.: F. J. Wythes $50; E. Lavalie $10, B. L. G. $10; J. H. $10; W. J. S. $10; Adrian Jones $10; M. B. Brooks $10; J. L. Quick $5; R. G. Paterson $5; F. Baillie $2, K. $2; H. Burton $2; A. Deponte $5; C. Gerex $1; Albea $1. Total	133.—
Rev. Dr. J. W. Fleming	5.—
Collected by London and Brazilian Bank: A. S. Miles $10; A. N. Montarce $10; A. K. Green $10; Manager and Staff of Estancia "Las Cabezas," $150. Total	180.—
W. D. C.	10.—
R. W. Traill	100.—
Alberto Fleming	10.—
Wayers	10.—
A. Macdonald	150.—
C. J. S. Webster	5.—
W. H. Earl	5.—
W. R. Schiele	5.—
D. I. Runciman	5.—
Mrs. A. W. Crundall	5.—
Total to date	$6240.—

Subscriptions will be received by the Hon. Treasurer, Mr. W. Watson, Cangallo 536, from whom collecting lists can also be obtained.

“THE HERALD” AMBULANCE

CONGRATULATIONS FROM MR. BOUTELL

“A WONDERFUL RECORD”

Mr. F. H. Chevallier Boutell, Delegate of the British Red Cross Society in Argentina, was formally advised on Thursday, that the fund inaugurated by THE HERALD at his suggestion, by the gift of a motor ambulance to the Society, had reached $6000, the amount necessary to purchase one car.

Yesterday THE HERALD received the following letter from Mr. Boutell:

My Dear Editor:

I am extremely obliged to you for the advice you have given me of the result of your campaign. It is a wonderful record, and shews what an energetic appeal will do when properly handled. The whole of the success obtained is due to the patriotic call you issued, which produced the noble response made by your readers. Truly the Ambulance Motor will be indeed a HERALD car—and I trust will be the means of recovering many of our brave sufferers who are fighting for us, be the means of saving valuable lives, and restoring them to health once more. Please accept my gratitude, and I beg, through your kindness, to thank the subscribers for their generous response. I know it will be fully appreciated at Headquarters—and I will take care to see that a proper representation of facts is made to the Executive of the Society I represent.

Yours, etc.,

F. H. Chevallier Boutell.

25 de Mayo 158.

Bs. Aires, Sept. 23, 1915.

Subsequently Mr. Boutell was seen by a representative of THE HERALD in regard to certain details connected with the movement which he has at heart, and Mr. Boutell gave some interesting information regarding what has been his special hobby, in the way of public service—ambulance and Red Cross work.

“Your paper,” he said, “has achieved a splendid result, and I personally feel a deep debt of gratitude toward your readers. Those who have not been in Argentina many years, and in fact all who see to-day nothing but perfection in our Asistencia Pública, and other organizations for caring for the sick and injured in time of peace, or for the wounded in time of war, may possibly have wondered why I should have taken up the question of supporting the Red Cross Society. It is not, as some might perhaps suppose, just a present day fancy of mine. I have been associated with such work ever since I have been in Argentina, and that is from the time when conditions here were such as to-day would be considered terrible.”

“In those days it was almost a crime to attempt to assist an injured man in Argentina, and such a thing as First Aid Societies was unknown. Years ago—I believe it must be well over twenty—when the old Central Station was in its glory, a man was run over by a shunting engine. Both his legs were cut off. He was dragged on to the station platform, and there he was allowed to bleed slowly to death, simply because it was illegal for first aid to be rendered by anyone but a police official or some other authority.

“It happened that at the time Sir Vincent Barrington, Vice-President of the St. John's Ambulance Association was here. He heard of the accident to which I have referred, and was horror-stricken when I told him of the manner in which the men had been allowed to die. I told him that as the law stood, such occurrences could not be altered. ‘Then you should make it your business,’ he said, ‘to see that the law is altered.’

You should make it your duty to get the alteration, and then start a branch of the St. John Ambulance Society here.’ From that moment my connection with the movement began. I set to work and after much labour and with the help of the then Attorney General of the Nation, Dr. Eduardo Costa, I was successful in obtaining a National Law—which permits that First Aid may be rendered by an outsider—until fully qualified medical assistance can be given. On this I started the Buenos Aires Branch of the St. John Ambulance Association which worked with marked success for some considerable time—and I was President of the Branch during the whole of its existence. Finally the Branch was merged into the Argentine First Aid Society, as it was not considered right the aid required should be controlled or directed by a foreign organisation, a very proper view to take. Another great point gained was, it caused the remodelling and the extending of the Asistencia Pública service on to-day's basis. I have, therefore, always been keen and enthusiastic on “First Aid” in every form, hence my flapping and flaunting the British Red Cross flag in everyone's face, and my firm belief there is no nobler, no more charitable, no more glorious mission than to ‘do one's bit’ and best for a fellow creature in the terrible hour of need. The knowledge that one has done something that means good to another, is the most supreme satisfaction, and amply repays one for any sacrifice and labour that may be made or may have been undertaken. Incidentally I may mention, I was highly honoured by General Roca when he was President; I was called to Government House and received the thanks of the Chief Magistrate for my services to the country where I have resided for so many years.”

Subscriptions.

Amount previously acknowledged	$6018.50
M. G. Pritchard	5.00
Pupils of Miss E. M. Stubbs	10.00
Edward Shilton	10.00
Louisa Shilton	10.00
J. McCallum	1.00
Elura Violeta	1.00
Guillermo Parry	10.00
Duncan M. Munro	100.00
Wm. Watt	20.00
Wm. Worsfold	5.00
“G.”	30.00
Guillermo Carruthers	10.00
E. J. C.	5.00
D. C.	5.00
F. J. Knight-Adkin	9.00
Miss L. Hamer	2.30
“I.R.M.”	10.00
Collected by Mr. A. B. Pownall from members of the Lomas Athletic Club as follows:—
T. Flint 10, A. Conte 10, W. J. Lamb 10, W. S. 10, A. B. Pownall 10, W. R. J. Murray 10, G. H. Armstrong 5, Rev. John D. Morrow 10, H. L. Stevens 10, R. T. Rodman 10, R. Russell-Gregg 5, G. H. Austin 10, J. B. Hall 10, A. McGaul 5, D. Sinclair 5, P. Grant 10, C. Withington 10, J. D. Duncan 5, G. Simpson 5, J. B. Auld 10, W. Flint 10, J. A. Hinds 10, H. G. Nordaby 10, P. R. Walsh 5, R. F. Harding 5, J. White 5, F. Horton 5, H. Dandridge 10, G. R. Stewart 5, John Rodman 10, G. M. Comber 5, R. K. Martin-dale 5, A. G. Bridger 10, G. J. B. Cribbes 5, P. A. 5, A. Dublene 5, W. B. Grant 5, J. Taylor 10, S. Gibson 5, R. S. Rnshton 10, John A. Gibson 5, J. Carstairs 10, R. W. Rudd 10, E. Gibson 5, J. Quick 5, Mrs. Rodman 20, Jack C. Rodman 5, Katie Rodman 5, D. Coulson 5, K. Boggs 5, William Black 50, C. W. Reynolds 10	$ 445.00
A. Owen	5.00
N. E. A.	4.00
Betty	1.00
G. Sherriff	20.00

$6,736.80

FOR THE RED CROSS

Lantern Lecture at Prince George's Hall

BY MR. F. H. CHEVALLIER BOUTELL

Were you too late to assist in the purchase of the motor ambulance? If so, it by no means follows that you should not contribute to the British Red Cross funds.

In the case of many patriotic and charitable functions, there is a considerable deduction for expenses before any surplus is available for the advertised cause. This complaint, however, cannot be levelled at the unique entertainment to be held at Prince George's Hall on October 6.

On that evening, Mr. F. H. Chevallier Boutell, official delegate in Argentina of the British Red Cross, will deliver a lecture on the Great War, with particular reference to the Society's work in the field, hospital, and at home. The lecture will be illustrated by a remarkable series of lantern slides—depicting thrilling phases of the campaign on every front, together with war biograph pictures.

The advance syllabus, which will be published to-morrow, suggests that the function will be one of immense interest and of quite a unique type for Buenos Aires.

Every dollar paid for admission will be devoted to the funds of the Society. Not one centavo will be utilised for any other purpose, inasmuch as the expenses are guaranteed.

QUEEN ALEXANDRA AND THE WAR

THE “FIELD FORCE FUND.”

The following notification is contained in a letter received locally from the Secretary of the Overseas Club in London:—

“There are a number of things which our brave men at the front urgently require other than tobacco, such for instance, as stationery-wallets, pencils, ointment to safeguard them from flies and insects, condensed milk and cocoa, sweets, boot-laces, handkerchiefs, toothbrushes, soap and towels. Owing to their inability to replenish their requirements at the Dardanelles, there seems to be an especial shortage of all these comforts as far as the Mediterranean Expeditionary Force is concerned. We have arranged with the Queen Alexandra Field Force Fund to try and help in the task of keeping our men well supplied with what they most require, and I have much pleasure in enclosing an appeal signed by H.M. Queen Alexandra on behalf of this fund.”

The appeal is as follows:—

Marlborough House.

July 2, 1915.

To the Members of

The Overseas Club.

I fully realise how generous the public has been in subscribing through my Field Force Fund, to provide comforts for our brave soldiers at the Front. But our armies in the field are constantly growing, and with every prospect of a second winter campaign, it is imperative that a supreme effort should be at once commenced so that not a single British soldier may have to go through another winter unprovided with those comforts which are so essential to his well being and to his fighting efficiency.

I know that the urgent need for money has only to be stated, to ensure instant and generous support for my Field Force Fund, from every section of the public.

ALEXANDRA.”

THE HERALD will be glad to receive and acknowledge subscriptions.

HESIONE'S MISSING MEN

Discovered in Ship's Boat

LANDED IN THE THAMES

London, Sept. 27.

The missing boat belonging to the steamer Hesion, which had been sunk by a German submarine, has been found, and the 19 sailors who were on board have been landed in the Thames.

AEROPLANES V. ZEPPELINS

HOW THE RAIDERS ARE RAIDED.

The latest aerial attack on the East Coast by Count Zeppelin's now much dis-counted monsters lends point to the following eminently sane article taken from the “Journal of Commerce.” As the writer remarks:—To many it is difficult to understand why the raiders are not met by British aeroplanes. It must, however, be admitted that there are numerous difficulties in the way of a successful attack by night. An airship can approach practically any point on the coast from almost any direction, and, in addition, can sail at a height which may vary considerably. All these facts make it difficult to see a Zeppelin approaching at all, and certainly do not allow time for sufficient warning to be given to waiting aeroplanes. To begin with, the ‘planes may well be some considerable distance away from the point on the coast at which the airship enters the country. The Zeppelin is then already at a good height, and, further, can increase this height at a greater rate than an aeroplane can climb, which enables her to keep above the aeroplane at least for a considerable time, and the latter cannot seriously attack the light craft until she commands the greater altitude. Once the Zeppelin is above the town or works singled out for bomb-dropping it would only add to the damage below should the aeroplane attack the airship by the usual method of dropping bombs; some of these are bound to miss, and consequently the risk is too great. When once the Zeppelin decides to make good her escape, a chase would be very difficult at night, and there is the further danger—which is understood to be a very real one—of the aeroplane making an unsuccessful landing in the dark.

The attack by 23 aeroplanes on Karlsruhe has been looked upon as a reprisal against the numerous Zeppelin attacks on England, and according to the German wireless report on the subject, it has apparently been effective. There would appear to be little doubt that the British and French authorities do not intend to seriously attack the sundry raiders. Reports are constantly appearing in regard to the attacks by aeroplanes on airship sheds in all parts of Belgium and Germany, and the method must be effective in the long run, as it gets at the root of the trouble. Zeppelins must be housed in sheds, and if the policy of destroying sheds is continued the number of airships is bound to be reduced. Even should the shed be empty it is still an advantage to have it destroyed, especially if be somewhat near England. The whole question is on the same footing as the submarine attacks on merchant shipping; some success attends both sets of operation, and if the authorities do not adopt the apparently direct method of meeting the menace, it must not be assumed that nothing is being done.

AERIAL WARFARE

GERMAN RAIDERS FRUSTRATED.

London, Sept. 23.

The British Empire Grain Company of Montreal has presented the British Government with a large biplane carrying a gun.

It is reported from Paris that Flight-Lieutenant Danne and Sergeant-Pilot Garnier, armed with carbines, stalled

BRITISH AGED AND INFIRM FUND ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING.

Tuesday, Sept. 28.

The annual general meeting of the British Aged and Infirm Fund was held yesterday. In the absence of Sir Reginald Tower, through indisposition, Mr. James Begg presided.

The Chairman, in submitting the annual report, said that the recently announced deficit of $1,868, thanks to a generous response by the public, no longer existed. The result of the appeal proved that, despite the numerous calls for patriotic purposes, the community had no intention of ignoring local needs once they were known to them. Since June 30, the following additions to the resources of the Fund had been received:—

Subscriptions and donations received previous to the issue of the appeal . . . $722.92
Donations in response to the appeal . . . 5,343.00
Sale of Work at "Wayside" . . 1,073.20

Total . . . $7,139.12

The Committee were greatly encouraged by the result, and all the subscribers would be glad to know that not only had last year's deficit been wiped out, but that there was no need to consider any diminution in the Pension List for the current year; all the current expenditure would be easily covered.

The following were elected members of Committee to fill the vacancies:—Mrs. Monteith Drysdale, Messrs. Simpson, Bramwell, and Begg.

It was resolved that the meeting should place on record their appreciation of the generous response made by the community to the appeal for funds.

SUBSCRIPTIONS AND DONATIONS RECEIVED SINCE THE 30th JUNE, 1915.

The River Plate Coal Co. $200, Miss R. V. Dawney, annually 60, N. F. Tribe 20, San Isidro District Dorcas Society (half proceeds sale of work) 385.65, Mrs. Mary Craik, annually (£5) 57.27, T. St. John Gebbie 25, John Bramwell 20, Chadwick Weir Co., Ltd. 20, F. W. Dodd 10, Mrs. John Campbell 500, B. J. Ebsworth 50, "Brighton," 10, H. R. Dashwood 25, D. Hogg 20, R. Begg 25, T. S. Boadle 100, A. J. Avery 10, E. C. Boas 10, Bede Mitchell 5, W. G. Mackern 10, A. G. Thornton 10, W. A. Nicholson 10, "E" 15, J. A. Aird 5, E. H. Zimmermann 100, W. Falconer 3, Rev. Dr. Fleming 10, G. J. Logan 25, W. Matthews 10, Mrs. W. C. Roberts 10, G. H. Drysdale 200, H. Ford and Co., Ltd. 50, Mr. and Mrs. H. Ford 50, Ashworth and Co. 25, Mr. and Mrs. Benedict 20, J. MacKechnie 5, John Benitz 100, Proctor, Garratt, Marston, Ltd. 100, Krabbé, King and Co. 50, "Just have this peso to spare" 1, "Every little helps" 1, F. de C. M. Heriot 10, Anderson and Kay 25, Gilchrist and Co. 100, Mrs. M. J. Bluet 25, W. C. Dunn 100, E. E. Miles 20, M. C. Mitchell 20, H. Hume 5, "A Few Friends" 40, C. D. M. 25, Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Leslie 20, Management and Staff, Anglo-South American Bank 67, P. A. 20, George E. L. Corbett 100, R. Montgomery 20, "Rosario" 50, F. Maitland Heriot 25, Mrs. Alex. W. Grant 5, "Anonymous" (J. B.) 50, Simons and Co. 50, T. W. Pollard 10, B. W. Gardom 100, Hopkins and Gardom, Ltd. 25, S. G. R. 25, Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Pearson 100, William C. Nicol 50, J. E. Parker 10, Mrs. Carolina Parker 10, M. Elena Parker 5, Albert Parker 5, Robert Parker 5, Emita Parker 5, W. H. Orr 10, Miss Inglis 10, C. Manifold 50, W. T. Greig 10, D. Fraser 25, Sanday y Cia 25, G. Lloyd Davies 50, Diego T. Weston 10, F. M. D. 2, J. W. F. 2, R. G. C. 1, W. H. Leslie 20, E. N. de T. 15, E. M. Simpson 20, W. B. Bassett Smith 20, Thomas Lloyd 100, Duncan M. Munro 200, "W" 50, Miles A. Pasman 50, Archibald Bell 20, Mr. and Mrs. Lodi 20, Mrs. Knight 5, W. E. O. Haxell 25, Vernon Lindop 100, A. G. Pruden and Co. 20, Mrs. E. Shaw (Rosario) 35, Eduardo D. Graham 5, Mrs. Salmon 20, Mrs. James Dow 5, H. and W. Nelson, Ltd. 50, Mrs. James Gibson 50, Robert N. Clark 25, H. J. J. Bury SOCIAL AT ST. SAVIOUR'S AN ENJOYABLE EVENING.

Tuesday, Sept. 28.

The usual fortnightly social was held last night at St. Saviour's Church hall, Belgrano, and was a thoroughly enjoyable function.

In complete opposition to the one held the fortnight previously, which was ruined by the inclemency of the weather, last evening's entertainment was well attended and provided some really lively and wholesome moments at the ping pong tables.

These evenings will be continued during the season and even when successful or not they have done a great service in being the medium for many persons of St. Saviour's parish to become acquainted and from this point of view have assisted greatly in consolidating the membership of the parish. Unfortunately last evening Mrs. Dixon was unable to supply the refreshments, owing to illness, but the Misses Mars came to the rescue, so that every one present had nothing to complain of concerning the evening's hospitality.

The social passed in bridge playing and progressive and individual matches of ping pong, which created much fun and excitement. The 30 or so persons who attended could not fail in voting the social an enjoyable success and an evening which left nothing to be desired in general frolic and fun.

"LEY DE JUBILACION"

REPORTED OBJECTIONS AT ROSARIO.

"La Razon" expresses virtuous indignation at the report from its Rosario correspondent that the employees of the Central Argentine Railway are getting up a petition to the General Manager, desiring that he will approach the Government on their behalf with a view to saving them from the blessings of the Ley de Jubilacion. As it has been freely asserted that the scheme is extremely unjust inasmuch as employees are required to contribute a percentage of their pay under circumstances of uncertainty when and how retiring allowances will be payable — or payable at all, one may assume that this is another case of "La Razon" studying a subject "detenidamente" with its blind eye. None are so blind as those who don't want to see.

5, S. C. H. 5, John E. Wester 20, Percy M. Simpson 5, G. A. Brougham 10, F. H. Chevallier Boutell 100, W. C. Currie 5, Charles W. Palmer 10, George Brougham 10, Thomas MacDougall 15, A. Bridger 10, James Begg 25, Staff of London and Brazilian Bank 21, William Sanders 20, Mrs. W. Pritchard 10, R. J. Runnacles 10, John Wright 25, Harry Ussher 25, F. A. Vyvyan 10, Mrs. J. Fred. Smith 5, Miss V. Dawney 20, The Misses Lawrie 5, A. E. W. Wesley 50, A. S. Hume 10, R. G. A. 5, L. L. L. 10, F. A. D. G. 5, N. L. 30, T. Thomson 10, John B. Thomson 100, Stewart Shipton 50, H. MacLuskie 10, W. H. Logan 50, Watson Family, of Santa Eufemia 100, "Anonymous" (S.) 50, J. O. Hall 40, J. C. Wigg 20, J. S. Mace 10, "J" 50, George Bruce 50, W. D. C. 10, Guillermo Rodger 20, Wm. Lowe Brown 10, Miss Cameron 3, Sale of Work at "Wayside" 1073.20, Hope Gibson 50, Mrs. A. W. Boote, annually 30, Dr. J. J. J. Kyle 40, W. Allinson Bell 100, Charles Knox 10, J. W. Richards 10, Arthur N. Sword 20, "A" 10, A. W. Crundall 5, G. Herten 100, Charles Withington, annually 12, Laurence Christie 10, J. Isabel Whitelegg 10, Mrs. A. Auld 20, F. P. 20, A. Law 20, Mrs. Cunningham 5, total $7,139.12.

Buenos Aires, Sept. 28, 1915.

DISGRACEFUL AFFAIR AT TIGRE THE POLICE IN CONFLICT.

A disgraceful affair in which certain agents of the Tigre police force came into collision with others in the jurisdiction of San Fernando, with the result that a free fight occurred in which some of the police were more or less seriously injured is reported from Tigre.

The canal of San Fernando is one of the divisional lines between Tigre and San Fernando, and it was on the banks of the canal that the conflict took place. Early yesterday morning the two officials, Juan Plas and Francisco Vieyra, belonging to the Tigre police force, were on duty along the canal when they heard cries for help proceeding from the San Fernando side. On arriving on the scene, they saw an officer named Duclos, in a shocking state of drunkenness, surrounded by a number of ordinary agents. These were attempting to disarm their superior and were handling him in a very rough manner, when the agents of the Tigre police arrived and went to his assistance. A free fight occurred and Duclos is alleged to have fired his revolver in a most indiscriminate manner. Plas was wounded in the head, Vieyra seriously injured internally, while some of the San Fernando force were likewise hurt.

Duclos has been arrested and the injured men are in hospital.

The affair has created some excitement, because the relations between the two forces have up to now been most cordial, but seem at the moment to be severely strained, each police body accusing the other of being the cause of the trouble.

"PAY ME THAT THOU OWEST!"

MUNICIPAL HOSPITAL MEAT SUPPLY THREATENED.

After the medicines, meat. Pity the troubles of an Intendente.

It is evident that the contract for supply of meat to the Municipal hospitals is not so good a thing as one might suppose. Anyway, the holder of it has advised the Intendente of his wish to resign his emoluments unless the Municipality cares to pay him the sum of $120,000 for meat supplied which is owing at present and which evidently he considers a serious drawback to the profits.

Severe comments are made in the Press upon this additional instance of municipal incompetence and mismanagement. The Municipality is actually being dunned like a mere debtor of doubtful faith. The unfortunate patients in the hospitals will, of course, be the first to suffer. The shortage of drugs and medicines was temporarily averted by the munificent generosity of a Tobacco Company, but the Intendente can scarcely expect that miracles of this sort are going to be worked daily and habitually in favour of the administration which has such vague ideas regarding its duties and its liabilities.

THE RIVERS PARANÁ AND PARAGUAY

A report received from Posadas states that a slight rise is recorded at this point, and also in Corrientes, of the Rivers Parana and Paraguay. From Misiones a rise of 40 centimetres is recorded, the depth of the river now being 104 centimetres at this point. In Corrientes, a rise of 9 centimetres to 44 in total, in Ita Ibaté 20 and in Ituzaingu 30 centimetres as a rise have been recorded.

The rise, though slight, is of importance as indicating the possibilities of its continuance. Other reports, however, affirm that it is only due to some heavy rainfall and is not likely to continue.

BANDITS IN SALTA

The shocking crime which led to the extermination of a gang of Chilian bandits at Rosario de Lema, in the province of Salta, is still exciting an immense amount of comment. It is pointed out that there has never been a more terrible crime in the annals of the police, and that the affair, which began as one of stealing some fowls, ultimately cost 5 people their lives and two dangerous wounds. Further details from the scene of the crime state that Sr. Valenzuela was stabbed to death with two blows over the heart. Death was instantaneous. His wife, in attempting to flee, was shot down by the Winchesters of the bandits, one bullet shattered her left arm and another struck her in the chest. She lies in a precarious condition at the hospital, under the care of Dr. Tedin.

It now appears that the head of this gang known as "Caja" had given his men instructions to seize the children in the house, which were seven in number, and hold them to ransom.

It was due to the presence of a brother of Sra. Valenzuela that their plans were defeated. Luckily he escaped the fusillade that struck down his sister, and arming himself he opened fire on the gang, who at this surprise attack fled from the house. He pluckily gave chase, firing all the time, and followed them for six squares until joined by the police.

The engagement between police and bandits lasted about half an hour, until one after the other was wounded. Four of them subsequently died, including the chief "Caja." One policeman was wounded in the fight.

The robbers when searched were found to have carried off 4 dollars in money and a few hens from the house they had attacked.

A TAXI OVERTURNS

PASSENGER SERIOUSLY INJURED

On returning from the theatre last evening, a lady, Anna Sariatti, was the victim of a serious accident. The taxi No. 1527 in which she was travelling turned completely over. The accident occurred when the vehicle was travelling up Corrientes at an immense speed and at the corner of Corrientes and Ombú a too violent application of the brakes caused the accident. The police were at once on the scene and aided the passenger to extricate herself. She was carried in an ambulance to the Clinical Hospital, where she is reported to be suffering from serious internal injuries and from fracture of the right foot.

The taxi driver, Arthur Colla, was also injured and is now under arrest.

TAX LAND

A BUDGET SUGGESTION.

(To the Editor)

Sir,—It has been remarked by many, and also by Mr. Lloyd George on Sept. 20, that the situation is very serious and that only by making use of the whole strength of the country could the triumph of the Allies be ensured.

Let us have conscription if necessary; but there are also sources available to raise funds to carry on the war. One is to equalize taxes on the land and, if necessary, to raise money on the lands only kept for hunting purposes.

Are the Allies spilling their blood and sacrificing lives by million to protect these preserves?

They may be required by the Kaiser and his party for division should he succeed in taking possession of the British Isles. Well that is not worth present consideration, so our Minister of Finance, Reginald McKenna, Chancellor of the Exchequer, could raise say another £30,000,000 from this source.

Yours, etc.

"BAHIA BLANCA."

Sept. 27.

ROSS'S

Belfast
Ginger Ale

NO PENSION LAW!

PROTEST MEETING IN B.A.

UNPOPULAR MEASURE TO BE FOUGHT

A meeting of importance and interest was held Sept. 23 on the premises of the Café Paris, San Martín, by employees of many grades of the various Railways in the Republic. The purposes of the meeting were in respect to the Railway Pension Fund, a Government proposal already well known, against which a protest was being made. It is a matter of interest to point out, as was done at the meeting, how the protest has arisen, not against the proposal of the Government to found and legalise a Pension Fund, but against the details, some of which have completely altered the original proposition and have complicated the situation.

Originally, the Railway Pension Law was a proposal to found this Fund by the Government from a 3 per cent. "tax" on tariff returns, and employees were also to pay over, or rather have deducted from their salaries, 3 per cent. of their annual earnings.

Such a scheme was accepted as reasonable and fair, and even welcome at the time of its introduction. Since then, however, changes have taken place, amongst other things, which today make the effects of the proposal an entirely different one from the original scheme. Hence yesterday's meeting.

These above matters were lucidly explained by Mr. E. W. Bach, of the Southern Railway, who occupied the chair, and who clearly demonstrated the need for the meeting and its reasons.

It was the Southern Railway, in conjunction with communications received from the Pacific, that was responsible for the call of protest.

The founding fund, or original fund, for this Railway Pension scheme was, according to the Government, to be found by a 3 per cent. charge on the then existing tariffs and traffic returns. Since the date of the proposal these returns have fallen, thus the foundation fund suffered. Worse, however, was to follow, but this latter, together with another carefully explained consideration, was the reason of the meeting. The original 3 per cent. on tariffs suffered a reduction to one per cent. This reduction completely changes the face value of the Pension Fund as originally proposed. The one other reason for protest, and the most personal of all, is the fact that the men, although they will have by law to suffer a 3 per cent. reduction of salary, do not know what benefits they will be entitled to receive. It is this personal point that is perhaps the most important and the most essential.

From an original scheme matters have therefore progressed thus. Tariff was the foundation of it. Firstly comes poor business, tariffs are smaller. Secondly comes a reduction of the proposed foundation fund of 3 per cent. on tariffs to one per cent; and, thirdly, an absolute ignorance of what benefits have to be received by the men, who are to give up 3 per cent. of their salaries.

All these matters were dealt with at length by Mr. Bach at yesterday's meeting, at which some 210 persons were present and several turned away through lack of room.

The outcome of the meeting was that a sub-committee should be appointed to deal with the matter to the best possible advantage. The select committee was as follows:—

Mr. E. W. Bach—Southern Railway.
Mr. G. F. Southern—Western Rly.
Mr. W. L. Lambert—Central Argentine Railway.

Mr. W. B. Tinder—Pacific Railway.
The meeting was entirely opposed to the measure as it stands at the moment, and chiefly on account of the fact that no benefits were known and yet a reduction of salaries would take place from October next.

The measure only affects railways paying 4 per cent. or more.

RAILWAY PENSIONS LAW

A SURVEY AND A CRITICISM.

(To the Editor).

Sir.—Notwithstanding all that has been written lately, much confusion of ideas still exists in the minds of many who, one expects would be better informed on the subject. The cause of this is not far to seek. When this scheme was first mentioned, it was put forward in such glowing colours that none of those who were at all interested could fail to be attracted. After 25 years' service, 95 per cent of your salary!! These were the promises held out as baits by the politicians who were seeking adherents to their Party. The Carles Bill actually contained these terms.

These promises were talked about and discussed as possible probabilities, for six months—from July, 1912, when Dr. Zeballos and his friends first published the scheme, until January 1913, when the Deputies' Committee produced their own Bill, the Bill that has, after a series of transformations, been reduced to the present Law No. 9653. This course, the Committee was compelled to adopt because they found, on examining the Carles project, that it was an utterly impracticable, perfectly impossible scheme. However, the atmosphere of expectation and high hopes created by this long defunct project, is what we have to contend with now. It is indeed an asphyxiating gas. The Carles Bill was a "Will-o'-the-Wisp," which lured Congress on to "doing something," in response to public feeling: something that the wisest and best of the Deputies had to declare was beyond their mental grasp. They therefore passed forward the present tentative measure, and this is now so mixed up with ancient notions which never should have existed, that the great majority of the railway employees are in a delightfully hazy state of mind on the subject. This is not to be wondered at, as it really requires exceptionally clever persons with expert training, to solve or even understand properly social financial problems of this description. At present, many employees suppose that after so many years, it is not quite certain how many, at the age of about 55, more or less, they will get a good pension, they don't know how much, exactly, but it will be something like two-thirds of what they are getting now, perhaps more if their salaries are raised. Comforted by such expectations, which they confidently believe will be duly corrected and arranged in their interest by a benevolent Government and fortified by funds supplied from the National revenue, they hope that nobody will be so ill-natured as to put difficulties in the way of a scheme that is intended by legislators to promote the welfare of a very useful, but decidedly underpaid section of the community, such as they regard themselves to be.

Now, it is one thing to hold such views and conduct a campaign of support in favour of the Law on the strength of the grateful feelings they excite, but it is quite another thing to search out the true facts and face the situation as it really is.

The Law promises nothing. That is to say, it promotes no pensions. The name "Railway Pension Bill," is therefore misleading. When I say that it promises nothing, it may be answered that Art. 1 of Law No. 9653 states that "A Pension Fund is hereby established, subject to dispositions of an Organic Bill which Congress will pass in due course." I think that this fairly represents the Spanish text. Therefore, one Congress calls upon another Congress to pass a certain Law, in order to fulfil the present Law. But the Argentine Congress receives its mandates from the electors. Therefore, one Congress cannot bind its successor to legislate. Therefore, the promise contained in Art. 1 is not binding, which, as Euclid puts it, "is absurd."

It is well that it be clearly understood that there is nothing known, fixed, or settled, or even promised, yet, regarding either length of service, pensioning age, or amount of the pension to be awarded. The Law says nothing on any of these points. But what is fixed and settled is, that the employees are to have three per cent deducted from their pay. That, Sir, is the only financial point that is absolutely and definitely settled. We must pay. Now, as regards the Railway Companies, they will pay if they can afford it. It seems an anomaly to us clerks, that we should be mulcted "nolens volens," whereas our employers, whose contribution should be an equal one, are to be allowed to consult the Government as to the convenience of the charge in their case. But so it is. However, that is relatively but a small matter. There is something that is of much more importance than that. The key of the position is to be sought elsewhere. The success of the Fund really depends upon the contribution from the public, viz.: the additional tariff-charge, limited to three per cent. on goods and parcels traffic. Very few persons are aware of the grave importance of this feature of the scheme. Calculations have been made, independently, by various employees, and the results obtained being similar, are worth noting. From these it is certain that the contributions of the employees and the Companies, alone, could not possibly provide any satisfactory pensions. It is clear from the figures that it is the contribution from the public that we must look to for the bulk of the revenue to the Fund, if we are to have a workable scheme. Now, the Law says that the public contribution is to be raised by an addition to the goods and parcels tariffs, which addition will be left to the Executive to fix exactly, but is never to exceed three per cent. on current rates. So, it appears that the Bill provides for a consideration of the convenience of the public, as well as of the railways' convenience. It would take up too much space to go into these calculations here, but we find that even under the most favourable conditions, that is to say, supposing that the Government authorises the Railways to collect the full three per cent. on these traffics, perpetually, the utmost that we could expect in the way of an annuity or pension would be one quarter of the average salary each man would earn during the whole of his career, and the age at which he would be entitled to this would be, after 25 years' service, not less than 60. The regulating decree, lately issued, has fixed the tariff charge, the most important item in the formation of the Fund, at one-third of the amount necessary to provide even the above modest result. Now, when we take into account the facts that the public contribution is, at the outset, to be cut down to one-third, and that some of the Companies will certainly claim and receive exemption, partial or total, as the case may be, it must be plainly evident to the most enthusiastic supporter of this scheme that unless this Fund is to be guaranteed in some way, it must fail. Yet, we have it from the mouth of the Minister of Public Works, Dr. Meyer Pellegrini, in a speech he delivered in the Senate during a Session at which Dr. Victorino de la Plaza presided, that the Government does not intend to

PRO-ALLY PROPAGANDA

URUGUAY COMMITTEE'S ACTIVITY

The Hon. Secretary of the British Patriotic Fund at Montevideo has sent to THE HERALD another batch of circulars, documents and publications issued in connection with the propaganda in South America in favour of the Allies.

It is pleasant to notice that the self-sacrificing labours of the energetic Committee in Uruguay are being vigorously supported by the British Government and by similar Committees in London and France. Among the pamphlets received by the Committee from England is "O Espelho," an illustrated paper published in Portuguese. "O Espelho" is issued from London specially for circulation in Brazil, where pro-Ally literature is needed to counteract the strong campaign which the Germans have been carrying on there ever since the war began. During the last three weeks the Committee in Montevideo has received twenty cases of literature from England and the contents have been distributed.

The Committee does not confine its activities to Uruguay, but is also conducting a vigorous propaganda throughout Brazil, where a number of influential local committees have been recently established, and throughout Argentina. The work of the Committee has attracted a great deal of attention in Argentina and in a recent letter to the Editor of THE HERALD, the Hon. Secretary says: "Considerable interest seems to be taken in pro-Ally propaganda in Corrientes, Entre Rios, Concordia, Mercedes (Prov. Buenos Aires) where a committee is already working, Catamarca etc., etc. An enthusiast in one of the British Railways in the Argentine is enquiring for ten or twenty thousand copies of each issue of "Por la Civilización."

DESTITUTE SPANIARDS

ARRIVE AT CADIZ FROM SOUTH AMERICA.

Madrid, Sept. 23.

It is reported from Cadiz that four hundred Spaniards have arrived at that port by the steamer Calvo from South America in a state of destitution.

The Spanish Government has provided for their being landed, and will endeavour to furnish them with the means of subsistence and assist them in obtaining employment.

care for the future of the Fund, and will not guarantee its fate.

I advise those of your readers who are interested in this scheme, to take these facts into consideration, and place them before their Argentine friends, so that we may obtain their support to the special Committee in its efforts to induce the President to have the matter delayed until it has been further developed after proper study, which so far it has not received. When the Organic Bill shall have been drafted, we will know what prospects it holds for us, and Congress, when it discusses the coming project, will then be in a position to decide whether the provision for the Fund is sufficient to provide proper annuities at a satisfactory retiring age.

Until these points have been investigated, it is not fair to the Railways, to the Public, and certainly to ourselves, to take our money from us.

Finally, is it not a fact that the Law is retroactive? Do not all those employees who have been dismissed since 17th January, 1913, expect to obtain the first-fruits of the new Fund? What can the men who will have to wait five or ten years hope to obtain when their turn comes?

Yours, etc.,
F. C. S.

TE AGUILA ES EL MEJOR

Mainly for Women

Conducted by "Egeria"

Some interesting "pars" from the letter of an Australian writer are:—

Splendid are the accounts given of our men in all the articles written by special correspondents to English papers. In my last budget I came across a little story which, if you have not already heard it, will amuse you. Sir Ian Hamilton is in command of our men, and one day, just prior to that never-to-be-forgotten day of landing, the censor found the following reference to him in one of the soldiers' letters:—"We are having an iron time," said the writer. "We live in an iron ship, sleep on an iron floor, have nothing to eat but our iron rations, and now, to crown all, I hear we are commanded by a fellow called 'Iron Hamilton.'" The said "Iron Hamilton," by the way, told the newspaper correspondent that he was "full of admiration for the Australians, whom he considered a magnificent lot of men, and keen as mustard for the job." Fine, that! The Australians, it seems, only had one grumble. A unanimous one. And what do you think it was? They had been on board the transports too long. They had no time for camp, no time for transports, the battlefield for them, please—the trenches and the stern work to be done. Magnificent morale!

Whatever is the matter? Are we threatened with a shortage of batiste, nainsook, longcloth, and calico? Strange and mysterious lately have been some of the fashion edicts on the subject of feminine underwear. And the most impressive point is that none of the above fabrics are ever mentioned nowadays as being used in the manufacture of these garments. Slowly, but surely, the change has been noticed. It began about eight months ago when crepe de chine was the only material that fashion writers vigorously recommended should be used for underwear on account of its splendid laundrying and good wearing qualities. Then the question of lingerie dropped for a while. About two months ago it cropped up again in the pages of an American fashion journal, and columns were devoted to the making of chemises and combinations from—what, of all things in the world, do you think? Black tulle! Yes, really. I know it is hard to believe so ridiculous an assertion, but I can assure you that with eyes that scarcely believed the evidence of their own sight I read of "the new black tulle chemises with bands of tiny horizontal tucks put together with strips of Chantilly insertion. A row of large eyelets just above the knees, permit wide white satin ribbons to be drawn through and tied in effective bow knots. The deep pointed scallops at the hem allow the underslip of white chiffon to be seen." (Infinitely condescending of them, is it not? My brain had scarcely recovered from the positive list it took on as it reeled under the blow of having to consider the use of tulle for undergarments, when fresh news on the subject came to hand. As a matter of fact, it arrived from London in my latest mail. And what do you think is now the latest material for underclothing? Paper, London fashionable writers predict a vogue for paper underclothing. Our Japanese ally has settled the question, and, unless we have enough batiste or nainsook underwear to do until the war is over, we will, no doubt, all be wearing paper underclothes. Sounds distinctly fascinating! A day's wear, and then, away with it—to the kitchen fire. Next day something quite new, different style, different colour, perhaps. Monotony entirely disappears from the daily toilette.

Mrs. Mortimer Singer, of London, recently made a balloon flight of 260 miles.

An extract from the letter of a woman-writer is interesting, because of its possibilities. It is:—

One of the most-sought-after personalities in France at the present time is a clairvoyante, known as Mme. de Thebes. Her reputation as a seer is high on account of predicting the assassination of the Archduke Franz Ferdinand and his wife three months before it occurred. On the outbreak of war everybody wanted to know the fate of the Kaiser, so a reputable Paris newspaper sent an interviewer to Madame, to whom she made the vague assertion that "the Kaiser will mysteriously disappear." Just that, leaving it to the vivid imagination of all and sundry to make what they like of it. She predicts that "France will renew the glory of the past, but in a way that will be a surprise to many." This has been interpreted by one writer to mean that "there will be a change of Government in France. France adores a hero (gay and gallant France is not alone in that), and she has one—Albert of Belgium. A free monarchy that would unite Belgium and France with Alsace and Lorraine as one great country is not a wild dream. A court would restore to Paris the prestige of the world. Monarchy means so little, and it adds so much." To this formation of a new great Empire I venture to add another piece of country in the Grand Duchy of Luxemburg. When the Allies issue victorious from this colossal struggle there is not the slightest doubt that the brave-hearted Duchess Marie and her people will be unanimous in detaching themselves from the German Empire, for the rulers of which they have shown so great a contempt and abhorrence. All frightfully interesting, isn't it? But to return to Mme. de Thebes. She does not predict when the war will end. Hilaire Belloc tells us that it is mere foolishness for any one to try and predict that. But it is very human to be foolish, isn't it? At a sewing meeting on a recent afternoon we took a vote, just for a little diversion, as to what date the war will end. Going on purely astrological lines, which are as good as any other on this question, I ventured to predict that peace will not be in sight until November, 1916. Now, do laugh at my prediction. I will not mind in the least. To have raised even the faintest ripple of amusement in these sad days is as good as doing Red Cross work. So please gurggle at me, but—mark my words!

An Australian lady received by a recent English mail a letter, from her cousin, Mrs. Charles Booth, in which the following passage occurs:—"The fact is, until quite lately no one believed that the war was going to last as it is doing. Lord Kitchener told us plainly as long ago as last autumn, but he was not believed, and the Government was in deadly terror of facing the House of Commons with a long bill and of ordering more munitions than they thought they would need." The writer is the wife of the Right Hon. Charles Booth, P.C., and her sons are all working for the Empire. One is Chairman of a Munitions Board, and two are at the front.

From among the verses composed by Haruko, widow of the late Emperor of Japan, the following have been selected to be engraved on the portals of the Girls' High Schools throughout the Japanese Empire:—

The diamond's best rays
Flash from the carved stone;
So genius wins praise
By labour alone.
The hand on the dial
Goes ceaselessly round,
And the ultimate goal
By the worker is found.

A fluid takes shape
Of the vessel that holds it;
A soul, too, is formed
Of all that enfolds it,
Choose, therefore, thy friends,
Mid more learned and wise,
That straining to them,
Thyself thou mayst rise.

St. Michael's Mount, the residence of the St. Aubyns for generations, owns the unique distinction of being, by legendary lore, the mortal scene of fairy tale, for according to the tale the giant Cornorden made it his headquarters and reigned in terrifying solitude till overcome by Jack the Giantkiller! The tradition which associates the strangely beautiful home of the St. Aubyns with St. Michael, however, stands on the firm foundations of mystic faith, and there are still—or were until recently—many of the Cornish fisherfolk who, Calvinistic in religion often enough, still held faithfully and firmly to the belief that the Archangel had rested upon the mount, giving his superhuman council to the hermits who sought its rocky fastnesses in the earliest days of Christianity, for it is known that St. Keyne lived there in A.D. 490, and was the first of a long series of saints and recluses. Legends, indeed, strangely mixed with acknowledged fact, and acknowledged fiction, too, for that matter, in Cornwall, have almost their centre in the lovely home of the St. Aubyns, unapproachable save at low tide ever on foot—and distinctly wet feet often enough at that—and for weeks together isolated amidst a waste of green, foam-crested sea, with only the swirling wings of the sea birds to be heard above the dull roar of the waters.

In Serbia the dislike entertained to fair hair is so acute that it extends even to the white hair of old age. No Serbian woman who respects herself would appear in public with white hair. Nor does she attempt to conceal the fact that she dyes it periodically. The custom has come down to her from time immemorial.

Lady "Betty" Keppel, Lord and Lady Albermarle's only daughter, is nursing the wounded in France. She is a very attractive young lady, with varied interests one of which has been the command of a company of Boy Scouts at Quidenham. Lady Elizabeth Keppel, as her name properly is, recalls another Lady Elizabeth Keppel, the second Lord Albermarle's youngest daughter, whom Reynolds painted so charmingly.

When the war broke out with Turkey in 1876, "Carmen Sylva," the Queen Mother of Rumania, was the first to volunteer as a nurse. She worked night and day in the hospitals, and after the war was ended the soldiers among themselves collected enough of the small coinage of the country to raise a national monument to "Muma Ranitola"—"the mother of the wounded"—of which the Queen was extremely proud.

The Marchioness of Londonderry, who has been taking an interest in the questions of women acting as farm labourers, and has written several letters to the Press on the subject, is well fitted to be an authority on agricultural matters, since she is a daughter of the Right Hon. Henry Chaplin. Her point is that while the war is on, and the male population is fighting, it would be quite simple for women to take their place, and work on the farms. She quotes instances in parts of Scotland and Northumberland, and, at the present moment, in France. Lady Londonderry has a son and three daughters.

Mrs. R. L. Stevenson's quaintly-built Californian house of widowhood has just been sold to a certain Mme. Grandi.

At least one firm in England which has taken contracts for the manufacturing of war munitions for the Government is employing women as chemists.

A wealthy American, a Mr. Leslie, has left a bequest of no less than a million and a half dollars for the carrying on of suffrage propaganda.

Children are encouraged by the Russian educational authorities to take an intimate practical interest in the domestic necessities in war, and at Moscow especially an interesting system obtains. There each school has its own special hospital which the children support and visit daily. Each child is responsible for the linen underclothing of a man.

It is suggested that in the work of old age pension officers the services of women would be peculiarly useful, seeing that inquiries have often to be made into domestic and family circumstances which require delicate handling; that the cost of food and lodging has to be estimated; and that in some cases infirm and bed-ridden women have to be visited.

Women officers might also suitably be employed, it is suggested, in investigating claims for separation allowances to the dependents of men serving with his Majesty's forces; while the pressure of work on the existing staff of men officers might thus be appreciably relieved.

Among the Maori warriors who volunteered, far in excess of the number accepted, for the New Zealand Expeditionary Force were a number of stalwart "wahines" (native women). To their disgust and indignation they were informed that their sex debarred them from service. "I can shoot as well as any man who ever stepped," declared one Maori maiden who expressed utter scorn for the incomprehensible ways of the pakeha (white man) in despatching an army of men to fight without their womenfolk being there to take care of them.

Psychology and its practical application in the teaching profession were discussed at the "Next Steps in Educational Progress" Conference in the London University. Mr. Cyril Burt, London County Council Psychologist, said that they had found out that there were no such things as clear-cut types. There were no clear-cut criminal type and no clear-cut detective type. Consequently they could not draw a line in class teaching and split the children up into bright and dull sections. They must think not of types, but of variations. They knew that fair people were generally tall and practical, while dark people were generally shorter and imaginative. But there were many variations, and they must build up a new service of psychology by research in the school-room itself.

The first South African women to be mentioned in despatches during the campaign in German South-west Africa are two nurses, Miss Van der Merwe and Miss Nel, of Calvinia district. In his account of operations on the southern border of German South-west Africa, Colonel van Deventer states that they were "among the first to cross the river after the skirmish and to attend the wounded."

Miss May Sinclair, the well-known novelist, has been hard at work in Belgium as a member of the Munro Ambulance Corps, which has co-operated with the Belgian Red Cross practically since the war. After the fall of Ghent she returned to England to finish literary engagements. She is bringing out a Belgian "Journal of Impressions."

Miss Muriel Matters, the Australian suffragist, whose adventures loomed so large in the milder early days of militancy, was married seven months ago and is now Mrs. Porter. Recently she organised a national conference of women in England to discuss peace terms. The resolutions carried went on the lines of increased democratic control, reduction and nationalisation of armaments, territorial adjustments by will of the inhabitants only, and reform of the Foreign Office and Diplomatic Service.

Land of Lilliput.

Conducted by Egeria

My dear Lilliputians,

This week I want to tell you about the end of my visit to Martin Chico, the paradise of Lilliputians surely.

Such pretty little conceits are born amid the trees which abound everywhere at Martin Chico estancia. Two wee boys, who were born in the midst of heavenly fragrances, brought fresh bouquets to me constantly, knowing my love for growing things I suppose. Sometimes it would be a bunch of dandelions, another time a capful of those aromatic "fruits" from the eucalyptus trees, which they would gravely tell me were the fairies' hats, which had been left behind when the fairies danced too long in the moonlight under the eucalyptus trees. A pretty fancy and much more romantic than the name of "Chinamen's hats" that the Lilliputians in Australia give to these queerly shaped "seeds"; although they are just a miniature of the "Sombbrero" affected by the inhabitants of the flowery land, hence the name.

Sweeter by far is the bouquet when it is composed of a sprig of lemon or orange blossom intermingled with a spray or two of the "Corona de No. via"; the hedges at "Martin Chico" being white with this snowy blossom just now. These two Lilliputians are the dearest ever; they are full of surprises for those who love children; and even their little tempers are more amusing than annoying; for it is a wise parent who prefers a little naughtiness to leaven the character of the child, to the wax doll variety which just says "mama" and "papa," when one pulls a string. Now my dear Lilliputians, don't you think, for a moment that I want you to be naughty. I mean only that every one of you likes, perhaps, to have your own way, or wishes to do something not in accordance with the parental desires; and although you must obey, it is better for you to have these selfish wishes, to show that later on you will have personality, than to be merely a bit of wax, to receive only the impressions of others.

One day we revelled in the immense garden around Martin Chico Estancia. Avenues of mimosa and eucalyptus trees led to garden beds bright with pansies, forgetmenots, frencias, ixias, violets, phlox, carnations, little plots everywhere, encircled by the evergreen "box" hedge, simply a riot of colour and perfume. The roses were coming out one by one while the bushes of pink roses scented the air, not only with sweet odours, but with memories—memories of youthful days in other countries, when little hot hands carried bouquets to "teacher" bouquets of early lilac, or pink roses; and even of the yellow and white laburnum; offerings which made the heart glad, and the work to be done light. Who does not love a garden? The smallest home embowered in flowers is a little bit of natural poetry. And the Lilliputians of Martin Chico will have happy memories by and bye, memories which are forbidden to the city Lilliputians whose only garden is a flowerpot, with a stunted fern therein, or at the most a patio, where green things grow, but where there is not the crowning glory of flowers. To me the leafy walks and the stately aisles in that garden meant a loosening of a store of impressions, accumulated through the years since leaving the Land of Lilliput. The wise man tells us to "live to-day as if you were to die to-morrow," but a garden bids you live as if you were never to die at all. There is no death in the garden, there is the glory of the present, and the hope and promise for the future, for the seed of to-day is the flower of to-morrow, and the flower of to-day is the fruit of to-morrow; and the fruit contains the seed for the continuance of your garden next year, which is the inheritance of the past and of the future. A garden is not only the present, it is the past and it holds the future. And every garden is the property of the person who goes through its paths, for that person breathes the perfumes, fills his or her senses with, not only all the beauties, but with all the souvenirs it brings. See the purple pansy, its face is the magical mirror in which you can look through a long vista of years to another garden bed, where the same pansy grew for you—the same pansy? Well perhaps not the exact pansy which is performing the wonder before you; but may be its great, great—a great many greats—grandmother! A similar pansy, on a similar plant, in a similar garden on the same earth! But this is not telling you much about the garden I began about is it, it is taking you to a garden of souvenirs? And that is just what every garden will be to you when you leave the garden at Lilliput. And from the garden to the "Monte" is another souvenir. The wild holly bushes, the cactus-plants, and all the other wild trees and bushes shading the green carpet, patterned in many colours by creeping flowers, and which at the water-side shelter so jealously banks of maiden-hair and other ferns, all resolve themselves into the crystal, which gazing upon, carries one down the aisles of time, backward—and one is picnicking at Fern-tree gully, or at Lal-lal waterfalls or at Gong-gong creek; where Nature luxuriates in her own gardens; and the hare, and the fox bury themselves in Nature's bosom, safe in the warm retreat from the interfering human, who would possess everything. And another day on the sands is but the continuation of other days on other sands, in other company. Instead of being Lilliputians, we protect other Lilliputians and take them along the same old tracks or similar tracks, made for us by other Lilliputians in their turn. And in the garden of humanity it is the same as in that other garden; the mystery of the seed-time and the harvest-time, and the full plenitude of life, with the years and the years of undefined eternity. For the present garden of humanity is the inheritance of the past, and is the inheritance of the future. Martin Chico is indeed a huge garden. The drive through the fields impressed it on me so that I had to tell you something about it. There were young trees, young plants as well as the older trees there were the cows with their calves, the sheep with their lambs; the mares with their foals, and always with us, the Lilliputians; all the promise of the future garden; and the symbol of the eternal circle of life and death of the infinite.

Now "Martin Chico" and "Recreo" are but memories—memories of everything beautiful and pleasant; and we must just content ourselves with an hour at Palermo, and an afternoon at Parque Lezama; instead of feasting from the jars of golden happiness, we must take our doses by the spoonful. But we still have the souvenirs; something peculiarly our own, and which cannot be taken from us while memory lasts.

This week your story is called:—

"ON ACTIVE SERVICE."

PAT AND PRIMROSE FIND THEIR COUNTRY NEEDS THEM.

(By Dorita F. Bruce.)

"It isn't as though we were kids," said Pat gloomily. "You're eleven, and I'm thirteen, and we've played at soldiers and drill ever since we were born. Surely there must be something we can do for our country—something besides knitting."

He leaned against the big iron gates at the end of the drive, his hands thrust deep in his pockets and his brows grievously puckered. His sister, Primrose, equally dejected, jabbed her knitting needles into the ball of khaki wool which lay in a small bag suspended from her waist.

"Come along," she said determinedly. "It's time we did something. The posters tell you to go to the nearest recruiting office, so we'll go. Get the bikes, Pat—it's at Milton."

"Then we'll be gone all the morning. I say, Primrose, have you got any tin?"

"Half-a-crown, but I'm keeping it for wool."

"I thought we'd get lunch at the baker's in Milton, but we'll just have to take it with us. See what you can squeeze out of Sarah—there's a good kid!—while I pump up the tyres. We may as well make a day of it, Primrose, since grannie won't be back from town till late. I'm not coming home till I've got a job."

"Nor I!" cried Primrose, as she dashed up the drive and turned off to the kitchen.

Twenty minutes later saw them speeding along the Glasgow-road, bent on asserting the right of every British subject to serve his or her country during wartime.

"It's all rot about being too young," declared Pat, decidedly. "What they want is ehaps who have been trained as I have. But I don't quite know if the recruiting office is the place for you, Primrose. They can't take girls, you know."

"They can tell me where I ought to apply," returned Primrose with dignity.

Recruiting appeared to be slack that day, for there was no one but the sergeant in the office when the children entered, having propped up their bicycles outside. He eyed them suspiciously at first, and growled.

"This is neither the time nor place for weans."

"I quite agree with you," replied Pat, with all the hauteur he could summon up; "and as I don't see any—er—weans here, perhaps you'll kindly attend to us, for we've come on business. Primrose, you begin—ladies first, and anyhow you oughtn't to be hanging about here."

Primrose went up to the table behind which the stalwart Cameronian sat.

"I want a job, please," she said briskly. "and I thought perhaps you'd advise me what to do about it. Grannie says there's nothing for girls to do in the war except knit, but I'm sure there must be lots of other things besides. As you're a recruiting man you must know all about it, so I've come to ask you."

Sergeant Dobbie tilted back his chair and scratched the top of his head in perplexity.

"Well, I'm dashed!" he confided to the inkpot. "I didna undertake tae recruit feemales—least of a' feemale bairns. What us ye thinkin' ye'd like tae dae, missie? Wud ye carry a bit board roon' the village wi' yin of thae posters on it—juist a wee licht bit board, ye ken?"

"Like a sandwich-man?" asked Primrose, faintly.

"Ay, but I wudna giv ye mair than the yin in front. I had a sandwich mon, but he's that drunk the day, he canna stan' much less walk."

"Come on Primrose—it's just a light thin piece of board," whispered Pat encouragingly.

"It's not the weight, but—but—"

"Surely you don't mind doing anything for the Empire, even if it is disagreeable!"

That settled the matter. Primrose allowed the poster to be fastened round her neck by a bit of string, and walked bravely out into the August sunshine which blazed on the village street, leaving Pat behind to state his case. She tried to step jauntily, and not to appear conscious of the curious glances cast at her on all sides, but it was a very trying position, and her face began to burn painfully.

"Losh, preserve us!" exclaimed one good woman, pausing to stare at her in astonishment. "Yon's a led-dy's bairn. Whaur, did she get the

SOME WOMEN AND MANY THINGS

Mrs. J. H. Reid, of Pottsville, Pennsylvania, was the first woman notary public in the United States.

In Japan the little brown women are found in all manner of occupations that are usually thought too severe for their sex. They are both stevedores and pearl fishers.

Miss Cecilia St. John, of the Women's Political Association, Melbourne, recently carried a motion in the council of the Australian Peace Alliance, that as the peace of the world can only be assured when women are political units, the association includes the general enfranchisement of women in its platform.

The Page Girl is another addition to London life. Not a girl in buttons at a hotel, who works the lift and brings the boots, but an altogether superior young person, who, dressed in top boots, and a long redingote, with a little hard riding hat and the jauntiest of canes in her hand, steps forward briskly every time a taxi or a carriage pulls up at a certain well-known London store.

Late last year Miss Maud Haviland brought out a book, "A Summer on the Yenisei," which was a tribute to the daring and patience of the modern scientific woman. Miss Haviland spent this adventurous season in the dreary Tundra region of Northern Siberia in order to study the rare migratory birds which find their summer home in these remote latitudes.

Perhaps the shortest speech on record was that made by Olive Schreiner at a Lyceum Club dinner twenty months ago. Pressed to break her rule about public speaking, she rose and said:—"I have only to say that I have no doubt about what the twentieth century will bring, because of the beautiful young women that are growing up and the beautiful young men."

poster? Does yur mither ken what ye're after, dearie?"

"My mother's dead," said Primrose; "but anyhow she'd want me to serve my country, even though it is rather unpleasant to walk with a poster."

She marched on and turned down a side street, followed by a little crowd of interested children, who, for the most part, refrained from making any comments. At the end of the street, however, she met a crowd of rough boys, who joined her following with shouts and jibes.

Tears were very near the surface, and she longed for Pat to appear and protect her, only the thought of the soldiers in the trenches in France enabled her to stumble bravely on.

"It isn't as bad as being shelled," she told herself sternly; "but I wish those boys would go away."

Suddenly a motor shot round the corner with a screeching hoot, and pulled up opposite Primrose and her jeering procession.

"What's the meaning of this?" demanded a young officer wearing a Cameronian kilt who was driving the car. "What are you boys making all that row about? And why are you wearing that recruiting poster little lady?"

"The sergeant gave it to me," explained Primrose shakily "because the sandwich man is drunk, and I wanted to do something. But if I could, please, I'd rather do something where—where people wouldn't stare and run after me."

"Jump in here!" directed the officer, "and we'll see what we can do. I don't think it's necessary for you to tramp around with that board. Here, hoys, which of you will volunteer to carry the poster round instead of this young lady? Of course, you're all as keen as she is to serve your country, and twice as able."

TO BE CONCLUDED NEXT WEEK.

DEPARTING U.S. VICE-CONSUL ENTERTAINED

COMMERCIAL CLUB LUNCHEON AND PRESENTATION

AT THE PLAZA HOTEL

Mr. Eli Taylor, who has been for five years American Vice-Consul in Buenos Aires, is departing for Sydney (N.S.W.) on Monday evening. He was on Sept. 24 the principal guest at a special luncheon of the American Club held at the Plaza Hotel.

The gathering was fully representative of American business men in the Capital and was a splendid tribute to the esteem in which Mr. Taylor had been held during his service in the Argentine.

At the conclusion of the luncheon, Mr. W. C. Howe, Vice-President of the Club, called upon Mr. W. H. Robertson, the United States Consul General, to make an announcement.

Mr. Robertson stated that he had a friend in the States who had on one occasion fallen overboard. When the man was rescued he was asked how he came to fall overboard. His reply was "I did not come to fall overboard; I came to fish." This, added Mr. Robertson, was his own position. He had come to enjoy the luncheon, but found that, owing to the illness of the Ambassador, he was compelled to make a speech. Mr. Robertson then stated that it was the desire of everyone in the American community to pay a mark of respect to Mr. Taylor. Most of them had known Mr. Taylor longer than he had; in fact he had only known him for a few months. Continuing, he said that while on his way from Manchester to Buenos Aires, he had passed an island penal settlement off the Brazilian coast, where he saw a man frantically waving a white flag and shouting at the top of his voice to the passing steamer. When he reached Pernambuco someone asked him to take his kind regards to Taylor. When he reached Bahia someone said "Please ask Taylor to pay that account which I left behind me when I left Buenos Aires I will send the money later." When he reached Rio, he met a man who said that Taylor was "a good fellow." When he arrived at Santos another person said he would "certainly enjoy Taylor," and when he reached Montevideo he was congratulated on the prospect of knowing Taylor. It was then that he decided that the convict waving the white flag on the island penal settlement off the Brazilian coast also had some message for Taylor. (Laughter and applause).

Taylor, of course, had completely disorganised the Consulate. He himself was able to give people a stony stare when people came in with "hard luck" stories, but Taylor was more tender hearted and, continued Mr. Robertson, he had frequently seen men, women and babies waiting around the door when he was departing for lunch. They were awaiting his departure in order that they might go and see Taylor.

In conclusion, Mr. Robertson placed in Mr. Taylor's hands a gold watch and chain bearing his initials and the following inscription:—

To Eli Taylor, American Vice-Consul, Buenos Aires, 1910-1915, from his friends.

and at the same time handed him a scroll which was signed by the members of the Club then present.

Mr. Taylor, in thanking his friends for the presentation, said that he had been so much taken by surprise that he was quite unable to respond suitably. He was deeply touched by the beautiful gift which would certainly keep warm in future years his memories of Buenos Aires.

The assembly afterwards broke-up with the singing of "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow" and amidst repeated assurances that "Taylor is all right."

Those who contributed towards the purchase of the gift to Mr. Taylor were the American Ambassador (the

THE BRITISH SOCIETY

FAREWELL TO ASSISTANT SECRETARY.

A hurriedly convened meeting of the British Society was held at the Secretary's office on Sept. 23 to bid farewell to Mr. O. T. Breakspear, the Assistant Secretary, who leaves this morning for China.

Mr. Breakspear has been a member of the Society for some time, and this year he was appointed Assistant Secretary. In that capacity he has rendered the Society valuable service, and at yesterday's meeting the President (Mr. Arthur G. Pruden) and members of the Executive Committee unstintingly praised his work.

In presenting Mr. Breakspear with a silver cigarette box, subscribed for by the Committee and members, Mr. Pruden said they deeply regretted the loss the Society was sustaining by Mr. Breakspear's departure. He had been a most valued officer, and the committee appreciated very highly the splendid work he had done during the period when the Society had developed so rapidly and the secretarial work had grown so enormously. It had come as an unpleasant surprise to them all to learn so suddenly that Mr. Breakspear was leaving them, but they wished him and Mrs. Breakspear every success and happiness, and as a token of their regard they asked their late Assistant Secretary to accept the gift proffered him.

Other members of the Committee supported Mr. Pruden's sentiments and expressed their appreciation of Mr. Breakspear, and good wishes for his success. In reply Mr. Breakspear thanked the Society for the present. He regretted that he had given them such short notice of his departure, but that was unavoidable, as he did not know till a day or two before that he would be leaving. When he realised that he had undoubtedly inconvenienced them by leaving at such short notice he appreciated all the more the kind sentiments they had expressed. It had been a pleasure to him to be associated with the executive, and from the President and Committee he had always received the most courteous and sympathetic treatment.

Mr. Breakspear left on Sept. 26 with Mrs. Breakspear for Valparaiso, en route for Hong Kong, where he will take up the duties of Business Manager of the Hong Kong "Daily Press."

IRISH SOCIETY'S DANCE

AT PLAZA HOTEL.

The last dance of the season given by the Irish Society was held on Sept. 25 at the Plaza Hotel. Some twenty couples were present, amongst whom were a number of the staff of the British Hospital, Mrs. Hurley, Messrs. McClellan, Alex. G. Carrol, W. Hansard, Davidson, J. P. Hart, Alfred Vigouroux, Mahon, Hurley, E. McCarthy, W. S. Scallon.

Hon. F. H. Stimson), Mr. Hugh R. Wilson (Secretary to the American Embassy), Mr. William H. Robertson (American Consul General); Messrs. John R. Stanford, Sutherland R. Haxton, E. J. Sullivan, R. T. Brooks, C. D. Middlebrook, T. J. Williams, W. C. Howe, W. A. Wills, C. W. Sullivan, John Backer, John Milne, H. Hussey, Mark Rowe, S. T. Alchin, L. van Bokkelen, Charles T. Aldrich, H. W. Rinearson, Vivian Venn, H. R. Storer, Enrique Wulff, C. P. Dickerman, E. C. Brown, H. E. Finney, Ralph W. Huntington, Lee Prettyman, A. E. Petersen, J. J. Pratt, E. W. White, J. H. Williams, O. L. Thomas, C. T. Pryer, George A. Kuhirt, W. J. Pilant, C. S. Harper, A. S. Loheed, E. H. Hampton, J. B. Sullivan, T. J. McKittrick, Frederick Heath, and the National City Bank,

VICTORIA SAILORS' HOME

SATURDAY NIGHT'S CONCERT.

One of the best concerts of the season was held last night at the Victoria Sailor's Home, and was due to the energetic arrangements of Miss Maggie Millar, who amongst other artists had secured the help of Miss Muriel Marr and Mr. D. T. Neill.

Owing to illness, Miss E. Woodwell was unable to be present, but her place was generously taken, at the last moment, by Miss Vera Shaw, who received the fullest recognition for violin playing.

Miss Mari with her singing brought down the house. She, certainly is an artist all too seldom heard, and she was in excellent voice last night. Her choice of songs was most suitable, and every bit of the enthusiastic, if not stormy, applause she received, was her due. Mr. Neill too could not have been better. His song from the "Gondoliers" was very well rendered.

A most pleasing singer is Miss Briggs, whose charm is her perfect natural rendering. Miss Millar was in great form at the piano, and apart from her individual playing, she was untiring in accompanying the various items. Altogether it was a splendid concert, and very appreciated by a considerable audience.

Mr. W. Henderson and Mr. Muir Wright was also entertaining. The first with his songs and Mr. Wright with his recitations.

Miss Marr was recalled no less than three times in the second half of the programme, and this with her singing of duets with Mr. Neill was an especial feature of the evening.

RESULT OF ENTERTAINMENT AT AMERICAN CHURCH.

(To the Editor).

Sir,—I shall be much obliged if you will with your usual courtesy allow me a little of your space to announce the very gratifying result of the cinema held in the American Church Hall on Wednesday evening last.

After paying all expenses there is an amount of $270 paper with which to furnish an Apprentices Room at the Victoria Sailors' Home.

Our best thanks are due to Dr. McLaughlin and the American Church for use of the Hall and Lantern, to Mr. and Mrs. de Mello, Madame Edgard and Mr. H. W. Curtis for the musical programme and to Mr. H. P. Dee for his untiring work at the piano. We also wish to thank Mr. W. H. Robertson, the American Consul General, for presiding and the HERALD and Standard for so kindly publishing the notices.

Yours, etc.,

STANLEY PARKER.
Superintendent.

THE BRITISH FLAG

(To the Editor).

Sir,—"Three cheers for the red, white and blue," were my sentiments on arriving at the corners (three of them) of B. Mitre and Reconquista on the morning of the 20th inst.

How grand the glorious flag looked flying bravely in the breeze, and may many more soon be seen.

There are still too many falsified red ensigns flown, and the chief "ought-to-know-better" culprits are now the Insurance Companies.

Let us all try and act up to a verse of an old song, more or less as follows, and fly

"The flag that guides our sailor on his way,

The flag that fills our foes with dismay,

The flag let's pray, may carry the day,

The 'Union Jack' of Old England."

Yours, etc.,

LOYALIST.

OUR ILLUSTRATIONS

The illustration this week cover a number of interesting phases of the great war. The frontispiece conveys an ingenious suggestion of how the German submarines or other underwater craft are able to keep at sea so long, and operate so far from their bases. The artist depicts the means whereby a submarine may take in fuel and other supplies from a submerged depot in comparatively shallow water. The next three pictures deal with the capture of the city of Warsaw by the Germans. Although the enemy secured what one correspondent has described as "only the shell of the city," they were not allowed to take possession of that without a desperate struggle. One of the pictures shows the women helping the troops to dig the last trenches, and even when the Russians were driven out they destroyed all the bridges behind them. The Germans made the customary triumphal entry into Warsaw and one of the pictures is a photograph of Prince Leopold of Bavaria, who headed the procession into the captured city. The subject of the famous landing of the British and French forces at the Dardanelles has furnished many illustrations for these pages but the remarkable view of the transport River Clyde justifies its reproduction. In this instance the picture was taken from "V" beach, where the Allies had to struggle desperately to secure and maintain their foothold. The last picture is interesting because it shows the complete details of the working of the guns on the war-ships engaged at the Dardanelles. The crew are shown at their stations with one man equipped with a telephone for communication with the fire control officer.

CONCERT AT THE SALON THEATRE

WELCOME RE-APPEARANCE OF ADELA VERNE.

Nothing could have been more welcome than the return of Mme. Adela Verne to the concert platform, after her long and serious illness. On Sept 25, for moments all too brief, she was heard at the Salon Theatre, Cangallo, in Schubert's famous quintette. It was immediately apparent that none of the remarkable powers possessed by this great artiste had been affected by her illness, her playing had all the power, the fullness and attraction as formerly.

The hall was very well filled, and the audience were generous in their applause.

The superb violin playing of Señora Alba Rosa caused her to be recalled. Lalo Andante was perfection.

At the close of the concert, Mme. Adela Verne received a most enthusiastic reception. Her next appearance is awaited with interest.

TRAIN ACCIDENT AT SANTIAGO

MANY PERSONS INJURED.

On Thursday, Sept. 23, a serious accident occurred on the railway at Santiago, which was fortunately untended with loss of life. An excursion train full of passengers was returning to Santiago from Laguna Negra late in the afternoon when one of the coaches left the metals and overturned causing a similar accident to happen to the coach in advance. The train was only proceeding at some 10 miles an hour and the extra weight of dragging the overturned carriages was sufficient to stop the engine in a few yards.

Both coaches were full of passengers, who were none of them seriously hurt, beyond cuts and bruises, to some 30 of them. Don Antonio Orrego lost all his teeth and is suffering from a fractured maxilla and a fractured arm. His case is the most serious.

The excursionists were composed of the best known persons in Santiago and some 40 of them belonged to the Ministry. The passengers arrived ultimately at Santiago in a most lamentable state.

A SUGGESTION OF HOW SUBMARINES MAY TAKE IN SUPPLIES AT SEA.

THE DEFENCE OF WARSAW. WOMEN HELPING TO DIG THE LAST TRENCHES.

BRIDGE OVER THE VISTULA DESTROYED BY THE RUSSIANS IN THEIR RETREAT.

PRINCE LEOPOLD OF BAVARIA ARRIVING IN WARSAW.

BRITISH RED CROSS AMBULANCES STARTING FOR THE FRONT.

THE TRANSPORT RIVER CLYDE BEACHED ON GALLIPOLI PENINSULA, SHOWING HOLES CUT IN HER SIDES AND GANGWAYS TO FACILITATE THE LANDING OF TROOPS.

ON BOARD A BATTLESHIP AT THE DARDANELLES.

FANCY DRESS BALL

JUVENILE ENTERTAINMENT

AT PRINCE GEORGE'S HALL

On Sat. afternoon Prince George's Hall was once again the scene of a pretty entertainment, when a Children's Fancy Dress Ball was held, organised by and all the arrangements for which were capably carried out by Madame E. B. Reed and Miss O. Hughesdon-Smith, with the invaluable assistance of Mr. F. Bidelenx. At 3 o'clock, the hour set for the juveniles, there was a merry and picturesque gathering within the Hall, and the programme of 18 dances was all too short for the never-tiring little lads and lassies who, for the most part, danced with grace and most correctly; although the one-step and the two-step were too much for sustained effort on the part of the "babies" present, owing to the number of bigger "children" present. The dressing of the little ones was excellent. The principals set the example by wearing beautiful costumes. Madame Reed looked charming as the Argentine Republic in white flowing robes of silk with pale blue sash gold-fringed and red cap of liberty. Miss O. Hughesdon-Smith was handsomely attired in Spanish costume, and Mr. Bidelenx wore the Court costume of Louis XV period. Madame Reed's little ones, Geoffrey and Maude, made a dainty couple as "Pierrot" and "Pierrette," respectively. There were "Orientals" from Lomas and Olivos; "Jockeys," "Dalmatians," "Wood-nymphs" and "Minuet Costumes" from Belgrano; and indeed many countries were represented, and endless characters portrayed; but unfortunately only a few attached the information to the card bearing name. The music was supplied by Prof. Stark's orchestra; the afternoon tea was superintended by the organisers, who were kindly assisted by Mrs. A. T. Drysdale, Mrs. Bissett, and Mr. Dinwoodie. In two intervals, there was an exhibition of solo dancing, which was much enjoyed by the onlookers; the young performers being almost perfect in their various items. They included the following:—"Bow and Arrow Dance," Arthur Murray Brown; "Thème Slav," Julia Palmer; "Czardas," Anita Woodgate and Anita Nieva; "Eastern Dance," Tassie Paton; "Pizzicato," Kathleen Furness; "Trio," (Rosenkavalier), Emma Murchison, Juanita Dates and Willie van Konyenberg; "Rose Dance," Irma Williams; "Spanish Dance," Chicken Rugeroni; "Nymph Dance," Isabel Furness; "Dance of Youth," Anita Nieva; "La Nuit," Violet Bissett; "Canaries," Rita Caprile and Bigine Klappenback.

A little "Tommy Atkins," looked like a toy soldier, so diminutive was little Philip Orton. Angelica Vasquez was a picturesque "Italian"; Aida Coch, "Early Victorian"; Isabel Villane, "Spanish"; A. Nieva, "Golden Youth"; A. Woodgate, "Hungarian"; Isabel Lloyd, "Pink Fairy"; Lenore Matters, "Early Victorian"; Misses Reynolds, "Kate Greenaway Costumes"; Cyril Baines, "Page"; Marjorie Symonds, "When the Heart is Young," (Maude Goodman); Marion Ilavnes, "Arab"; Sylvia Haynes, "Dick Wittington"; Macy Taylor, "Puritan."

Those present included: Mesdames Callon Gregory, Sra. de Woodgate, Sra. Sara W. de Bellucci, Reynolds, M. N. Codd, Mackenzie, Fabrika Platt, Agnes Codd, Van Wassenaar, A. T. Drysdale, Bissett, Mme. Visconti, Miss Duckworth, who wore Russian dress; Gerardo Solte, Francisco Castillon, Concepcion Castillon, Maria Castillon, Walter MacNeill, Lily Ward, Cesarpe Pezzoni, Ian Grant Laidlaw, Claudio Gonzalez, Gladys van Wassenaar, Karel van Wassenaar, Vera van Wassenaar, Ivy van Wassenaar, Edith Pany, Ted Townlay, Maggie Walker, Lilly Goodfellow, Kathleen Reynolds, Stella Sheppard, Maria Dellina de Carabassa, Maria Angelica de Carabassa, Elena G.

UNITED STATES UNIVERSITIES CLUB

LECTURE AND SOCIAL AT MAJESTIC HOTEL

The U. S. Universities Club met on Saturday at the Majestic Hotel to hear a lecture by Dr. Alfredo Colmo on Sarmiento.

Owing to the regretted absence of the President, Mr. Frederic J. Stimson, U.S. Ambassador, and of the Vice President, Dr. M. Quiroga, both unfortunately by reason of indisposition, Mr. Ralph Huntington presided and introduced the speaker to the meeting. Dr. Colmo's lecture was most interesting and eloquent. Dealing chiefly with Sarmiento's technical work as an educationalist, he showed how much the great statesman had done for his country in that most important direction, and in referring to American educational methods showed an intimate and indeed surprisingly detailed knowledge of the intricacies of the subject. The lecture was listened to with much attention and pleasure, and a vote of thanks accorded to Dr. Colmo for his kindness.

Supper was served, subsequently after which an informal dance took place. There was a large attendance of members and friends.

de Carabassa, May Bridger, M. Baldo, Sra. Elisa Hedin, Sra. Inez Sneardi, Sta. Emilia E. Hedin, Sta. Felicitas Sneardi, Serina Svardo, Manuel Castillon, Lachlan MacNeil, Gilbert Lomax, Miss Garder, Sr. Bernabe G. de Carabassa, Adela de Carabassa, Dolores Pando Goni, Delfina C. Goni, Kathleen Boggs, Luis Sturgeon, Chrissie Sturgeon, A. Murray Brown, John Jones, Norah Jones, Justo Jones, Maggie Dundridge, Filly Dundridge, J. J. Gauthier, Rene S. Gauthier, Ita Duncan, Vickie Scharenberg, Nena Scharenberg, Molly Palmer, Robert Reynolds, Amalia Reynolds, Alice Palmer, Bessie Dodds, Jack Gwysher, Dora Reynolds, Willie Reynolds, Lolita Correa, José Lopez-Peña, Lily Pearson, Betty MacNeill, Caroline Pezzoni, Josefa Gonzalez, Sta. Bellucci, Carlitos Bellucci, Guillermito Bellucci, Bessie Mackenzie, Nellie Mackenzie, Miss F. Platt, Miss Mabel Codd, Lilian Codd, Miss Ibbetson, Agnes Codd, M. Deschamps, Marguerita Groebly, Sylvia Ucko, Beatrice Higham, E. B. de Grobly, Nellie Solte, Noemi Gouli, Rita Colven, Dr. Garrido and Sra. de Garrido, Ninni Hardman, Sta. D. Gittens, Carlos M. de la Barra, Enid Burr, Master Fred Racquette, Lily Raquette, Quennie Ogan, Beatrice Burr, Miss Lucy Gordon, Sra. Lambran, Christina Mayne, Sr. Pizzoni, Mrs. Gunner, Mrs. Barker, Joan Ap Iwan, Maude Bryans, Mrs. G. McHardy, Donald MacHardy, Sra. Carnecross, Miss Fortune, Mrs. John Laidlaw, Manuel Ward, A. Villane, Mrs. Lett, Lucy Lett, Dora Lett, Violet Bissett, Daisy McHardy, Celia Ghirardo, E. Sheppard, Robert O'Ryan, Mrs. Heslon, Miss Christian, Mrs. Christian, Mrs. Ghirardo, Norah Botting, Elba Ghirardo, Freddie Ghirardo, Mr. Herlen, Sra. Coole, Arthur Mayne, Adolfo G. Lavarello, Sta. Conello, Mrs. Hubert Burr, Mrs. Morton, Lilian Burr, Miss Ogan, Esteban Adroque, Irma Ghirardo, Emma Banham, Betty Banham, Bruce Taylor, Kairi Nordstroin, Greta Nordstroin, Bee Bridger, Muriel Kurno, Gladys Hall, Eileen Ayliffe, Muriel Ayliffe, Betty Perny, Mrs. Ayliffe, Ernest Perkins, Julian Perkins, Edward Sampson, Gertie Sampson, Winifred D. Lee, Jack Caminos, Leila Heger, Mrs. McHardy, Christina McHardy, Miss Bourke, Ermi Bourke, Gladys E. Oliver, Mrs. R. Paton, Master Eric M. Pixton, Alicia Brown, Edward Brown, George Brown, Sra. Pedro Rene, Marion R. de Rene, Gabriela Rene and Blanca de Rene.

In the evening a Cinderella organised by Mme. E. B. Reed and Miss O. Hughesdon-Smith took place in Prince George's Hall, when a similar success was accomplished. The organisers are to be heartily congratulated on both occasions for the perfect arrangements and the hearty response to their efforts.

PROGRESS AND ART

THE SALON NATIONAL

SOME COMMENTS AND A CRITICISM

It is somewhat difficult for the European picture-lover to criticise with real discernment the year's artistic effort as characterised by the three hundred odd pictures, bronzes, sculptures, and black and white design, crowded into the utterly inadequate and vilely lighted rooms of the Museo de Bellas Artes. In one sense so much has been accomplished, for a raw, new, materialistic land that is to say. And again, looking at the matter in another light, the whole aim and reason of Art and the Artist seems to have been missed. Frankly, this latter impression may be due rather to the shocking, the literally shocking, hanging of the pictures sent in for exhibition. Speaking in ignorance of the difficulties which may have faced the committee, one is constrained to say that fully 50 per cent. of the works ought not to have been hung at all if the remaining 50 per cent. were to be appreciated at their real value. The narrow rooms made it impossible to judge many of the larger canvases, this being particularly noticeable in the first and second rooms. A clever bit of work by Christophersen, a fresh-faced, fair haired girl at the sewing machine, looked good, full of light and energy. But as it was impossible to get more than a couple of metres or so away from the canvas, save in a diagonal direction, the facial expression was indistinguishable. And the same remarks apply to many other pictures; they cannot be criticised as they hang, simply because the critic is unable to see them as their authors intended them to be seen.

Though the Vorticists and the Cubists have spared the public, there are quite enough freaks to justify the complaint of the academicians that was early lodged against realism; sensational brushwork used to cover up bad draughtsmanship. In many of the exhibits the drawing is simply impossible; the nude, thank goodness, is conspicuous by its absence, for the nude, colour your flesh tints how you will, must be drawn. Only one nude shows any ambition, a study of a boy with a broken pitcher, though the attitude is far too reminiscent of many pictures by much greater men. Indeed all through the exhibition one feels that one has seen the same thing so often before, only much better handled. Nevertheless, there are works that show a real improvement, or perhaps it would be more correct to say a real uplifting of the artistic conception in this country. A portrait study, the head of a young man with a high-domed forehead, very bald, is the best thing of its kind one has seen for a long time; there is a sense of suppressed intellectuality about it that makes itself felt; the eyes, one feels, must be true to their original, so full of life are they; in short, like so many of the works of the great portrait painters, the whole work makes one wish to know something more of the sitter. The painter is Alfredo Benitez, and it hangs in the first room. Here, too, is what the writer considers the gem of the exhibition in so far as portraiture is concerned. Two workgirls, "fabriqueras," going home side by side, clever little faces, avid of admiration, coquettes to their finger tips, making the most of their not too attractive dress, yet neat and trim and fascinating with the beauté du diable that dowers sweet seventeen. Gaston Larri, the painter, is to be congratulated. Louis Boni's portrait of a lady is a beautiful thing in the best academic manner. It may be somewhat flattered as regards the sitter, but it is very pleasing and stands out among the various strivings after effect, at the expense of honest hard work with the charcoal, that surround it. There are a few good interiors;

ACCIDENT TO WORKMEN

ANOTHER CASE OF CARELESSNESS.

Accidents to workmen engaged upon structural alterations to buildings or engaged upon the erection of the same appear to be on the increase. So numerous have these become this year that the attention of an inspector to such matters would not be wasted says an evening contemporary. These accidents are in nearly all cases due to carelessness and to the faulty protection of workmen engaged upon construction.

Yesterday afternoon another accident occurred to two workmen, who with six others were engaged in the work of excavating some land which is ultimately to become the site for an oil storage cellar. On the edge of this excavation in Sarmiento 3127, were standing some empty casks of oil each weighing approximately 50 kilos. A waggon drove up containing a further load of empty casks and collided with those already there. It was remarkable that the carelessness of the driver did not precipitate cart and horse over the edge. He succeeded however in knocking over some empty casks on to a workman named Fernandez and severely injuring him and a few moments later repeated the performance this time at the expense of the head of another workman, Ricardo Silva by name. It is small consolation to the injured, who were immediately transferred to hospital that the carter was arrested and after making a statement was released. The life of Silva is despaired of, as he is suffering from fracture of the base of the skull, while Fernandez is but little less seriously injured. Such accidents as these could not occur if the government inspector who attends to such matters were to perform his duties more conscientiously.

A NEW COMET

Information has been received in the National Observatory concerning a new comet discovered by Mellish. According to astronomical computations this comet will be closest to the sun on October 13. The plane of the orbit of the comet crosses the ecliptic in longitude 76. It is visible with the aid of a small telescope and is increasing in brilliance. On October 27 it will be in the right ascension 11.37 minutes with declination 20 degrees north.

"The Enameller," where a closely tentative worker of some fifty years bends over the tiny gem on which he is working, with the light of his small furnace contrasting cleverly with the general effect, being one of the most pleasing things in this genre. Mme. Léonie Mathis has another distinctly pleasing interior, a study of an old-fashioned dressing table with the light streaming in from an open window, whilst "Mi Escritorio" is also a happy effect of external lighting.

In the applied arts there are some nice examples of repoussé leather work as bookbinding, a little enamelled work of merit, a few articles in ivory and marqueterie that call attention, but nothing of outstanding quality. The same may be said of the sculpture and bronzes. There is a fine head of an old sea dog by Luisa Isella in the latter material that strikes one's fancy, but for the rest, the exhibits smack strongly of sturdiness and the master's atelier. Yet withal there is a promise of better things to come, and when one leaves the exhibition one does so with the feeling that the germ of artistic life has at last taken firm root in Argentina, and will grow with the years into an expression of something worthy of the cosmopolite and composite race that finds its most striking example of what is meant by progress in all its many phases in the variegated and at times elusive beauty of the great city that is the concrete evidence of its existence.

Sports and Pastimes

THE TURF

PALERMO

There was much lost interest in the classic that was won yesterday by Capullo, owing to the number of scratchings. Melik, Gontran, Decidda had they been starters would have given the race much more flavour, although it is doubtful whether they would have been able to lower Capullo's colours. There was one peculiarity about the race and that was the remarkable way in which Diamant was fancied, to such an extent that he ultimately became favourite. This was no doubt due to his exceptionally fine race against Siete y Medio, but even this was not a performance sufficiently good to justify his favouritism. With Melik out of the race, the logical winner was Capullo judging by his past classic another to those who tried to find another to beat him were disappointed. In this race Packoy's showing was none too good, nor is it possible to congratulate Arcuri upon his finishing powers, who in the straight at the finish seemed to be very energetic without the slightest effect upon his mount. It is just possible that Packoy funkled the finish or that Arcuri is something of an actor. However or from whichever point of view this may be regarded, Packoy was undoubtedly a failure. He was well placed, because after running second to Capullo for a couple of furlongs he took the lead only to be beaten stiff when it came to the real trial. Pas-si-Mal brought up the rear and almost stayed there. It was only Gefé, who ran a strong race for 1700 metres that saved the filly's face. Farruco ran very well, but was none too well ridden, but Diamant the favourite, was quite out-classed, although no complaint could be made with Lema's riding.

Taken generally the day was none too good for backers' who were most unfortunate in their choice. The first race went to Riparia at the expense of Thamar and La Delfina. La Commune the favourite came fourth and this was really the point of the race. We believe and nothing will persuade us to the contrary, that La Commune could have won. Possibly Mingo had partaken of a late lunch and did not feel up to hard work so early in the day, but whatever the cause he rode none too strongly.

The second race went to Pirotecnica, a moderate outsider but a perfectly reasonable candidate. Merluza, the Don Gonzalo debutante and favourite, was ridden as though she was a rocking horse. Cardoso made not the smallest effort until nearly home. This filly has a most exceptional action and although she ran green and behaved as though she could not help it, she could have given the others anything they asked for and then could have won. One of her strides covered something like a stride and three-quarters of the others.

Still she ultimately came nowhere and Pirotecnica had a soft win from Vizcacha and La Almendra.

Huarmi who has a record of several seconds was another hopeless failure.

There was no doubt about one point in the third race Amargoso, the winner, was very clearly indicated, by the betting on the second board. Over a thousand tickets made him favourite and as this was chiefly stable money, it was small wonder that the public fastened on to him and made him second favourite.

He had a good run with Leonem at the finish, but the race was never in doubt. Anselmi, the favourite, came third and it may be worth while to remember that he is reported to be a grass fed horse, which means he will need plenty of preparation before he can win a hard race.

Pregon fairly had the talent beaten in the fourth race and won in a hack canter from Reb Bonnet and Zio. An unattractive looking horse, swathed in bandages Pregon, nevertheless, ran like a "good 'un" and held his own from start to finish, just as he was expected to do. The event as a race was most colourless. So also were nearly all the events of the afternoon.

After the classic Red Jacket managed to beat Rotterdam but by none too great a margin. Paul Pons once again turned out, looking fit but running like a donkey and not a horse. It will be a shock when this horse wins again at Palermo. The finish of this race was none too dull and Acosta certainly did make a tremendous effort to collar, Red Jacket and a furlong from home, gave the impression that he would do the trick. Arcuri however knew better and landing his mount, first past the post, with comfort.

With Gontran and Retiro both offered to Englander and refused by him, it looked a certainty for Bizet in the seventh race. Ultimately it proved so, for this son of Escamillo won as easily as possible from Nitrató and Tamandare.

Full Hand is a poor hearted kind of horse, and nothing whatever to write home about. The winner absolutely dominated every horse in the race, exactly as he did when he first came out. It will be necessary to seriously consider Bizet in future calculations.

The last race of the day was infinitely the best and not only this, but was one of the finest finishes and hardest ridden races seen at Palermo for a long time. The result was that Tamarindo won by a short head from Borbollon after a most gruelling finish. Hidrato came third, and although well up, it seemed as though there were no other horses in the race except the first two. One excited member of the spectators nearly fell over the rails in watching the finish of this event, and few there were who could not sympathise with his excitement at seeing so fine a finish. At the same time it is advisable to restrain one's excitement at all times.

Generally, the meeting was poor and colourless wins were easy and the public had no one but themselves to blame in not finding them. This applies in every case except that of La Commune, who should have won.

LA PLATA

The results of the racing at La Plata were highly satisfactory from a public point of view. El Triunfo was the only surprise of the day. Racing was good, some finishes exciting, and the weather perfect.

Premio Babicha, 1600 metres.—Poco a Poco 57 kilos, N. Lopez; Loterie, 52; Macaulay, 57.

Also ran: Simonide, Bilbaina, Punta Piedras (4), Rasqueta, Cuenquita.

Dividends: 8.60 and 3.00; 5.20; 2.50. Won by 1½ lengths; ½ length. Time 1.41 3/5.

Premio Balkanes, 1600 metres.—El Triunfo 46, R. Dellagiovanna; Pirincho 48 (45); Octavio 56.

Also ran: Honorable, Fable, Copete, Saqueador (4), Heresy, Apiz.

Dividends: 28.70 and 6.70; 10.10; 3.40.

Won by a length; 3rd a neck.

Time 1.40.

Premio Banderale, 1600 metres.—Bayonne 51, J. M. Pena; Galleguita 54.

Also ran: Chiller, V. Prince, Posen (4), Indecisa (3).

Dividends: 4.70 and 3.30; 4.30.

Won by half a neck; 2nd and 3rd two lengths. Time 1.41 1/5.

Premio Beauty, 1300 metres.—Primerio Querida II. 57 kilos; Duquesita; Effusion 52.

Also ran: My Happy, Kotter, Her-Tortorola (4), La Morena, India Brava, Cecilete, T. del Oro.

Dividends: 18.40 and 6.10; 4.60; 8.60. Won by a neck; 1st and 2nd a neck.

Time 1.20 2/5.

Premio Brevita, 2000 metres.—Dead heat between Chulo 50, (A. Louria) and Perlino 48 (J. P. Dufour; 3rd 5ca 43.

Also ran: Foragido, Clora, Monedita, Pilleria (4), Nervio, Chambery.

Dividends: Chulo 4.70 and 3.30, Perlino 12.10 and 7.90; 3rd 4.80.

A head between 1st and 2nd. Time 2.6.

Premio Betrayor, 1400 metres.—Matatias 55, (C. Fenucci), Arrogante (49), Bonci (54).

Also ran: Juanuco, Tower, Marabu, May Palo, Per Cacco, Pitina II., La Tubau, Cebada (4), Divinita, Ehontee.

Dividends: 13.50 and 4.40; 3.30; 3.40. Won by 2 lengths; ½ length.

Time 1.26 3/5.

Premio Bizcocho, 2000 metres.—Guitry 53, C. Fenucci; Peugeot (45).

Also ran: Alta Mar II., Sigfrido, Condarco, Monarch (4), Manito de Oro (3), Saltarin.

Dividends: 6.10 and 4.50; 7.10.

Won by a head; a neck.

Time 2.7 1/5.

Premio Biyuya, 1500 metres.—Electro 52, P. Dufour; Puro 53.

Also ran: Chereboya, Gorrion (4), Carabinero, Pionono, Camorsito, Carcano (3).

Dividends: 8.20 and 4.40; 10.20.

Won by a length; 1 length.

BUENA ESPERANZA SPORTING CLUB

SPRING RACE MEETING.

Those intending to enter horses at the Buena Esperanza Club's race meeting on November 5 and 6 should note the following:—

1.—Race No. 5 on the first day will be run No. 5 on second day, and No. 5 on the second day will be run No. 5 on first day.

2.—Mr. E. C. Warrick Parker has been named official measurer in the Bagual district for the convenience of those training ponies in that part.

3.—Horses running in the untrained races at Media Luna meeting may be entered for the untrained races at Buena Esperanza meeting, but should be handed over to Secretary on arrival at Buena Esperanza.

4.—Entries will be received from Venado Tuerto up to October 16, and from "Media Luna" up to October 26, but must be made by telegraph, and afterwards confirmed by writing.

W. J. LOGAN, Hon. Sec.

FATAL FLYING FALL

AVIATOR KILLED AT C. PELLEGRINI.

Although not at war, Argentina has paid a heavy price for achievements in aviation in the many accidents which have befallen her intrepid fliers

Another fatal catastrophe is unfortunately reported from Carlos Pellegrini, where Pablo Liborsart, an expert aviator and mechanic, has been killed by a fall on the estancia "Los Prados" of Dr. Antonio Robirosa.

Last July he had constructed a bi-plane, equipping it with a second-hand motor, picked up in the Capital. He had made a number of successful flights in it, but yesterday a gust of wind upset the stability of the avion, which fell from a considerable height. Liborsart sustained severe injuries, and although attended to by Señor Robirosa Junior and Mr. John Davidson, the Majordomo, who called in Dr. Soldalis, no assistance availed, and he died a few hours afterwards.

The deceased was an enthusiastic and indefatigable worker, and his loss is greatly deplored.

"Are you married, my man?" a woman asked a sailor.

"Yes, indeed, mum—married and fourteen children."

"Poor fellow, travelling about like this! And don't you ever get homesick?"

"Only when I'm home, mum."—"Fun."

FOOTBALL

SEMI-FINALS OF THE COPA DE COMPETENCIA.

RACING (3) v. WESTERN RLY. (1).

The Western Railway team offered a fine game to Racing on Sunday afternoon, although ultimately they were defeated by 3 goals to 1.

It must be said that the winners were superior throughout the whole match, and the only goal scored by the railway men was due to "hands" in the penalty area. Angeletti took the kick and scored easily. Apart from this the Western Railway were completely outclassed, and their opponents scored through Ohaco twice and Canavery once.

The teams were as follows: F.C. Oeste.—D. Estrach; A. Elordi and A. J. Pini; S. Barbera, R. Caprile and R. Di Lorenzo; A. Moggio, J. B. Pini, E. A. Moggio, V. Angeletti, and F. Crespo.

Racing.—Arduino; Ochoa and Reyes; Betular, Olazar and Pepe; Viazzi, Ohaco, Canavery, Hospital, and Perinetti.

PORTENO (2) v. RIVER PLATE (1).

Played at Palermo on Sunday with the above result. The match was a fairly interesting one, but Porteno had no difficulty in outplaying their rivals, whose only goal was from a penalty kick taken by Chiappe. In the second half Ustenguy scored for Porteno. Extra time had to be taken during which Rithner scored the winning goal amidst great excitement. The teams were:—

Porteno.—L. Rithner; Escalara and Bettiamé; Ayala, P. Rithner and Aradia; Resana, Rithner, Ustenguy, Izaguirre and Garat.

River Plate.—C. Isola; A. Chiappe and Caineggia; Simon, Garcia, Lanata and Traya; Ameal, Rofano, Rivo and Penney.

Referee: Mr. G. McHardy.

POSITIONS IN THE LEAGUE.

FIRST DIVISION.

	P.	W.	L.	D.	Pts.
San Isidro	18	17	—	1	35
Platense	21	13	4	4	30
E. de La Plata	20	12	4	4	28
River Plate	16	12	1	3	27
Independiente	20	11	5	4	26
Racing	12	11	—	1	23
Porteño	15	10	3	2	22
Estudiantes	20	10	2	2	22
F. C. Oeste	18	6	4	8	20
Hispano-Argentino	21	8	9	4	20
Bánfield	21	8	10	3	19
San. L. de Almagro	19	8	9	2	18
Belgrano	23	8	13	2	18
Arg. de Quilmes	16	8	7	1	17
Gim. y Esgrima	19	6	9	4	16
Huracan	14	6	5	3	15
Boca Juniors	17	5	7	5	15
Estudiantil Porteno	19	7	11	1	15
Quilmes	15	5	6	4	14
Atlanta	21	6	14	1	13
Tigre	17	4	9	4	12
Kimberley	20	5	13	2	12
Defen. de Belgrano	20	4	13	3	11
Floresta	18	1	14	2	5
Comercio	18	1	14	3	5

FULL RESULTS OF SUNDAY'S PLAY.

Copa de Honor (Semi-final)—Tiro Federal... 4 Boca Juniors . . 0

Copa de Competencia (Semi-finals) Racing..... 3 F. C. Oeste . . . 1 Porteno..... 2 River Plate . . 1

Championship.

Platense..... 1 Kimberley . . . 0

Atlanta..... 1 A. de Quilmes . 0

San Isidro..... 3 E. de La Plata . 1

S. L. de Almagro 2 Banfield . . . 0

Belgrano..... 2 Comercio . . . 1

Quilmes..... 1 Estud. Porteño . 0

Friendly.

Huracan..... 2 Defen. de Belg'o 0

LAWN TENNIS

BELGRANO SPRING TOURNAMENT

Play in the Spring Tournament at Belgrano was continued yesterday, and the almost ideal weather enticed a large number of spectators to see the games. The general interest in the tournament was very considerable and there was no lack of recognition for any good play seen. The match, which attracted most attention was one between L. H. Knight and A. J. Villegas. The former, however, had not much difficulty in winning, and did so in a more easy fashion than the final scores of 6-4, 7-5 would indicate.

Villegas, however, played quite a good game, and seems to have improved on last season's play.

A splendid match was seen in the mixed doubles between Mrs. Crawford with Mr. Rugeroni as her partner, and Miss Goni and Hoevel. The latter pair won the first set, and their opponents equalised matters in the next, and the final was a ding-dong battle. Mrs. Crawford and her partner just managed to win after 14 games had been played. Another good match was one between Miss Mackenzie and Miss Goni against Miss Obarrio and Miss F. Form.

The following are details of the play:—

Gentlemen's Singles Scratch.

Smyth beat Cullerne 6-8, 6-4, 6-3.
Urquiza beat Poynton 6-2, 6-1.
Prescott beat Urquiza 6-4, 4-6, 6-2.
J. Villegas beat De Meyier 4-6, 6-1, 2-2 (retired).
L. H. Knight beat A. J. Villegas 6-4, 7-5.

Ladies' Singles.

Miss Recknell beat Miss Sylvia Goni 6-3, 6-4.
Miss Anderson beat Miss Podesta 7-5, 2-6, 6-1.

Gentlemen's Singles "A."

Hoevel beat De Meyier 6-2, 6-2.
Rugeroni beat Leslie 6-4, 6-4.
Jones beat Palmer 6-1, 6-0.
Jones beat Mackinnon 6-0, 6-3.
Urquiza beat Van der Ham 6-4, 6-1.
A. J. Villegas beat Norman 4-6, 6-1, 8-6.
Hortal beat Jenkins 6-3, 6-3.

Gentlemen's Singles Class "B."

Durañoña beat Magrane 6-3, 6-9.
Mackenzie beat Sansot 6-3, 10-8.
Thomson beat Loheed 6-4, 6-3.
Hughes beat Podesta 6-4, 5-7, 6-2.
Roberts beat Besler 6-1, 5-7, 6-2.
Pero beat Wilson 3-6, 6-2, 6-4.

Gentlemen's Doubles.

Durañoña and Podesta beat Prescott and Villegas 6-8, 6-4, 6-2.
Pero and Medici beat Griffin and Magrane 6-0, 6-4.
Mackinnon and Allchin beat Forget and Macken 7-5, 3-6, 6-2.
Capdepon and Norman beat Rugeroni and Van der Ham 2-6, 3-6, 6-4.
Hoevel and Goni beat Keen and Van Deurs 7-5, 3-6, 6-2.
Frest and McKechnie beat Knight and Jenkins 6-2, 7-5.
Leslie and Sheward beat Palmer and De Meyier 6-4, 7-5.
Prest and McKechnie beat Isaacs and Hansard 6-2, 7-5.

Mixed Doubles.

Miss M. Goni and Cerboni beat Miss Goni and Jorge Lanusse, 6-21, 5-7, 6-3.
Miss Obarrio and O'Farrell beat Miss Goodliffe and Besler, 8-6, 6-2.
Miss Smith and Leslie beat Miss Podesta and Medici, 6-0, 6-4.

Mrs. Mackenzie and Jenkins beat Miss Capdepon and Allchin, 6-3, 6-4.
Mrs. Crawford and Rugeroni beat Miss Turnbull and Mackinnon, 0-6, 6-3, 8-6.

Miss Goodliffe and Tribe beat Mrs. Jacobs and De Meyier, w.o.

Ladies' Doubles.

Miss C. Mackenzie and Miss Goni beat Miss Obarrio and Miss F. Form, 2-6, 6-3, 6-1.
Mrs. and Miss Recknell beat Miss Obarrio and Miss Goni, 6-1, 6-1.
Mrs. Keen and Miss Moss beat the Misses Lanusse.

SAN ISIDRO SPRING TOURNAMENT

But little progress was made in the open Tennis Tournament now being played at San Isidro. Nor can it be said there was over much enthusiasm displayed, as the spectators were but few.

The handicapping committee have been very generous with one or two players, and especially so with E. B. Sansot, who has had no difficulty in winning his class B matches. The play to date is given below:—

Gents' Doubles.

J. Watson and H. Manley beat P. Rene and A. Rodman, 6-0, 6-0.

J. Malbran and J. de Urquiza beat L. de Urquiza and C. A. Barreiro, 8-6, 10-8.

L. A. Hortal and G. Capdepon beat J. Morgan and W. J. Brough, 6-2, 6-3.

O. G. Babington and D. G. Davidson beat W. Russell and E. S. J. Parry, 6-2, 4-6, 7-5.

Gents' Singles "A."

W. G. Edmonds beat T. C. Jones, 6-1, 6-2.

Gents' Singles "B."

A. Anderson beat A. Barriola, 6-3, 4-6, 6-3.

E. B. Sansot beat S. Hogg, 6-2, 6-3.

E. B. Sansot beat W. B. Spofford, 6-2, 6-1.

Mixed Doubles.

Mrs. Butler and O. G. Babington beat Miss Allen and P. Gallishaw, 6-2, 6-2.

Ladies' Singles.

Miss B. Anderson beat Miss E. E. Hoevel, 6-3, 6-2.

Miss C. Escalada beat Miss I. Heale, 6-2, 6-4.

Ladies' Doubles.

Miss E. E. Hoevel and Miss I. Heale beat Mrs. Butler and Mrs. Babington, 4-6, 7-5, 8-6.

Miss M. T. Obarrio and Miss E. Capdepon beat Miss V. L. Allen and Miss A. Martin, 6-2, 6-2.

OLIVOS SPRING TOURNAMENT.

Beautiful weather favoured the continuance of the Olivos Tennis Tournament on Sunday, with the result that a number of spectators were present to see the various games which resulted as follows:—

Parsons beat Browne, 7-5, 6-1.
Wells and Winchester beat Ibbotson and Logan, 6-2, 7-5.

O'Curry beat Baines, 6-4, 6-0.
Quesado and Quesado beat Lush and Valentine, 7-9, 6-0, 6-3.

F. Candegabe beat N. Winchester, 7-9, 6-2, 8-6.

Miss Geary and Logan beat Miss Regnier and Kienan, 6-3, 6-4.

Lush beat Lister, 6-2, 6-1.

Bonorino and R. Pelliza beat Broome and Browne, 8-6, 5-7, 6-2.

Mrs. Buelinck beat Miss Regnier, 6-1, 4-6, 6-4.

Miss M. Casares and Lush beat Miss Hock and Baines, 6-3, 6-1.

Mr. and Mrs. Pratt beat Miss Vlera and L. Quesado, 9-7, 6-2.

Miss Haynes beat Mrs. Taylor, 6-3, 7-5.

Miss Casares beat Miss Brightman, 6-3, 3-6, 7-5.

During the afternoon tea was kindly provided the players and the guests by Mrs. Buelinck and Mrs. Charles Quesado.

MARMOL LAWN TENNIS HANDICAP.

A sealed American tournament was indulged in by the members of the

GOLF

THE CHAMPIONSHIP.

At San Andres on Sunday afternoon the championship in the Argentine golfing world was played. Mr. Arthur Kidd, who has been a player of prominence during the last two seasons, is to be congratulated on securing this year's trophy and championship. He beat Mr. S. Smiles in the final. Some excellent, although not brilliant golf was seen, and Mr. Kidd won the championship through steady play. The result of the championship was in his favour by 4 up and 3 to play.

At the close of play the President, Dr. J. M. Ahumada, presented the prizes, which were as follows:—

Amateur Championship.

Gold medal and Cup.—Arthur Kidd.
Silver medal.—S. Smiles.

Bronze medal.—J. A. Brown and F. Elortondo.

Bogey Competition Silver Cup.—1st prize, J. May.

Bogey Competition Silver Cup, 2nd prize.—H. G. E. Hickey.

Inter-club Championship, 1st Division, San Andres.—Captain V. G. G. Scroggie.

Ditto Second Division.—Captain, Dr. H. L. Prettyman.

Argentinos v. Extranjeros Cup.—Extranjeros, Capt. R. Paton.

Open Championship.

First prize, gold medal and $200.—Lagenico Gonzalez.

Second prize, silver medal and $100.—A. Philp.

Third prize, bronze medal and $50.—W. J. Eustace.

Fourth prize, $25.—R. Castillo.

Apart from the championship there was a bogey competition, which was won by Mr. J. May by 3 up. The details of play, which show Mr. Hickey second and Mr. Bulman third, are as given below.

OPEN BOGIE.

J. May - 3 and all square - 3.

H. G. E. Hickey - 1 and - 1 - 2.

H. F. Bulman - 1 and - 3 - 2.

E. de Alvear - 1 and all square - 1.

C. Palmer - 2 and - 1 - 1.

J. H. McCrum - 1 and all square - 1.

H. Dorning - 2 and - 1 - 1.

S. W. Lewis - 1 and all square - 1.

M. Gonzalez Guerrico - 2 and - 2 - 1.

C. B. Bradbury - 1 and - 2 - 1.

J. May disqualified for playing three ball match - 3 - 4 - 7.

Out 3 4 4 2 4 5 5 5 5—36

In 3 4 4 4 3 5 4 5 3—35

71

QUILMES CHAMPIONSHIP.

At Quilmes, on Sunday afternoon, the club championship was fought out

Marmol Club on Sunday. Four games from each side of the court were played, and the winners proved to be Miss Roberts and Mr. Kelly with 58 points.

Mrs. Anderson and Mr. Mackenzie, after a tie, won the second prize by beating Miss M. Kelly and Mr. Roberts. Mr. Walker, the president of the club, presented the prizes, which consisted of an enamelled buckle and a vanity box for the ladies, and a tobacco jar and leather pocket-book for the gentlemen.

WEDDING

GIBSON-McCRUM.

On Sept. 23, at 9, the wedding of Miss Helen McCrum, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. McCrum, San Martin to Mr. Henry B. Gibson was solemnised at the American Church, Corrientes 718. The bride who entered the church on the arm of her father, was given away by him, was charming in a gown of white silk with rich lace and train of silk and Brussels lace. She wore a full tulle veil and wreath of orange blossoms and carried a bouquet of orchids and white roses.

Miss Katie Rodman and Miss Esther Gibson, the bridesmaids, wore pink silk frocks with tulle and picture hats of the same colour, carrying bouquets of pink carnations.

Mr. William Campbell discharged the duties of Best Man, and the Groomsman was Mr. Ralph McCrum.

The church had been beautifully decorated with palms and white flowers and floral sprays were affixed to every stall. At the hour indicated the church was full, Mr. Lloyd Davies at the organ, played several voluntaries and the customary Bridal Marches. The Rev. Dr. McLaughlin solemnized the wedding ceremony in an impressive manner, but there was no special choral music.

After the ceremony a private reception took place at Mr. Gibson's house, at the corner of Araoz and Libertad.

up to the semi-finals, with the following results:—

W. J. Shilton beat J. T. Stanfield 6-5.
H. M. Sanders walk over from W. C. Paterson.

H. E. Hetley beat T. N. Leslie 8-7.
P. A. Grassick beat L. J. Massa 7-5.

PACIFIC RAILWAY v. SAN ISIDRO II.

This match was played at San Isidro on Sunday, with the result that the home team won an enjoyable day's golf by 10½ matches to 6½. The following is the score in detail:—

Pacific Rly. San Isidro II.

SINGLES.

J. C. Findlayson. 1	W. B. Jones . . . 0
H. Nicholls. . . . 0	W. Oliphant . . . 1
R. W. Denton. . . . 0	W. J. Boddy . . . 1
B. H. Smyth. . . . 0	G. R. Rae . . . 1
G. J. Clayton. . . . 1	F. H. Jones . . . 0
A. H. Barnett. . . . 0	J. B. Sheridan . . 1
F. A. Chiswell. . . . 0	G. F. Follett . . . 1
C. O'Ryan. 0	Dr. J. A. Malbran 1
J. G. Bryans. 0	F. Baillie 1
W. H. Brown. . . . ½	T. Bridge ½
E. Tebbutt. ½	G. L. Jones . . . ½

3

8

FOURSOMES.

Smyth and Nicholls. 1	Rae and Oliphant . . . 0
Findlayson and Clayton. ½	W. B. Jones and F. H. Jones . . ½
Barnett and Denton. 1	Boddy and Sheridan . . . 0
O'Ryan and Chiswell. . . . 0	Malbran and Follett 1
Bryans and Hunter Brown 0	Bridge and Bailey 1
Tebbutt. 1	G. L. Jones . . . 0

3½

2½

Singles. 3

8

Total. 6½

10½

FERNET-BRANCA

Tonic, bitter, appetizer and digestive

HOFFER & Co., B. Aires.—Sole Agents

RALPH WALDO EMERSON

SERMON BY DR. McLAUGHLIN.

The Rev. Dr. McLaughlin gave a deeply interesting lecture on Sunday night at St. Andrew's on "The Personality and Writings of Ralph Waldo Emerson." The lecture was one of the monthly series on "Prophets and Religious Teachers of the 19th Century." Dr. McLaughlin has seen Emerson and is further a careful and appreciative student of his writings. He saw the great man in the same carriage with Longfellow and Whittier, a remarkable triad of American poets. Emerson was descended directly from the Puritans of New England, and inherited the Puritan traditions. Nevertheless he was strikingly independent in his opinions. His last act in the pulpit was to say of the Lord's Supper that it was misunderstood, was a mistake, and "I am not interested in it." The Rev. Professor Wendell declared that this was "saturated with serene insolence." Dr. McLaughlin said that while disagreeing with his views, one must admire his courage and his honesty. He made an address in 1838 before Harvard Divinity School which "staggered even that heretical seminary," in which he attacked not only historical Christianity but seemed to forget that without the person Jesus there would be no form of Christianity, as without the sun there would be no light of day." On his second visit to England he renewed his already warm friendship with Carlyle, and was nearly elected Lord Rector of Glasgow University, his successful opponent was Benjamin Disraeli. Emerson was proud of the honour of being polled 500 votes. Of his visit to Great Britain he said, "I had not been aware that there was so much kindness in the world." His "English Traits" are full of kindly satire and yet abound in enthusiastic appreciation. How delightful is this criticism of mid-Victorian England: "It believes in a Providence that does not treat with levity a Pound Sterling. . . . They put up no Socratic prayer, much less any saintly prayer for the Queen's mind . . . but say bluntly 'Grant her health and wealth long to live.'" Britain he called "Mother of nations, mother of heroes with strength still equal to the time, wise to entertain and swift to execute." He was trenchant on shams. Among them he classed St. George, originally "a fraudulent bacon seller to the army," and Americo Vespucci, from whom America is called, "a swindling pickle dealer whose highest rank was boatswains mate."

His favourite poets, his five immortals, were Homer, Dante, Shakespeare and Goethe. He said he had read all Goethe's works, "doubtless in fulfilment of a vow," as O. Wendell Holmes sarcastically observed. Shakespeare he considered the creator of modern German culture and literature (Oh! what a nasty one for the Herren Professors).

In religious teaching, the supreme note which he struck was, the reality of the Ideal, the Unseen World enswathed in the Physical Universe. He emphasised the worth of the individual man and the immanence of God in all things; "so much so—said Dr. McLaughlin—that he seems to many to plunge into the abyss of Pantheism." "As a prophet and religious teacher," he remarked, "he has defects that forbid his being placed in the highest rank of the Godly fellowship." His beautiful theories were compared to those Socialistic ideas of Fourier, who proposed "to turn the seven seas into lemonade." He had no conception whatever of the supreme sacrifice of a Divine Redeemer. However, he was "ever the prophet of righteousness, and in all his mysticism he never runs athwart the Decalogue or the Mount of Beatitudes."

The lecture, which was listened to with profound attention, was one of the best of the excellent lectures which Dr. McLaughlin has delivered.

FIRST AID

DR. MULCAHY AT BANFIELD.

On Sept. 27 at the Oak Hall, Banfield, Dr. Mulcahy gave his second lecture on first aid, before an interested audience. There were some 30 eager listeners present and Dr. Mulcahy put his points before them with a complete and understandable simplicity, which made his lecture all the more valuable to the initiated.

These lectures will continue throughout a special scheme worked out by the lecturer, in which, from an elemental commencement, he will deal with the more serious problems of assistance. The ground covered will embrace anything and everything that can be of service in every day life and the lectures, as was the case last evening, will not deal with first aid to wounded alone (which point is only one of the many that Dr. Mulcahy deals with) but with every possibility which can be expected to be met with in ordinary life.

Last night's lecture was highly appreciated and sound advice was given on the treatment of emergency cases, often met with in the street.

S.A.M.S.

ARRIVAL OF NEW MISSIONARIES.

Mr. Deacon arrived on Sunday by the Highland Laddie and took part in the evening service at St. John's. He was to proceed to the Argentine Chaco but at the Bishop's urgent request, the South American Missionary Society have asked him to take temporary charge at Alberdi when the Rev. J. A. Rickards goes home this month.

The South American Missionary Society was established some 70 years ago by Capt. Allen Gardner, R.N., who laid down his life with his gallant companions in Tierra del Fuego. This commenced the work of which the late Charles Darwin, the author of "The Origin of Species" spoke in terms of such warm praise. The Society numbers among its workers such honoured names as W. Barbrook Grubb and the Rev. W. C. Morris and many others. Its methods and standing are too well known to need description here but the Archdeacon's Locum Tenens at St. John's is an S.A.M.S. Organising Secretary and will be most happy to give any information and receive any contributions which are much needed just now.

Mr. G. R. Wrangham also came out in the Highland Laddie and is to-day proceeding by river steamer to his work in the Paraguayan Chaco. This work was one of Mr. Grubb's most successful endeavours and was commenced under the first Bishop of the Falkland Isles.

PROVINCIAL POLICE

UNPUNISHED MURDER AT PUERTO DESEADO.

Another scandalous case of unpunished murder is reported from Puerto Deseado. On September 19, a notorious bad character murdered a quiet and peaceable resident named Hermilio Balbi in his own dwelling. The crime was premeditated and carried out with cynical effrontery, for the victim's residence actually adjoined the Comisaria of the place and the Subprefectura. Evidently the murderer understood his police, however. He walked in and despatched Balbi when he had his back turned to the door to fill a bottle. Robbery was one motive, and the entire neighbourhood is making an angry protest against the disgraceful police arrangements, or, rather, want of them. All the merchants threaten to close as a sign of their indignation. The assassin has, of course, not been arrested.

THE NAPHTHA TAX

STRONG OPPOSITION.

When the new tax on naphtha was foreshadowed, some little time ago, it was received with tokens of unequivocal disapproval. Opposition has now assumed a concrete form, and the Society of vendors of naphtha have forwarded an urgent request to the Minister of Finance that this tax, which was to come into operation on October 1, shall be removed before it is enforced.

In the covering letter to the Minister it is stated that "owing to the unexpected imposition of this tax, the price of the combustible will be increased $1.50 per case, as the importers state that, in order to keep within the conditions laid down in the decree, they will be obliged to introduce an article of a quality quite different and of a much higher price than that in actual use."

An almost immediate result can scarcely fail to be the closing of many garages. This will react on the workshops, and many chauffeurs will be thrown out of work, as also mechanics, "peones" and others who will at once be idle when the cars cease to run. Some chauffeurs have declared that the effect of the tax on vehicles plying for hire will be disastrous. They will be obliged to lay up their vehicles, as they cannot be made to pay at current rates with such an expense added.

Very special emphasis is laid on the fact that the new gabelle is not only a grievous imposition, but an unconstitutional one. It is not proper, they say, that a law sanctioned by Congress should be arbitrarily altered by a simple Government order without the whole matter going again for consideration before Congress.

The petition is signed by almost the whole body of naphtha importers, proprietors of garages, etc., who will be adversely affected by the proposed change.

MRS. JAMES BEGG'S SALE OF WORK

TO HELP THE AGED AND INFIRM.

For months Mrs. James Begg and Miss Flora Thompson have been quietly working in aid of the Aged and Infirm Home, and yesterday afternoon the result of their efforts took a highly practical turn. This was in the nature of a sale of work at "Wayside," Palermo.

It happened that this year, practically no assistance was asked from friends, but such was the generosity of those who know Mrs. Begg and her good work, that more numerous and beautiful things were given this year than perhaps has been the case previously.

One glance at the exquisite fancy work, of a thousand varieties, the flowers, plants, and delicious sweet stalls, would have convinced of the ultimate and complete success of the undertaking.

Quite a number of ladies helped Mrs. Begg and Miss Thompson in their good work, with the result that on Sept. 23 the sale of work was a greater success than ever.

AGED AND INFIRM FUND BAZAAR.

(To the Editor.)

Sir,—Please accept my most sincere thanks for the kind and generous way in which you made room in your valuable paper, to so frequently insert the notices about our sale last Thursday, Sept. 23rd, in aid of the Aged and Infirm Home.

It was owing, in a large measure to that, that the success of the sale was due.

Thanking you for your courtesy, believe me to remain—Yours etc.,

PHOEBE BEGG.

"Wayside,"
3614 French esq. Araoz.

HUNS IN THE AMERICAS

GERMANY'S "LOST" ARMIES.

(To the Editor).

Sir.—Will you kindly give (approximately) the number of Teuton prisoners the Allies have in North and South America, and in other neutral countries.

In Buenos Aires there must be a large number, as one sees a good many Kaiser faces of military age in the streets.

Yours faithfully,

M. M. V.

[We presume that by "prisoners," our correspondent means those Germans and Austrians prevented from leaving the Americas to take part in the war owing to the control of the seas being in the hands of the Allies. It is impossible to say even approximately what the number of Teutons of military age kept away from the theatre of war is, but we should estimate the number to be close on one million. In the United States there are said to be 8,000,000 Germans, of whom 2,000,000 were born in Germany. If the Allies did not control the situation at sea, probably 800,000 of these Germans would be available for military service with their country. In the rest of America there are probably another 200,000 Germans of military age—either reservists, or would-be volunteers.—Ed. B. A. H.]

A GENEROUS OFFER

TO THE ASISTENCIA PUBLICA.

Messrs. Piccardo and Co., Ltd., the well-known tobacco manufacturers, have again demonstrated their public spiritedness by coming to the rescue of the Asistencia Pública and offering to supply whatever medicines are required by that organisation. The Asistencia, which is responsible for the control of the Rawson, San Roque, Alvear, and Clinic Hospitals, has for some time been suffering under the depression which has fallen upon the Municipality.

Messrs. Piccardo and Co., Ltd., have sent the following letter to Dr. Edward Obejero, Director of the Asistencia Pública:—

Dear Sir,—I have the honour to address you in my capacity of President of the Sociedad Manufactura de Tabacos de Piccardo y Cia., Lda., to place before you the fact that at the last meeting of my directorate, the information contained in notices in the Press to the effect that the municipal hospitals were suffering from a scarcity of medicines, was brought under notice, and it was decided to place gratuitously at the disposal of your department whatever medicines may be necessary to enable you to carry on your work up to the end of the year.

Your kind acceptance of this offer would give us great pleasure.

Yours, etc.

BUILDING ACCIDENT

ONE MAN KILLED, TWO INJURED.

A fatality occurred yesterday at 2321 Virreyes, which is in process of construction. Pedro Hardengui, a workman, lost his life, and two others were dangerously injured. According to the statements of others present, the men were working on a plank or gangway suspended from the scaffolding. A piece of the cornice fell suddenly upon their plank destroying it, and hurling all three to the ground. Hardengui was killed on the spot, and Luis Simoni and Enrique Galizzi were badly cut and bruised. The police removed the injured to the San Fernando Sanitary Station, where first aid was given.

THE PRICE OF VICTORY

REVIEW OF THE RUSSIAN SACRIFICE

(Contributed.)

Has any careful consideration been given, by the ordinary individual, to the present state of affairs in Russia? Beyond the fact that a number of bombs are sent up from the offices of "La Union" and that a number of people rush to the notice boards and see a statement of another German success, the taking of Vilna, the capture of Kovno, Warsaw in German hands, and so on, has any thought been given to the inner significance of these notices? Has any deeper meaning than another German success penetrated into the mind of the many?

There is a view of the position which does not seem, so far, to have been considered by the man in the street, nor does this view seem to have been presented in the many articles to which this eastern campaign has given birth, and has kept alive with food from its huge store of detail.

Without any desire to minimise the importance of these German successes, which are greater than any ever obtained against Russia since the 1812 campaign, is it not possible that the brains of the leaders of the Allied armies have foreseen these matters, have calculated what these losses must be, and have provided for them? The view which may be taken of the Russian retreat, is that Russia is heroically paying the price of coming victory, a victory which each day is drawing closer. The Russian retreat may be regarded as one of the most, if not the most, brilliant tactical moves of the whole war, and as being undertaken on a pre-arranged and pre-conceived plan, in conjunction with and in the fulfilment of the strategical ideas of the general staffs of the four allies.

There are a host of reasons to support this statement, and there is much presumptive evidence to bring forward that this point of view is an accurate one.

Germany to-day is very much nearer defeat than she was before these eastern victories were achieved. Her initial war scheme was for a short and decisive struggle. This has failed completely. The strategy of the Germans is the same as the strategy of the great Napoleon, that is, along the lines of least resistance. This is shown from the outset of the war. Knowing that France had made an error in her early dispositions and had gathered the bulk of her forces on the right centre, where she expected the blow to fall, knowing also that England had practically no army at all, Germany came down on the west like an avalanche. This was, then, to her, the line of least resistance. She thought her task an easy one. She was to have been in Paris by September, Calais, too, the invasion of England would immediately follow, and so on, which shows that Germany thought her task an easy one, and along the lines of the least resistance. Her plans were grievously upset, chiefly through a handful of British troops under Sir John French and partly on account of the Crown Prince's military muddling.

The western line, after the Marne, stood fast, and day by day, week by week, has grown in strength and offensive power. Gradually the cries of "Paris in September" and Calais tomorrow were altered to Christmas Day, "My birthday," and so on until at the moment those prideful shouts are not even whispered. This then shows that the western theatre of war from the German standpoint is now no longer the line of least resistance. So menacing and ugly did her western enemy look that Germany determined at all hazards to free her left hand in Russia, in order to meet what she foresaw and still foresees, must happen in the west.

The Allied offensive, timed for the spring, was delayed. England preferred to play the fool by striking and by muddling her internal affairs. The Germans know now that they cannot break through to Paris and Calais, and although the great offensive is not yet, it is very nearly time for it.

This fact is the root of the whole matter concerning Warsaw and its fall, the capture of Kovno, Novo Georgievsk and probably Riga. And here comes the whole crux of the matter. In the west the Germans knew they could not break through. To the Allies a retirement was impossible, and yet they were not ready for the great offensive. There was a deadlock. The Russian advance was threatening. Every inch of land in the west was, and is at a premium. In the east this is not the case.

An interchange of strategical ideas and plans in a future campaign took place between the Allied army staffs. Kitchener, Millerand, Joffre, French, all met. At first all thought the meeting meant the great offensive, but this was not so. Another idea had been born, and it is accredited to the brain of General Joffre that he found a way of enticing the Germans to push forward their eastern campaign. Russia fell in with the plans of her allies, and when again German strategy was directed against the line of least resistance, the Russians commenced a retreat. It does not matter in the least, whether Russia could or could not have held the German advance, the point is that on a preconceived plan she did not do so. One point of extreme importance must not be missed. It is in the north that the Russians are retreating, and where their line is being bent back. In the south they are firm. This gradual retreat is costing the Germans an immense amount in men, and as the retreat continues, so is there less possibility of the German hordes suddenly returning with a sledge hammer blow to the western theatre of war.

This is the cause in which Russia is sacrificing herself. She is giving the west time to breathe, and drawing the enemy on at a great cost, no doubt, but this cost is the price of victory.

Germany's Russian campaign then, looks very much like a mistake. At the time it was undertaken there was no pressing need to smash Russia. The Dardanelles campaign had hardly commenced, and there was, then, no fear of the straits being forced. Russian strategy or rather the carrying out of the Allied plan of retreat is daily showing Germany's mistake the greater. Is the conquest of territory, are the spoils of war won by Germany worth the extension of her lines, worth the forcing of Russia nearer her own base of supplies, worth the fact that Germany cannot return again in a rush to the west? Russia can afford still to fall back, and then what will the position be when the Dardanelles are forced and supplies rushed through? The western offensive will soon commence. No more help can be sent to Austria, who already admit their campaign against Italy is "fruitless and aimless." Thus is the great plan of the Allies unfolding, and such is the view point that can be taken of Russia's retreat and her sacrifice. She is only paying the price of victory and was in fact the only country that could afford to pay the price.

No point can be gained by entering upon an argument concerning the strategic value of Warsaw, Kovno, and the strongholds that have fallen into German hands, but a brief survey of the position from the naval side only tends to confirm the theories expressed above.

It was no less a person than Count Tisza, one of the longest-headed statesmen in the Dual Monarchy, who stated "on land we have proved to be the stronger, and no one argues the point, just as we do not dispute that on sea we have lost the war. We were victorious on land and England victorious on the sea. . . . In a few weeks all the belligerents will see that it will be useless to continue the war."

There is, however, one point that this statesman omits to remark. The land campaign has not yet unrolled itself, and the real trial of strength has yet to come. The admitted supremacy of the British fleet, what does this

SAILED FROM B.A.

HUN WITH FORGED PASSPORTS ON SUNKEN DANISH STEAMER

London, Sept. 23.

A telegram from Copenhagen to the "Daily Telegraph" announces that the inquiry into the sinking of the Danish steamer Frode by a German submarine has been brought to a conclusion.

The evidence shows that a German sailor who shipped aboard the Frode at Buenos Aires with forged passports as a Norwegian citizen, was taken off by the submarine before the Frode was sunk.

TOUCHY LEGISLATORS

CHALLENGES TO THE FIELD

Tetchy, peevish, quarrelsome, overpaid Deputies set a bad example to the public, and behave as if they alone had honour, and every one else were deficient in it. Except for cinematograph purposes their duellos are intensely ridiculous. If the blades of the épées de combat be sterilised, nothing more than a slight abrasion or a cold, through standing about without coat or waistcoat is likely to result, but the Legislative Body is brought into contempt which it can ill afford. The latest pair of Furioso Fanfarronas to send or receive seconds are Deputies Sanchez Via-monte and Arce, in consequence of a "personal incident" in the Chamber. Later the seconds soldered the affair up. No one meant anything, and all was well except for the ridicule of the business.

In future, however, a Tribunal of Duels might be instituted to choose arbitrarily the weapons for the conflicts. Five foot Spanish rapiers and left hand daggers. With these weapons, which are really dangerous, there would be fewer hasty challenges.

HORSE THIEVES IN RAMOS MEJIA

Horse thieves are still exceedingly active in Ramos Mejia, to the general alarm of the inhabitants and stock owners in the neighbourhood.

The police of Extramuros have three or four times during the past few days been in conflict with the gang, and detained some few persons who are believed to be in league with them.

The populace have demanded the most urgent and strong operations against the gang, and the officials of the district have planned out the necessary method to free the district of a danger, which has been in their midst for several weeks.

signify, even if the western offensive never takes place, and if Russia brings her forces to a standstill and acts as the Allies in the west are doing?

Raw material is already scarce and bids fair to become scarcer still. Cotton is now barred. Austria fears another winter campaign, which will bring a more dreadful enemy than Italy to her gates.

Germany cannot fight indefinitely and can never win the war with the English fleet supreme. In case of defeat Russia can only be saved by England and France. No separate peace is possible. Germany now begins to see what the inevitable end will be. Austria has publicly admitted she can see. Germany has not and probably never will. The more the conquest of Russian territory, to a certain point, the greater becomes Germany's difficulties. One person is easier to keep than two, and when supplies are difficult and becoming more difficult, while England holds the seas, the object of Russia's sacrifice becomes the more apparent. The day is dawning when she will gain her reward, and when the Allies can close the bloody jaws of Germany for ever.

H. S. H.

NEW RAILWAY TARIFFS

GOVERNMENT OPPOSITION

MINISTER'S INTERVIEW WITH COMPANIES' DELEGATES

The Minister of Public Works, Dr. Moyano, presided on Sept. 24 at a meeting of railway officials concerning the proposed increase of 10 per cent. on the tariffs. A large number of persons attended the meeting, at which were included the following:—Messrs. O'Farrell and Usher, of the Pacific; Cabrett and Padilla, of the Central Cordoba; Lacroze and Rocca, of the Central Buenos Aires; Chanourdie, Montes de Oca and Terrillon, of the French Railways of Santa Fe; Masle, of the Compañía General de Buenos Aires; Wood, of the Argentine North Western; Brian and Lértora, of the Western; Frias, of the Central Argentine; Fresco, of the Entre Rios Railways; White and Guerrico, of the Great Southern.

The Minister pointed out that the Executive considered the increase inopportune, and said the legal position of the railways was beyond question, but that, on the other hand, the increase constituted a serious danger to national economics and was against the interests of the public.

The Deputy Sr. Padilla, acting on behalf of the railways and as President of the Central Cordoba Railway, replied that the financial position of the railways was deplorable and could only be regulated by this increase. The railways were within their legal rights, and were doing nothing else but fulfilling the conditions of the law. Sr. Padilla was loudly applauded at the close of his reply. Dr. Moyano again insisted upon the advisability of postponing the increase to a more propitious moment. His idea was negated. The Minister then pointed out the danger to the welfare of many industries, and in reply the railway representatives said they would take into consideration the tariff on wood and maize and on other materials of small importance.

The Director of Railways, Engineer Nogues, was invited to the meeting by the Minister to express an opinion. He stated that several articles—which he enumerated in detail—could withstand the increase, but for a general 10 per cent. rise in tariffs his opinion was against such a thing.

The meeting broke on the understanding that the railways would give a reply to-day.

A private meeting of railway representatives was later held in Paseo Colon and Alsina, further to discuss the situation.

REPORTED ABANDONMENT OF THE PROPOSALS.

It is reported that a notice from Government House late last evening stated that the various managing bodies of the railways had been in further communication with the Minister of Public Works and had signified their intention of foregoing the proposed increase in local passenger fares and on the freight and transport charges of maize and stone.

In respect to the freights on fruit and bran no decision had been reached. Continued and immediate attention to the matters in hand are promised the Minister.

IMMIGRATION

The flow of immigrants, which had notably diminished, shows a slight rising tendency. By the s.s. Reina Victoria Eugenia there have arrived 588 steerage passengers, and more are expected. From Spain a distinct increase is reported in the demand for passages for Argentina.

Groups of 30 or 40 individuals are likewise arriving from Brazil. The majority of those are Spaniards, Italians, or Austro-Germans.

Agricultural & Pastoral

CAMP NOTES

(By Our Agricultural Editor).

Spring has again come round, and the fresh green grass is a pleasure to see after the rather bare fields, caused by the severe weather experienced at the beginning of winter. Grass is coming away beautifully all over, and breeding cattle will begin to improve and lay on flesh. Calving appears to be general in the Queen Province, and from conversations with leading authorities, I am assured a high percentage of births is expected. Cows have in many instances become somewhat thin; but if their condition be not too debilitated, will probably calve more successfully than if carrying too much flesh, as very often happens in this country.

Journeying on the train one observes that the majority of this year's lambs have been señalated, and the lamb crop is also reported to be a very good one. Several flockmasters have explained to me that their hoggets have come through the winter very badly, and that a large percentage have died from the innumerable diseases, that cause so much damage and loss to young sheep. Scab also appears to be too prevalent as evinced by the numbers of animals whose broken and disturbed wool shows unmistakably the presence of these parasites.

The horse export trade appears to be rather depressed for the moment, and unfavourable reports have lately been received from Britain. Notwithstanding the elimination of exporters, some very useful mares were sold the other day by the Messrs. Bullrich at exceptionally high prices, some well over the four figures.

Recent home papers refer to the opening of several shops in Glasgow, for the sale of horse flesh as an article of food. This innovation has been brought about through the large influx of Belgian refugees, and to provide a cheaper class of meat for the poorer population. The present prohibitive price of beef classifies that article as only obtainable by those with a long purse. The suspension of shipments of aged and worn-out horses formerly so general from Leith to Continental ports, principally Antwerp, has in consequence of the war been suspended, and as the Belgians were the principal consumers of horse flesh, it has been considered as at least worth a trial to utilise such horses unsuitable for further service, and at the same time sell that class of meat to those unfortunate refugees from their own native land. Continental people are likely to be the only customers for this class of meat. It is not likely to meet much much acceptance at the hands of Scotch people, who have always abhorred the idea of eating horse flesh, under any circumstances.

Imported meat is now required in such quantities to supply the needs of our army, and the French Army, that the surplus available for civil consumption has necessarily suffered a large reduction as compared with previous years. Mr. Runciman reports:—"Steps have been taken to meet this situation. I have requisitioned practically all the refrigerated tonnage in the Australian, New Zealand, and South American trades in order that the carrying capacity of these steamers may be used to the utmost and as much meat as possible brought to this country. Large purchases have been made of South American meat, and the whole of the output of frozen meat from New Zealand, Queensland, Victoria, New South Wales, and South Australia available for export has been purchased. . . . Part of the meat so purchased in New Zealand and Australia will be available for the civil population, and will be marketed under the advice of the High Commissioner for New Zealand, the Agent-General for Queensland, and Sir Montague Nelson. These three gentlemen are making it one of their chief endeavours that sales will not be made to speculators."

The Smithfield Club has resolved on a step which may excite some criticism. Details furnished in the carcass competition as to weight of head, feet, and intestines are no longer to be tabulated, and the cattle, sheep, and pigs are not hereafter to be judged on hoof. The reasons which have led the council to resolve along these lines have not been stated. Generally they must be that the educational value of giving details is not at all equal to the labour involved in collecting them. On that no opinion is expressed here. But it is respectfully submitted that no exercise is more useful and fruitful than that of each visitor to the show judging the stock on hoof for himself, and marking his catalogue in accordance with his judgment. It is not enough for him to mark the animals first, second, third, etc. What is suggested is that he mark with critical notes as to probable carcass results. To do this and then compare the facts in carcass with these estimates is educational to a degree. From this point of view the carcass competition is by far the most valuable section of the Smithfield Show.

Meetings of the committees and council of the Shorthorn Society were held in London on July 27, Mr. Parkin-Moore in the chair. Twelve new members were elected, including Mr. David C. Bruce, High Street, Fochabers. It was reported by the Editing Committee that since the last meeting of the committee pedigree exportation certificates had been granted by the secretary as follows:—For the Argentine, 150; Brazil, 2; Canada, 3; South Africa, 5; Uruguay, 3—total 163.

The Chairman of the East London (Cape Province) Chamber of Commerce, alluding to the trouble which had been experienced with regard to the export of South African produce owing to the lack of freight space, stated that owing to the fact that two ships had loaded 22,000 bales of wool for America, the position was now much improved. A photograph of the "Afghan Prince," which sailed with 17,000 bales on board, was hung on the walls of the Chamber, and would prove a good advertisement for the port. Wool going in such large quantities would have a good effect in drawing the attention of buyers, and the variety would give American buyers a good idea of the product of South Africa, and enable the American manufacturer to know exactly what he could obtain.

According to the annual report of the Chief of the Sheep Division of the Union Department of Agriculture, there were 35,818,000 sheep (woolled and non-woolled) in South Africa at the end of 1913, as against 35,881,921 the previous year. The losses during the year totalled 1,157,832, of which 700,558 were due to drought. There were 32,226 permanent and portable dipping tanks in the Union, of which 2909 were erected during the year 1913. The total expenditure of the Sheep Division for the year amounted to £129,044, of which £118,000 was expended on the eradication of scab.

The Board of Agriculture and Fisheries have received the following information from the International Agricultural Institute:—Forecasts of the spring cereal crops in Russia in Europe (54 Governments) give the following estimates:—Wheat, 248,286,000 cwt., an increase of 29.3 per cent. above last year's production; rye, 3,627,000 cwt., an increase of 28.1 per cent. above last year's production; barley, 210,824,000 cwt., an increase of 30.9 per cent. above last year's pro-

Do not wait for the last moment to treat your Horses against the STOMACH BOT
DO IT NOW

USE OUR SPECIAL CAPSULES. Write for Catalogue

CALASTREME & RATTI

Veterinary Establishment,
MAIPU 247, BUENOS AIRES.

duction; oats, 27,4011,000 cwt., an increase of 32.7 per cent. above last year's production; maize, 39,275,000 cwt., a decrease of 3.2 per cent. below last year's production.

Mr. Juan Lalor, the well-known cattle salesman, has compiled the following list of prices obtained by animals sold by him during the week at the Linieres Market:—Bueyes mestizos especiales de $200 á $250; bueyes especiales $175 á $190; bueyes, carne gorda, $100 á $130; novillos mestizos especiales $250 á $280; novillos mestizos para frigorifico, $200 á $230; novillos mestizos gordos $170 á $190; novillos, buena carne $135 á $150; vacas, mestizas excepcionales $140 á $165; vacas especiales $125 á $135; vacas, carne gorda $105 á $115; novillos especiales $100 á $120; novillos, carne gorda $90 á $100; vaquillinas, mestizas especiales $110 á $115; vaquillinas carne gorda $80 á $100; terneros mamones especiales $35 á $45.

DEPARTURE OF MR. PETER MILLER.

This well-known figure in live stock circles, left by the s.s. El Paraguay for Britain, and will afterwards proceed to Chicago and St. Louis, with the intention of acquiring horses for exportation to Britain. During the time Mr. Miller was engaged in the importation of pedigree live stock, he made a wide circle of friends, due to his honesty and straightforwardness in all business operations. A gentleman who has devoted practically all his life to the horse trade, his vast experience was lately directed to the purchasing and shipment of horses from this Republic to Britain, and always most favourable comments were to be heard regarding the quality of his selections. Mr. Miller's many friends wish him a safe voyage home, and every success in his business enterprises in the States, where he has already spent many years in the horse trade.

REMARKABLE WOOL PRICE

A remarkable price was secured on Sept. 27 for wool by Messrs. Tomás Devoto and Co. They sold a lot of crossbred coarse wool, clean without seeds, at $17 per ten kilos. This is declared to be the highest price hitherto obtained for wools of this class.

AUSTRIAN INCENDARIES

CAUSE FIRE ON ITALIAN LINER.

Rome, Sept. 27.
The Italian steamer Sant'Anna, on board of which a fire recently broke out when in mid-ocean, has arrived at Naples.

The captain reported that he had evidence that five Austrian passengers who had obtained passages on board under false names were the persons who caused the fire. Three of them were placed under arrest, but the other two threw themselves overboard.

A PLEA FOR THE COLONIST

(To the Editor).

Sir.—May I trouble you to put in the following: Messrs. Liverpoolian, Roberto Rois and F. M. B. criticised a letter of mine to your valuable paper, to which I replied on September 15 asking the first named to be good enough to show how the exporters were losing 16 cents plus expenses per quintal of maize. In the same letter I remarked that in Italy the price was 35 francs equal to $15.90 here, showing that the exporters make even more than the amount given in my first letter. Also I answered all the questions of F.M.B. and should like to hear his remarks on the same, as per promise. It seems that the first named and last of these gentlemen seem to be very ready to criticise, but reluctant to give figures, perhaps on account of there being a good deal of truth in my letters as regards "Parasites" of the colonist. Perhaps these gentlemen did not see my answer to them, wherefore the present letter. Thanking in anticipation for the publishing of the present.

Yours, etc.,

Casalogno, F.C.C.A.

C.H.N.G.

SALE OF LINCOLN RAMS.

On Sept. 24 the Messrs. Yriondo and Co. sold a very nice lot of imported Lincoln rams, the property of Messrs. Sidev and Poels. A very fair selling trade was experienced, and a complete clearance was effected at the following prices:—

1 Lincoln ram, price $600, sold to Sr. Roberto Law.

1 Lincoln ram, price $750, sold to Sr. Roberto Law.

1 Lincoln ram, price $500, sold to Sr. Juan Jose Edwards.

1 Lincoln ram, price $550, sold to Sr. Manuel de la Cuadra.

1 Lincoln ram, price $500, sold to Sr. Manuel de la Cuadra.

1 Lincoln ram, price $600, sold to Sr. Manuel de la Cuadra.

1 Lincoln ram, price $470, sold to Sr. Jose Legris.

1 Lincoln ram, price $400, sold to Sr. Berisso Bros.

1 Lincoln ram, price $450, sold to Sr. Manuel de la Cuadra.

1 Lincoln ram, price $370, sold to Sr. Luis Yriondo.

1 Lincoln ram, price $500, sold to Sr. Julio Milot.

1 Lincoln ram, price $500, sold to Sr. Julio Milot.

1 Lincoln ram, price $420, sold to Sr. Luis Yriondo.

1 Lincoln ram, price $400, sold to Sr. Gonzalez Guerrico.

1 Lincoln ram, price $400, sold to Sr. Julio Millot.

1 Lincoln ram, price $450, sold to Sr. Jose Legris.

Several other rams were sold in pens, at satisfactory prices.

TUBERCULOSIS PEDIGREE STOCK

A QUESTION FOR IMPORTERS.

As all imported pedigree bulls are received in the Quarantine Station, so much more importance does that institution receive at the hands of the many interested parties, to whom it is always of vital interest, whether an animal is declared by the authorities to be affected with tuberculosis, or is allowed to enter the country as a sound animal.

This year's examinations have again resulted in the detention of many notable animals and some of them have been slaughtered as being affected with tuberculosis. The most important point is, "How do importers bring out bulls that must be known to be affected with the disease when it is certain that they will be subjected to a strict veterinary examination previous to their entry into this Republic?" I have endeavoured to solve this point, but there is so much mystery, into which it is dangerous to probe that I have had to content myself with the plain recital of a few experiences.

One importer who has had several animals condemned says they were twice tested by a veterinary expert at home and certified by him as being free from tuberculosis, and on such professional assurance the bulls were shipped out here without the 25 per cent. insurance usually charged for animals insured to pass the test. Several of these animals have already been slaughtered, and a local veterinary officer present at the slaughter in the interests of the importer certified as to there being undoubted evidence of the existence of tuberculosis.

To get at the bottom of this mystery, it is necessary to consider the position of the man who sold the bull to the importer, or that of the owner of the animal in the quarantine depot. The great scientific discoveries which led to the detection of tuberculosis by certain methods also enlightened many in the way to nullify these results, or render the animal immune to the influence of the injection of tuberculin, as a proving agent for the principal test. Certain importers are not above insinuating that the seller in Britain has got so unscrupulous as to consider as part of his profession his ability to render his animals immune from the reaction as a result of the injection of tuberculin, for a certain time at least. This is supposed to be the reason why an inspecting veterinary officer in Britain is "fooled" into giving a certificate that, according to recognised tests, to determine the presence of tuberculosis, the animal did not react and consequently was "free" from tuberculosis. The influence of the tampering with the bull and "pumping" him full of serum for nullifying the effects of the tuberculin, would only be temporary, but through the gradual weakening of this serum, and the increasing influence of the true tuberculosis, the animal when tested at a later date, would then be in the condition that he will be a reactor and consequently slaughtered in the quarantine station in the presence of the owner or his representative, who can also be accompanied by a veterinary officer to make any investigation on account of the owner.

In every case this season the bulls slaughtered have shown unmistakable signs of being affected with tuberculosis. The examination here appears to be carried out with perfect equality and fairness for the importers.

Recently a most valuable imported bull was slaughtered at the quarantine depot, in the presence of a company of interested experts and Government officials, and on examination was found to be "full" of "tuberculosis," which considering the large number of similar cases this season, has caused no small concern to the inspecting Government veterinary officers.

Luis Costantini Agriculturist & Seedsman

TREES, AGRICULTURAL, AND HORTICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS.

WE OFFER OUR LARGE STOCK OF FRUIT, FOREST AND ORNAMENTAL TREES AT VERY MODERATE PRICES.

ASK FOR OUR CATALOGUES.

Seeds from the well-known firms of:—

VALMORIN, ANDRIEUX AND CO., OF PARIS.

CHARLES SHARPE AND CO., OF BLEAFORD.

Also FROM OUR SPECIAL PLANTERS IN ITALY.

Implements for Agriculture and Horticulture from the celebrated firms of:—

C. F. SKELTON AND CO., OF SHEFFIELD; and

DITTMAR FRERES, BUENOS AIRES.

HEAD OFFICE AND WAREHOUSE AT RIVADAVIA 6717 to 25.

U. T. 919 FLORES.

OFFICES AND GARDENS AT RIVADAVIA 5956.

U.T. 196 FLORES.

LARGE GARDENS IN LUJAN, F.C.O.

Cabaña 'Lujan' y 'Las Hermanas'

= DE =

R. HERRERA VEGAS É HIJOS

LUJAN, F.C.S.

J. M. GUTIERREZ, F.C.S.

Carneros Lincoln y Oxford Down.

Toros Hereford y Durham. :: ::

FLORIDA 832 - BUENOS AIRES

RISE IN PRICE OF MAIZE

62,844 BAGS ARRIVE ON THE OPEN MARKET.

The rise in the price of maize, recorded in the market yesterday, is the subject of lively satisfaction.

The rise recorded from Monday to early yesterday afternoon is from 2 to 3 shillings.

The matter is a rather curious one, in that the rise is recorded and coincides with an extraordinary entry on to the market of maize from different agricultural centres.

Yesterday no less than 62,844 bags (an unprecedented figure) arrived. It is feared that this flooding will adversely affect the market. At the same time large orders have been received for export, and the matter rests upon the freight charges. If exorbitant, it will be impossible to get rid of this amount, without a loss, and the price of maize could then fall lower than ever.

CASE OF BUBONIC PLAGUE

An alarming report from the North guard of the Port Prefectura states that one of the conductors of the Prefectura's motors of the enquiry section was seized with sudden illness yesterday in the office of the department.

The man, Domingo Ortuzar by name, was removed to one of the hospitals, where investigation convinced the doctors that the case is one of bubonic plague.

To avoid spreading the scourge and giving a good example, the authorities have severely disinfected the garage near the cattle depots and the garage and offices of the North detachment of Prefectura guards.

THE WHEAT HARVEST

A BRIGHT OUTLOOK.

The war has been the cause of a greatly increased area of agricultural land being this year placed under wheat. The Minister of Agriculture has received, through the Statistical Department, full details concerning this year's sowings, and in the course of a few days will publish the same.

It is believed that high prices for wheat will be the rule throughout the continuance of the war, and agriculturists are eagerly looking forward for the fruits of their labours.

On the other hand but little interest is evidenced concerning the maize crop, which is smaller than last year, and which promises, at the moment, but a minimum of return for the labour occasioned. So low is the price just now, that the cost of gathering the harvest is out of all proportion to the present commercial value of the commodity.

SALE OF IMPORTED CATTLE

Mr. Joseph Shepherd presented for sale by auction at Bullrich's mart, yesterday, a fine consignment of 26 Shorthorn and 1 Polled Angus imported bulls. Bidding was brisk, and prices ranged from $8,500, paid for "Brandsby Aristocrat 4th," to $1,500 given for "Sanquhar Purser." The 26 Shorthorns fetched $72,000, an average of $2,769, while the Polled Angus was sold for $3,000. "Brandsby Aristocrat 4th" is a nice roan, bred by Mr. J. M. Strickland. "Enlistment," bred by Mr. J. W. Gordon-Oswald, took second best price, $4,200, and "Elator," bred by Mr. W. Anderson, fetched $3,700. The Polled Angus bull, "Eric of Bywell," was bred by Viscount Allendale.

INTERNATIONAL HARVESTER PRODUCTS

THE "CHAMPION" MOWERS AND RAKES

The International Harvester Corporation whose headquarters in Argentina are at 447 Calle Perú, Buenos Aires, is the world famous organisation, through whose activities agriculture in all parts of the world has undergone remarkable changes in the past two decades. The I.H.C. is noted for the remarkable manner in which its implements embodying the latest inventions, have lessened the cost of farming and have increased the productiveness of the land.

In this issue the International Harvester Corporation calls the attention of readers to two interesting lines which will meet with a great demand from wise camp men. They are the "Champion" mowers and rakes. In view of the approaching harvest, when every farmer has to consider the class of machine he will employ to get in the best yields possible, a description of the special features of these two implements may not be out of place.

The outstanding features of the "Champion" products are their solidity of construction and durability under the most exacting conditions. One of the first things which attracts attention to the mower is the strong main frame, and the fact that roller bearings are built in everywhere necessary. The machine has an adjustable push bar by means of which the cutter bar can be kept always in proper alignment, and the tilted guards ensure a clean low cut. The steel knife head is drop forged and case hardened in the eye. It is held on to the knife back with twelve rivets. There is an adjusting device on the draw bar for registering the throw of the knife so as to bring the centre of sections exactly over the centre of the ledger plates when the wrist pin passes the dead centre. This assures an easy stroke of the knife and a clean cut. The long wooden Pitman is very strong and durable. It is provided with oscillating connections and has a perfect lubricating bushing as the wrist pin works in a bath of oil, which ensures a longer life for the parts and prevents the wearing out and the heating of the bushing. The cross shaft and level gear is provided with two chilled steel thrust, or friction blocks, and a set screw with a lock nut to keep the bevel gear and pinion in proper mesh, it not being necessary to take apart half the mower to adjust these parts. At the same time the undue wearing of the gear and pinion is prevented.

The chief points of superiority about the "Champion" rakes are their all round strength, ease of working, and durability. The machine is fitted with removable stub axles which when worn to any extent can be turned end for end, thus doubling the wearing life of the axles without any extra outlay. A similar advantage is seen in the construction of the wheels. The latter are very strongly built with 18 double spokes of half-inch diameter and wide hubs. When the discharge gears wear, the wheels can be changed from one side to the other, and the gears are then as good as new again. All the "Champion" rakes are fitted with an adjusting lever for regulating the position of height of the points of the teeth from the ground to ensure clean work. The teeth are steel lance pointed, with a double spiral which adds to their flexibility and lasting qualities. The discharge is completely automatic and is controlled by a combined movement of hand and foot.

The "Champion" machines are rapidly becoming widely popular throughout Argentina.

BAHIA BLANCA NEWS

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT].

Sept. 26, 1915.

Municipal Notes.

Some time ago a committee was formed for the purpose of obtaining pipes to carry off the water which was to be pumped out of the cellars in different houses here. Several people agreed to subscribe towards the cost of the work, but now it appears that a large number have "backed out" saying that now that the rainfall is so much less than it was, and the level of the water underground has gone down considerably, there is no need for the work. The representative chosen for the operation has decided to empty the buildings under his charge on his own account by pumping the water in the cellars into pipes which will run down Calle Brown as far as the Southern Railway level crossing. The other property owners whose cellars are full of water—which up to now has often been pumped into the streets—have been notified by the Municipality that it must be taken away in the sanitary carts.

Welcome Rainfall.

The one topic of conversation for some time past has been when is it going to rain, and although there have been one or two small showers during the last few months, these have scarcely laid the dust. However the weather has at last broken, and about 3 p.m. to-day the rain commenced to fall in torrents. Within two hours there must have been over an inch.

Bahia Blanca Rural Society.

On Friday last the entries for this show were closed, as it is to be held on Oct. 24, 25, 26 and 27, at the Rural Society's yards in Villa Borden. The entries have been quite as numerous as in other years, and it is thought that the fourth show held here will be quite as successful as have been its predecessors.

Rumoured Discovery of Silver.

At the station of the Viticola, the first from here on the Southern line to La Madrid, it is stated that there has been a find of some kind of metal which was brought up by the boring plant there. The German who is in charge of the operations has gone up to Buenos Aires with a sample of this "silver" in order to have it assayed.

Port Militar.

At Port Militar active preparations are now being made for the forthcoming manoeuvres that are to take place next month. The Rivadavia is taking on board some four thousand tons of bunkers from the s.s. Penlee, which arrived a few days ago with a cargo of American coal.

The work of building the dry dock is practically at a standstill, as there still remains a good lot of work to be done before this is finished. The necessary material for the work is still in Germany, as the Hamburg American line of steamers which have brought the greater part of this over, have now stopped running, and one of them the Sevilla, has been lying in Port Militar for the last thirteen months awaiting orders.

The crews of the Moreno and other battle ships lying out in the stream are being brought on shore daily with their field pieces, in order to be drilled in landing and shore work.

Munitions for the Turks

HELD UP ON THE HUNGARIAN FRONTIER.

Athens, Sept. 28.

Two thousand wagons with ammunition for the Turks are massed near the Hungarian frontier while the German diplomats negotiate for their passage through Bulgaria and Rumania.

FALKLAND ISLANDS NEWS

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT].

Port Stanley,

Sept. 15, 1915.

The Censorship.

"When the War is over," the Censor's Index Expurgatorious will admit of my not skipping the most important item, viz., "Shipping and Port News," when furnishing Falkland Island News. I have been strictly cautioned and warned of pains and penalties if found so doing. Far be it from me to give the Empire's show away, and play into the hands of the enemy, by revelations of the few ship's movements here, which might result in terrible disaster, and defeat of our Empire. Anyhow, I bury the head of "Shipping and Port News," as the ostrich buries his head in the sand, oblivious of such hunters as globe trotters, visitors, and passengers, who can plainly see all there is to be seen, and speak of it; but I must be "mum," especially seeing that Falkland Island magazines, and my own effusions for the BUENOS AIRES HERALD were last mail kept back from going abroad.

"The White Elephant."

Thus says our oracle the "Falkland Island Magazine" for September:

"A suggestion worthy of deepest consideration, 'Why not turn the Town Hall into dwelling flats; thus allowing many of the people in Stanley to possess a habitation of their very own.' This is hardly flattering to the ambition of the originators of the Town Hall, and this suggestion will fall as flat as did the Phillistine idol in the Temple of Dagon, which 'fell flat on his face,' and though set up again, fell again and smashed, until 'only the stump of Dagon was left to him.'

The stump, or foundation of our new Town Hall is reported to be inadequate to support the weight superimposed on it, should the large assembly-room in it be filled with people, or a big dance take place in it. Much as it has cost, hitherto, the public's hopes respecting it have proved abortive. At present it certainly is "A White Elephant;" but should it be made into Government Offices it might somewhat "redeem the misspent moments past." The Government Gazette for Sept. 1915, tells us that expenditure on the Town Hall to the 21st of December, 1914, amounted to £10,208; on current year estimates, provision is made for £400; still wanted to complete the work, £1,425. Total £12,425. Separate plant for electric lighting will cost another £783.

Mainly About People.

Recent mail steamers brought among others, Mr. and Mrs. Hoare, to be headmaster and mistress; also Mrs. Hubbard to be assistant mistress at Government schools. Mr. C. H. Huston for the office of the Falkland Island Co.; from Buenos Aires: Messrs. Roger and Ralph Smith, Mrs. Nicholson (wife of mate of s.s. Falklands), who comes from Norway. By the steamer there left for Punta Arenas and the Patagonian coast, Mr. Allen and son from Darwin Harbour; Messrs. T. Hardy, W. Atkins, junr., and Darwin Watson.

For England there left to offer themselves to K. of K., Messrs. George and John Dean, B. Gitting, Sergt. L. Barnes; also by incoming steamer, Messrs. R. Douglas, A. Mc Travers, and E. Boothroyd. And by local steamer "Falkland" on Aug. 26: Mr. and Mrs. Smith and child from Great Island; Mrs. Moire and two children from Darwin Harbour; Mr. F. Langdon, Mr. Peter Craig, Mr. W. Hutchinson, Miss H. Simpson.

By the s.s. Falkland left on Sept. 9: Mrs. Arthur Rutter for Port Stephens; Mr. David Kiddle. For Chartres: Mr. W. Luxton, Mr. F. Hulford, and Mr. Mark Luxton.

Obituary.

At Port Stephens on Aug. 10, died Charles Edward Lee (aged 27), after 10 days' illness, of supposed heart failure. Unfortunately there is no doctor on the West Falkland Island. The doctor from the whaling station at New Island was sent for, but arrived after Mr. Lee had died. Mr. Lee was buried in the settlement at Port Stephens. A military funeral took place in Stanley on Sept. 7. The deceased, Mr. John Yates, F.I.V., died (aged 28), at Seal Inlet, East Falklands, no doctor having attended him. The remains were brought to Stanley by the s.s. Falklands, and taken to the house of Mr. John Kelway. The verdict at the inquest held was "died from beri beri." At the funeral, besides many relatives and friends, the cortege was supplemented by the Stanley Benefit Club, and the F. I. Volunteers. The burial service was conducted by the Rev. Mario Luis Migone at St. Mary's, R.C., and concluded at the Stanley cemetery with the usual formula of bugle and three volleys by the firing party.

Marriages.

In Stanley, Aug. 25, at the Cathedral, Miss Sarah Grace Lee, of the West Falklands, to Mr. George Edward Parrin. The Rev. M. D. Hobley officiated; Mr. Guitanne gave the bride away, Mr. Parrin's brother was groomsmen. The bride was dressed in white silk, the bridesmaid, Miss Sarah Parrin, was dressed in blue silk. The reception was held at the parent's house, where there were many callers and wedding-presents.

In Stanley, by the Rev. Mario Luis Migone, at St. Mary's Church, R.C., on August 26, were married Miss Mabel Norah Biggs and Mr. William John MacAtasney. The bride was given away by her uncle, Mr. Vincent A. Biggs; Mr. Joseph MacAtasney was groomsmen. The bride was in white array; the bridesmaids, Miss Ellen and Miss Margaret MacAtasney (sisters) were costumed in sailor dresses of blue trimmed with white. The chapel was crowded, the service largely choral. The bride being cashier, and the bridegroom head storekeeper at C. William's store, both experienced "a heavy deal," and "a great fall in rice," seeing that thrown rice (sometimes from persons lying in ambush), bombarded the wedding procession from the chapel to "the first and last hotel," where the wedding feast, and reception was held.

Vacant Pastorates.

"Cathedral Notes" in the September "Falkland Island Magazine" says: "In the last letter received from Bishop Every, he states that the new priest, to whom the vacant Deanery was offered, has not yet accepted, but we are hoping to have definite news next March."

Has the Falkland sacerdotal cup of bliss become insipid? seeing that both as regards a Bishop, and a Dean, Clericals seem to be "not taking any."

Moreover, the Nonconformist Church, (which on the last occasion was supplied with a pastor from the Wesleyan College at Sheffield), has still a vacant pupil; and now, the former suppliers are suggesting that Stanley Nonconformist Church should be handed over to the Scotch Presbyterian Church at Buenos Aires. Is it because we are "a queer cantankerous lot," as was once said, that pulpits here go abegging for occupants? Meanwhile, "the daily round and common task" doth "furnish all he ought to ask" as to "room to deny himself," etc., by the one Protestant clergyman for the whole of the Falkland archipelago.

Eggs or young ones?

The "egging season" is at hand, wild birds are nesting, some laying, but owing to restrictions and penguin egg tax there are scarcely enough demands to pay for official red tape, etc., etc. Last year the re-

THE BUDGET

DISCUSSION POSTPONED TILL DECEMBER.

Opinions in the lobbies of Congress are definite that the Budget proposals recently under consideration by the committee will not go before the Legislature until December, when Congress will be convoked to extraordinary sessions.

This course is considered certain, as there is such an accumulation of business that the few days remaining of the parliamentary session will be fully occupied by other considerations.

Personal friends of the President say that the fact that he has said nothing to this effect is not material as nothing else can be done. It is obviously impossible to expect that the Budget for 1916 can be discussed in forty-eight hours.

La Blanca Company have sent by Highland Pride to London 3835 quarters of chilled beef.

venue derived but £3 from penguin eggs. I shall be surprised if this year it amounts to that sum. The first fish the multitudes of penguins allow us to catch will be presented to the Stanley Museum. For many months no fish have been obtained on our extensive coast. In days gone by, this colony exported fish.

Wool Prices.

The price of wool during the season has been excellent, and still continues to be very high, some making a record price for the colony of 1s. 5d. per pound. Very little tallow has been shipped, the price averaging about 34s. per cwt.

The total number of sheep disposed of during the season was 60,356, being 23,709 less than last year, and over 17,000 less than any year since 1910. The chief reductions are to be found in the number canned and exported. The lambing season was a disappointment to most farmers. The percentage was 59.70 per cent. There were 18,000 less lambs than in a former season. Only one factory was working during the season.

Government Notices.

The Governor directs the publication for general information of the following telegrams sent and received on the completion of the laying of the cable to this colony, on Aug. 29, 1915.

August 29.—On behalf of the people of this remote colony of Falkland Islands, linked to-day for the first time by cable to the mother country, I beg, by this first cable message transmitted, respectfully to tender His Majesty the King assurance of their loyalty and devotion to His Majesty's subjects at home and throughout his vast Empire, pray that the war which has been forced upon His Majesty may, by His Majesty's naval and military forces, be brought to an early and successful termination.—Young.

From Secretary of State to Governor Falkland Islands:

Received Sept. 2, 1915.

Your telegram August 29, having been laid before His Majesty, the King commands me to express his high appreciation of loyal sentiments and prayers of the people of the Falkland Islands.—Bonar Law.

Off to the War.

The mail steamer "Orissa" arrived at 6.30 a.m. on Sept. 15. By her depart a few from here for K. of K. As in the first war, hymns of the old Methodists, we incline to sing: "Ye sons of hell, come turn and list, And fight like valiant Metabolists" against German Kultur.

The first "Kelper" to be wounded in this war, is Shirley Aspinall (born in Stanley), and a son of Canon Aspinall.

Mainly About People

Mr. D. Bresler, of "Quechuquina," San Martin de los Andes, is on a visit to Buenos Aires.

The Central and South American Telegraph Company, San Martin 297, has a message from New York to Rebat, Buenos Aires.

The engagement is announced of Mr. Bernard W. Probert, of the London and Brazilian Bank Ltd., to Miss Annie Cameron Murehison, of Belgrano.

The Russian Chargé d'Affaires, M. Engen Stein, leaves shortly for Rio to look after the Legation business during the absence of the Minister, Dr. Maximov.

Mr. Charles Lockie was a passenger by the s.s. El Paraguayo sailing for Europe, where on arrival he will offer his services to the British Government.

The Western Telegraph Company have messages from New York to Garcia; from New York to Bianchi y Cia.; and from Catania to Vasta Gaetano.

The engagement of Mr. R. F. Stuart Leeson, of Edinburgh and Monte Grande, to Miss Euphie Dodds, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Dodds, of Las Talas, Monte Grande, is announced.

Dr. Mulcahy delivered an interesting lecture on First Aid on Sept. 24 in the Ladies' Room of the Alexandra Tea Rooms, about forty young ladies, pupils of Mrs. C. H. Chantrill, being present.

The American Consulate General, Lavalle 341, has been asked by relatives for information concerning the whereabouts of Eleah Kabbas, Abdelah Kabbas, Arturo Dyuels, and John F. Whalen.

At Tres Arroyos, on September 20, took place the marriage of Mr. Miguel Kutyn, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Kutyn, to Miss Esther Arrobas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lázaro Arrobas, of the same town.

Mr. Walter E. Morgan, of the Western Telegraph Co., who was recently successfully operated on at the British Hospital by Dr. Robert Halahan, is making good progress towards recovery.

Mr. W. G. Smith, of the Accountancy Department of the Pacific Railway, who is volunteering for service on arrival in England, will be leaving with his family on the R.M.S.P. Amazon, sailing on October 8.

A report received from Mr. Harry Blunt of Sanquileo Rocha, F.C.S., who was in town during the week concerning his newly imported pedigree animals from England is a very satisfactory one.

Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Tyler, Mr. and Mrs. McDougall and family, Mrs. C. A. Cazalet, Mr. J. B. Pettigrew have arrived at the Phoenix Hotel. Departures are Mrs. Margrett and family for the camp, Mr. Frank Austin for Brazil.

Mr. and Mrs. McLean, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Chase, the Misses Buchanan, Mrs. T. S. Bugler, Miss Helen Bugler, Mr. T. Bugler, Mr. J. Bugler, Mrs. W. B. C. Brown, Miss Irene Brown, Major Z. Kneeder, Mr. W. T. Full, and Mr. Richard Weil have arrived at the Phoenix Hotel.

A highly successful bridge party was given by Mrs. Thomas Bell on Friday evening at her residence, 1376 Libertad, in aid of the British Red Cross Society's funds. There were about one hundred guests, and the sum of $900 was raised for the Society.

A cable received from London announces that 2nd. Lieut. Raymond B. Williams, attached to the Tunnelling Co. Royal Engineers in France, has been awarded the Military Cross. Mr. Raymond Williams is the son of J. R. Williams, the well known Ship broker of this city.

Yesterday morning Messrs. H. C. Laycock, James Carte, Herbert R. Edridge and Erwn Pledger, four well-known American bankers arrived in the city from New York. They will spend some short period in a study of Argentine industries and commerce. Mr. Dick Thompson, a mining engineer, is also amongst the party.

A miniature of the King of the Belgians, painted and presented by Miss K. Gregg, is to be raffled for the benefit of the Women's British Patriotic Association funds. Tickets, $2 each, may be obtained from Mrs. Robert Paton, Quinta Trelawne, San Martin, F.C.C.A., or at Mitchell's Book Store, Cangallo 580.

Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Shuman and family arrived on the Vasari yesterday morning, returning from a furlough in the United States. A reception has been arranged by the Young Men's and the Young Women's Christian Associations for next Monday, Oct. 4, from four to seven p.m. in the Y.M.C.A. at Paseo Colon 161.

In a letter to THE HERALD, the Great Raymond, reports a highly successful season in the provinces. "Here at Paysandú, Uruguay," he writes, "we are doing the biggest business of the season. After our engagement here we are due to play a season at the Teatro Solis, Montevideo. I shall probably be in Buenos Aires during the week."

In connection with the exhibition of agricultural and farm produce at Cordoba in November, the authorities desire to inform the public that exhibits will be gladly received from all Provinces of the Republic. Those desirous of full information and details, may obtain these on enquiry at the Information Office in Calle Rivadavia 1367, any day in ordinary office hours.

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver T. Breakspear leave Buenos Aires to-morrow morning for Valparaiso, en route to Hong-Kong, where Mr. Breakspear has secured a position on the staff of one of the newspapers, under the management of Mr. Cartwright, formerly Managing Editor of THE HERALD. Mr. Breakspear has been Assistant Secretary of the British Society for some months past.

DAY BY DAY IN ROSARIO

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT].

Sept. 28.

There was a large attendance at the American Church on Friday evening, when farewell was taken of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Taylor, who have for several years been associated with the choir and with the various social movements amongst the congregation. Mr. Taylor is offering his services to his King and Country.

There will be a Sale of Work in aid of the Rosario City Mission, in St. Bartholomew's School, on Saturday, October 9, from 3 to 7 p.m. The Working Party, which has been carried on by Miss Studdert during the absence of Mrs. Barnett, has prepared a number of useful and saleable articles, and it hoped that a large number of purchasers will turn up, as money is much needed to relieve the many cases of distress which have been brought before the notice of the committee. Contributions, either for the stalls or tea tables, may be sent to Calle España 86, at any time, or to St. Bartholomew's School on the morning of October 9.

Mr. William Dawson, U.S. Consul, left last week for Buenos Aires on his way to the States where he is going to spend four months' holiday. Mr. Van Horne, the Vice-Consul, will assume the Consular Office in the interim.

A team from San Andrew's Golf Club are coming up from Buenos Aires to meet Rosario Golf Club on Sunday, October 10.

IN THE OFFICE CHAIR

*'And in some corner of the hubbub caught
Make game of that which makes as much of thee.'*

OMAR KHAYYAM.

Lost in the Oozing Bogs.

For months the German troops have manoeuvred and fought over ground dangerously marshy in many places, without suffering seriously on that account. Now, however, it is reported that a disaster of the first magnitude has overtaken them in the marshes and morasses about Pinsk. An entire Army corps is stated to have perished miserably in the treacherous bogs, being cut to pieces or made prisoners. This unlucky corps was the 41, which if at full strength would have a roster of 50,000 men, making the catastrophe greater than that which overwhelmed the lost legions of Varus. It is however only one of many calamities which have assailed the invading army. Numerous minor defeats have been reported recently, and the rush and impetus of the invading wave seems to be nearly spent. Probably their lines of communication greatly extended and attenuated are not of the former efficiency, nor are there any longer available the masses of fresh troops by the sacrifice of which in large numbers, victory has been purchased. The withdrawal of several hundred thousand men from the Russian campaign must still further weaken the vigour of their offensive, as even in case of further reinforcements being forwarded, their physical quality, appears from what is reported from the Danube army to be quite unsuited to support the rigours of a winter campaign on the steppes of Russia.

"Oh, for breath to utter what is like thee!"

Just recently the Prussian Press has been hunting high and low for wreaths to hang on Hindenburg, and laudatory comparisons to deck him withal. Among others, after having compared him to Alexander, Caesar, Alaric, (and why not Attila?), Moltke and Napoleon, the adulators pointed out how much he resembled

Mr. J. Mallon has severed his connection with the Central Argentine Railway, and left last week-end for Buenos Aires, en route for England. Mr. Mallon has had a life long railway career, and has held important positions in various parts of the world.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. C. Glibbery, of Arroyito, have left for La Plata, where Mr. Glibbery has secured a position in the Accounts Department of La Plata Cold Storage Coy.

DAY BY DAY IN BAHIA BLANCA.

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT].

Sept. 26.

The entries for the inter railway sports to be held at Maldonado on November 11 close on October 25.

Mrs. and Miss Graham left here yesterday after a few days' stay, and proceeded to Lopez Lecube by the morning train.

Mr. Guy, of Messrs. Moore and Tudor, returned to Buenos Aires yesterday by the La Madrid train, after a short stay here on Business.

A concert is to be held at Maldonado on October 9. There are to be also several raffles in connection with it, and the proceeds are to be devoted towards the Allies' Red Cross Fund.

Mr. Alt left here by the Huinca Rancó train yesterday on a visit to the Capital.

Tickets are now being sold at $1 each for the concert to be held in the Lora on Saturday week, October 2, in aid of the Anglican Church fund.

Hannibal both in the tactics of the projecting horns of his army where-with he crushed his enemy at Tannenburg, as did the Carthaginian at Cannae and his bold strategy. The parallel is most unfortunate, for Hannibal met his Fabius Cunctator who wore him down, and subsequently his Scipio who smashed him. The Marshal seems to be in contact with his Fabius now, and, doubtless Scipio and Zama will come later. To push the comparison still further, would be most unpleasant for Marshal Hindenburg for, Hannibal died wretchedly in exile by poison for fear of falling into the hands of his implacable enemies, the Romans. The Marshal need scarcely fear this but, the omen is a black one for him.

Late Repentance.

It is increasingly evident that nothing does succeed like success. The Most German Members of the Bulgarian Cabinet have resigned, the Cabinet itself has disintegrated so much that it is to be reconstituted under M. Ghenadieff, whose policy has always favoured friendship with the Quadruplice. It is evident that circumstances have been too strong for King Ferdinand, if these things be so, and that his own personal will alone cannot carry the Bulgarian Nation into war in support of the Central Tyrannies and of the Unspeakable Turk, now more unspeakable than ever. The latter will now only be able to get ammunition and war stores by the famous Aerial Supply Service via Orsova to Constantinople and, as the lifting weight of airships is comparatively very small, the resource does not sound a hopeful one. For a few rounds for an 11in. gun must require all the best efforts of a couple of dirigibles to supply them. Sofia continues to be a most interesting study.

German Taste (?)

Among the many horrors that a German victory would impose, has any one considered the atrocious taste of German dress? Speaking in all seriousness and moderation, the German man tends to the outré and over accentuated; hats with excessive brims, weirdly pinched coats and sobretodos, with redundant collars. The middle class Frau is worse. Who else—except perhaps a factory girl, and she is perhaps unjustly suspected—would walk abroad in a loose yellow wrapper, a purple hat adorned with an aggressive aniline pink feather and green gloves. This horrible outrage was recently committed in Calle Santa Fé. No need to ask the nationality of the culprit. Let us hope that among other things, the war may deliver us from these, also from German postcards whether of localities, printed in a washy yellow with a painful blue, or the objectionable vulgar and obscene varieties in which the so-good-and-moral German evidently delights otherwise his librerias would not be so liberally stocked with them. German lithos and oleographs require a chapter to themselves.

BRITON.

THE LATE MRS. CAIRNIE

Profound regret has been caused among the many who knew the late Mrs. Cairnie, who died yesterday at 569 General Hornos, after a long and painful illness, endured with the utmost fortitude and patience.

The deceased lady was a granddaughter of Mr. George Ward, founder of the famous publishing firm of Ward, Lock and Tyler, of London, and came to Argentina in the early eighties with the family of the late Dr. Gibbons Spillsbury, Rector of St. Peter's, Flores.

She passed many years after marriage in the south of Buenos Aires province, where her kindness and benevolent disposition endeared her to many who will be grieved to hear of her death. The funeral will take place to-day at the Chacarita Cemetery.

Our Point of View: "Herald" Leading Articles of the Week

THE BALKANS SITUATION

FRIDAY, September 24, 1915.

In view of the conflicting reports which for weeks past have emanated from various quarters regarding the situation in the Balkans, it is almost an impossibility to forecast what will happen there. One fact only stands out clearly, and that is that Bulgaria is now hostile to Britain and her allies, and it is difficult to put any other interpretation on the mobilisation of her forces, than that she intends to fight for the Germanic alliance. That Bulgaria should have so decided does not necessarily, in our opinion, indicate that our diplomacy, as diplomacy, is at fault. It does, however, very clearly demonstrate that Germany relies not on ordinary diplomatic means to secure her ends. It also suggests that this might have been realised long ago in the councils of the Allies, and that Germany's success should have been avoided, or averted by extra-diplomatic operations.

In a war such as that we are now witnessing, the old style of diplomacy is obviously impotent in so far as it attempts to control the actions of such states as Bulgaria. This fact was amply demonstrated in the history of the negotiations preceding Turkey's declaration of war against the Allies. The various Powers had their diplomatists at work. Germany ignored all conventional methods in her dealings with the Ottoman Government. She carefully filled Constantinople with her emissaries. German influence permeated military circles; and this influence, combined with the purchase, as we might say, in the open market, of the controlling politicians, finally won Turkey to her cause. There was something pathetic in the dispatches of the British Ambassador explaining what had happened. It was clearly obvious to him, as it was to most people, that Turkey was being bought. For weeks he had seen German influence growing. German battleships took refuge in the Bosphorus and were not interned. German diplomatists practically presided over Turkish Cabinet Councils. Our Ambassador, lamenting the act that Turkey would not behave herself as a neutral, said, "Myself and my colleagues have frequently protested." The unfortunate fact was that they and their respective Governments did not do more than protest. Germany dictated, and Germany acted.

Bulgaria has, within the last few weeks, been practically in the same position as Turkey was last October. Germany has been dictating and acting, and it looks as though this policy has again succeeded. Of course, if the Allies did not want the goodwill of Bulgaria, they were right to restrict their dealings with her to legitimate diplomatic methods, foremost of which would be moral suasion; but if Bulgaria's goodwill and assistance were required, and certainly if they were essential, they should have been obtained. We expressed the view, some time ago, that it would be a fatal mistake to rely on the promises of any of the Balkan Powers, and a wrong policy to continue to promote the idea in the United Kingdom that at any time assistance might be expected from one or more of them. Our view was then, and is now, that the Allies must be prepared to see the war through entirely on their own account. If they could win the Balkans to their cause, well and good. If not, then at least there would be no disappointment.

In any case, if the Allies have not been prepared to bid higher than Germany has done, or if they preferred to leave it to Bulgaria to decide as she liked, then they cannot now complain if, in the exercise of her own choice, Bulgaria is against them.

THE RAILWAYS AND THE STATE

SATURDAY, September 25, 1915.

Notwithstanding the all-absorptiveness of the political situation in this Republic in so far as Senators and Deputies are concerned, the dangerous policy that is being pursued in regard to the Argentine railway situation ought to appear sufficiently alarming to those men at the head of affairs who still claim to be considered shrewd and patriotic business men. Many great firms whose fortunes are bound up with the progress of the Argentine have suffered heavily during the past two years; none have, however, suffered so acutely as the railways. In one direction after another their profits have been curtailed and their expenses increased. And even if it be admitted from the outset that the railways, in company with many other people, went ahead too fast during the booming years that lay between 1905 and 1910, the capital outlay involved weighs on the shoulders of their shareholders, the benefits accruing have hitherto only been felt by Argentina.

Railway finance is at times a complicated matter, not to be unravelled by the uninitiated. In the case of the Argentine lines, however, the outstanding factors are so simple that their significance can only be misread by the semi-illiterate proletariat and the interested politician who wrests the facts to suit his own ends. At the risk of being charged with repetition, we cannot help referring yet again to the Mitre Law. At its inception it was regarded as creating a firm base whence all future legislation relative to the spread of railways in Argentina should take its departure. It was not meant to be finite, but it certainly was the intention of Congress to establish the doctrine that the railways had a right to consider their direct taxation as something calculable with mathematical accuracy, year by year, the interests of the public being amply safeguarded by a sliding scale of tariffs dependant on net profits. Recent judicial decrees have, to use a colloquialism, "knocked the bottom" out of the Mitre Law. So much so is this the case that the companies literally do not know where they

Looking at it from a broad point of view, we do not think that Bulgaria's decision should disturb the Allies or their peoples. We believe the Allies will win the war, and they will win it despite all difficulties and against all enemies, or new combinations of enemies. Germany is now threatening a "thrust" through the Balkans towards the Dardanelles. A new campaign is being developed against Serbia. Of that there is little doubt. We do not agree with the idea that Germany and Austria cannot find the men to carry out this campaign, or rather to attempt to carry it out. But that they will have an easy success, or any success at all, is quite another matter. As a fighting factor, Serbia has not yet been reckoned with. She is, we believe, quite a match even now for Bulgaria, and her armies, fighting in mountain country they know so well, will render a very good account of themselves.

Should Bulgaria actually begin hostilities, it is reasonable, in the light of recent happenings, to believe that Greece will take the field against her, and most probably Rumania will also range herself on the side of the Allies. But, as we said at the outset, to forecast what will happen in the Balkans is practically impossible. What should be certain, and we believe is certain, is that nothing that can now happen in new theatres of war can seriously or finally affect the great issue.

stand in regard to their liability for provincial and municipal taxes.

Leaving on one side the fact that the funds raised under the Mitre Law and allocated to the upkeep and improvement of the rural roads serving the stations have not been economically applied from the outset—and that is a very mild way of putting it—the most serious aspect of the question is the evident intention of a certain section of Argentina's legislators to try and make the railways pay more than their fair share to the upkeep of the State treasuries. To the unbiassed observer it appears evident that the railways have themselves to thank for a certain extent. That is, however, past praying for now; the need of the moment is to show Argentina very clearly that there is a limit to the bottom of even a railway company's purse, and that this limit has been reached. A hubbub has been raised over the proposed 10% increase in the tariff charged by the companies. A mass of semi-ignorant people fail to realise what public service to the country the railways perform, and certainly fail to realise what it costs the latter at the present moment. The increase in freights and coal prices is of itself sufficient to explain the heavy drop in dividends, a drop that has, apparently permanently, affected the market value of the shares; the diminished traffics are proof positive that this increased cost of working has not been made up at the expense of the Republic.

Add to all the foregoing the daily proofs of absolute incomprehension of the needs of the moment that characterises all the dealings of Congress with the affairs of the railways at the present time, and it will be realised that thinking men are right in considering the position serious. Compared to this general attitude, the special case of the Pension Law is but one error among many; its chief importance lies in the proof it affords of the shortsighted and impractical nature of the various suggestions that are by Congress consecrated with the weight of law. To begin the collection of funds destined to build up a pension scheme of the magnitude proposed without anyone, least of all the contributors, knowing how, when or where the money is to be applied, what guarantee of safety, of actual efficiency, is afforded, is simply to exhibit childish incompetence and a complete lack of the first principles of sound finance. The railways are going to fight the case, but in the meantime the payment must be made, and it is safe to say that the costs of this suit will be yet another heavy charge on revenues already encumbered with unusual expenditure and faced with ever-diminishing entries.

There was a time when the Argentine Press pointed with pride to the high and steady prices of the leading railway shares of this country on the European market as an unquestionable proof of national stability, and this, despite the fact that a very small percentage of Argentine railway stocks are in Argentine hands. The change to the present theory of absolute indifference to foreign opinion is a thing of yesterday. Granted that the most unreasonable and most bitter attacks on the lines have come from quarters where it is reasonable to suppose that the cloven hoof of German intrigue has passed, scattering poison and largesse in its wake, it is distressing to see how few Argentines appear to realise that deliberate bad faith with the vast invested interests that the railways represent is, from the lowest point of view, very bad policy. Argentina cannot reasonably expect to see fresh capital come into this country for a long time to come, save and unless it makes its way either from the United States. And up North, despite the warmth of Pan-American sentiment and the abundance of good wishes that have been expressed regarding the strengthening of trade between this country and the United States, actual business has been concluded solely on the basis of solid and material guarantees. Is it

CONSCRIPTION AND DEMOCRACY

SUNDAY, September 26, 1915.

Party politics in the United Kingdom are a wonderful thing; wonderful if only for the reason that political partizanship as understood in England, can never die. Despite the formation of what was hailed as a truly National Ministry, which was to signalise a truce in party politics, it not the death of them; despite all the talk about "a common purpose," and "a common weal," it is quite evident that even the most serious questions, such as the conduct of the war, and what shall follow the contemplated victory, are viewed, and decided upon by those who have been loudest in picturing the benefits of fusion, purely in a party spirit. It is in this spirit that Mr. A. G. Gardiner, the leading light of the Liberal journals of Britain, views the question of conscription. Mr. Gardiner has always been a strong party man, and in his consideration of the great questions of the day, he cannot apparently rise above his old party prejudices, and is incapable of crediting his old political opponents with any virtues.

In this issue we reprint a portion of an article written by Mr. Gardiner on the subject of conscription, or compulsory military service, as certain squeamish writers prefer to call it. The predominating party idea was evident in the manner in which our attention was called to the article by one of our readers and staunch supporters, who sent it to us, apparently with the idea that a perusal of it would temper our own views on the subject discussed, and who added "I do not suppose you will print it." We see no reason why we should not. Our readers should have Mr. Gardiner's views, as we believe they should have those of every prominent journalist of England, whether those views agree with our own or do not. If they do not coincide with our views the mere fact of our printing them, does not commit us to an endorsement of them. There is another good reason for printing Mr. Gardiner's opinions, and that is that by so doing we permit Mr. Gardiner to expose the fallacy of his own argument, for surely no one reading his views can find in them a case against conscription—if necessary.

Mr. Gardiner says:—"What is there worth having that conscription would give us, that the free service of the Nation has not given, and will not give?" The obvious answer is that if the Government has reached the limits of recruiting under the voluntary system, and still needs men, conscription will provide them. Of course if it can be demonstrated that the whole manhood of the United Kingdom of military age is exhausted, then we may as well forget all about conscription, and certainly not waste time in arguing over it. But this has not been demonstrated. Leading members of the party Mr. Gardiner supports, and even such pillars of the Liberal faith as Mr. Lloyd George, have openly advocated conscription as a solution of certain problems. Other members of the Government are always threatening to impose it. What do they want conscription for? To enable the Nation to prosecute the war to a successful finish, or to "down" the democracy?

"Scratch a conscriptionist and you will find an enemy of the people," is likely that the American financiers, when they come to investigate closely, as they surely will if they have not done so already, the railway question in Argentina, are going to lay out vast sums on great permanent works such as irrigation and colonisation when even the terms of Government decrees, sealed, signed and delivered by the representatives of the Argentine nation in Congress assembled, can be wrested to suit the ulterior ends of pettifogging and none too scrupulous politicians?

A REAL SUCCESS

Tuesday, Sept. 28.

There is every good reason for the people of the Allied Nations to feel elated over the success achieved by the Belgian, French and British armies during the last few days. Analysed critically from a military point of view, a real success has been gained, which even the German official reports are constrained to admit. It may not be strictly correct to describe the forward move of the Allies along a front of a few score miles as a grand offensive, but it is a highly important advance, indicative in its results of what may yet be accomplished, and certainly representing a severe blow to the Germanic cause.

The success achieved is important in several phases. In the first place it clearly demonstrates the value of sustained artillery fire in preparing the way, and again emphasises the vital necessity of providing immense reserves of shell and other ammunition before any real offensive can be opened and maintained. Apparently what was once a grave obstacle to hopes of success has been overcome, and the assurance of Mr. Lloyd George that supplies of munitions were being built up in a sufficiency to meet all requirements, is proved to have been sound. In the fighting which has taken place success could not have been obtained were this not so, for the nature of the positions taken from the enemy was so formidable that in some instances a bombardment lasting sixty hours was necessary before the advance could be ordered. Those with the slightest knowledge of military affairs will readily understand what a prodigious expenditure of ammunition such bombardments mean. When we get the full details of the attack which has proved so successful, we shall probably read that the German lines were practically obliterated by the deluge of shell poured upon them.

A second point of importance in connection with the Allies' success is that another of Mr. Gardiner's phrases. Could anything be more ridiculous, or demonstrate more strongly how blind is a strong party politician? Does Mr. Gardiner sincerely believe that every man who now suggests conscription is a traitor to his people, and therefore to his country? If he does, then we are sorry that a man who has in the past exercised a great influence, and a beneficent influence over his compatriots, should be threatened with desertion because of his approaching madness. Was Lord Roberts an enemy of the people? Is Mr. Blatchford, the Socialist, one; is Mr. Lloyd George; are hundreds of thousands of other sane and sober patriots who want to see their country victorious, enemies of the people? Of course they are not, and Mr. Gardiner knows it. He is speaking merely as a violent party politician against an old rival, which by accident happens to have been associated with the idea of conscription in pre-war times.

Mr. Gardiner appears to have suffered a brain storm when writing the article. We are sincere admirers of the brilliant journalist's many fine gifts, and therefore we are glad to realise that after the storm he became somewhat calm and reasonable. After abusing conscription and all who advocate it, Mr. Gardiner concludes with the admission (by inference) that if conscription or compulsion in any form be necessary for national purposes it should be imposed. He does not say so exactly, but he says that it should not be imposed for party purposes. That is the only point on which we agree with him. Conscription should be imposed if necessary from a military point of view. If there is the real homogeneity in Britain which Mr. Gardiner says there is, if party politics have really been suppressed, conscription can be imposed on the British only because it is essential to the welfare of Britain, and because the British realise it.

it has demonstrated the high efficiency of the armies operating under the direction of General Joffre and Sir John French. Even when the way had been cleared by a devastating bombardment it must have required the very finest troops in the world to advance against the maze of fortifications held by the enemy. The French official reports speak of the great dash of the French infantry, ever famous for their elan in the attack, and we may gather even from Sir John French's laconic reports that the British troops were not behind their French comrades in dashing forward when the moment came. It is amply demonstrated that the morale and spirit of the Allied forces are better than ever they were, and the Germans have probably a little more respect to-day for the "raw recruits" of Britain than they had a week ago. Kitchener's new armies have proved themselves to be first-rate fighting men.

Still another important feature from a military point of view is that the ground gained by the Allies helps to straighten out the salient in the line held by them, and if, as we believe, the French have gained a large section of the railway running directly behind the German front, then the enemy will be seriously handicapped, and we would not be surprised to hear of his withdrawal from positions not yet seriously assailed by the Allies. It cannot be supposed that the Allies will be able to press forward for any further considerable distance just now, but their position has been improved substantially for future operations. A considerable section of the rich coal lands of northern France has again reverted to French control as a result of the recent success, and this in itself is a consideration which was well worth making a big sacrifice to gain.

Apart from the military points of view, the forward movement in the western front has political aspects of great importance. The story of the capture of many miles of German front, and the driving out from immensely strong underground positions of the enemy who had been entrenched there for months; the capture of 26,000 prisoners, and the taking of many guns and masses of materiel, will probably duly impress certain people who had come to look upon the Germans as without peers as soldiers. More than that, the success is likely to check German advances in other directions. Already we read that Germany is bringing back troops from the Russian front. She will also probably find her plans for disposing of the Dardanelles situation by an advance through Bulgaria upset. The waverers of the Balkans will see that Germany cannot conduct the war just as she proposes. Germany herself will also be impressed. She has by now seen that the Allies are stronger than ever they were, while she herself knows that as a military power she has reached her zenith. We believe the good news from Flanders and the Champagne district is but the forerunner of better news, but even in itself it is highly satisfactory.

EFFECTS OF THE ALLIES' SUCCESS

WEDNESDAY, September 29, 1915.

In discussing the position in Flanders and Northern France from a military point of view, we have always pointed out that such a thing as a substantial advance by the Allies, was not to be looked for. It is well, we think, to make this point once more, at this moment when in a spirit of justifiable elevation over the success recently gained, people are apt to believe that the Germans can be forced right back, and the end of the war be brought appreciably within view. By "substantial advance," we mean that operation which in previous wars meant continued forward movement, covering a considerable extent of territory and penetrating toward the enemy's geographical centre. Such a movement necessarily

THE BALKAN PROBLEM

THURSDAY, September 30, 1915.

Some little time has elapsed since we discussed the situation in the Balkans and likened the effort to forecast what might happen to an attempt to solve an enigma. The problem is still a complicated one and its solution is not assisted by any clear information as to what is actually transpiring, although it is satisfactory to believe that the outlook is considerably brighter from the point of view of the Allied nations. If they can, as we now believe they will, control the situation, then this success will be fairly attributable to the splendid results achieved by the Allied forces on the western front, the political ly means the breaking down of all defences, and the pursuit of the enemy. In the present war, and under present conditions, such an advance cannot reasonably be looked for, and it will not be witnessed until the war is clearly drawing to a close. That event is still far off.

To say this is not to suggest in any way that the Allies have not gained a great victory. The greatness of it is more apparent now that we have some details of it, than it appeared at first glance, and it is quite correct to speak of the advance made by the French and British forces as "substantial." Comparatively speaking the forward move is wonderful, in view of the formidable obstacle to advance which the German lines presented. It is only since recently that we have quite understood why occasional gains of a few score yards were considered worthy of record in the official dispatches, and we have only gained this understanding as a result of the wide dissemination of photographic views showing the elaborate nature of the defence works constructed by the Germans, as also by the Allies. To assault and capture underground chambers and tunnels, and drive the enemy out of one maze of trenches after another, has been the task of the Allies, and if there is any cause for surprise to-day it is not that they have not pushed the enemy back for a score of miles, but that they have managed to drive him out at all.

When writing on the subject yesterday we had no knowledge of the exact effect which the success of the Allies had had on Bulgaria, or upon certain neutral nations, though it was not a matter of great difficulty to forecast that this effect would be of great importance from the Allied point of view. Our forecast has been demonstrated to have been correct. Bulgaria has shown great haste in explaining her intentions, which, according to her Consul-General in London, are by no means hostile to the Allies. She even suggests that they may, under certain conditions, be opposed to the Germanic designs. Other nations, obviously impressed by the success in France and Flanders, have taken the precaution of reaffirming spiritedly their neutrality, which previously did not appear to trouble them very much.

It is this political result of the victory to which we attach the greatest importance. From a strict military point of view it did not matter very much whether the Allies advanced, or merely held their ground. From a political standpoint, however, it was daily growing more and more important that German prestige and German influence should receive some severe setback, and we are happy to believe that this has been witnessed. While the Allies themselves may have been, and undoubtedly were, quite satisfied with the situation so far as it concerned them; while they knew that the Germans were not invincible, and that their lines did not present an impenetrable wall of iron, the stagnation which existed along the front up to a few days ago duly impressed many neutral peoples. Therefore the success of the Allies is doubly welcome. It has inflicted a severe blow on the enemy, and has toned down the hostile sentiment of some "neutrals." results of which we do not think can be over-estimated.

It is quite clear that Bulgaria's intentions are the mystifying factor in the problem. There has been some noticeable change since the Allies struck their sledge-hammer blow at the Germans in Flanders and the Champagne, but we may take Sir Edward Grey's statement in the House of Commons as indicating that Bulgaria is still the danger. The Foreign Secretary gave Bulgaria clearly to understand that the Allies would immediately come to the aid of any Balkan State attacked by Bulgaria. He added that Britain was convinced of the good intentions of Bulgaria, but the assertion of this conviction may be regarded as so much diplomatic verbiage, for if the conviction really existed there would be obviously no necessity for issuing a warning, which in the circumstances must be regarded as in the nature of a threat—and a justifiable one.

We regard the utterance of Sir Edward Grey as a timely and well directed piece of policy. It should be apparent to Bulgaria that her interests are not best served by an alliance with the Germanic Powers and her ancient enemy, Turkey. Whatever virtues lie in the Germanic cause, those virtues do not include consideration for the welfare of countries like Bulgaria, for, as Sir Edward has pointed out, Germany's policy is for the isolation and crushing of the small nations. The policy of the Allies is the reverse. Were wisdom to prevail in Bulgaria, that country would quickly decide against a bellicose alliance with Germany; but the methods pursued by the latter country, as evidenced in the case of Turkey, are intended to override the liberty of action of Bulgaria, or at least to dupe that country into a false move.

We have spoken of the brighter outlook as viewed from the side of the Allies. The best evidence of this lies in the fact that there has been a sudden and vital change in the Government of Bulgaria. Certain ministers have resigned, and it is authoritatively reported that King Ferdinand has called upon M. Malinoff to form a new Ministry. M. Malinoff is known to be of pronounced Russian sympathies. He was formerly a Prime Minister, and his recall to office at this juncture promises well for the Allies' interests. This fact has impressed several correspondents, who have not hesitated to ascribe to the change in the Government the significance of a substantial victory for the diplomacy of the Allies. This may be so, but we are inclined to believe that the recent military success of the Allies has had more to do with Bulgaria's change of attitude—if it has really changed—than ordinary diplomacy, and that Sir Edward Grey's plain speech has supported it. The Allies have shown that they can smite when they choose. Moreover, Bulgaria is not likely to be in ignorance of what has been transpiring in Serbia, where the Allies have been pouring in their troops for some time past.

It is the action and determination which now characterise the policy of the Allies that appeal strongly to us. There is every reason to believe that large contingents of Italian, French and British forces have entered Serbia to assist that country. By this action the Allies have demonstrated that they are not to be caught unawares by any move Bulgaria may make, or by the Teutonic Powers, who have been massing men for an attack on Serbia, preparatory to a dash to the Dardanelles. This is the kind of argument a wavering Power understands better than all the cunning artifices of diplomacy, which in promises may be quite unreliable, and in threats, quite empty. If Bulgaria intends to cast her lot with the Central Empires, then she can be dealt with quickly. If she intends to remain neutral, then the troops quietly placed into position can be utilised to meet any German attacks on Serbia. Viewing all the circumstances, it occurs to us that it is not now a matter of very grave importance to the Allied cause which way the Bulgarian cat elects to jump.

Public Opinion as expressed in the Argentine Press.

THE DECAY OF RIFLE SHOOTING

(La Prensa.—September 23).

Compulsory military service, as at present carried out in Argentina, does not, says La Prensa, fill the needs of the Republic unless it can show that it gives the young men physical training, discipline, and a practical knowledge of shooting and general military training. Under the existing system the Ministry of War can only bring under arms a quarter of the men who are legally liable to serve each year, the remaining 75 per cent being from a military point of view utterly useless. According to law ex-conscripts, and those who escape conscription, are obliged to go once a year to the ranges. But as there is no penalty, for non-compliance with this rule, it is a dead-letter. Moreover, continues La Prensa, even if it were enforced, an annual attendance is not sufficient to teach shooting.

Nor has the remission of three months service in the case of efficient shots proved any attraction. In the past five years only 464 citizens have taken advantage of this remission, or say an average of 92 out of 40,000 per annum. Last year too there was noticeable an alarming lack of interest in the shooting at the ranges, which La Prensa attributes to the insufficient attention paid to this important matter, coupled with the lack of a reasonable allowance for the upkeep of the ranges. Hence it is advisable to increase this allowance, at the same time exercising a stricter control over the hundred odd ranges now in existence in order to be sure that the money is well spent. To the arsenal corresponds the task and expense of seeing that the rifles are in good condition, whilst free ammunition ought to be allowed to minors and reservists, provided that they conform to the rules and regulations laid down by the Ministry of War. It is the duty of the Chamber of Deputies to take this matter up, and, concludes La Prensa, with similar measures, aided by the incentive of frequent competitions, the alarming declination of rifle shooting in the Republic will be checked.

COLD STORAGE IN CORRIENTES

(La Nación.—September 23).

The Province of Corrientes, exclusively devoted to the cattle trade, has been condemned to lead an anæmic commercial existence, says La Nación, owing to the difficulties affecting the export of its only merchandise. Hence it has been reasoned that the only way of giving renewed vitality to the cattle trade is to put up a cold storage depot on co-operative lines, thus enabling meat from Corrientes to be shipped to the consuming markets without check. Unfortunately the proposition is still in abeyance, owing to the difficulties that have arisen in regard to the capitalisation of the scheme. As La Nación remarks, the cattle owners have refused support that would not only have proved profitable in itself but would also have tended to increase the general value of their herds. The first idea, a co-operative factory, has now degenerated into a fiscal scheme, the funds to be raised by a tax on cattle returnable in shares in the factory. This idea militates against the whole scheme. Funds thus raised will be slow in coming in, and will not bring about the same result as would have been achieved by leaving private interests to look after themselves.

Hence it will be long ere there is sufficient money in hand to set up

THE BALANCE OF TRADE

(La Nación.—September 27).

Striking are the figures for Argentine exports to date, as published by La Nación, particularly in so far as they concern agricultural products. Maize, wheat, linseed, and oats, totaling 6,700,000 tons, have been shipped to the value of $600,000,000 paper, and by the end of the year it is safe to assume that another $100,000,000 will have been added thereto, a value greater than that of the record year 1913, even though the actual amount shipped is somewhat less. Add to this $325,000,000 for the cattle trade, plus sundry exports which have been largely increased owing to the demands made by the war, and one arrives, according to La Nación, at a total export of $1,400,000,000 paper, or $600,000,000 gold, which surpasses the 1914 figures by $250,000,000 gold. Thus, seeing that imports have dropped by 40 per cent. compared with the 1913 figures, and estimating them at $2000,000,000 gold, one has a favourable balance of $400,000,000 gold. Such a position may appear almost too flattering, continues La Nación, but it is the bare truth, even when one works only on the official figures for the first six months of the current year, wherein exports exceed imports by $210,000,000 gold. Great Britain owes this country $40,000,000 gold; the United States $21,000,000 gold; Italy $20,000,000 gold; France $20,000,000 gold; Holland $10,000,000 gold; Brazil $8,000,000 gold. Moreover there may reasonably be added the amount shipped "to order," some $90,000,000.

Even taking into account the sums payable for dividends, the service of debt, and other items that do not figure in the trade balance, and putting this sum at $190,000,000 gold, the first half year's results are enough to pay for all, and leave a balance over. This $190,000,000 gold La Nación assigns as follows:—Public Debt $50,000,000; $30,000,000 Cedulas and mortgage interests; $40,000,000 railway dividends; $30,000,000 interest on industrial capital; $40,000,000 sundries. In short, the whole situation is without parallel, save perhaps in the United States, where special and temporary measures have had to be taken to regulate exchange, thrown right out of its customary orbit by the strong demand for indispensable commodities which cannot be paid for in the ordinary course of trade. Similar measures, La Nación concludes, would be advisable here as a means of preventing the circulating medium from becoming still further inflated, and thus aggravating a position which is in reality one of the most difficult at the present time owing to the inability of the country to turn its vast profit to its proper uses by fomenting its own further development.

the necessary installation, and then more funds will be required to exploit the business. Organised on these lines success is not to be expected, and the affair will drag on for a brief and precarious period of existence which will not benefit the interests that it is designed to serve. It would be much better to try and raise the capital sum required at once, in order that the cold storage system may be implanted without delay. The Banco de la Nación might find the money if the new Banco Agrícola—that is-to-be does not come forward, and the operation would entail no risk, since the service and amortisation of the debt would come from the self-same factory. By adopting this combination the Corrientes cattle owners would obtain immediate benefit without having to wait for the slow accumulation of funds derived from taxation.

THE IMPORT TRADE

(La Prensa.—September 24).

Many and grave are the changes that have been brought about in the economic relationships of the globe owing to the European war, says La Prensa, and in this country the cessation of the inflow of foreign capital has reacted with the intensity of an actual crisis on trade and industry. It may be true that Argentina has some few manufactures, but it cannot be described as a manufacturing country; a brisker movement in the cloth weaving, boot-making, and leather trades, due to war orders does not really alter the general situation. Statesmen and merchants up North realised from the outset the unusual opportunity for getting in to the South American trade, and La Prensa sustains that the North American manufacturer is in a position to supply almost all those goods that were formerly imported from Europe.

This conception of Pan-Americanism is practical, and embodies the idea of mutual interchange of commodities destined to bring reciprocal benefits in their train. At the same time La Prensa is of opinion that the situation is invigored more clearly from the Plate than it is from New York. United States trade seeks to compete with the European shipper in the Argentine markets, but to compete successfully it must adapt itself to the methods of its rival. Liberal dealing and ample credit have between them built up the European trade, and when the North American traders have realised that similar facilities do not entail undue risk, they will find this market open to receive them. On these lines the various representatives of American firms who arrive here with a pack of samples for a brief visit ought to approach the question of building up trade. Let them bring us goods suitable for our consumption, but do not lead them to expect that we are ready to change our customs for theirs at a moment's notice. La Prensa insists on the appropriateness of its remarks at the present time and concludes by saying that it is giving away the secret of the conquest of Argentine trade to the nation that is ready and willing to accept it.

GRAIN ELEVATORS

(La Prensa.—September 28).

At yesterday's session of the Senate the Minister of Agriculture put the case for grain elevators clearly and with abundant data. The economical aspects of the question of provision of grain elevators was extensively dealt with and absolute necessity for these industrial complements to the productions of cereals was evident from the discussion. None of the great agricultural countries and specially those which export a quantity of their harvests lack either elevators in central positions or regional deposits. Experience has proved that the Argentine Republic must no longer lack them either. The very least loss annually by our cultivators by this very means cannot be less than seventy million pesos, a sum which might be added to the national wealth.

The plan considered is that the constructions shall be erected by the State, but the State shall not exploit them except cooperatively with private concerns.

The proposed Law of Elevators and Deposits should include, with an eye to the future, provisions authorising contracts and concessions with construction companies and the working of the elevators with all their financial arrangements, without prejudice to the rights of the State as constructor.

With a clause to this effect and with proper and prudent precautions against absorbent monopolies, the law would be complete and would give a sure promise of immediate success.

For the rest, it cannot fail to be a step forward in the solution of great agrarian problems.

THE MEAT TRADE

(La Prensa.—September 25).

The categorical statements made by the Minister of Agriculture to the House of Commons disposes once for all, remarks La Prensa, of the rumours in circulation attributing to certain interests the intention of manipulating the market in such a way as to bring about a drop in the Argentine cattle market. La Prensa states that it called attention to these rumours, and at the same time made enquiries on its own account in New York, London, and Paris that led it to form conclusions that concurred with the ministerial pronouncement. It was said that the British Government had altered its contracts with the freezing companies, reducing its orders in view of the steady rise in the price of cattle, with the result that the said companies were about to buy less stock in the local markets. In other words the local cattle trade was to be deprived of profits that, though casual, were nevertheless perfectly legitimate. As La Prensa says, the war has caused this country serious harm, largely due to high freights. In compensation the price of cattle rose owing to the heavy European demand, and it would not have been right for the various governments concerned to conspire to wipe out this advantage owing to the fact that they held a practical monopoly of shipping space for this class of cargo.

Further, La Prensa declares that it was ready to take up the defence of the national interests, but the statements of the British Minister of Agriculture have cleared the air. A Government monopoly of tonnage adapted to the carriage of chilled and frozen meat was necessary to secure supplies from Australia, New Zealand and the Plate, from falling beneath the control of American interests whose factories are operating in Argentina. It was also said that meat in Great Britain was unduly dear owing to the fact that it was first shipped to New York, but enquiry at that port elicits the statement that during the past six months not one kilo of Argentine meat has been imported. Hence it is evident that these rumours were entirely baseless, whilst at the same time it is highly satisfactory to be told that the British Government will need more meat than ever, and that its acquisitions during the coming year will reach the enormous sum of £25,000,000, to be spent in the United States, Australia, New Zealand and the Argentine Republic. Elsewhere it is shown that Australia will not have so much meat on offer owing to the crisis in the cattle trade, hence Argentine shipments will perforce make up the deficit. The precautions taken by the Allied Governments are manifestly directed towards eliminating all risk of the supplies for the armies falling into the hands of North American speculators in so far as its transport is concerned, and on this the whole question revolves. Prospects for the local cattle trade could not, says La Prensa, be brighter. Increased demand is a certain guarantee that the price of fat cattle cannot fall. If the Argentine producer must sell, it is equally certain that the European consumer must eat. Both interests meet therefore on common ground. Naturally the exporters will try to get their merchandise as cheaply as possible, but the cattle trade knows that in the long run they can maintain their prices. Argentine cattle are in no whit inferior to those coming from Australia or the United States. Recent prices have surprised many people, but they are merely a clear proof of the fact that Argentine breeders are at last getting the returns to which they are justly due. All of which goes to show, concludes La Prensa, that there is a brilliant and immediate future opening out before the cattle trade, and the aid and protection of this industry ought to take pride of place in any scheme for fomenting national progress.

BRILLIANT FUTURE FOR THE CATTLE TRADE

(La Prensa.—September 27).

Never was the outlook brighter, says La Prensa, for the local cattle trade, and it proceeds to prove its assertion by referring to the official reports on conditions elsewhere in the lands whence cattle is usually exported, either as chilled meat or on the hoof. In France, M. Méline, ex-Minister of Agriculture, states that it is absolutely necessary to import chilled meat freely for as long as may be required in order to fill the gap that has been caused in the French herds by the war. Nor does this state of affairs apply only to the French herds; Germany, Austria, Italy, Russia, and the Balkans, are not better off, whilst the United States, Argentina's greatest competitor, needs all her supplies for herself, being to-day rather an importer than an exporter. Thus Argentina and Australia are the two great centres of supply, and the latter country has recently suffered severely from drought, the losses among its flocks being especially heavy. South Australia has been almost swept bare. The camps between Sydney and Melbourne are barren, says the well-known breeder, Mr. Buchanan. Cattle have died by thousands, whilst a loss of 80 per cent. in a flock of sheep was normal.

In New South Wales 15,000,000 sheep died, over a million head of cattle, and many horses. Artesian wells that in ordinary droughts were reliable have become exhausted, and however much matters may improve, it is reckoned that the Australian herds will not recover for at least four years. Taken altogether, these authoritative declarations go to show that prospects for Argentine cattle breeders could not be better, and yet, remarks La Prensa, there is no sign of any organised attempt to take advantage of the situation. Foreign capital no longer coming to this country, the local capitalist has not had the courage to move, preferring to leave his money in the treasuries of the banks, neglecting the vast profits that would be his did he but invest it in Argentine camp. It is indeed a strange case of collective psychology, and proves that foreign capital has always had greater faith in this country than its own sons have exhibited. "This is a great country." "Argentina's future is immense." Phrases such as these are heard on every side. Words, nothing but words, ejaculates La Prensa, and concludes by admitting that in all probability local capital will not dare to move until the war is over, and the example is set by foreign capital, which will as formerly take the cream of the milk.

BALKAN UNITY

(La Nación.—September 28).

"La Nación" reproduces from the important Bucharest paper "Rumania," the following:

"At the last moment we again speak to the Balkan peoples, to all without exception and remind them that they owe their security to the fact that the once rose to the height demanded by the situation. They should forget their rancours, their jealousies and amply and generously recognise each other's rights and establish them on the basis of a loyal, just and definite agreement. There should be no illusions in Sofia, nor in Nisch, nor in Athens, nor in Bucharest. Our destiny is to all live free and independent or all to fall, one on another into a hateful foreign servitude. Our destiny depends only on ourselves. The worse will it be for us if we at this moment remain outside the great current which have removed so many things and which are about to induce transformations in all mankind.

CHEAP HOUSING

(La Nación. September 24).

The ideal embodied in the proposal recently sanctioned by the Chamber of Deputies is entirely sympathetic, remarks La Nación, but unfortunately the lack of the necessary means to carry it to a successful conclusion is likely to bring it to disaster. With a view to economy it is suggested that a national committee for cheap housing be appointed, members to serve ad honorem, the attributes of this body being so varied, so delicate, and so technical that it is hardly possible to suppose that able and honourable individuals will accept the responsibility involved without some adequate recompense. It will be incumbent on the committee to work in the open market, buying ground and building houses that will come within the means of the modest purchasers who are only to pay 3 o/o interest and 5 o/o amortization, and La Nación reasonably asks whether it will be able to raise the necessary funds under such conditions. Building companies are not likely to find this a profitable enterprise, that is supposing it to be run honestly.

Cost prices are nothing to go upon, in view of the additional charges for inspection and so forth that are certain to be incurred. Experience shows that official building is the dearest and most unsatisfactory known in the country, and there is every reason to fear that the same will apply to a scheme which is turned over to an official committee, with the result that the so-called cheap workmen's dwellings will in the long run be as expensive as the buildings put up for government account. Hence, weighing all these objections, La Nación doubts whether the scheme will prove a success, especially having regard to the heavy drop in property values and the high prices of imported building material. In short the probable outcome of the whole project will be the formation of yet another bureaucratic department, the existence of which will only be noticeable by studying the amount allotted in the Budget to its upkeep.

A PLEA FOR PATIENCE

(La Prensa.—September 29).

The Minister of Finance has as yet come to no decision with regard to the request for a brief postponement, even if it be but for a month, of the territorial contribution for the current year. La Prensa states that it has made exhaustive enquiry, and finds that it is true that landowners have had very serious difficulties during the past eighteen months, which state of affairs is corroborated by the complaints raised by both national and provincial authorities. These antecedents are of themselves sufficient justification for granting the postponement sought, but, says La Prensa, there are also other arguments that should not be forgotten. First and foremost comes the fact that the national tax-payers have never been unduly troublesome. Very rarely do they ask for concessions, and at the present time they merely wish to accumulate the required funds without having to borrow at usurious rates. Hence the favour sought is reduced to a mere delay, and does not in any way prejudice the national finances.

Moreover, it ought to be remembered that in less difficult times the Government has shown itself more generously minded, acting on the assumption that the prorogation of payment is consistent with wise government when the major portion of the revenue has been collected, and when such delay does not mean irreparable loss to the nation. Not one province only, but many, have given this grace to their tax-payers to the satisfaction of all concerned, and in some cases this has been done in accordance with the wise councils of national functionaries. Times are hard, and the taxpayer deserves special consideration; it is not right to press him to extremes nor to treat him as though he was in the habit of bargaining. The correct and logical method of procedure, concludes La Prensa is to give him the facilities that are best consistent with public and private interests, and not to hold over his head threats and fines as being the only official recourse.

MUNICIPAL FINANCES

(La Nación.—September 29).

According to what it believes to be reliable information, La Nación states that it understands that the Intendente has arranged for the consolidation of the Municipal debt, and will shortly lay the scheme before the Municipal "junta" for sanction. Meanwhile the loan of £800,000 with C. J. Hambro and Sons, of London, due on October 15, has been renewed for another year at 6 per cent interest and 7½ per cent commission. The same step has been taken with the balance of the loan made by Kleinwort, Sons and Co., which amounts to £778,275 and falls due on the 30th inst. The original advance made by Kleinwort Sons and Co. was £1,300,000, and should have been paid off by the second quota of the loan arranged with Baring Bros. in accordance with Laws 8854-55 relative to the avenues. The war intervening as a force majeure, Baring Bros. intimated that they were not prepared to hand over the £1,296,350 that formed the second quota, owing to the difficulty of communicating with the German firms who had taken 50 per cent of the business, and they therefore offered the Municipality a half of the sum previously stipulated. This offer was refused, and in the meantime Kleinwort's advance was twice renewed with 6 per cent interest and 2 per cent commission, the latter item being eventually reduced to 1¼ per cent.

Matters stood thus when in May of the present year the Intendencia sought and obtained permission to accept Baring's offer of £634,442, or the half of the sum due on August 15 of last year. This was applied to cancelling £312,000 Municipal bonds in the possession of Baring Bros. and £322,442 to the amortisation of Kleinwort Sons and Co's. advance. It is the balance of £778,275 that is now renewed, and the terms have been the subject of much discussion, since the bankers asked 7 per cent plus 1¼ per cent commission, terms that were flatly rejected by the Municipality. Finally the loan of £300,000 due to Seligman Bros. and Co. has been renewed at 6 per cent interest at 7½ per cent commission, with the condition that the Municipality promises to pay up the whole sum within six months after the signing of peace.

GRANADA ALHAMBRA

FAMOUS RUIN IN DANGER OF COLLAPSE.

Madrid, Sept. 23.

It is reported from Granada that the famous Alhambra Palace is in imminent danger of collapse, the inhabitants of an adjacent hotel having been removed for fear of a catastrophe.

The Government will send a party of architects to see whether anything can be done to preserve the building from ruin.

NO GERMAN WIRELESS!

U.S. SHIPPING TO ADOPT MARCONI SYSTEM.

New York, Sept. 25.

The Wall Street Journal says that all lines of vessels connected with the American Steamship Association will install the Marconi system of wireless in place of the German Telefunken apparatus.

LEGATION DESPATCHES

British Army's Fine Advance

GERMAN DEFENCES TAKEN

The following telegram has been received by His Britannic Majesty's Minister at Buenos Aires from the Foreign Office, London:—

September 26 (1.30 p.m.)

Following from Sir John French, September 26:—"Yesterday morning we attacked enemy south of La Bassée Canal, east of Greenay and Vermeilles. We captured his trenches on front of over five miles, penetrating his lines in some places to a distance of 4,000 yards. We captured western outskirts of Hulluch, the village of Loos and mining works round it, and Hill 70. Other attacks were made north of La Bassée Canal which drew strong enemy reserves towards these points of line where hard fighting took place throughout day with varying success. At nightfall troops north of canal occupied their positions of morning. We made another attack near Hooze, on other side of Menin road. The attack north of road succeeded in occupying Belleward farm and ridge, but this was subsequently retaken by enemy. Attack south of road gained about 600 yards of enemy's trench, and we have consolidated ground won. Reports of captures up to present include about 1700 prisoners, eight guns and several machine guns the number of which is not yet known.

The report in Friday's German communiqué that we attempted to make attack on previous day south of La Bassée Canal which broke down under hostile artillery fire is false. No attack was attempted."

September 28 (12.40 a.m.)

TURKISH WATCHDOGS IN ACTION

September 28 (12.55 p.m.)

27 September. War Office announces that recent operations on Gallipoli Peninsula confined mainly to attacks on either side by aircraft, artillery bombardments and some mining. On one occasion Turks opened heavy artillery fire along our front at Suvla and Anzac which appeared to be prelude to general attack; it was followed by attack of small force only on right centre at Suvla in which enemy was easily dispersed by rifle fire; twice subsequently much the same happened. More than once enemy aeroplanes have attacked our aircraft base, but bombs dropped did no damage; our aeroplanes counter-attacked and with bombs blotted out hangar and did some damage among shipping at Burgaz. During night of 24th, Turks let loose watch dogs against French patrols; dogs were all shot.

Sept. 29 (1.30 a.m.)

Following despatch, dated the 28th September, has been received from Field-Marshal Sir John French: "Severe fighting has continued to-day round Loos and to north of that place. We now hold all ground to the north of Hill 70, which the enemy retook on the 26th. We have made further progress to the south of Loos, and have captured another gun. Total number of guns captured is now 21. There are several more between us and enemy which have been abandoned by him. Number of prisoners exceed 3000. Number of machine guns captured is 40. Many more have been destroyed by our bombardment. Enemy's lines taken by us are exceptionally strong, they consist of double front line which includes two large works named by him "Hohenloher" and "Kaiser Wilhelm" redoubts. These consist of network of trenches and bomb-proof shelters, several hundred yards in extent. The second line ran just west of Loos. We are now closely engaged with enemy's third line.

Our aeroplanes to-day bombed railway line near Bapaume, wrecking train and damaged railway near Achiet-le-Grand.

CATTLE MARKET

ENTERED: 5,274.

Pigs	853
Prices: 26 to 31 cents per kilo.
Summary of Purchasers.
Sansinena	1,188
La Blanca	977
La Plata	307
Argentino	194
Armour	143

Total 2,809

Prices for Wednesday

SALES.

Juan Lalor—

From Rojas: 12 bullocks at $259, 4 steers at 238, 27 do. from Matanzas at 225, 46 do. from Colon at 217; from Entre Rios: 17 steers at 197, 5 cows at 100, 3 at 100, 3 heifers at 126, 3 at 82.50, 7 young steers at 90.50, 4 calves at 35; from Matanzas: 2 steers at 141, 16 cows at 131, 7 at 119, 3 at 66; from Casares: 4 cows at 137.50, 5 steers at 123, 5 calves at 54.50; from Entre Rios: 7 steers at 140.50, 8 at 143.50, 16 at 159, 25 at 130, 14 at 104, 20 at 115.50, 2 heifers at 102; from Chacabuco: 3 bullocks at 166, 6 cows at 172.50, 2 at 98, 7 at 140; from Sar miento: 2 cows at 112, 4 heifers at 97; from Chacabuco: 13 cows at 93, 18 at 121, 32 at 124.50, 17 at 139; from General Belgrano: 8 cows at 131.50, 12 at 151; from Entre Rios: 5 cows at 135.50, 2 heifers at 118, 3 at 72.50, 6 steers at 82, 2 calves at 85, 4 at 64.50; from Azul: 8 calves at 65, 6 at 63, 6 at 32; from Chascomús: 10 young steers at 80, 7 heifers at 53, 5 steers at 85.50, 5 at 71.50.

Salaberry y Bercetche—

From Navarro: 9 steers at $180, 6 at 120, 1 cow at 162, 2 young steers at 87; from Lincoln: 2 steers at 163, 20 at 116, 15 at 113, 32 young steers at 87, 23 at 86, 2 cows at 139, 10 at 82.50, 2 at 123.50, 10 heifers at 121.50, 6 at 111, 5 at 89.50, 7 at 82.50, 10 calves at 61; from R. Paz: 6 calves at 65, 2 at 70.50, 8 cows at 138.50, 2 at 101, 1 heifers at 153, 4 calves at 73; from Cordoba: 3 calves at 46, 4 at 75, 5 cows at 68.50, 5 at 86, 2 at 151.

Pedro y Antonio Lanusse—

From Chascomús: 22 steers at $232; from Bahia Blanca: 16 cows at 117, 12 at 104, 22 at 102.50; from Guido: 12 cows at 117; from Rauch: 11 cows at 132.50, 1 stag at 190; from Via monte: 4 cows at 72; from Santa Fe: 19 cows at 149, 1 at 152, 6 at 87, 1 at 130.50, 17 steers at 126, 2 at 120, 7 at 84, 2 heifers at 50, 5 at 77.50, 10 calves at 65, 5 at 10; from Cordoba: 6 steers at 71, 5 at 85, 2 cows at 140, 3 at 128.50, 2 at 110, 7 heifers at 113, 11 at 71.50, 4 at 70, 2 at 57.

Alejandro Schoo y Cia.—

From Entre Rios: 60 steers at $165.

Juan Elordy y Cia.—

From Las Heras: 6 cows at $129, 2 stags at 135.

Mihara Hermanos—

From Entre Rios: 33 steers at $200, 50 at 175, 10 cows at 140, 16 young steers at 105, 6 heifers at 100, 14 steers at 110, 6 cows at 92.

Enrique A. Thompson y Cia.—

From Colon: 115 steers at $235.

Dadds y D. D. Ramsay—

From Tornquist: 13 young steers at $115, 3 cows at 120, 7 heifers at 95, 11 cows at 90.

Ignacio Goñi e Hijos—

From Entre Rios: 10 calves at $58, 26 at 38.

Julian Frers—

From Baradero: 10 cows at $180.

Rubin, Cesario, Zubiaurre y Cia.—

From Las Heras: 17 steers at $214.

Eduardo Jolly—

From Marcos Paz: 10 cows at $140, 4 at 103.

Bracht y Cia.—

From Entre Rios: 12 steers at $152, 12 at 140, 12 at 139.50.

Benitez y Murro—

From Santa Fe: 15 young steers at $112, 4 steers at 105, 4 cows at 70.

Bargo, Lascrain y Etchegaray—

From the Capital: 6 calves at $55; from Entre Rios: 10 cows at 108, 3 heifers at 98, 5 young steers at 96.

Ceballos y Cufré—

From Monte: 21 cows at $175; from Mendoza: 10 steers at 75.

Bunge y Born—

From Alvear: 8 steers at $170, 14 cows at 140.

Julio L. Peña y Cia.—

From Tandil: 2 stags at $190, 16 cows at 160, 6 at 109; from Santa Fe: 3 bullocks at 180, 9 young steers at 124; from Entre Rios: 2 steers at 175, 11 at 165, 8 cows at 105; from Lujan: 7 steers at 135, 8 cows at 165; from Lincoln: 3 cows at 160, 60 at 139, 16 heifers at 145; from Cordoba: 50 cows at 118.

Miguel Ardohain—

From Bahia Blanca: 15 steers at $225, 24 at 170, 2 at 158, 2 cows at 150.

Soc. Cooperativa de Hacendados—

From Pampa Central: 18 cows at $175, 26 at 136; from Pellegrini: 7 cows at 135, 2 at 100, 2 at 65, 15 calves at 74, 2 at 70.

Unzué, Alzaga y Cia.—

From 9 de Julio: 5 bullocks at $270; from Pampa Central: 80 bullocks at 195; from 25 de Mayo: 68 bullocks at 240; from Pellegrini: 90 do. at 285, 9 do. from 9 de Julio at 250.

Angel Velaz y Cia.—

From Entre Rios: 36 steers at $180.

Andrés Maraspin y Cia.—

From Pampa Central: 51 steers at $235, 12 cows at 182.

Mendez Hermanos y Cia.—

From Santa Fe: 9 cows at $140, 25 at 75, 5 calves at 67, 21 at 55, 2 at 25.

Fortunato B. Arzeno y Hnos.—

From Olavarria: 8 steers at $180, 12 young steers at 150, 2 cows at 139, 14 calves at 85.

Mantegazza, Sivori y Bado—

From Santa Fe: 60 steers at $215.

Juan Terrarossa e Hijos—

From Santa Fe: 15 steers at $235, 6 at 180, 24 cows at 140.

Martinez de Hoz Hnos.—

From General Belgrano: 3 steers at $135, 7 young steers at 95, 3 calves at 55.

Tomás Devoto y Cia.—

From General Pintos: 21 steers at $205; from Junin: 25 steers at 205, young steers at 157; from Pehuajó: 19 young steers at 130; from Santa Fe: 21 cows at 170.

Crespo y Rodriguez—

From Santa Fe: 4 bullocks at $245, 6 steers at 185; from Lincoln: 40 cows at 167, 4 heifers at 116; from Chacabuco: 64 steers at 210, 2 bullocks at 190, 15 cows at 150, 5 at 87, 5 heifers at 91.

Gioja y Etchart—

From Caseros: 18 cows at $168; from San Martin: 2 bullocks at 225; from B. Mitre: 2 cows at 97, 3 steers at 225, 3 cows at 160, 3 bullocks at 210; from Carmen de Arco: 18 steers at 124.

Juan Bayona—

From Chascomús: 1 cows at $148, 10 at 73, 3 heifers at 95, 1 at 55.

Rodolfo Guillon y Cia.—

From Berdier: 19 cows at $133; from Salto: 2 steers at 195, 15 at 98.

TRADE MARK

BACTERIOLOGICAL INSTITUTE

LIGNIERES HERMANOS

(Adolfo Marcelo & Luis Lignieres)

Vaccine & Serums for Stock

VACCINE for CARBUNCLO, MANCHA, TRISTEZA, ENTEQUE, TUBERCULINAS, LOMBRIZ - TIFUS EQUINO. Etc., Etc.

Rats Exterminated by Virus

The Vaccine, and Serums are personally and exclusively prepared by Adolfo Marcelo and Luis Lignieres, which ensures successful results.

ORDERS AND INFORMATION TO:

748 Pueyrredon 748 - Buenos Aires

Mr. Joseph Shepherd

1 HATTON GARDENS, LONDON.

Exporter of High-Class Pedigree Animals.

HEAVY DRAUGHT-HORSES SUITABLE FOR EXPORT PURCHASED

Local Representative:

Mr. A. Machattie,

San Martin 254, Buenos Aires.

SHEEP MARKET

ENTRIES: 5,738.

La Plata	2,192
Sansinena	1,110
Local butchers	860
Smithfield	423
Las Palmas	382
Argentino	375
La Blanca	90

Total 5,432

Prices for Wednesday

SALES.

Bargo, Lascrain y Etchegaray—

From Entre Rios: 25 ovejas mat. at $20, 52 at 16.20, 10 cord. mat. at 6.80, 11 bgos. frig. at 14, 116 cap. frig. at 15.20, 114 at 16.30.

Rodolfo Guillon y Cia.—

From P. Junta: 100 cord. frig. at $10.30, 50 at 10.30, 110 cord. mat. at 7.50.

Ignacio Goñi e Hijos—

From Chelforo: 342 cap. frig. at $15.

Estrugamon y Cia.—

From San Patricio: 128 cap. mat. at $21, 52 at 23.30; from Rawson: 85 cap. frig. at 16.50, 16 cord. mat. at 5.20.

J. B. Cases—

From Cabildo: 229 cap. frig. at $17.50, 170 ovejas mat. at 15.80, 69 at 15.80.

Bunge y Born—

From Chasicó: 90 cap. frig. at $19.

Fermin Ortiz—

From Hidalgo: 315 cap. frig. at $21.40.

Juan Apheca y Cia.—

From Toay: 57 cap. frig. at $17.30, 10 bgos. frig. at 12.50.

Juan Chapar y Cia.—

From A. Corti: 60 cord. frig. at $9, 40 cord. mat. at 6.90, 66 cap. frig. at 18, 94 ovejas mat. at 14.30.

Duboz y Rivera Ocantos—

From Peralta: 42 cap. frig. at $18, 30 cord. frig. at 8.80, 42 cord. mat. at 7.

Alejandro Schoo y Cia.—

From Blandengues: 95 cap. frig. at $20.90, 86 ovejas mat. at 18.

Salaberry y Bercetche—

From Saldungaray: 295 cap. frig. at $20, 14 at 16; from Macachin: 58 ovejas pel. mat. at 12.30, 35 cap. pel. mat. at 10.50, 16 bgos. pel. mat. at 11.50.

Juan Lalor—

From Cambaceres: 25 cap. mat. at $21, 32 ovejas mat. at 20.50, 27 cord. frig. at 11.50; from San Antonio: 122 cord. frig. at 6.20.

Unzué Alzaga y Cia.—

From San Jacinto: 124 cap. frig. at $18.80, 51 ovejas mat. at 13.80; from Donnecky: 85 cord. frig. at 9.30, 25 cord. mat. at 6.40.

Miguel Ardohain—

From Doblas: 65 cap. frig. at $17.70, 316 at 14.20; from Cabildo: 104 cap. frig. at 14.30, 96 bgos. frig. at 13.30.

Pedro y Antonio Lanusse—

RAILWAY TRAFFICS.

The subjoined traffic returns for the week ending Sep. 18 are compared with the corresponding week of last year

Railway.	Gross Take	Increase or Decrease	Inc. or Dec. per mile	Miles Open	Aggregate from July 1st.	Increase or Decrease
—	£	£	£	1914	1915	£
Central Railway	109,000	+ 7,000	+ 1 13 9	3,262	3,307	+164,100
Southern Railway	84,000	+ 25,000	+ 6 6 7	3,729	3,792	+141,000
Pacific Railway	70,000	+ 15,000	+ 4 3 5	3,517	3,534	+183,000
Western Railway	39,000	+ 2,000	+ 0 4 10	1,792	1,867	+ 76,000
Arg. North-Eastern Railway	7,034	+ 2,597	+ 2 14 0	667	752	+ 20,007
Central Cordoba	30,150	— 7,717	— 6 10 2	1,186	1,186	— 38,911
Central Uruguay	15,319	+ 3,601	+ 3 13 7	978	978	+ 40,562
Entre Rios Railways	9,200	+ 1,100	+ 12 12 1	730	730	+ 15,700
	$	$	$			$
Paraguay Central	476,458	+232,974	+ 913,62	255	255	+1,789,948

MEAT EXPORTS

The La Plata Cold Storage Company have sent to Liverpool by El Paraguayo 22,032 quarters of frozen beef.

The Sansinena Company advise despatch by the Paraná for Havre of 7800 carcasses of frozen mutton and 28,204 quarters frozen beef.

Smithfield and Argentine Meat Co. have forwarded to Liverpool by the Avon 42 fore and 83 hind quarters of frozen beef and 2209 carcasses of frozen mutton.

By the Zinal to Liverpool, the same Company sends 2411 each fore and hind quarters of frozen beef.

Las Palmas Produce Company advise despatch by the Avon to Liverpool of 1339 each fore and hind quarters of frozen beef.

By the Darro for Liverpool the La Blanca Company have sent 8498 quarters of frozen beef and by the Avon 2010 quarters of chilled beef.

The La Blanca Company advise despatch by the Vauban, for New York, of 6115 quarters of frozen beef and 1088 of chilled.

The Armour Frigorifico notify despatch for Liverpool by the Darro of 4447 fore and 4342 hind quarters of frozen beef.

By the Pardo for London, the same Company has sent away 5811 fore and 5971 hind quarters of frozen beef.

La Plata Cold Storage Company have sent to Bordeaux by the s.s. Brodliffe 18,466 quarters of frozen beef.

The Las Palmas Produce Company have shipped by the Pardo to London 7983 fore and 8320 hindquarters of frozen beef.

La Plata Cold Storage Company despatched by Darro for Liverpool 20,233 quarters frozen beef, and 7075 carcasses of mutton.

The Smithfield and Argentine Meat Company sent to London by Highland Pride, 553 fore and 893 hind quarters of chilled beef.

By the Vauban for New York were sent 1537 fore and 1579 hindquarters of chilled beef.

EXPORTATION OF HIDES

PROTEST AGAINST METHOD OF DISINFECTION.

An important question concerning the disinfection of hides for export to the United States is at the moment occupying the minds of the President of the Bolsa de Comercio and other persons of importance.

The system made necessary by American law is that hides shall be immersed in a solution of chloride of lime, and it is this law that exporters of hides are objecting to. It is claimed that the disinfectant is an expensive one and its use does much to prevent the exportation of hides. It is further suggested that sanitary precautions in this country are sufficiently strict and that this disinfection is unnecessary and caused a loss of 30 per cent. on the value of the skins.

The President of the Bolsa de Comercio is collecting all the necessary data, which he will forward to the American Chamber of Commerce in Washington and furthermore the Minister of Agriculture and the U.S. Ambassador are stated to be interesting themselves in the matter.

WESTERN RAILWAY DIVIDEND

FIVE PER CENT FOR THE YEAR.

The Board of the Buenos Aires Western Railway have recommended balance dividend of 3 o/o for the Half Year ended June 30, making with interim dividend already paid, a total of 5 o/o for the year, subject to Income Tax on Buenos Aires Western Railway Ordinary Stock, carrying forward £56,200.0.0. The dividend is payable on October 26. This necessitates the transfer of £160,000 from reserve. The general meeting of shareholders is to be held on October 26.

GRAIN MARKET

TERMINAL CEREAL MARKET.

First Ring.

Maize.
For October—200 tons darsena at $4.82.

Second Ring.

No operations.

REGISTERED CONTRACTS.

(Delivered in Buenos Aires).

Maize
For October—200 tons at $4.78 and 400 at 4.80. Total 600.

Wheat.
For January—200 tons at $9.80.

Official Prices.

Wheat.
For November Darsena. . . $11.50
For October Darsena. . . 11.55
For January Darsena. . . 9.85

Linseed.
For September Darsena. . . 11.20
For October Darsena. . . 11.20
For November Darsena. . . 11.40
For January Darsena. . . 11.70

Maize.
For September Darsena. . . 4.70
For October Darsena. . . 4.80
For November Darsena. . . 4.90

CHAMBER OF CEREALS QUOTATIONS.

Prices in the Bolsa de Comercio.

100 kilos waggon Darsena. --
(Available).

Linseed. 11.10
Wheat for bread 11.60
Do Barletta for Europe. . 11.30
Do do for bread. . . . 10.90
Do do (Export Europe). . 10.70
Do do (Export Brazil). . 11.60
Oats Bahia Blanca. . . . 6.50
Yellow maize. 4.75

NATIONAL PRODUCE EXCHANGE.

(Rosario de Santa Fe).

First Ring.

Maize.
For October—200 tons at $4.68.
For November—400 tons at $4.75.
400 at 4.74 and 200 at 4.73. Total 1600.

Linseed.
For November—100 tons at $11.15.

Second Ring.

Maize.
For November—200 tons at $4.73.
For December—400 tons at 4.85.
1000 at 4.83 and 200 at 4.84. Total 1600.

Official Prices.

Wheat.
For October. 11.90
For November. 11.70
Available. 11.85
For January. 9.80

Linseed.
For October. 10.80
For November. 11.00
Available. 10.70
For January. 11.60

Maize.
For October. 4.65
For November. 4.75
For December. 4.85
Available. 4.65

In Rosario.

Wheat No. 1. 12.20
Wheat No. 2. nominal
Linseed. 10.80
Maize. 4.60

W. & R. LEGGOTT, Ltd., (BRADFORD)

Locks and Padlocks

Padlocks in sets, with master keys.

ESPECIALLY SUITABLE for ESTANCIAS

Sole Agents for Argentina and Uruguay:

CHARLES D. FOWLER & CO.,

Buenos Aires: Montevideo:
Chacabuco 431 — Piedras 412.

PHILIP & CARRUTHERS

Camp and Live Stock Agents

Calle Cangallo 456

BUENOS AIRES

U.T. 3881 Avenida

WANTED: Heavy Horses
suitable for Exportation.

On Sale: Imported and Camp Bulls of all Breeds, Rams, Pigs, etc.

BLOODSTOCK SALES AT PALERMO

CHAPADMALAL SALES.

Wednesday, Sept. 29

There were one or two useful looking youngsters offered at the sale of yearlings of the Haras Chapadmalal yesterday afternoon at Palermo. Missel Thrush, Le Samaritain ex Leopard, and Lord Melton were the sires which figured the most prominently.

Linnet by Missel Thrush—Flor Morada was a nice clean limbed colt, sold to Senor Frugoni for $11,000, which price was perhaps rather high, and one which could have been preferred was Black-Cock, knocked down to Sr. C. Cardoso, for $10,000. Both these colts had the makings of winners, and appeared to have plenty to build upon.

Amongst the fillies Rusticana, a Missel Thrush from Segovia by Elmonside, was perhaps the cheapest animal in the sale. Knocked down for $600, she was worth at least three times the amount, and although perhaps a trifle light of bone, is a good class animal. The Stud Rancagua got a fair bargain in their purchase of a nice grey colt by Le Samaritain, called War Cry, Green Carnation, an attractive and pacy built colt by Missel Thrush—Flor Rosada, was the cheapest animal offered during the sale. He was bought by the Chiton Stud for $3000.

Altogether there was quite a nice lot of youngsters sold. Gorsum, a particularly nice yearling, who is sure to do well, was retained. The Curragh and Pelikan were two others which also did not come under the hammer. The sale realised some $76,300. The most attractive animals were sold as follows:—

Green-Falcon, by Missel Thrush and Teoria, $7000, to stud Armón.

Linnet, by Missel Thrush and Flor Morada, $11,000 to Sr. Frugoni.

Green-Carnation, by Missel Thrush and Flor Rosada, $3000, to stud Chiton.

Vizir, by Missel Thrush or Lord Melton and Suzanne, $800, to the stud Humilde (Mendoza).

Wales, by Missel Thrush or Lord Melton and Galilee, $3000 to Sr. Leopoldo Casenave.

Golden-Rod, by Missel Thrush and Blue Eyes, $4200, to Sr. P. Pais.

Black-Cock, by Missel Thrush and Devoniensis, $10,000 to Sr. C. Cardoso.

War-Cry, by Le Samaritain ex Leopard and Mantinea, $7500, to the stud Rancagua.

Robin, by Le Samaritain ex Leopard and Lada, $5000.

Floris, by Le Samaritain ex Leopard and Florican II. $1500 to Sr. S. Villar.

Frez, by Lord Melton and Florentina, $2700, to the stud Talisman.

Gamin, by Lord Melton and Lady Geof., $4000, to Sr. Segundo Peña.

Pinch, by Pincheira and Megara, $1200.

Pall Mall, by Pincheira and Miss Helyett, $900.

Forsight, by Vendome and Vlew, $900

Rusticana, by Missel Thrush and Segovia, $600.

Ash, by Missel Thrush and Ceniza, $1600.

Escocia, by Missel Thrush and Grenadine, $1500.

Malma, by Le Samaritain and Victoire, $900.

Sylvette, by Le Samaritain and Sylvanie, $1100.

Mrs. Joe, by Le Samaritain and Buena Suerte, $700.

Hallo, by Pincheira and Helen, $600.

Actress, by Pincheira and La Scala, $500.

Melpin, by Pincheira and Melpomenes, $1300.

Arabela, by Pincheira and Africa, $500.

Novelty, by Vendome and Anomaly, $400.

Goldie, by Pincheira and Golden Queen, $600.

OLD LINER LOST

DESTRUCTION OF THE HESIONE

A circumstance of the submarine campaign which is of more than usual local interest is the destruction of the s.s. Hesion, of the Houston Line, which has passed away at a ripe old age (for an iron vessel), having been on the River Plate route for about 26 years. On her way out to Buenos Aires with general cargo, she was attacked and torpedoed while crossing the war zone, and, being a vessel of low speed and unarmed, had, of course, "not an earthly" chance of escape. On August 7, she left La Plata for England with meat and produce. Some of the crew have landed, but a boat with 19 men is still missing. The Hesion was built in 1889 at Sunderland by Doxford and Sons, with a tonnage of 3663, length 360 ft., beam 42 and depth 20 feet 8 inches.

DUTCH STEAMER SUNK

ON HOMEWARD RUN FROM THE PLATE.

New York, Sept. 25.

A telegram from London announces that the Holland-American Company's steamer Eemdijk, 3048 tons gross register, has been sunk by a German submarine, the crew succeeding in escaping.

The Eemdijk, which was built at Rotterdam in 1910, sailed from Buenos Aires for Copenhagen on August 20 with 6,000 tons of maize.

PASSENGER LISTS

N.S.N.C. HIGHLAND PRIDE.

The Nelson liner, "Highland Pride," left Dock Central (La Plata) yesterday for London. Amongst the saloon passengers were Mr. and Mrs. Otto Carstensen, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Clarke, Mr. John Rickard, Mrs. H. H. Page, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Hatton, Mr. J. B. Pettigrew, Mr. M. MacDonald, Mr. James Mallon, etc., etc.

R.M.S.P. DARRO.

The following passengers left by the R.M.S.P. Darro from La Plata on Monday:—Mr. and Mrs. Donald S. Nelson, Messrs. Frank Austin, Rubens de Figueredo, Benamin de Olivera, Mr. and Mrs. Juan de Castro, Albert Kranz, Christopher Kranz, John Edgar, Hugh Morton, Andrew Blaxell, Alfred Coppens, Miss Alfreda Coppens, Patrick Mulvany, Miss Mary Masterton, José Lozada, Mrs. Carmen Balado, Mr. and Mrs. Ramon Gomez, Miss Clementina Gomez, Miss Isabel Gomez, and Andrés Bamonde.

R.M.S.P. DESEADO.

The following passengers arrived yesterday by the R.M.S.P. Deseado: Miss Margaret Buchanan, Miss Isabella Buchanan, Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Bugbee, Miss Helen Bugbee, Mr. John S. Bugbee, Mrs. A. B. Brown, Miss Irene Brown, Mr. Ralph de Castro, Mrs. L. A. Ephgrave, Master Walter G. Ephgrave, Mr. J. Etcheverry, Mr. A. D'Esposito, Mr. B. Goncalves, Dr. J. Halahan, Mr. Julius Klein, Mr. Louis Kahla, Mr. V. R. Kershner, and Mr. B. L. Muñoz.

N.Z.S. CO.'S ROTORUA.

The following passengers left on the New Zealand Shipping Company's R.M.S. Rotorua for England:—Mr. W. J. Evans, Mrs. A. A. Little, Mr. A. P. Little, Mr. and Mrs. E. Parkinson, Mr. C. E. Rogers, Mrs. R. P. Spencer, Mr. E. Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. R. Tyler, Mr. E. Gage, Mr. C. E. Reid, Mr. C. Rowell, Mr. H. C. Taylor, Mr. A. Brandon, Master R. Brandon, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Caultkett and infant, Mr. and Mrs. C. Coulson and infant, Mr. W. T. Graham, Mrs. Ida Hayes and infant, Mr. and Mrs. A. Hinks, Mr. and Mrs. King, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Law and infant, Mrs. H. R. Muir, Mr. C. Myles, Mr. S. Norris, Mr. E. J. Perry, Mr. M. Singh, Mr. J. Taylor, Mr. J. McGarvie Taylor, and Mrs. Taylor.

R.M.S.P. AVON.

The following passengers left by the R.M.S.P. Avon on Sept. 24: Mr. and Mrs. Raul da C. Bueno, Messrs J. Campbell, Sidney H. Rich, Joseph H. Sherrat, John Logan, Edgar W. Titjen, Juan D. Albertotti, Chauncey Eldridge and Sra., Bibiano P. Llorente, Mr. and Mrs. Juan Fernandez, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Gostling, Miss Josephine M. Chamonin, Louis S. Curt, Manuel Ballesteros, Colonel and Mrs. Cesar E. Pardo, Louis D. Ricci, Miss Suzanne M. E. Vital, Charles H. B. Ayre, Colonel Epaminondas Dutra, Custodio Puertas, Arturo C. Healy, George D. Seccombe, Mrs. Nella P. de Quintana, Ramon Crespo, Mrs. Elena O. de Crespo, Mrs. G. A. Ellison, Jean Ducasse, Claud J. Kennard, Archibald Gerbert, Manuel A. da Cunha, James E. Pamplin, Miss Clotilde Ruiz, Edward Howard, Mrs. Maria C. de Butos, Miss Josefina B. Chaves, James Hay, Miss Marie Zambranch, Miss Elisa Kabake, Enrique Pardo, and Mrs. Mannela R. Carbajal.

R.H.L. ZEELANDIA.

The following passengers arrived by the Zeelandia: Erich Vailland, Cornelia J. Wessels, Dirk Wessels, R. van Houten, Thyra Carlson, Emil Sagalla, Augusta de Landsheere, Castor Offermann, Juan A. Racete, Hery Cuyabere, Louis Maglioni, Margarete Maglioni, Magdalena Maglioni, Clara Maglioni, Josefa Maglioni, Josefina Maglioni, Enrique Catalaya, Luisa Cuaganhere, Eugenie Cuaganhere, Octavio M. de Liatera, Eulodia de Liatera, Octaviano de Liatera, Leopolda de Liatera, Maria de Liatera, Elizabeth Peterson, Otto Ree, Adele Ree, Charles Berl, Norman Bidell, Ellen Bidell, Enrique Moleiro, Enrique A. S. Reilly, Julio Reilly, Manuel B. Ficeal, Clara Sanches, Breingel Scherayfeld, Rafael Karmann, Anibal Pinheiro Bastos, Antonio de Romeire, Ernesto Bisjehoff, W. H. Wessels, Clara Kupper, Alfonso Hubant, Elisa Hubant, Ella Bleif, Hugo Braunseveid, Guilhelme Ostauch, Mathilda Frayan, Gualter Frayan, Serafin D. Castro, Josefa de Castro, Helena M. M. Yacquer, Raia Sarmo.

P.S.N.C. ORIANA.

The following passengers left on the P.S.N.C. Oriana yesterday:—Messrs. E. Pisano, A. Gilli, Jean Blanchard, Mrs. Magdalena Blanchard, Luis Blanchard, Miss C. Selinas, Joseph A. Daly, Pierre Ardalo, Alfonso Menendez, A. Menendez Behety, W. S. Brooks, Mrs. Sallie Bennett, Alberto Rosenberg, Julio Bianco, Valero Lecha, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Guilding, W. Guilding, Edward Guilding, Miss Hilda Guilding, Miss Sybil Guilding, Miss Maud Monington, Julio Cesar del Pino, J. Olivares, J. Mondejar, Antonio Rodriguez, P. Martinez, E. Requen, J. Olivares, Mrs. Eloisa Cevallos, Mrs. Maria Remeu, Mrs. Consuelo Cuello, Mrs. Jacinta Romeu, Mrs. Rosa Hermu, Carlos Perry, Mrs. Carolina McDaid, Arthur G. Bennett, Miss Geo. A. Bennett, Mrs. Isabel A. Oro, Guy M. de Bonnafos, Andres Bonvalet, Horacio Salerno, Roberto Patterson, Romulo L. Casal, Natalio Rogolini, Bartolomé Soler, W. T. Grieg, Emeterio F. Cordoba, Mrs. Cordoba, and Miss Ines Elorga.

R.H.L. "ZEELANDIA."

The following passengers leave on Friday for Europe or Brazil by the Royal Holland Lloyd Liner "Zeelandia," sailing at 4 p.m. for Amsterdam, via Santos, Rio de Janeiro, Bahia, Pernambuco, Lisbon, Vigo, and Falmouth:—Dr. Carlos Guimaraes, Sr. Jorge Rosette, Sra. Alicia Rosette, Sta. Marta Rosette, Sta. Renee Rosette, Sr. A. G. A. van Eelde, Sr. C. Bosman van Oudkarshel, Sr. A. M. Th. J. Jousen, Sta. Juana Jousen, Sr. Manuel Mellado, Sr. Jaime Rollemberg, Sr. Guillermo Rottcher, Sra. Carmensinda de Jesús de Carelo, Sr. Rodolfo J. Mones Cazon, Sr. Enrique Glucksmann, Sra. Josefina Skomiel-sky, Sra. Anna Polakoff, Sr. Antonio Honorio, Sr. Anibal Pinheiro Bastos, Sra. Raia Sarno, Sta. Paula Bozena Bauer, Sr. Zeferino de Jesús de Carelo, Sr. Manuel Rodriguez Pereira, Sra. Adela C. de Montes, Sr. José Antonio Montes, Sta. Mercedes, Sta. Margarita Bimler, Sr. José Cantel, Sra. Ernestina de Cantel, Sr. Nicolai Peter Tondering, Sr. Evaristo Touriño, Sr. Jorge Z. Henderson, Sr. Ernesto Bischoff, Sr. Avelino Arguelles Gonzalez, Ing. Ernesto Henri, Sr. Juan Billard, Sr. Oscar Weiss, Sr. Ruoff, Sra. Dora Braudt, Sr. Peter Stuart, Sta. Wald Galwa.

S.S. VAUBAN.

The Lamport and Holt steamer Vauban will sail this afternoon from La Plata on arrival of the 1053 train from Plaza Constitución station with the following passengers for New York:—Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Merritt, Mr. H. C. Ulen, Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey Eldridge, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Benitz, Mr. S. S. Buxton, Mrs. Minnie Bliss, Dr. Alfredo Ham, Mr. Charles W. Curtis, Jr., Mr. J. E. Reed, Mr. H. A. McComb, Major Wm. L. Kneeder, Mr. Wm. Thayer Tutt, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Lomas, Mr. Braulio Rodriguez Lima, Mr. F. E. Gessell, Mr. Balbino Fernandez, Mrs. Dolores Ortega, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Wolf, Mr. H. A. Cooper, Masters Raymond and Harry Wolf, Mr. Andre de Cop-pet, Mrs. Helen Clarke Ingres, Mr. H. G. Olds, Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Percy and infant, Mr. Olney P. Anthony, Mr. R. Weil, Mrs. Anna Nicolle, Mr. José Alonso, Mr. Alfredo D. Erosa, Mr. Herbert P. Hammond, Jr., Mr. John K. Houry, Mr. Alessandro Simona, Mr. J. E. Pamylin, Mr. Felice Vecchi, Mrs. Ada Paggi, Miss Valentina Paggi, Miss Rosa Zotti, Mr. John Hay, Mr. D. D. Thompson, Mr. G. Blankenship, Mr. M. Hess, Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Foley, Mr. J. C. Eccleston, Mr. Raul Baron, Miss Perfetta Cantova, Mr. Guiseppe Vogliotti, Mr. Guiseppe Corallo.

s.s. VASARI.

The Lamport and Holt liner Vasari is expected to enter the North Basin this morning with the following passengers from New York:—

Mr. Samuel Bickford, Mr. Robert Pitt, Mrs. Veronica Pitt, Mr. Hartley C. Laycock, Mr. Anderson A. Anwalt, Mrs. Laura Boley, Miss Wilhelmina Boley, Mrs. Agnes S. Zimmer, Master Meade H. Zimmer, Master John S. Zimmer, Mr. Cavin M. Hamilton, Mr. William Vogt, Mr. J. William Moulding, Mr. Chas. H. Hull, Mr. Andrew Oberg, Mr. Kilian Krapf, Mr. Karl A. Gunther, Mrs. Clarisse Gunther, Mr. Harry B. Jackson, Mr. Ira S. Powers, Mr. Robert G. Marr, Mr. Eusebio E. Garcia, Miss Maria M. Garcia, Master Carlos Garcia, Miss Sara Garcia, Miss Anna M. Garcia, Mr. Nicolas P. Santamarina, Mr. William A. Williams, Mr. Herbert R. Eldridge, Mr. Philip W. Henry, Mr. Bertram A. Shuman, Mrs. Austis C. Shuman, Masters Clark, Maurice and Philip Shuman, Miss Catherine Shuman, Mr. Miles I. Jackson, Mr. Aloys Becker, Mr. Meredith A. Finger, Mr. Benedict Weisz, Mr. Erwin Pledger, Mr. Edward P. Mack, Mr. L. Alberto Suarez, Mr. Enrique de Maria, Mr. Samuel F. Pottinger, Mr. Leopoldo Broggi, Mrs. Maria Luisa Broggi, Mr. Hector Valasquez, Mr. Hermann Rothenburg, Mr. Arthur Walser, Mrs. Ruth G. Walser, Mr. Harry Wasson, Mr. Charles Giessman, Mr. Fred Datschewski, Mr. Howard F. Loos, Mr. Edward J. Hemig, Mr. Edward Eickelberg, Mr. William J. Gibbs, Mr. Charles A. Chase, Mr. Burrell Chase, Mr. Benjamin E. Ninde, Mr. Richard J. Coll, Mrs. Julia Coll, Mr. Frederick G. Nass, Mrs. Bertha Nass, Mr. Marciano J. Garcia, Mr. Joseph Valentine, Mr. Cesar Sara, Alcira and Maria Salice, Miss Kathleen Anglin, Mr. Randolph M. Oates, Mr. Louis Ferguson, Mr. Charles M. Camp, Mr. Belsisario Al de Toledo, Mrs. Carmen de Alvarez de Toledo, Mr. Carlos Diaz Velez, Mrs. Mathilde Diaz Velez, Miss Mathilde Diaz Velez, Mr. James H. Carter, Mr. Ernest E. Ling, Mr. Francisco Bozstrom, Mr. Carlos Cuneo, Mr. Luis M. Faura, Miss Louise Lundstrom, Mr. Carlos Torres, Mrs. Ivonne Torres, Mr. Benjamin Vespoli, Mr. Michael Vespoli, Mr. Dick Thompson, Mr. Frank Hildebrandt, Mr. Alejandro Bibolini, Mr. Pedro S. Vela.

BAHIA BLANCA SHIPPING.

(From Our Correspondent.)

September 26.

Ingeniero White.

Celia, sailed on Sept. 24, for the West Coast.

Silksworth Hall, discharging coal for the F.C.S. and afterwards to load at elevators.

Monie F., American schooner, discharging timber.

T. and F. Lupton, American schooner, left for Buenos Aires.

Baron Baeyens, Belgian steamer, discharging coal for Wilson.

Port Galvan.

Cotovia, sailed for Rio, on Sept. 24.

Cambusdool, ship, discharging for Bunge and Born.

Cuaterros.

Greek steamer, discharging coal for Cory Bros.

Port Militar.

Penlee, discharging coal for the Government from the States.

Buenos Aires Herald

Weekly Illustrated Edition

CORRIENTES 672

Proprietor: THOMAS BELL.

All communications for the Editorial Department should be addressed to The Editor. Business letters should be addressed to The Manager. It is particularly requested that correspondence of an editorial or business nature should not be addressed to Mr. Bell, or to anyone personally, otherwise delay and inconvenience will result.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

WEEKLY.

Town or Camp:

Yearly $ 14 00
Half yearly 7 50
Quarterly 4 00

Other Countries:

Yearly (£1.13s.0d.) . . . $ 19.50 m/l
Half-yearly (17s.6d.) . . . 10 00
Quarterly (9s.7d.) . . . 5 50

DAILY.

Town or Camp:

Yearly $ 20.00 m/l
Half-yearly 11 00
Quarterly 6 00
Per month 2 00

Other Countries:

Per annum (£3.7s.3d.) . . $ 38.50 m/l
POST FREE; PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.

THE MAILS.

TO ARRIVE IN OCTOBER.

- 1.—French by PROVENCE.
- 2.—British by HIGHLAND LOCH.

TO LEAVE IN OCTOBER.

- 1.—Brazil, Great Britain and Holland by ZEELANDIA. Mails close at 2 p.m.

BIRTH.

PHILLIPS.—On the 6th inst., at Santiago del Estero 1317, Ethel Reed, wife of P. P. Phillips, of a son.

MARRIAGE.

COURREGES-GROVES.—On the 20th inst., Margaret Julie, second daughter of Mrs. Mary Courreges of this city, to Charles Percival, youngest son of Mrs. Groves of Lomas, F.C.S.

DEATHS.

BAISS.—On the 26th August, at 8, Burton Court, London, Arnold Baiss, aged sixty-seven.

CAMPBELL.—On the 28th inst., at Calle Caseros 654, Patrick Campbell, native of Wigtownshire, Scotland, and late of Estacion Lezama, F. C. Sud, aged 76 years.

CAIRNIE.—On the 29th inst., at 569 Calle General Hornos, Frances Elizabeth Ward, beloved wife of Thomas S. Cairnie, in her 49th year.

HIGGS.—On the 29th inst., at Crile 3 de Febrero 415, Quilmes, F. C. Sud, Andrew Peak Higgs, age 65 years.

MacKINNON.—At Las Palmas, Grand Canary, on the 25th inst., Roderick Dunbar MacKinnon, age 37, late of Buenos Aires.

HOMEWARD FIXTURES

The following vessels (says "The Times of Argentina") were fixed during last week to load homeward:—

s.s. Maldonado, 3000, 10 per cent., per; San Lorenzo; Holland; grain; 70s.

s.s. Pennine Range, 5,000, 10 per cent. pr.; San Lorenzo; U.K.; grain; 57s. 6d.

s.s. Clara, 3500, 10 per cent., per; San Lorenzo; U.K.; grain; 57s. 6d.

s.s. Begonia, 3800, 10 per cent. Oct.; San Lorenzo; U.K.; grain; 57s. 6d.

s.s. Etton, 4400, 10 per cent., Oct.; San Lorenzo; London; grain; 55s.

s.s. Euxenios, 4400, 10 per cent., pr.; Bahia Blanca, Rosario; U.K.; 1500 t. oats; 57s. 6d.; maize, 57s. 6d.

s.s. Sirra, 5000, 10 per cent., pr.; n/a Rosario; Buenos Aires, Genoa; grain; 55s.; option; 52s. 6d.

s.s. Alfalfa, 4400, 10 per cent., 20 Oct. can.; San Lorenzo; U.K.; grain; 53s. 9d.

s.s. Eug. S. Embiricos, 6600, 10 per cent. pr.; San Lorenzo; Holland; grain; 67s. 6d.

Buenos Aires Herald

ILLUSTRATED WEEKLY EDITION

39th Year. New Series, No. 586

Buenos Aires, Friday, October 8th, 1915

Price 30 Cents

ALLIES' GLORIOUS VICTORY

Result of Seven Days' Battle

Teuton Third Line Penetrated

King George and Kitchener Congratulate the Army

The first week of the great battle in the west has ended in victory for the Allies.

French troops have penetrated the German third line defences, and the British forces have taken many positions which had been regarded as semi-impregnable.

Sir John French, in a stirring despatch published this morning, pays a magnificent tribute to the Army, which has been warmly congratulated by His Majesty King George and by Lord Kitchener.

The following despatch, from Sir John French, was received, via the Foreign Office, by the British Legation last evening:—

OCTOBER 4, (1.10 p.m.).

SPECIAL ORDER OF DAY BY SIR JOHN FRENCH:

"WE HAVE NOW REACHED DEFINITE STAGE IN THE GREAT BATTLE WHICH COMMENCED SEPTEMBER 25th.

"OUR ALLIES IN SOUTH HAVE PIERCED ENEMY'S LAST LINE OF ENTRENCHMENTS AND EFFECTED LARGE CAPTURES OF PRISONERS AND GUNS. THE 10th FRENCH ARMY ON OUR IMMEDIATE RIGHT HAS BEEN HEAVILY OPPOSED, BUT HAS BRILLIANTLY SUCCEEDED IN SECURING IMPORTANT POSITION KNOWN AS VIMY RIDGE.

"OPERATIONS OF BRITISH FORCES HAVE BEEN MOST SUCCESSFUL, AND HAVE HAD GREAT AND IMPORTANT RESULTS. ON THE MORNING OF THE 25th SEPTEMBER 1st AND 4th CORPS ATTACKED AND CARRIED ENEMY'S FIRST AND MOST POWERFUL LINE OF ENTRENCHMENTS EXTENDING FROM OUR EXTREME RIGHT FLANK AT GRENAVY TO POINT NORTH OF HOHENZOLLERN REDOUBT, A DISTANCE OF 6,500 YARDS. THIS POSITION WAS EXCEPTIONALLY STRONG, CONSISTING OF DOUBLE LINE WHICH INCLUDED SOME LARGE REDOUBTS AND NETWORK OF TRENCHES AND BOMB-PROOF SHELTERS. DUG-OUTS WERE CONSTRUCTED AT SHORT INTERVALS ALL ALONG THE LINE, SOME BEING LARGE CAVES 30 FEET BELOW GROUND. 11th CORPS IN GENERAL RESERVE AND 3rd CAVALRY DIVISION WERE SUBSEQUENTLY THROWN INTO FIGHT, AND FINALLY 28th DIVISION.

"AFTER VICISSITUDES ATTENDANT UPON EVERY GREAT FIGHT, ENEMY'S SECOND LINE POSTS WERE TAKEN. COMMANDING POSITION KNOWN AS HILL 70 IN ADVANCE OF LOOS WAS FINALLY CAPTURED, AND A STRONG LINE ESTABLISHED AND CONSOLIDATED CLOSE TO GERMAN THIRD AND LAST LINE. MAIN OPERATION SOUTH OF LA BASSEE CANAL WAS MUCH FACILITATED AND ASSISTED BY SUBSIDIARY ATTACKS DELIVERED BY 3rd AND INDIAN CORPS AND TROOPS OF 2nd ARMY. GREAT HELP WAS ALSO RENDERED BY OPERATIONS OF 5th CORPS EAST OF YPRES, DURING WHICH IMPORTANT CAPTURES WERE MADE.

"I AM MUCH INDEBTED TO VICE-ADMIRAL BACON AND NAVAL COMRADES FOR VALUABLE CO-OPERATION OF HIS MAJESTY'S FLEET.

"OUR CAPTURES AMOUNTED TO OVER 3,000 PRISONERS AND SOME 25 GUNS, BESIDES MANY MACHINE GUNS AND A QUANTITY OF WAR MATERIAL. ENEMY SUFFERED HEAVY LOSSES PARTICULARLY IN MANY COUNTER-ATTACKS BY WHICH HE HAS VAINLY ENDEAVOURED TO WREST BACK CAPTURED POSITIONS, BUT WHICH HAVE ALL BEEN GALLANTLY REPULSED BY OUR TROOPS.

"I DESIRE TO EXPRESS TO THE ARMY MY DEEP APPRECIATION OF THE SPLENDID WORK ACCOMPLISHED AND THANKS FOR BRILLIANT LEADERSHIP DISPLAYED BY SIR DOUGLAS HAIG AND COMMANDERS WHO ACTED UNDER HIS ORDERS. IN THE MAIN ATTACK I WISH PARTICULARLY TO COMMENT UPON THE MAGNIFICENT SPIRIT, INDOMITABLE COURAGE AND DOGGED TENACITY DISPLAYED BY THE OLD ARMY, THE NEW ARMY, AND TERRITORIALS.

"I FEEL THE UTMOST CONFIDENCE AND ASSURANCE THAT THE SAME GLORIOUS SPIRIT WHICH HAS BEEN SO MARKED A FEATURE THROUGHOUT THE FIRST PHASE OF THIS GREAT BATTLE WILL CONTINUE UNTIL OUR EFFORTS ARE CROWNED BY FINAL AND COMPLETE VICTORY. 30th SEPTEMBER."

KING GEORGE'S CONGRATULATIONS

LONDON, OCT. 4.

THE FOLLOWING SPECIAL ORDER OF THE DAY HAS BEEN COMMUNICATED FROM BRITISH HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE:—

"THE FIELD MARSHAL AND COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF HAS RECEIVED THE FOLLOWING MESSAGES FROM HIS MAJESTY THE KING DATED SEPTEMBER 30:—

"I HEARTILY CONGRATULATE YOU AND ALL RANKS OF MY ARMY UNDER YOUR COMMAND UPON THE SUCCESS WHICH HAS ATTENDED THEIR GALLANT EFFORTS SINCE THE COMMENCEMENT OF THE COMBINED ATTACK. I RECOGNISE THAT THIS STRENUOUS AND DETERMINED FIGHTING IS BUT THE PRELUDE TO GREATER DEEDS AND FURTHER VICTORIES. I TRUST THE SICK AND WOUNDED ARE DOING WELL.—SIGNED GEORGE R. I.

THE FOLLOWING REPLY HAS BEEN SENT TO HIS MAJESTY AT BUCKINGHAM PALACE:—

"YOUR MAJESTY'S FORCES IN FRANCE ARE DEEPLY GRATEFUL FOR YOUR MAJESTY'S MOST GRACIOUS MESSAGE. THERE IS NO SACRIFICE THAT THE TROOPS ARE NOT PREPARED TO MAKE IN ORDER TO UPHOLD THE TRADITIONS OF YOUR MAJESTY'S ARMY, AND TO SECURE A FINAL AND COMPLETE VICTORY."

FIELD MARSHAL SIR JOHN FRENCH HAS RECEIVED THE FOLLOWING MESSAGE FROM LORD KITCHENER UNDER DATE SEPTEMBER 27:—

"MY WARMEST CONGRATULATIONS TO YOU AND TO ALL SERVING UNDER YOU, ON THE SUBSTANTIAL SUCCESS YOU HAVE ACHIEVED. MY BEST WISHES FOR THE PROGRESS OF YOUR IMPORTANT OPERATIONS."

BRITISH FORCES STILL PROGRESSING

New York, Oct. 6.

A telegram from London says that despatches from British headquarters in France and Flanders report that all is going well.

The British offensive was checked at some points, but elsewhere the attack is being vigorously pressed and further progress made.

TROOPS REPLACE COLONIALS DESPATCHED TO SERBIA.

London, Oct. 6.

It is asserted that several of the recently organised divisions in the United Kingdom have just been sent across the water to take their places in the British firing line in the place of some of the Colonial troops which are being despatched to the Balkans.

ARTILLERY DUELS AT GIVENCHY.

Paris, Oct. 6.

An official bulletin published this evening states:—

"The interchange of artillery fire has continued in the Artois region, being particularly severe to the south of the Givenchy forest.

"We made some progress with hand grenades in the underground galleries south-west of the castle of La Folie.

Elsewhere along the front there were only artillery duels in the Champagne region, between the Meuse and the Moselle, to the north of Flirey and on the Lorraine front round Peintrey, Gondrexon and Domogre."

GERMANS STRENGTHENING FORTIFICATIONS OF BELGIAN CITIES.

Paris, Oct. 6.

Amsterdam reports that the Germans are working with feverish haste at the defence works of Liege and Namur, and have also emplaced numbers of heavy guns between Lille and Douai. The German soldiers are forbidden to talk to the Belgians.

The German View

ALLIES' OFFENSIVE NOT YET AT AN END.

New York, Oct. 6.

A despatch from Berlin regarding the recent great offensive by the Allies reports that Major Morah, in an article to the "Tageblatt," says that although one of the Allied armies participating in the attack is already annihilated, other armies remain, and he does not consider that the offensive movement is yet entirely at an end.

A telegram to the Overseas Agency summarises the review of the situation contributed to the "Tageblatt" by Major Morah. It says that Morah states that the Army Order issued by Joffre showed that the French Government felt the necessity of acting, that the morale of the French troops was a subject of concern, and therefore the forces which were to attack were told that the great offensive was to end the war at once.

As a matter of fact, the Major points out, the attack did not break through to the open, but stopped at the second line. Nevertheless he believes that the enemy, notwithstanding heavy losses, has still large forces available, and he does not therefore expect that the attack is yet entirely terminated.

Cotton Shortage

CROP RETURNS CAUSE RISE IN PRICES IN NEW YORK.

New York, Oct. 5.

The publication of the Government report on the cotton crop yesterday resulted in prices on the Cotton Exchange jumping from 55 to 58 points.

The report indicates that the crop has only yielded 10,050,000 bales, this being the shortest since 1900.

GERMAN OFFENSIVE PARALYSED

Russians Relieve Pressure on Riga

VIGOROUS OPERATIONS AGAINST DVINSK

Italians' New plan of Campaign

Petrograd, Oct. 6.

The report has been confirmed that the German offensive in the direction of Riga has been paralysed.

The Russians have succeeded by means of vigorous counter-attacks in driving the enemy out of several entrenchments, capturing several prisoners and guns.

GERMANS IN RETREAT.

Paris, Oct. 6.

A telegram from Geneva states that the Russian forces to the east of Wisniew obtained possession of the Lida-Molodetchno railway.

The Germans are retiring, abandoning in their retreat great numbers of provision convoys, amongst which are 120 carts with the teams of horses and oxen.

The despatch adds that a Bavarian division was annihilated near Dvinsk, the Germans sustaining heavy losses without being able to advance.

GERMAN ACTIVITY BEFORE DVINSK.

Petrograd, Oct. 6.

Grand Duke Nicholas who has been appointed Commander-in-Chief of the Russian army in the Caucasus arrived to-day at Tiflis.

The Germans who are attempting to capture Dvinsk are operating with the same feverish activity as preceded the storming of Kovno. A field railway has been laid for twenty miles along the Vilkomir road and the heavy guns brought up, in the face of enormous difficulties. Day and night motorcars bring supplies of shells.

JAPANESE AID

ADVOCATED BY TOKIO PRESS.

Tokio, Sept. 30.

The Japanese newspapers are saying that although it might be a difficult matter to send troops to the assistance of Russia, there is no great obstacle in the way of despatching warships to the Dardanelles to co-operate with the British in the taking of Constantinople.

The papers add that delay on the part of the authorities might be fatal not only for the Allies but for Japan herself who at the end of the war might find herself enveloped in complications of a dangerous nature.

KUROPATKIN'S COMMAND

FAVOURABLE COMMENT IN PETROGRAD.

Petrograd, Oct. 1.

The appointment of General Kuropatkin to the command of a Grenadier regiment is welcomed by the newspapers which say that an officer of his experience and military talents will be of great value to the Russian army at this time.

It is expected that before long the Tsar will give the General a still more important appointment.

TSAR'S COUNCIL OF WAR

LENGTHY SITTING; NO NEWS.

Petrograd, Sept. 30.

A counsel of war over which Tsar Nicholas presided has been held at the headquarters of the General Staff, the consultation lasted for an unprecedented length of time and the strictest secrecy is maintained as to what passed.

Swiss "Patriots"

ONLY 16,000 RESPOND TO CALL FOR VOLUNTEERS.

Paris, Oct. 5.

A despatch from Basle delayed in transmission announces that the proclamation issued by the Swiss Government calling for volunteers to form a special corps for the defence of the country completely failed to attain its object, only 16,000 responding to the summons whereas 150,000 had been expected.

The Government is now considering the question of adopting compulsory enlistment.

Swiss Neutrality

AGAIN VIOLATED BY GERMAN AIRMEN.

Geneva, Oct. 5.

German aviators have again violated the neutrality of Switzerland, crossing the frontier and dropping bombs at various points.

The Government of the Confederation is about to protest again to the Berlin Foreign Office.

Rewarded for Kindness!

SWISS AUTHORESS IMPRISONED IN GERMANY FOR FEEDING RUSSIAN CAPTIVE.

London, Oct. 5.

Fraulein Ruegg, a Swiss writer, is reported to have returned to Zurich from a twenty-two days' trip to Germany, whereof twenty days were spent in prison for having given a Russian prisoner five lozenges and two hot sausages.

Europe's New "Sick Man"

FRANZ JOSEF AGAIN REPORTED ILL.

New York, Oct. 6.

A telegram from Rome to the Associated Press says:—

"It is reported on good authority here that Emperor Francis Joseph is dangerously ill. The Crown Prince has been called to Vienna, and Baron Burian and Count Tisza have also been summoned to the capital.

"The news of the Emperor's illness has been kept secret up to this time for fear of the influence it might have upon the international situation."

ITALIANS' NEW PLANS

No Direct Attack on Trieste

GORIZIA THE IMMEDIATE OBJECTIVE

Rome, Oct. 6.

Despatches from Udine report a rumour that the Italian General Staff is considering the abandonment of the plan for a direct assault on Trieste so as to avoid destroying the city by gunfire. The new plan is first to capture Gorizia and its entrenched camp, one of the Austrians' strongest neutral fortifications, and continue the advance by the Carso table land, keeping Trieste on the right and cutting it off from the rest of Austrian territory.

ITALIAN TROOPS TAKE MOUNTAIN OF TORREONE.

Rome, Oct. 6.

A despatch from General Headquarters dated the 5th instant and published to-day says:—

"On the night of the 3rd instant one of our mountain detachments in the Tonale region scaled the precipitous mountain of Torreone at the head of the Strino valley, drove away some bodies of the enemy's troops posted on the summit and destroyed the defence works they had begun to construct. The action being seconded by heavy fire from our batteries, the enemy had to retire to his lines. Our guns continued the bombardment in order to prevent access to the mountain and an attempt to recapture it."

"In the Fella valley on the following night an attempt on the part of the enemy to attack our positions on Pontebba was repulsed.

"On the Carso a new movement of trains on the Trieste line between Nabresina and San Giovanni stations was marked by the customary artillery actions."

AUSTRIAN GENERALS SUPERSEDED.

Milan, Oct. 6.

It is reported that seven Generals in the Austrian army have been relieved of their commands because of the failure of the invasion of Italy.

Italy and the Huns

A GERMAN PROTEST.

New York, Oct. 6.

According to a radiogram from Berlin, the "Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung" publishes a denial of the assertions made by the Italian Minister, Signor Barzilai, in his recent speech at Naples, to the effect that the German Ambassador at Constantinople, Baron von Wangenheim, had informed Signor Garroni, the Italian Ambassador to the Turkish capital, on July 14 last year that the Austrian Note to Serbia would make war inevitable. The paper says that neither Wangenheim nor the German Government knew in advance the text of the ultimatum to Serbia. Moreover, the conclusions drawn by Barzilai are incorrect. According to the provisions of the Triple Alliance agreement, each party to the alliance was obliged to maintain a friendly neutrality in case the other parties were forced to declare war because their safety was threatened. Therefore Italy was bound to a policy of friendly neutrality if she really considered her allies to be the aggressors.

Murderers Rewarded

MORE ASSASSINS IRON-CROSSED

New York, Oct. 6.

Advices from Berlin state that the Kaiser has conferred the Iron Cross on all the German aviators who have taken part in the Zeppelin raids.

Italy and England

"BOUND BY TIES WHICH EXIST BETWEEN NO OTHER COUNTRIES."

London, Oct. 6.

Chevalier Bochi has returned from Italy, where he has been working in connection with the Italian Flag Day, which will be celebrated in London on Thursday.

Asked about the feeling of Italy towards England, the Chevalier said that it was like that between brother and sister, and could not be stronger. In other respects also Italy and England are bound by ties which exist between no other countries.

As the years went by the people of Italy felt the growing weight of German oppression; and after the war started and they witnessed the barbarism of the Huns, they received such an impression that the mark of disgrace left upon her former Allies will leave with Italy a hate that will not disappear for many years.

Poison Gas

USED AGAINST THE ITALIANS.

Rome, Oct. 5.

A despatch from General Cadorna's headquarters reports as follows:—

"There have been artillery actions at various points along the front.

"The enemy's batteries fired a large number of shells at the Cormons railway station without doing any damage.

"Our artillery bombarded with good effect points of observation of the enemy's artillery, and transport columns on the march.

"It is established that the adversary is using shells containing gases which affect the eyesight; but our troops, by means of glasses and other methods, protect themselves from the effects.

"The heavy rains that have fallen in the lower Isonzo region have not diminished the activity of our troops nor checked the progress of the approachment works."

Conspiracy in Formosa

500 RINGLEADERS SENTENCED TO DEATH.

Tokio, Oct. 6.

It is announced that the Japanese authorities discovered a seditious conspiracy of wide extent in the island of Formosa. Over 500 of the conspirators are stated to have been sentenced to death.

The papers report that seven of the ringleaders in the conspiracy have already been executed.

Progress in Persia

ANGLO-RUSSIAN CO-OPERATION.

New York, Oct. 6.

Tiflis reports having received information from Teheran that the co-operation of British and Russian troops in Persia is announced.

The successes obtained by the British on the Tigris has made a deep impression on the Persian chiefs. The Turks and Germans are uneasy, and the German Minister and Consuls have applied to the American Minister for protection if required.

U. Boat's Success

FRENCH AUXILIARY CRUISER SUNK IN THE MEDITERRANEAN.

New York, Oct. 6.

Private information has been received that on September 9 a Teuton submarine sank a French auxiliary cruiser which was anchored at Rhodes Island.

KING CONSTANTINE DETERMINES ON NEUTRALITY.

M. Venizelos' Resignation Accepted

POLITICAL CHAOS IN GREEK CAPITAL

Allied Army's Disembarkation Continues

London, Oct. 6.
A telegram from Athens announces that King Constantine has accepted M. Venizelos' resignation.

CONSTANTINE REJECTS VENIZELOS' POLICY.

Paris, Oct. 6.
The report is confirmed by a telegram from Athens that the Greek Prime Minister, M. Venizelos, has resigned, the King having sent for him and informed him that he could not support the policy adopted by the Government under M. Venizelos.

POPULAR ENTHUSIASM FOR VENIZELOS.

Athens, Oct. 6.
Last night a large crowd marched to the residence of M. Venizelos, where they sang the national anthem and cheered him and the French Government frantically.

KING TO ATTEMPT TO FORM COALITION CABINET

It is expected that the King will endeavour to form a coalition Cabinet with either M. Gounaris or M. Phallis as Premier. If this is unsuccessful, Parliament will be dissolved.

GREEK SESSIONS SUSPEND SITTINGS.

Paris, Oct. 6.
The representative in Athens of Havas Agency reports that the sessions of the Greek Chamber of Deputies have been suspended on account of the resignation of the Prime Minister.

FRENCH TROOPS LANDED AT SALONICA.

London, Oct. 6.
The London papers state that news has been received from Salonica announcing the arrival of more transports with French troops which have been landed.

GREECE SPLIT INTO TWO CAMPS.

New York, Oct. 6.
Despatches from London say that the chief topic of the day is the resignation of the Greek Premier, M. Venizelos.

The attitude which King Constantine will assume and the manner in which the crisis will be resolved are as yet matters of conjecture, but it is recognised that the situation is a very delicate one.

It seems plain that, despite the reports to the contrary, fundamental differences exist between the King and M. Venizelos as to the policy to be adopted under present circumstances. The latter, as is known, is a fervent and inflexible partisan of the Entente and wishes Greece to abandon her neutrality and side openly with the Allies. The King, on the contrary, considers that the interests of the country will best be served by a strict adherence to neutrality.

Public opinion also is divided, one part of the nation following the King while the other sides with the Prime Minister. The military party, whose leaders took part in the two Balkan wars and led the army to victory, back the King, considering that Greece is not sufficiently prepared for joining in the tremendous contest, and that it would be more prudent not to engage the country in a hazardous adventure.

They also hold that Greece is not obliged to defend Serbia, as the treaty of Bucharest was automatically broken by the action of Serbia in leading herself to the discussion of the Allies' proposals in regard to the cession of territory to Bulgaria.

The party behind M. Venizelos also is a strong one, consisting of patriotic and intelligent men who hold that the life or death of the nation depends upon the action it takes in the present conflict. They desire Greece to declare definitely for the Powers of the Entente and enter the arena with as little delay as possible.

LANDING OF ALLIED FORCES TO PROCEED.

Paris, Oct. 6.
It is officially announced that the resignation of M. Venizelos will not interrupt the landing of troops for the support of Serbia. The landing is going on without interference.

LARGE ALLIES' ARMY FOR THE BALKANS.

Athens, Oct. 6.
It is stated that the Allies have 150,000 troops fully provided with heavy artillery and everything necessary at Salonica ready to march to the support of Serbia.

The British will immediately land troops at other ports.

It is further declared that an army of 700,000 strong will be raised in a short time to oppose the plans of the Teutons in the Balkans.

The Uskub-Gheveli railway is being guarded by French troops.

IS VENIZELOS FOLLOWING PRECEDENT SET BY SALANDRA?

Athens, Oct. 6.
It is believed in certain circles of this city that the resignation of M. Venizelos is a political manoeuvre, his action being like that of Signor Salandra a few days before Italy entered upon the war.

Some statesmen think that the King will have much difficulty in forming a new Cabinet, and that he will finally accept the policy of M. Venizelos.

On the other hand there is the fact that the majority upon which M. Venizelos could reckon in Parliament has considerably fallen off lately, as is shown by the voting of yesterday. Further, there are eminent statesmen in favour of neutrality, M. Gounaris, who possesses undeniable prestige in the country, being among them.

PRESIDENT POINCARÉ'S ACTION.

Paris, Oct. 6.
This morning President Poincaré summoned a full meeting of the Cabinet at the Elysée to discuss the Balkan situation and adopt urgent measures. It is recognised that the matter is very serious, and demands the utmost rapidity and energy.

GREECE'S ATTITUDE

Statement by M. Venizelos

POSITION OF ALLIED ARMIES

CONSTANTINE WILL ENDEAVOUR TO UNDO WORK OF VENIZELOS.

London, Oct. 6.
Rumania's swift action in massing troops along the Bulgarian frontier is believed here to be due to dissent from King Constantine's pro-German attitude and his acceptance of the resignation of the Ministers in the face of a vote of confidence in Venizelos, who regarded with open defiance both the King and the Legislative body.

Advices from Athens indicate that the King has taken personal control of the Government and will endeavour to undo the work of Venizelos, who was acting in accord with the Entente for the protection of Serbia.

POSSIBLE RE-EMBARKATION OF ALLIED ARMIES.

London, Oct. 6.
The hopes of the Allies in regard to the Balkans have received a severe blow. Greece and Rumania have seemingly abandoned Serbia to a combined attack on all sides. The sudden upheaval at Athens has completely overshadowed the Russo-Bulgarian situation. The capitals of the Allied Powers are now positive that Bulgaria will take her place with the Central Empires and have turned to more startling developments at the Greek capital.

The Crown Prince of Greece has started with his staff for Salonica. No intimations of his intention have reached here; but in view of the sudden change of the policy of the Government, the situation at Salonica is causing apprehension. Whether King Constantine, who objected to the landing of the Allies, will attempt to force the French to re-embark, or will order the Greek armies to prevent their advance into Serbia, is one of the puzzling questions arising out of the resignation of M. Venizelos.

BULGARIAN PROMISE TO GREECE

Athens, Oct. 6.
The capital is in a great state of

VENIZELOS' MINISTERS FAIL TO SUPPORT VOTE OF CONFIDENCE

Paris, Oct. 6.
The breach between King Constantine and M. Venizelos was totally unexpected in Paris and has caused a painful surprise.

It is believed that although the King signed the order for mobilisation and consented to the landing of the Allied troops at Salonica, he does not want to go to war.

Bulgaria wants Salonica. Germany covets Asia Minor; and Bulgaria is siding with Germany in digging the grave of Hellenism.

It is admitted that the task before the Anglo-French forces has become harder, but it is not beyond their strength.

The attack of Bulgaria upon Serbia is expected soon.

Venizelos resigned because his war policy was not even supported by his Ministry. According to a despatch from Athens, eight other members were silent when the vote of confidence was taken in the Chamber.

ALLIED FORCES WARMLY RECEIVED IN GREECE.

Athens, Oct. 6.
France and Britain are landing troops near Salonica in pursuance of their policy of protecting Serbia.

The soldiers of the Allies have been warmly welcomed by the people and the Greek military leaders.

The Allies are sending the forces by railway to Nish.

excitement, and there is much discussion over the formation of a coalition Cabinet.

The Bulgarian Premier has assured the Greek Minister at Sofia that Bulgaria will not attack Serbia unless aggressive action against her is first taken by Austria and Germany, in which case Bulgaria will be obliged to act against her neighbour.

There are rumours that by opposing and defeating the policy of M. Venizelos, the King is facing a revolution which may cost him his throne, and that it is necessary for the Powers of the Entente to give assistance to Serbia.

The King apparently is determined definitely not to give aid to Serbia unless Bulgaria also invades Greece.

M. Venizelos' Statement

PROTEST AGAINST LANDING OF ALLIES.

Athens, Oct. 6.
The following statement was issued officially by M. Venizelos:

"After the meeting last night the French Minister delivered the following announcement to the Premier:

"By order of my Government I have the honour to announce to Your Excellency the arrival at Salonica of the first detachment of French troops. I declare at the same time that France and England, Allies of Serbia, send their troops to help the latter as well as to maintain their communications with her, and that the two Powers count upon Greece, who already has given them so many proofs of friendship, not to oppose the measures which have been taken in the interests of Serbia, of whom she also is an Ally."

"M. Venizelos replied: "In your letter Your Excellency has been so good as to inform me that you will accept my answer thereto. I have the honour to declare to Your Excellency that, being a neutral in the European war, the Royal Government could not possibly authorise the proceeding in question for it constitutes a breach of Greece's neutrality, the more manifest since it comes from two great belligerent Powers."

"It is therefore the duty of the Royal Government to protest against the passage of foreign troops across Greek territory. The circumstance that these troops are destined solely to aid Serbia, Greece's Ally, in no way modifies the legal position of His Majesty's Government. Even from the Balkanic point of view, the neutrality of Greece could not be affected before an actual casus foederis was committed by the danger now threatening Serbia, which has caused the despatch of international troops to her help."

"Violating Greek Neutrality"

GERMAN PRESS HYPOCRISY.

Amsterdam, Oct. 6.
The German newspapers say that the Allies, by landing troops at Salonica, have discarded the theory of the inviolability of neutrality which they have been upholding ever since the war broke out. The landing of troops at Salonica was a violation of Greek neutrality, just as the presence of German troops in Belgium at the opening of the war was a violation of the Belgian neutrality. The only difference between the two cases is that Greece had not undertaken to defend the Germans, while Belgium had engaged to support the British.

SNOW IN BRITAIN

HERALDS APPROACH OF WINTER

London, Sept. 30.
The first snow of the approaching winter has fallen on the mountains on North Wales. The peaks in Derbyshire also are covered by snow.

BULGARIAN ULTIMATUM TO SERBIA

Reported Demand for Restitution of Macedonia.

RUMOURED REJECTION OF RUSSIAN DEMANDS

Balkan States on Eve of War

Petrograd, Oct. 6.

The "Exchange Gazette" says that the Serbian Archimandrite, Michael has received information that Bulgaria has rejected the demands of Russia.

She has sent an ultimatum to Serbia demanding the cession of the territory in Macedonia, of which she was deprived by the treaty of Bucharest, and giving twenty-four hours for a definite reply.

BULGARIAN MOBILISATION COMPLETED.

London, Oct. 6.

In all the capitals of Europe the news has been published that Bulgaria has completed the mobilisation of her army and has sent an ultimatum to Serbia demanding the return of the territory in Macedonia, giving twenty-four hours for a reply.

BELLICOSE BULGARIAN PREMIER

New York, Oct. 6.

A radiogram from Berlin reports the receipt of despatches from Sofia announcing that the Bulgarian Premier, M. Radoslavoff, has delivered a speech in Parliament declaring that war with Serbia is imminent. He continued:—

"We must defend our national rights, and take from our enemies by force what they wrested from us two years ago.

"We shall fight until we obtain satisfaction for all the insults which at that time were heaped upon the majesty of Bulgaria."

TEUTON OFFICERS IN COMMAND

Paris, Oct. 6.

"Le Matin" says that the principal commands in the Bulgarian army have been assumed by three thousand Austro-German officers.

KAISER TO REVIEW INVADING ARMIES.

Amsterdam, Oct. 6.

Private communications from Berlin state that the concentration of the Austro-German troops on the Danube is almost complete, and that the Kaiser will review the troops before they commence operations on a grand scale.

MEN AND MUNITIONS FOR SERBIA.

New York, Oct. 6.

A despatch from Nish says that the Serbians are awaiting the German attack with confidence, relying on the despatches from London printed by the newspapers that the Allies can send them 300,000 troops and an unlimited quantity of artillery and ammunition.

These troops will be not only British, but French and Italian.

TURKS MARCHING TO EFFECT JUNCTION WITH BULGARIANS.

New York, Oct. 6.

A telegram from Constantinople sent via Berlin says that Turkish troops are marching to support the Bulgarians, and that a junction with them will shortly be effected.

4000 TEUTON OFFICERS IN SOFIA.

Sofia, Oct. 6.

Four thousand German officers are in this city, and more are arriving daily from Turkey.

RUMANIA RUSHES TROOPS TO BULGARIAN FRONTIER.

London, Oct. 6.

Rumania is reported to be rushing troops to the Bulgarian frontier and hastily fortifying her port of Giurgev on the Danube, besides taking other military precautions.

BULGARIA THE VICTIM OF GERMAN MACHINATIONS.

Petrograd, Oct. 6.

The correspondent at Nish of the "Novoe Vremya" sends the following details of an interview with the Serbian Premier:—

"The Premier told me that, in order to mask her real aims Bulgaria has again advanced the Macedonian question, which is essentially a Slavic family affair, of secondary importance at a time of a world-war. He continued:—

"During last year we twice officially offered to Sofia to make any reasonable agreement concerning Macedonia, in addition to which the Entente has repeatedly attempted to reach a peaceful solution of the question in order to avert the danger threatening Slavdom.

"All these efforts were unsuccessful, because there was no critical Macedonian question; but now, through German influence, Bulgaria is in complete subordination to German interests. Germany is not interested in Slavic affairs, but is merely using the Macedonian question in order to promote her hegemony in the Balkans with a view to the complete conquest of the Near East."

"OCTOBER THE DECIDING MONTH."

New York, Oct. 6.

Tuckerton wireless station has received a communication from Berlin stating that the "Berliner Zeitung Ammitag" reproduces an interview with the Bulgarian Minister at Berlin which appeared in a Leipzig evening newspaper.

The Minister is represented to have declared that October would probably be the deciding month of the war. The interview is summarised by the "Zeitung" as follows:—

"The Entente will try to force Bulgaria to demobilise by threatening to land troops at Salonica; the latter action being possible, since the Entente, as everyone knows, does not respect the rights of other nations. For Bulgaria there are only two possibilities, either to demobilise or to take action. The decision cannot be long delayed."

The "Zeitung" continues that the Minister, M. Ritzov, then reviewed the Balkan situation and declared that King Constantine knew his own mind well, and that the Greek General Staff was firmly convinced that the Central Powers would be the victors. Likewise King Ferdinand counterbalanced the influences of the Entente in his kingdom.

The Minister concluded with the statement that it was not always easy for Balkan diplomatists to voice anti-Russian sentiments freely.

LOYAL BULGARIANS

DISLIKE OF FIGHTING AGAINST ALLIES.

Paris, Oct. 2.

The Bulgarian community in Paris have sent the following message to King Ferdinand:—

"We are ready to obey the summons of the Government, and to die in the defence of our country; but we trust that the war will not be against Russia our liberator, England our protector, nor France our best friend. A war against the Allies would be a fratricidal war."

TURCO-BULGARIAN AGREEMENT

BULGARS TO OCCUPY FRONTIER FORTRESSES.

Athens, Oct. 4.

It is known that, in accordance with the treaty with Bulgaria, Turkey has evacuated the fortresses held by her on the Bulgarian frontier.

The Bulgarians will take possession of the fortresses on the date stipulated in the agreement.

GENERAL SIR H. LESLIE RUNDLE,

PRO-RUSSIAN BULGARIAN MINISTER AT PETROGRAD.

Paris, Oct. 6.

M. Madjarloff, the Bulgarian Minister at Petrograd, disapproves of the policy of his Government, and in the event of an outbreak of hostilities he will follow the example set by his predecessor, M. Radko Dimitrieff and will ask permission to become a naturalised Russian subject and offer his services in that capacity.

BULGARIA'S SCHEME FOR DELAYING EVENTS.

London, Oct. 6.

The Petrograd correspondent of the "Morning Post" says that it has been learned that Bulgaria expected to be able to procrastinate while the mobilisation of her army was under way. The impracticable character of the Russian Note proved disconcerting to the Bulgarian politicians, who are reported to have gone so far as to frame a careful reply to the inquiries from Russia regarding the presence of German officers at Sofia. Their plan was to grant leave of absence to the Germans and thus be able to deny their presence.

This is believed to have been the basis for the denial issued at Sofia on Saturday. If necessary to appease Russia, Bulgaria was prepared even to send the Germans back to Turkey until mobilisation was complete.

The Russian Minister to Bulgaria, M. Savinski, who has been recalled by his Government, has just undergone an operation for appendicitis and will be unable to travel for some time. He will therefore remain at Sofia as a private individual.

It is semi-officially announced that the representatives of the other Powers of the Quadruple Entente have already left Sofia.

Soldier-Journalist Killed

DEATH OF "MORNING POST" LEADER-WRITER IN ACTION.

London, Oct. 5.

The "Morning Post" records the death of Capt. E. Moyna in the battle of Sept. 26.

The deceased was leader-writer for that paper. He was of Irish-Scottish extraction. He was born in Chile, and when a boy was under fire in the Chilean revolution.

British General "Gassed"

BRIGADIER-GENERAL STRICKLAND IN HOSPITAL.

London, Oct. 5.

Brigadier-General E. P. Strickland who was decorated for his services in the Sudan campaign and in the battle of Khartoum, is lying in hospital a victim of asphyxiating gas. His name is one among hundreds of others of officers which appear in the casualty list published to-day.

The Arabic Case

BERNSTORFF AGAIN RE-ASSURES LANSING.

New York, Oct. 5.

The German Ambassador had an interview to-day with the United States Secretary of State. Count Bernstorff assured Mr. Lansing that the affair of the Arabic would be satisfactorily arranged.

GERMANY WILL PAY INDEMNITY

Washington, Oct. 5.

The Secretary of State has announced that Germany has disavowed the sinking of the Arabic, but is prepared to pay an indemnity for the American lives lost on that occasion.

Dumba Departs

ON BOARD DUTCH LINER FOR EUROPE.

Washington, Oct. 5.

The Austrian Ambassador, Dr. Dumba, left to-day by the Dutch liner, Nieuw Amsterdam, for Europe.

German Steamer Sunk

BRITISH SUBMARINE SUCCESS IN THE BALTIC.

London, Oct. 5.

It is announced that a British submarine in the Baltic Sea sank the German steamer Svionia, 2797 tons. The crew were rescued.

MARITIME TRAFFIC SUSPENDED.

Copenhagen, Oct. 5.

Maritime traffic has been suspended between Sassnitz and Trelborg.

One explanation of this step is that the steamers have been requisitioned for use as transports for German troops, and another is that British submarines have made travel on this route unsafe.

Sunk by the Sea Huns

FRENCH VESSEL LOST.

Marseilles, Oct. 5.

On Sunday morning last an Austrian submarine sank the French steamer Provincia, 3523 tons displacement, off Cerigo, one of the Ionian islands, the crew of forty men being saved. The owners, MM. Cyprien, Fabre and Company, have been informed of the loss by the marine authorities.

CONSCRIPTION AGAIN THREATENED

"IF THEY DO NOT COME I WILL FETCH THEM," SAYS KITCHENER

London, Oct. 4.

The results of the great recruiting rally in England on Saturday are not yet known, but it is generally understood that the Secretary for War will get the necessary number by one means or another.

"I know how many men I want," he told the Labour leaders; "I know their names, and the numbers on their doors. If they do not come I will fetch them."

"Give me the men and munitions I want, and I guarantee that we shall have the war in the hollow of our hands."

BRITAIN'S NEW ARMIES 1,000,000 MEN IN FRANCE 500,000 REINFORCEMENTS TO FOLLOW

New York, Oct. 1.

A telegram from London says that as soon as the new Canadian contingents now on the way to England arrive they will be sent to join the expeditionary forces in the north of France and Flanders.

The War Office will also despatch to the front the Scottish and Irish divisions which are already sufficiently trained to take their places in the firing line.

London, Oct. 1.

It is stated that according to authentic data the British army in France is now 1,000,000 strong. Another 500,000 men are to be despatched shortly, and more will follow if required.

THE ZEPPELIN PERIL

LONDON ADOPTS PARISIAN PRECAUTIONS.

London, Oct. 2.

Owing to the new police regulations regarding lights, scores of minor accidents to traffic were reported today, but the populace is readily adapting itself to the anti-Zeppelin precautions.

In the streets all the lights are darkened, and the searchlights which used to sweep the sky are no longer in evidence.

The changes have been made on the recommendation of the Parisian authorities, who have been successful in frustrating these raids.

FRENCH AIRMEN'S AID

ARRIVAL IN BRITAIN TO COPE WITH ZEPPELIN PERIL.

London, Oct. 1.

About a dozen French aviators have come across to England to help in training the men and to assist the British airmen in the task of repelling the Zeppelins.

LIBERAL M.P. KILLED

London, Oct. 1.

Captain Harold Thomas Cawley, Liberal M.P. for the Heywood division of Lancashire, has been killed in action at the Dardanelles.

Captain Cawley, who was unmarried, was born in June 12, 1878. He was educated at Rugby and New College, Oxford. He was called to the Bar in 1902.

73 PIRATE CRAFT SUNK

CAMPAIGN AGAINST SUBMARINES

U.S. ENGINEER'S ASSERTION

New York, Oct. 1.

An American engineer who has returned from Europe where he has been seeing service with the Allies in France and Flanders declares that the British have captured or sunk over 73 German submarines by means of electric detectors.

CANADIANS FOR EUROPE

SECOND DIVISION'S BAPTISM OF FIRE.

Ottawa, Oct. 2.

The Canadian Militia Department has been advised that the Second Canadian Division has been in the trenches since last Saturday and had its baptism of fire. The casualties in the first engagement have not been heavy.

It is understood that twelve more battalions will soon be sent to England to replace those of the Second Division which have been sent to France.

THE MUNITIONS PROBLEM

ATTITUDE OF FRENCH MUNITION'S MINISTER.

Paris, Sept. 30.

The French Minister of Munitions, M. Albert Thomas, stated in an interview with some Press representatives that while he claims that the French artillery is now taking its normal part in the operations on the western front, greater things still remain to be accomplished. He declared:—"We must go as far as the resources of the country will permit, and further than our actual resources, for there remain others yet to be created."

"The first news received from the front convinces me that we must do more, always more. All sorts of offers of work are pouring in, but these require sifting. Our role is to direct the energies of the nation in the right channels. Shells cannot be gathered like nuts."

"The results of the last few days show the enormous nature of that already accomplished; but we need more works, still more organisation, more enterprise. Much remains to be done in the way of discipline and organisation."

"There are people who see in the necessity of the State a gold mine to be exploited. Such is the financier who circularises his clients recommending war industries as a good investment. We have to defend ourselves from this class."

"I may add that the State now has fully equipped factories at its disposal, while heretofore everything had to be created."

500,000 SHELLS DAILY

PRODUCED BY CANADIAN MUNITION FACTORIES.

New York, Oct. 1.

It is reported from Montreal that the Canadian munitions factories are now turning out half a million shells daily, and are prepared to increase the rate of production if necessary.

979 MUNITIONS FACTORIES

BRITAIN'S ORGANISATION FOR WAR.

London, Oct. 4.

The Minister of Munitions announces that the British Government has taken over the control of 264 more munitions factories in the country, bringing the total up to 979.

THE ALLIES' LOAN

GERMAN-AMERICAN PROTEST.

Washington, Oct. 4.

The German Alliance of New York which represents six hundred associations with 60,000 members, has sent a protest to President Wilson against floating the Anglo-French loan.

The Alliance says in this document that it considers the exportation of arms and ammunition to the Allies as an act contrary to neutrality, and calculated to prolong the terrible effusion of blood; but this violation of neutrality is further accentuated by the issue of a loan providing the Allies with the funds for paying for the material of war.

The protest is signed by Henry Weissmann, President of the Alliance.

ROCKFELLER SUBSCRIBES TEN MILLION DOLLARS.

New York, Oct. 4.

Mr. Morgan, the financier, has issued the following statement on behalf of the managers of the syndicate underwriting the Anglo-External Loan:—

"I announce that no subscriptions will be received after ten o'clock tomorrow morning."

The local subscriptions to the loan have been coming in very freely. There have also been received a large number from abroad, all of which however have been rejected.

It was known to-day that Mr. Rockefeller has subscribed ten million dollars, although rumour said that he was opposed to the transaction.

BERLIN ATTACK ON AMERICAN BANKS.

New York, Oct. 4.

According to a despatch from Berlin, an article in the "Vossische Zeitung" attacking the American banks with German connections which are participating in the Anglo-French loan, says:—

"Naturally we shall not do business with these firms in war time; but it is urgently to be wished that after a conclusion has been reached, these houses with German-sounding names shall not be allowed to go crawling around Germany."

"We cannot endure half-measures. In future, who is not for us is against us, and he who in his heart is against us must do business elsewhere than in Germany."

"From these cases we should learn finally that any indications of yielding are regarded as weakness and only do us harm. We must use our strength in full measure, our military as well as our economic power; and our economic strength must in future be used towards those who have gone into this war against Germany."

BRITISH GOVERNMENT'S DEPRECATES INVESTMENT FROM BRITAIN.

London, Oct. 4.

Reports that persons in England have been attempting to subscribe to the Anglo-French loan in the United States on account of the interest it yields being higher than that of domestic loans, have elicited the following statement from the British Government to-day:—

"The Treasury contends that it is very undesirable, in the interest of the public, that persons or firms in the United Kingdom should subscribe to or purchase shares in the forthcoming Anglo-French loan which is being raised in America."

"The main purpose of the loan is to give support to American exchanges or remittances from the United Kingdom for that purpose. Either subscribing to or purchasing shares in the loan, or replacing funds already in America which may be employed for such subscription or purchase, would have the effect of defeating the object for which the loan is being raised."

BANQUET TO ANGLO-FRENCH COMMISSION

STIRRING ADDRESS BY MR. CHOATE

New York, Oct. 1.

Last night the Society of Pilgrims gave a banquet at Sherry's Restaurant to the members of the Anglo-French financial commission at which four hundred persons were present.

Mr. Choate, who was in the chair, proposed the health of the guests in a brilliant speech. He said:—

"All of us know that we are a neutral nation, and the tongue of the head of the nation is tied; but there are a hundred million people in this country who are guaranteed freedom of speech, so I shall say what I please."

"When men are fighting for liberty, justice and civilisation, my heart is always with them; but when I see a nation resorting to the grossest brutality and cruelty, my heart is against them."

"I most heartily welcome these gentlemen from England and France who have been labouring with our financiers for two weeks before reaching a conclusion."

"But they could have settled the matter in twenty-four hours if they had appealed directly. I believe that there are 90 million Americans who, like myself, are in daily and nightly sympathy with the Allies."

LORD READING'S REPLY.

Lord Reading, who was greeted with an outburst of cheering, said:—

"I have not the advantage of being able to say what I please; but when my colleagues return to France they will be able to say what they saw and heard here. May it be given to them to reproduce the atmosphere of this welcome."

"I say to you from the bottom of my heart, and with such earnestness as those can understand who have passed through the last thirteen months, that you have done much. I expected to find friends, and I find in fact that I am with some."

M. Homberg, who spoke in French, saluted the Pilgrims and President Wilson. He declared that France and the United States stand alike for liberty, and he believed that the heart of France beat in unison with the heart of America.

ANGLO-FRENCH LOAN

TERMS OF ISSUE.

New York, Oct. 1.

The terms under which the Anglo-French loan is to be issued by the syndicate formed by the underwriters of the loan are as follows:—

"All classes and institutions of investors, dealers, etc., are to be allowed to participate in the loan without restrictions."

"The syndicate will have the right to purchase up to ten per cent. of the total."

"The underwriting and selling commission will be threequarters of one per cent."

"Withdrawals will be allowed at 98, and interest not less than 1 3/4 per cent. will be rebated on bonds withdrawn after the syndicate is closed."

"Temporary receipts will be delivered at once in the form of direct obligations by the two Governments of France and Britain."

"The duration of the syndicate shall be for sixty days."

"Withdrawn bonds shall not be resolved during the existence of the syndicate, and withdrawing participants shall be responsible for their numbers."

"Any incorporated bank which gets a deposit equal to its participation in the loan, or which allows interest at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum, or any participant withdrawing his full participation, shall be relieved from any other liability to the syndicate."

BATTLE OF SOUCHEZ

EYE-WITNESS'S STIRRING STORY

New York, Oct. 2.

A story told by an eye-witness of the assault delivered by the French at Souchez at the beginning of the great advance, and telegraphed to the "Herald" by its special correspondent, runs as follows:—

"Seven mines, each containing sixteen hundred pounds of powder, exploded with a terrific roar as soon as the signal was given to advance. Simultaneously our men leaped out of their trenches and made for those of the Germans on the edge of the forest.

"The Germans bolted through the woods pursued by our first wave. A section of the second wave explored the ruined trenches and underground shelters, which in many cases were twenty feet deep; but as they had no desire to go down into these holes, whence it seemed unlikely they would come out alive, our men dropped bombs and fired shotguns through the openings, which effectively prevented the occupants from coming out and taking us in the rear.

"The bulk of our men followed the Germans, who were running like hares through the woods. They soon captured the second line of trenches in the middle of the forest and went on. Some even crossed the Souchez brook or got up to the sunken road leading to Angers; but the Germans brought up their reserves and tried to surround us. This was foiled by our officers, who drew our men back to the first line captured.

"During the night the Germans fortified themselves in the woods; but at daybreak our artillery stopped their work by a furious bombardment. The evening before the forest had presented its ordinary aspect; but in a few minutes all was changed like magic. One after another the trees were mowed down by shells, and soon the woods were transformed into a field of stumps emerging from a jungle of branches.

"The German artillery was not idle either, but sent us a steady stream of shells which ploughed up the earth all around us without doing much harm.

"Explosive shells were varied occasionally by shrapnel. This fire was received philosophically by our men, for since they have had the new steel helmets they do not fear wounds in the head. A fragment of shell cut through one man's helmet, but its force was so spent that he escaped with a grazed scalp.

"At 1 p.m. our guns ceased firing and we were ordered to renew the attack. The Germans had some machine guns placed on their flanks, but there were soon put out of action. It was difficult going in the woods, the men stumbling over the branches; but on the other hand the holes torn in the ground by the shells gave them shelter from the fire of the machine guns.

"These guns were cunningly concealed, with steel plates, the barrels protruding through narrow slits in the plates. They were invisible from a distance and sent us a withering fire; but our men did not hesitate, and from behind tree stumps and from the pits they kept hurling a constant stream of bombs which soon drove the Germans out of the woods, which remained in our hands."

FRENCH NURSES

RELEASED BY GERMANS.

Paris, Sept. 30.

Mesdames Armagnac, De la Tour, Mabenge and De Chabanes, and Mlles. Le Bair and Selyrot, all members of the French aristocracy who have been serving as Red Cross nurses and were made prisoners at Maubeuge by the Germans, have been granted the Military Cross and have been commended in the Army orders for their heroism in attending to the wounded during the siege of the city.

After three months' detention in Germany the ladies were released and have returned to their duties.

THE BRUTAL HUN

GHASTLY STORY PUBLISHED IN ITALY.

Rome, Oct. 4.

Confirmation has been received of the report published yesterday by the "Tribuna" that an official in Aneona received a letter from his wife, who at the time of the German invasion of Belgium was staying in the country with her two daughters, telling him that she was the victim of horrible outrages by the Germans. In consequence of this the husband has gone out of his mind.

The newspapers of Rome publish the story with bitter comments.

MURDERED BY TEUTONS

46 SISTERS OF CHARITY.

London, Oct. 4.

A Reuter's telegram from Petrograd announces that the Russian Red Cross Society has published a list of forty-six Sisters of Charity who were killed by the bombarding of a hospital by the Austro-Germans.

The Germans have constructed huge railway workshops at Wirhallen where they are employing French and Belgian prisoners.

Nine thousand Austrian prisoners, including 185 officers, belonging to five Hungarian and Honved regiments, have been brought to Kieff.

KILLED BY THE KAISER

PRUSSIA'S 2,000,000 CASUALTIES.

London, Oct. 4.

The Rotterdam paper "Nieuwe Rotterdamse Courant" says:—The Prussian lists of killed, wounded and prisoners from and including No. 330 to 339, relating to the casualties suffered between September 17 and 28, give a total of 63,468, bringing the total Prussian casualties during the war to 1,916,148.

Lists Nos. 300 to 309 give a total of 49,705 losses; Nos. 310 to 319, 58,396; and Nos. 320 to 329, 58,445.

Beside the Prussian lists there have been published 224 lists for the Bavarian army, 199 for that of Saxony, and 274 for that of Wurtemberg. There are also 49 lists referring to the navy and four of officers and N.C.O.'s killed, wounded or missing in Turkey.

GENERAL SIR DOUGLAS HAIG,
Sir John French's Chief of Staff.

GERMAN CONVOY CAPTURED

RUSSIAN CAVALRY SUCCESS.

Petrograd, Oct. 2.

It is officially announced that east of lake Naroeh the Russian cavalry attacked the German infantry which was protecting some convoys and captured a hundred wagons and many horses.

South of the lake a company of Germans was decimated, the survivors being taken prisoners.

GENERAL SMUTS ATTACKED

SHOTS FIRED AT BOER WAR MINISTER.

London, Oct. 4.

The Colonial Office reports that General Smuts, South African Minister of War, was the object of an attack on September 23. The incident took place while the Minister was addressing a crowd of about two thousand persons, several shots being fired. General Smuts, who was uninjured, escaped in his motorcar.

GENERAL SMUTS.

GERMAN TRANSPORTS SUNK

NAVAL SKIRMISHES IN THE GULF OF RIGA.

The Hague, Oct. 1.

From various sources reports have been received of skirmishes in the Gulf of Riga, where the greater part of the Russian fleet is known to be assembled awaiting the approach of German warships.

The Russians have sunk several German transports conveying troops.

These reports have not yet been officially confirmed, but it is known for certain that a great naval battle is imminent.

FAINTED IN NURSE'S ARMS

PATHETIC PLIGHT OF FRENCH HERO.

Paris, Sept. 30.

The ceremony which was performed to-day at the Hotel des Invalides of decorating a number of officers and soldiers was marked by several incidents.

Second Lieutenant Praquins, who had been badly wounded in the head, fainted in the arms of his nurse as General Cousin pinned the War Cross on his breast.

STUDENTS IN BERLIN

BRITONS AMONG THE ENEMY.

New York, Sept. 30.

It is reported from Berlin that there are 2802 foreign students this summer as against 4750 in 1914. The decrease is due principally to the absence of students from the countries at war, although there still remain 62 Russians, 22 English, 1 Belgian, and 5 Italian students.

KULTUR IN BERLIN

ROMANIAN LEGATION GUARDED.

Paris, Oct. 1.

It is reported from Amsterdam that, according to information received from Berlin, the Rumanian Legation in that city is being strongly guarded owing to the popular manifestations of hostility against that country.

ARMENIANS FOR THE STATES

TURKEY CONSENTS TO WHOLESALE MIGRATION.

Washington, Oct. 2.

It is announced that Turkey has consented to all the Armenians emigrating to the United States on the condition that they promise to become naturalised American citizens as soon as they reach their destination.

Mr. Morgenthau, the United States Ambassador at Constantinople, has arranged with the Sublime Porte for the free transport of the Armenian families.

It is expected that the number of immigrants will be not less than 500,000.

CONSTANTINOPLE'S DEFENCES

PREPARATIONS TO MEET INVADING ARMIES.

London, Oct. 1.

Telegrams from Salonica announce that the Germans are making great efforts to strengthen the defences of Tchataldja outside Constantinople. Thirty thousand men are at work day and night. Four lines of sunken rails parallel to the works have been laid down in order that the armoured trains may be able to travel unseen from point to point. A great network of canals has been cut so as to be able to inundate the plain country beyond Tchataldja with the waters of Lake Dereos.

All the forts are provided with large calibre guns, which command the suburbs of Constantinople. The Princes Islands also have been strongly fortified.

ESSAD PASHA DEFEATED

ALBANIAN FORCES OCCUPY SCUTARI.

New York, Oct. 4.

It is reported from Vienna via Berlin that Albanian troops have occupied Scutari after having defeated Essad Pasha.

LT.-GEN. SIR H. SMITH-DORRIEN,
Commander of the Second Army.

TURKS ALARMED

FEAR OF ATTACK ON SMYRNA.

London, Oct. 1.

A telegram from Athens says that the mobilisation of the Greek forces has alarmed the Turks, who fear attacks upon Smyrna. They have hastily despatched the prisoners detained in Smyrna and the archives of the city into the interior.

The militia forming the garrison of Magnesie and Meneme has been ordered to reinforce the forts in the Gulf of Smyrna.

The Turkish authorities refuse to permit the Greek reservists in the Vilayet of Aidin to leave the country.

PATRIOTIC FUNDS

BRITISH PATRIOTIC COMMITTEE

60th LIST OF SUBSCRIPTIONS.

GENERAL FUND.

Amount already acknowledged	$149,326.96
Irish Residents in Argentina, per Dr. O'Farrell	1,950.00
M. Polley	5.00
A. M. G.	20.00
E. D. T.	5.00
N. S. S. O. Club	250.00
G. McAlister	15.00
W. H. Crabbe	100.00
W. B. Whigham	100.00
Mrs. M. H. Williamson	50.00
Douglas King	50.00
R. J. Runnacles	20.00
Stanley Buckley	10.00
M. A. Runnacles	30.00
S. P. Garfield	20.00
H. M. FitzGerald	50.00
Per L. and R. P. Bank—
Mrs. F. Soady	10.00
H. Scott	100.00
Staff of Messrs. Houlder Bros. and Co.: H. F. Harrison $10, W. E. Oates 5, W. L. Wright 5, A. J. Harris 5, R. J. Wilson 5, A. Scucimaro 5, C. A. Pellens 5, A. Maggiolo 5, T. Bell 5, T. H. Braithwaite 5	55.00
Total to date	$152,166.96

H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES'S FUND.

Previously acknowledged	$135,341.58
Irish Residents in Argentina, per Dr. O'Farrell	1,950.00
Belgrano Anglican Church, 10 per cent. of gross receipts of all concerts, entertainments, etc., held at Parish Room in aid of the Parochial Funds	150.55
S. P. Garfield	30.00
Thursday Services at St. John's Pro-Cathedral	89.00
British Staff B. A. and Pacific Railway:—
Electrical Dept.	77.50
Accountant's Dept.	106.00
Administration	207.50
Electrical Dept. (2nd List)	7.00
Stores	153.00
Traffic	159.50
Traction	358.45
Access	10.00
Telegraph	46.00
Engineers	673.70
Talleres	492.50
Engineers Cuyo	15.00
Almacenes Cuyo	20.00
Engineers, Bahia Blanca	11.00
Traction, Bahia Blanca	20.00
Almacenes, Bahia Blanca	38.00
Local Board	5.00
Traffic Office	5.70
Total F. C. B. A. P.	2,328.35
Total to date	$139,921.98

BRITISH RED CROSS FUND.

Previously acknowledged	$19,474.70
Collected in "Ing. Las Palmas" Chaco	79.40
W. Flint	100.00
British Staff B. A. and Pacific Railway	50.00
Total to date	$19,704.10

CONTRIBUTION FROM JUJUY.

Mr. F. Chevallier Boutell acknowledges receipt from the British community in Jujuy for the Red Cross Fund, per Miss E. Leach, of the sum of $827 (eight hundred and twenty-seven dollars paper.)

BELGIAN RELIEF FUND.

Previously acknowledged	$4,626.10
M. H. T.	10.00
Total to date	$4,636.10

OVERSEAS WARSHIP FUND.

Previously acknowledged	$1,313.20
A. W. Crundle	5.00
Total to date	$1,318.20

Subscriptions should be sent to the Hon. Treasurer, Mr. Thos. Lloyd, Sarmiento 459; or paid in to the accounts opened in the London and R. P. Bank, Ltd., British Bank of S. A., Ltd., London and Brazilian Bank, Ltd., Anglo-South American Bank, Ltd.

For general information, subscription forms, etc., application should be made to the Hon. Secretary, Calle Sarmiento 643.

CIGARETTE FUND.

Amount already acknowledged	$1,522.55
Miss Clydesdale	3.00
Mr. Nirwana	10.00
J. C. Bellamy	10.00
T. A. H.	4.00
B. Mathews	5.00
Ernesto Buckland	18.00
J. Clark	20.00
Mrs. Hall	3.00
Mrs. Anthony	9.00
T. S. Lough	10.00
V. Dulhunty	10.00
E. Ash	10.00
Lieut. Orton	10.00
Musgrave	5.00
Geo. A. March	15.00
Ladies of Libertad, F. C. M.	22.50
J. Alexander	2.00
J. Noceti	2.00
Dr. Robert Halahan	23.00
G. B. Pearson	10.00
H. Smith	10.00
British Society	3.00
W. Holtum	5.00
Miss Clydesdale	2.50
J. S. Buckley	5.00
J. C. Lindsell	10.00
C. A. Godwin	10.00
J. M. Eddy	10.00
V. Lindop	10.00
J. A. Drysdale	10.00
P. M. W. Murdock	10.00
H. Teshmaker	10.00
J. A. Campbell	10.00
B. W. Gardom	5.00
Total	$1834.55

Further subscriptions are required to repeat the gifts of Argentine Cigarettes for the gallant volunteers from Argentina at the front and in training camps.

The following is from the Central Argentino Railway Magazine for October, and is one of the many proofs that Argentine cigarettes are appreciated by our volunteers. "Cigarettes for C. A. volunteers. We have been able to arrange through the medium of the Royal Colonial Institute to supply to each of our volunteers a box of Argentine cigarettes containing 10 packets. These will be sent to our Secretary in London, who has kindly undertaken to have each box addressed to the volunteer, wherever he may be, according to the latest advice received at the London Office. The local branch of the Royal Colonial Institute has done splendid service in connection with its Argentine Cigarette Fund, many proofs having been received of the great appreciation of volunteers from Argentina in the trenches and elsewhere, of a "whiff of the weed" of the country they hail from."

The next lot will be shipped in time to arrive about Christmas, provided sufficient funds are sent to the Hon. Treasurer, Basil Gwyn, 278 Calle Balcarce.

BRITISH RED CROSS SOCIETY

MORE DONATIONS ACKNOWLEDGED.

(To the Editor.)

Sir,—I would feel obliged if you would kindly allow me to acknowledge through your valuable columns the following donations to the British Red Cross Society:—

Already acknowledged	$5,852.70
F. H. Jones, Dock Sud	300.00
Lecture given at Liebig's Factory, Colon, by the "Abote Passerien"—Part corresponding to British Red Cross Society	83.33
Ixel Lindgren	2.00
Proceeds Dance at Libertad	570.35
Sale of Flowers at Women's Exchange	10.00
Received from Mrs. Lamb, being proceeds of one Club Competition played at Links on 9/9/15, for prizes presented by Miss Taylor	30.00
Lomas Athletic Club	8.00
Part proceeds of Raffle of Gold Watch, donated by Mr. R. E. Fiedler	226.00
Received from Mr. Thomas Bell, being result of a Bridge Party given by Mrs. Bell, at Libertad 1376	900.00
Received from Harrods Stores (South America), being part corresponding to the British Red Cross Society of an entertainment given on their Premises, Calle Florida, on 26/9/15	2,713.82
Total	$10,696.20

Already acknowledged	$5,852.70
Remitted to the British Red Cross Society in draft of London and River Plate Bank at sight for £84/10/9	965.68
Remitted to the British Red Cross Society in draft of London and River Plate Bank at sight for £339/0/7	3,877.82
Total	$10,696.20

Anticipating my best thanks,

Yours, etc.,

F. H. CHEVALLIER BOUTELL,
Delegate of the British Red Cross Society in the Argentine Republic.

CONTRIBUTIONS FROM MENDOZA

(To the Editor.)

Sir,—I beg to acknowledge through your valuable columns the following accounts I have received, and to express the gratitude of the Society I represent for these magnificent donations to the Society's Funds:—

From the Mendoza British Patriotic Funds	£100
From the Committee, the Misses Aileen Mayne, Ethel and Hilda Pettigrew, the organisers of a dance at Mendoza for the Funds of the British Red Cross Society	£100
Yours etc.

F. H. CHEVALLIER BOUTELL,
Representative of the British Red Cross Society in Argentina.
Buenos Aires, Oct. 4.

BRITISH WOMEN OF CAMPANA

PATRIOTIC FUND DONATIONS FOR SEPTEMBER.

Mrs. Hooton $5, Mrs. Gibbs $5, Miss Waddel $5, Mrs. Cunningham $10, Miss G. Cunningham $5, Miss M. Cunningham $5, Mrs. E. Murray $5, Mrs. Mullen $3, Mrs. Thompson $5, Mrs. Sainsbury $5, Mrs. Windsor $2, Mrs. Mason $5, Mrs. Stalker $3, Mrs. Brown $5, Master H. Brown $1, Mrs. S. Murray $10, Mrs. Nash $6, Mrs. Bateson $2, Mrs. Mallet $2, Mrs. Fogg $5, Mrs. Warrinder $5, Mrs. Spalding $5, Mrs. Caulfield $5, Miss B. Rlordon $3; total $112.

"HERALD" BELGIAN FUND

FURTHER REMITTANCE TO ENGLAND.

Yesterday a draft for £50 13s. 4d. was sent by THE HERALD, to Mr. William Reed Lewis, Honorary Secretary of the Belgian Refugee Committee, of Bexhill-on-Sea, England. This is the third remittance made from THE HERALD Belgian Relief Fund to the Bexhill organization which is caring for many scores of families who reached the South of England in the early days of the war.

Up to to-day our readers have provided us with $3248.30, of which $3233.30 has been remitted to England, leaving a balance in hand of $15. The complete list of donations since the previous remittance is as follows:

Amount previously acknowledged	$2,642.40
Mrs. E. W.	6.00
J. Manning	2.00
F. S.	2.00
A. L.	1.00
F. C. H.	0.50
J. Wyllie	10.00
Joseph J. Brooking	9.00
Mary Esther and Betita (6th donation)	4.60
W. K. Cunningham, for May	50.00
Miss Cunningham, (for May)	5.00
Mrs. Cochrane (for May)	5.00
J. Manning	2.00
H. B. (for May and June)	10.00
Pito-Pico	20.00
E. W.	2.00
F. S.	2.00
A. L.	1.00
"Jam"	50.00
A. L. L.	10.00
G. A. Scharenberg	20.00
George Clarke	10.00
Miss Z. S.	10.00
W. K. Cunningham (for June)	50.00
Miss Cunningham (for June)	5.00
Mrs. Cochrane (for June)	5.00
Mary Esther and Betita (7th donation)	4.60
J. Manning	2.00
"Jam"	25.00
F. S.	2.00
A. L.	1.00
W. K. Cunningham (for July)	50.00
Miss Cunningham (for July)	5.00
Mrs. Cochrane (for July)	5.00
H. B. (for July)	5.00
Mary Esther and Betita (8th donation)	4.60
J. Manning	2.00
A. L. L.	5.00
H. B. (for August)	5.00
W. K. Cunningham (for Aug.)	50.00
Miss Cunningham (for Aug.)	5.00
Mrs. Cochrane (for Aug.)	5.00
F. F.	10.00
F. S.	2.00
A. L.	1.00
A. L. L.	5.00
Mary Esther and Betita (9th donation)	4.60
W. K. Cunningham (for Sept.)	50.00
Miss Cunningham (for Sept.)	5.00
Mrs. Cochrane (for Sept.)	5.00
Luls Miller	50.00
H. B. (for Sept.)	5.00
Total	$3248.30

TOBACCO FOR THE TROOPS

APPRECIATION OF SMOKES FROM THE FRONT.

Dear Mr. Zimmerman,
Thanks very much for gift of smokes. It is a long way from Buenos Aires (not Tipperary, this time), but practical sympathy such as yours annihilates space and makes possible the participation in this war of right versus might of men the world over. We live For the right which lacks assistance, For the wrong which needs resistance,

And the good that we can do."

Thankfully yours,
GEO. H. GREEN, 8942 Priv.
13 General Hospital,
British Ex. Force.

ROSARIO NEWS

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT].

Oct. 5, 1915

Social-Cum-Card-Drive.

The Committee, and especially their chief supporter, Mrs. Mackintosh, are to be cordially congratulated on the success which they achieved on Wednesday evening, the 29th of September, at St. Bartholomew's Club. Specially decorated for the occasion, there were some sixty persons present, and about fourteen tables of whist and bridge players were drawn in the drives which formed the chief attraction. One of the chief attractions, would perhaps be better, for the ladies of St. Mary's Guild provided a half-time incident of music and refreshments. Miss Dreyfus and Miss Topping sang with great acceptance, and Miss Fontana with Miss Hazelbrouck played a mandoline duet.

The prize distribution, at which Mrs. Middleton presided, brought out the fact that the prize in the Bridge drive had been won, on the ladies' side by Mrs. C. Godward, to whom went the coveted trophy given by Mr. C. Parr, with Miss L. Mengell second; and on the gentlemen's by Mr. A. Watson, with Mr. E. Hopkins as "booby." The star lady whist player was Miss Manley, with Mrs. Jack Topping second; these prizes having been kindly offered by Mr. C. Perret. Mr. Browning won the gentlemen's prize, and Mr. Jack Topping the "booby" prize.

Afterwards the room was cleared for dancing, and a further jolly time was enjoyed until well past midnight, thanks to volunteers at the piano. The bounty of the ladies made one other item necessary, namely an auction of the superabundance of cakes, and with Mr. G. J. Van Oppen at the hammer $22 was quickly realised. Altogether something like $60 will be available as a contribution to one of the patriotic funds—an incidental object of the gathering. The main object, that of furnishing a summer social was most successfully accomplished, notwithstanding the fears expressed that the depletion of the ranks of young men by the ready response Rosario has made to the war-call would make success problematical; and the chances are that further evenings of the kind will be arranged. The committee has Mr. J. W. Topping as President, and the Rev. Canon Pepys, Messrs. C. Thompsett, Wilrew, Godward, and Barnes among its members.

The attendance on Wednesday night included the British Consul, Mr. Spencer S. Dickson and Mrs. Dickson, the Rev. F. Middleton, Mrs. Middleton, Mr. and Mrs. and the Misses Barnes, Mrs. and Miss Dovers, Mr. and Mrs. Macintosh, Miss Pride, Mrs. and Miss Dreyfus, Mr. and Mrs. Murray-Hudson, Mr. C. C. Day, Mr. C. Thompsett, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Topping, Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Topping, Miss Manley, Mr. E. J. Van Oppen, the Misses Van Oppen, Mrs. Pumfret, Misses Carr and Bird, Mr. and Mrs. Hendon, Messrs. H. Woollidge, Macdonald, Nisbett, A. M. Barnes, E. Bradley, Worthington, How, A. Watson, H. E. Abbott, and many others.

Rosario Golf Club.

Ladies' Continuous Handicap. — This competition was brought to a close on the 26th of September, the winner being Mrs. R. W. O. Le Bas 232 nett for 45 holes; and Miss Benedict runner up with total nett of 235. Mrs. J. P. Crouch was third with 240 nett. Prize kindly presented by Mrs. Murray Hudson.

Ladies' Monthly Handicap.—In the Finals of the Ladies' Monthly Handicap (two-rounds medal play), Mrs. H. Middleton was first with 113 —4 equals 109; followed by Miss Benedict with 116 —6 equals 110; Mrs. Van Horne 131 —20 equals 111; Mrs. R. W. O. Le Bas 118 —6 equals 112; Miss A. T. Karck 115 —0 equals 115; Mrs. B. Lee, 122 —6 equals 116; Mrs. J. P. Crouch 132 —8 equals 124.

The Men's Monthly Handicap Fin-

YOUNG MEN'S SOCIAL CLUB

WHIST DRIVE.

Wed., Sept. 6.

What can be described as the most successful whist drive ever held on the premises of the Y.M.S.C., Viamonte, was celebrated last evening. Well over 40 persons were present. The drive resulted in a most popular win for Miss Cissy McGough with a score of 146. She was presented with a prize of a solid silver companion set.

A record score of 150 was obtained by Mr. W. J. Saunders, who won the first gentleman's prize, a silver match box. Mr. Bruce, with 103 to his credit, forgot to claim the Booby Prize. "O what a night," a most humorous representation of what might have been had not his score been so low.

"Don't forget the picture raffle," was Mr. Welby's advice, nor the picnic on December 8.

als (3 rounds medal play) resulted as follows: T. H. Taylor first with 167 —24 equals 123; followed by C. H. Parr 148 —18 equals 130; D. Fraser, 150 —15 equals 135; A. Martin 160 —21 equals 139; J. J. Gillies 157 —18 equals 139; T. H. Marston, 163 —24 equals 139; and H. D. Humpstone, 188 —33 equals 155. Four cards were not returned.

A New Challenge Cup: "The Camp." —The attention of members of the club is drawn to a new challenge cup kindly presented by Mr. Stephen L. Cox, of Elortondo, F.C.C.A. It is to be known as the Camp Cup, and the competition is to be held on Sunday, the 17th. So far details as to conditions, etc., have not been evolved, but I shall be able to publish them in the course of a few days.

The Annual General Meeting of the Club is to be held towards the end of this month. A Committee meeting to fix a date is called for Friday night.

The Markets.

Wheat has declined during the week. The October option having been done at $11.40. The decline is owing to the deliveries being larger than the "Bull" operators, who have been scheming a corner for October, have been able to take care of. It is a genuine case of the biter being bitten, and as there is no profitable outlet for the wheat at the present prices, it looks as though the operation will result in a very smart loss for the would-be "cornerers."

New Crop Wheat.—A few transactions have been registered in January delivery at $9.70 for No. 2 type, but as this price is more than $1 above export parity there is room for a smart decline, especially if crop prospects continue as they are now. We have had another good rain during the week, of much benefit to agricultural prospects in general.

Maize has raised a strong market during the week, a fair amount of business passing with steady advancing prices, until to-day $4.75 was paid at one time, the market closing easier. In view of the strong advance in freights it would seem as though the maize should be easier, for as the cheaper tonnage is worked off the higher rates must be taken into account by shippers. Freights have ruled strong, two steamers having been chartered at 67s. 6d. The reason for this big advance amounting to 15s. in about ten days would seem to be large demand for wheat shipments from the Atlantic seaboard U.S.A. to England and Italy.

Alfredo J. White

Solicitor and Accountant

Cordoba 1321, Rosario

Tel. No. 5191

CORDOBA NEWS

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT].

October 4.

Church Services.

Church Services were conducted at the English Church Hall on Sunday last by the Rev. W. J. Sugden. Services will also be held on the coming Sunday, with choir practice on Thursday instead of Friday night.

Billiard Tournament at English Club.

The October Billiard Handicap will be held at the English Club during the current month (150 points up, knock out). The first round to be completed Oct. 14, the 2nd round by the 20th, the semi-final by the 25th, and the final by the 31st. The draw and handicaps are as follows:— G. Lang, plus 10 v. T. G. Ferguson, minus 20. W. Robinson plus 20 v. S. Brock plus 10, G. A. Brigstocke plus 10 v. C. K. Davis plus 29. S. T. Harries Smith, scr. v. H. McCulloch plus 30, R. J. Cochrane minus 20 v. G. E. Morton plus 40, C. C. Lewis minus 20 v. H. Scrivener minus 20, E. R. Fowler minus 20 v. L. G. Babb plus 40, P. P. Schultz minus 10 v. V. R. Sadleir plus 30.

Robbery at Cordoba Athletic Club Pavilion.

Thursday night thieves entered the Pavilion of the Cordoba Athletic Club, by breaking one of the coloured glass windows in the front of the building and opening the same by pulling up the catch. The groundsman who lives in a small house some 12 or 15 metres from the pavilion did not hear the breaking of the glass, and the burglars got away without being discovered with all the clothes, shoes, etc. they could get from the lockers which had been left unlocked, tennis racquets and balls were left untouched, also a leather bag which was placed on top of the lockers containing soiled underclothing was left on top of one of the seats after the contents of the bag had been stolen, one of the members who has returned from a trip to Canada was robbed of two pair of white trousers which he had brought with him and had not had an opportunity of wearing.

Spring Tennis Tournament, Cordoba Athletic Club.

The draw and handicaps for the Spring Tournament which was inaugurated at the Cordoba Athletic Club on Saturday, are as follows:

Ladies' Singles (Handicap), Captain's Prize presented by Mr. Morton, Mrs. Walters, minus ½ 30 v. Mrs. Babb, plus ½ 30; Miss Morton, minus 15, v. Miss Davis, scr.; Miss Brumleu, plus 15 v. Miss Phyllis Symonds, minus 30; Miss Gladys Symonds, minus 30, v. Miss Gladys Guppy, plus 26 15; Mrs. Lang, minus 15 v. Miss Glancy, minus ½ 15.

Mixed Doubles (Handicap).—Mrs. Lang and Mr. A. D. Dunbar, minus 15 v. Miss Glancy and Mr. Harry McCulloch, scr.; Miss Morton and Mr. M. L. Zimmer, minus ½ 30 v. Miss Phyllis Symonds and Mr. L. G. Babb, minus 30; Miss Davis and Mr. J. Schibler, minus ½ 15, v. Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Warks, minus 30. Mrs. Walters and Mr. G. E. Morton, minus ½ 30 v. Miss Gladys Symonds and Mr. P. P. Schultz.

Gentlemen's Singles (Handicap).—Prize presented by Mr. Stuart.—Ferguson, minus ½ 15, v. McCulloch plus ½ 15; Zimmer, minus 40, v. Harris Smith, plus ½ 15; Schibler, minus ½ 15 v. Dunbar, minus ½ 30; Schultz, minus 15 v. Babb, minus 15; Cochrane, plus ½ 15 v. Morton, minus 30; Parker, minus ½ 15 v. Marks, minus 30.

Gentlemen's Doubles (Handicap).—The Tennis Committee decided to add Gentlemen's Doubles to the list of events, and the following teams were entered: Marks and Babb, Morton and Zimmer, Dunbar and Ferguson, Dunlap and Schrivener; Cochrane and McCulloch, Schibler and A. N. Other.

Due to the strong wind which blew

ST. ANDREW'S SCOTCH SCHOOL

Mr. CHARLES FAIRLIE IN THE GOVERNMENT SERVICE.

The numerous friends of Mr. Charles Fairlie, who had for seven years occupied the post of English Master at St. Andrew's Scotch School, and who left in July to offer himself for active service, will be interested to learn of his movements. According to latest advice, Mr. Fairlie was not accepted for active service, as he was suffering from water on the knee, an old ailment of which he had experienced a return on the way home, through an accident while drilling on board. When he wrote, he still had hopes of being accepted for active service, but he had been offered work and training in connection with the munitions department, if he should prove to be ineligible for the former. He had been employed for three weeks in connection with the National Registration.

Mr. Fairlie's successor, Mr. Alexander S. Peden, completed his course of training at Edinburgh Provincial Training College in 1910, and since then has been engaged in the West School, Forfar. His credentials are of the highest character, and his future pupils will note with pleasure that he is a strict disciplinarian, with a keen interest in school athletics. He is booked to sail on October 14.

across the courts all day on Sunday, only three of the opening rounds were finished with the following results: Mrs. Lang and Mr. Dunbar defeated Miss Glancy and Mr. McCulloch 6-5, 4-6, and 6-4; Mr. Schibler defeated Mr. Dunbar 6-4, 0-6, and 6-3; Miss Phyllis Davis beat Miss Brumleu 6-5, 4-6 and 6-3.

As the time limit for playing the first rounds has been extended to Sunday, Oct. 10th, all players are requested to be on hand next Saturday and Sunday in order that all the first rounds may be completed on the mentioned date.

Golf.

The presentation of the Blackheath Golf Cup which was postponed from the previous Sunday was made on Sunday last to Mr. Harry McCulloch, who retains possession of the cup for one year. Mr. McCulloch was also presented with a gold medal which becomes his property. Mrs. A. D. Dunbar kindly made the presentation amid hearty applause from the on-lookers.

Attention is again called to the golf contest which takes place at Alta Gracia on October 17, when Golf captain A. D. Dunbar has offered a prize for the best score against bogie.

Ball in aid of British Red Cross.

The Sub-committee appointed for making the arrangements for holding the ball kindly offered by Mrs. Hobbs, to take place on Friday, Oct. 8, met at the latter's residence on last Monday night, and the following sub-committees were appointed: Hall and decorations: Mrs. Walters, Miss Phyllis Symonds, Mr. Arthur Hughes, Mr. F. Lindeman and Mr. P. P. Schultz; Music and Programmes: Mrs. L. G. Babb, Miss Muriel Hobbs, Mr. G. A. Brigstocke and Mr. L. G. Babb; Supper: Mrs. Hobbs, Mrs. A. Guppy and Mrs. F. Lindeman. Refreshments: Messrs. A. D. Dunbar and Mr. Arthur Hughes. Reception Committee, Members of the Cordoba Committee of the Prince of Wales' Fund. The French Society have kindly offered their handsome hall for the ball free of charge. The band of music will be composed of selected professors from the "Select" orchestra. The sale of tickets is progressing very favourably, and it is hoped that many friends from the camp will come in for the dance in order to help along the good work.

Raffle in aid of British Red Cross.

Mr. R. M. Copnall has presented the Cordoba Committee of the Prince of Wales Fund with a beautiful painting which will be put up for raffle, in aid of the British Red Cross.

ENGLAND IN WAR TIME

An Impression

BY DR. JOHN HALAHAN

During a few weeks' visit to England, Dr. John Halahan, who has but just returned to Buenos Aires, had the opportunity of observing how the Old Country looks and behaves under the strain, the stress and the great struggle through which she is passing. Interviewed by a representative of THE HERALD, Dr. Halahan touched on many incidents of great interest to those who perforce are remaining in the Argentine.

Commencing with his passage home, Dr. Halahan explained how a traveller to England under present circumstances cannot escape observing that the country is at war. There is little to impress one profoundly in what one sees of life's passing show, however.

THE PASSAGE HOME.

A passenger on a ship on its homeward journey is taught the use of a life belt and is given instructions as to which boat must be repaired in the case of any danger, but no one heeds and all are happy. In some ships, guns are placed astern and a sharp lookout is kept for any possible chance of using them. Practice, too, is sometimes indulged in, and it is an impressive and interesting sight to observe actual gun practice.

On arrival just North of Gibraltar a special look-out man is posted in what corresponds to the old crow's nest. It is from here that submarines are seen in time to prepare for action.

The ship is at once steered, so as to bring the stern with the gun on it to bear on the hostile craft, and so fearful now have these become of the formidable 4.7 that they disappear with all speed beneath the waters when once they recognise the gun.

SPECIAL ROUTES.

Vessels now take special routes according to Government instructions, and the utmost secrecy is maintained as to the ship's position. On reaching the entrance to the port of destination ships are visited by Admiralty officials. A private signal is communicated to the captain by the pilot, and if this is not hoisted trouble ensues.

STERN MEASURES.

One vessel, said Dr. Halahan, continued her course without the signal, the pilot having forgotten his duty, but he was suddenly and forcibly reminded of it by a shell which tore through the ship's hull, burst up the decks, and finally terminated in the bow of an Anchor liner on the other side!

"Such determined methods need little repetition, although more than once have similar incidents happened to my knowledge."

KHAKI, KHAKI EVERYWHERE.

"On landing in England," continued the Doctor, that which strikes one most, strikes one always and everywhere, is the number of men in khaki. In the cities, in the villages, in the most remote country places, soldiers in khaki are everywhere present. Some on leave, some on duty, some resting, and many wounded. These latter are always in evidence. Even away in the most remote districts of Ireland can be seen as many as thousands of soldiers where formerly few or none were posted. What all this means in men, money and organisation is difficult to conceive and to realise when away from the centres of military activity, but some idea of the circulation of money and of the activity of the nation can be gained from the rapid decrease in pauperism.

WORKHOUSES CLOSING.

"Distress, too, throughout the land has decreased. Some of the workhouses are almost empty, and some have even been closed and sold. Of the ravages of war one hears on all sides—friends, relatives and loved ones are constantly reported as dead or maimed; but even the bereaved take such news stoically, and the cases are too numerous for more than an expression of condolence.

ZEPPELIN RAIDS.

"The Zeppelins make a raid frequently, sometimes two or three days consecutively, but more often at intervals of a week or ten days. No one takes them seriously except the actual victims and their families, and for all the influence that they have on the actual course of the war they seem more of a joke than a serious military enterprise. They involve great cost in men and material to the enemy. It is a difficult thing for aeroplanes to cope with them, for a Zeppelin can rise about 2000 ft. a minute while it occupies an aeroplane twice as long. The Zeppelins are afraid of the aeroplanes, nevertheless, and they take good care to avoid them whenever possible.

"The newspapers, of course, publish all and everything they can concerning the progress of the war, but they are confined by the censor to unessential details which are themselves of an isolated nature. Due to this, no one can get a comprehensive grasp of what is being, or even what has been, done.

THE STRIKES.

"Great indignation is usually expressed by the better and more Conservative classes concerning the miners and their strikes. Many advocate compulsion for them, at the same time quite forgetting that to compel a particular class is but a retrograde step, and that the power so used could in turn be employed against the rich under circumstances equally unjust.

"Most people would acquiesce in conscription during the course of the war or, better still, an enlightened modification of it. All are anxious to help and are unhesitating in their loyalty to the Government in their vigorous prosecution of the war.

MR. LLOYD GEORGE.

"Mr. Lloyd George has won the appreciation even of his enemies, and is undoubtedly the most influential man in England amongst all sections of the community. Not but that he still has detractors and even unqualified abusers, but Lloyd George is the Kaiser's greatest English enemy. Lord Kitchener still retains his popularity, and few doubt his energy or capacity.

"In spite of all this struggle, England seems quiet and contented. Calm reigns everywhere. None would suppose, without entering into details, that Britain is passing through the greatest trial she has yet faced.

"Of the Navy one hears little, and yet the Navy has performed the greatest task any navy has ever accomplished. One hears of the many ships sunk by submarines, but they come and go, and England's business is carried on as usual and just as if these losses were of no account—and it is true that they are of little importance in the aggregate.

"The feeling against the Germans is so strong that the unthinking cannot appreciate their undoubted good qualities. The thinking few, however, and especially the Navy and military men (but particularly the former) give them full credit, and amongst these fighting heroes almost no bitterness enters into their conversations.

"Few have much to tell beyond individual experiences, for even officers

STRANDED LINER

Highland Warrior's Passengers

TRANSFERRED TO THE HIGHLAND PIPER

Messrs. H. and W. Nelson, Limited, the agents of the Nelson Steam Navigation Co., Ltd., yesterday received a cable from the Company's head offices in London, stating that the Highland Warrior had stranded off La Coruña, adding that the passengers had disembarked and had returned to London. The passengers will proceed on their voyage to the Plate by the s.s. Highland Piper, leaving London on Thursday afternoon, October 7.

SINGLE PESO NOTES

EXTREME SCARCITY AND INFERIOR QUALITY.

A marked scarcity of one peso notes is complained of. A complaint of the extreme scarcity of billetes of all denominations, particularly those in loan, would be quite justifiable but, there really are some grounds for stating that some of the one dollar notes at present in circulation are of the most hoary antiquity and, pasted on card might be used in the British Museum as relics of the Roman occupation. The paper of the present dollar note is cheap and poor and does not possess the resistant qualities of the old issues. In a short time its crispness disappears, it becomes flacid and limp and ultimately excessively frail and tattered while its cheerful pink hue rapidly turns to a dirty brown on which the lettering and number are scarcely decipherable.

A small issue of new notes from the Casa de Moneda, is promised for October 15 but, why small? This extreme parsimony in the issue of the hardest worked of all the paper money of the Republic, tends actually to create a feeling of, if not sympathy, less-reprobation towards those who get tired of waiting for the lawful article and make their own dollar bills.

of some standing are as ignorant of the general dispositions as are the men of no rank. All alike, fighters and civilians, women, and even children, are confident of the ultimate result and of victory, but few venture to hope for the cessation of hostilities until the year 1916 shall have already passed. The approaching winter may cause a serious change, but the end is not yet, nor is it even hoped for, and many a poor fellow must lay down his life for his country ere England and England's gallant Allies shall gain the inevitable victory.

THE SUFFRAGETTES.

"The Suffragettes have given up their militant attitude, and their leaders endeavour to organise in favour of helping the soldiers. Women are to be seen marching through the streets dressed in khaki petticoats, but they are not seriously nor favourably regarded. Some shops have women porters, and some of these enhance their natural comeliness by uniforms with much gold lace and a peaked cap with a gold band. In Piccadilly, a specially resplendent example can be seen, but for the most part women do women's work, and in doing this they are greatly appreciated."

On Voyage to B. A.

SAILING SHIP BADLY BATTERED IN A HURRICANE.

New York, Oct. 5.

A telegram from Mobile, Ala., reports that the Norwegian ship Margarita, bound from Gulfport to Buenos Aires was dismasted in the hurricane which visited the West Indies on Sept. 30, and was towed to Mobile, arriving to-day. Most of her rigging has been blown away, her masts broken and her deck cargo (?) swept overboard.

The schooner Clara Scott from Habana is ashore near Gulfport.

MURDEROUS AFFRAY IN THE STREET

ARAB STABS HIS COMPANION.

An affray between two men, in the public street created a considerable amount of attention and excitement on September 30. Two carters who worked for the same firm, one an Arab and the other an Argentine, had a few words concerning a debt of a few cents, owed by the former to the latter.

From words they proceeded to blows and from blows, to the usual procedure, the use of the knife or revolver.

It happened that it was the Arab, who was armed, and his victim had but small chance to defend himself, before he was struck down, with a series of stabs in the body.

The Arab bolted, but was caught at the corner of Calles Boedo and Las Casas and taken to the Comisaria. All this edifying scene was observed in the open street and was caused over an amount of some 30 cents. The victim was taken away in the ambulance to the hospital at Nueva Pompeya. His wounds are serious and he has entirely lost all power of speech.

PRISON MUTINY IN PARANA

Another prison mutiny is reported, this time from Paraná. On Wednesday afternoon a prisoner named Belmonte who, in spite of his theatrical hero's name is a villain, attacked a sergeant of the prison guard who was conducting him to another part of the jail. The noise at once attracted the other convicts who breaking up benches and tables armed themselves with the fragments and endeavoured to force an exit though the inner gates of the prison. The guard however, rushed to the doors and succeeded by presenting their rifles in halting them as the sentry on the walls had already fired. Meanwhile the prisoners, with loud cries demanded the resignation of the Governor, Sr. Bacigalupo, who has been temporarily appointed, and the reinstatement of Sr. Rafael Vera.

Reinforcements of the Squadron of Security were hurried up accompanied by the Chief of Police, the Judge of Crime and other officials. Happily no casualties occurred.

Further trouble is however anticipated as the meat contractors have threatened to provide further supplies owing to the Intendencia's neglect to attend to their request for enhanced prices.

MORE NEW REGULATIONS

FOR PROPERTY OWNERS.

The Director of the Department of "Obras Sanitarias," has issued a new set of regulations concerning the drainage and provision of running water in private dwellings.

These regulations are to come into force on December 1, and property-owners and householders are advised to make themselves familiar with them. Already those who have studied the new regulations describe them as obnoxious, and it is well that property owners in general should immediately acquaint themselves with the changes which are to come into operation.

TÉ AGUILA ES EL MEJOR

TRADING WITH THE ENEMY

"PATRIOTIC" BRITISH SHIPOWNERS

AND THE GERMAN COAL COY.

Some British shipowners are more noteworthy for their devotion to their shareholders' interests than for their patriotism. In this class would appear to be Mr. R. B. Chellew, managing owner of the "Pen" boats of Falmouth, England.

On Wednesday a letter was received from a correspondent, who stated:—

"To-day the steamer "Penhale," of Falmouth, flying the Red Ensign, was towed up the Riachuelo by the tugs "Samson" and "Aguiles," well-known to belong to the South American Hamburg Company, and fully manned by purely German crews."

During yesterday investigations were made by a HERALD representative who elicited the information that although the Penhale was quoted as being consigned to the National City Bank of New York, the fact was that the bank was only in charge of the papers. The cargo itself had been consigned to the Cia. Alemania de Carbon from the United States.

The consignees being German they are naturally at liberty to employ any tugs which they may select. The preference in such cases would obviously be German.

Whether or not the master will adopt the praiseworthy attitude of the master of the T. R. Thompson, and refuse delivery to the German Company, is a matter on which it is impossible at the moment to give any specific information. It would appear, however, that Mr. R. B. Chellew is engaging in traffic that is scarcely what would be expected of a British shipowner at a time when every Briton is believed to be "all in" on the great war. Naturally it is easy to convey coal for a United States firm to a German house in Argentina. But has it not occurred to Mr. Chellew and to the owners of the "Pen" vessels that profit from transactions with the enemy is scarcely honourable at a time when Britons are laying down their lives in Flanders? Explanations certainly seem to be due to those Argentines whose sons and brothers are engaged in the great fight for civilisation and Empire.

MASTER'S EXPLANATION

(To the Editor).

Sir,—As Master of the British steamer Penhale I feel it necessary to reply to the aspersions cast upon the owner of this steamer and myself, in your paper to-day.

With regard to the consignment of the cargo, the owner was certainly not aware that it was destined to the German Coal Company. The charter-party was made between the owner's New York agents and the coal shippers, and the cargo consigned to the Buenos Aires Branch of the National City Bank of New York. Your representative is therefore mistaken in stating it was consigned to the German Coal Company.

Reference is made to the cargo brought by the s.s. T. R. Thompson, but I am informed that cargo was delivered to the German Coal Company, nor does any well informed person know how it could be avoided. Your correspondent writes as if the cargo belonged to the shipowner, whereas he is simply the carrier, and is bound to deliver the cargo on arrival and payment of freight.

Mr. R. B. Chellew certainly does not merit the charge of trading with the enemy, and is as patriotic as—perhaps more so than—the writer of the article under notice.

Yours, etc.,

J. H. LOWRY,
Master.

s.s. Penhale,
Buenos Aires, Oct. 1.

[Captain Lowry's explanation given above does not alter the facts which are simply that a British owned ship is engaged in carrying coal for an enemy concern, and that the real consignees were not the National City Bank of New York, but the German Coal Company. The captain's connection with the business was not called into question. He has to obey orders. In the case of the T. R. Thompson, the captain of that vessel, following the dictates of his own conscience, refused to obey orders, and the vessel was only unloaded into the German concern's bunkers under pressure of the local law. If Captain Lowry suggests that the case of the T. R. Thompson created a precedent, and the delivery of the coal to the German concern which at that time was able to bunker enemy supply ships, serving warships off this coast, was legally and morally right, then we differ from him. The former Managing Director (Mr. Sutherland) of the coal company which shipped the T. R. Thompson cargo saw fit to repudiate the transaction, and to publish in the press here, as well as in London, his condemnation of the whole proceeding. Incidentally he also disclosed what we are happy to believe is the real view of decent merchants in England regarding such transactions, when he stated that until he could clear himself of any complicity with the business, he was treated as a pariah, and even his sons suffered the indignation of those who know the difference between a legal right and a moral wrong. Regarding Mr. Chellew's patriotism, that should be cleared of the suspicion of dubiousness in the proper quarters in England. Captain Lowry's explanation does not establish Mr. Chellew's patriotism any more than his comparison demonstrates the non-existence of our own. —Ed. B. A. H.]

A CORRESPONDENT'S VIEW.

(To the Editor).

Sir,—Without in any way wishing to throw cold water on the laudable enthusiasm that the HERALD has shown for exposing shady mercantile transactions, I venture to point out that the case of the s.s. Penhale is not on a par with that of earlier vessels carrying coal cargoes destined to German furnaces. The British Government, out of deference to the wishes of the Argentine Government, has expressly declared that coal may be supplied by British firms to the German Electricity Co. here and in Rosario. Given the price of Cardiff coal to-day, the said company finds it better to buy from the United States. It is a common commercial practice for bills of lading to be addressed to the order of a bank, and presumably the National City Bank is to a certain extent interested in the shipment. So far all is in order, nor is the case altered when one considers the position of the steamer. She takes a freight from neutral port to neutral port, for delivery to authorised consignees, authorised that is to say by the British Government, and this whether you regard the consignees as the National City Bank or the C.A.T.E.

The freight is received by the British shipowner, and goes to swell the balance of our exports. One might enlarge considerably on this latter point, given the state of trade, and point out that the more carriage by sea British ships can do between neutral ports the better off is British trade as a whole, but that is beyond the scope of this letter. As for the small matter of the tugs, that probably is traceable to the receivers of the cargo. They have the right to send such tugs as they like, provided that they do not put the vessel thus handled in danger. And even if this was accorded to them as a favour, it is surely too small a trifle to trouble about. Trusting you will find space for this rather long letter, which is written only because as a firm supporter of the HERALD I do not like to see it run off on a false scent—quite possibly a trailed red herring—

"THE HERALD" PROTEST

SUPPORTED BY "TIMES OF ARGENTINA"

During last week, THE HERALD drew attention to the case of the Falmouth steamer Penhale, which was delivering American coal to the German Coal Company. It was suggested that the trade in which the vessel was engaged threw some doubt on the patriotism of the owner, Mr. R. B. Chellew.

Our weekly contemporary, The Times of Argentina, which was associated with us in the exposure of the T. R. Thompson case, refers in strong terms to that of the Penhale. Its comments are given below.

It is freely stated that another British vessel, engaged in similar traffic, will enter the port to-day.

"Some months ago," says The Times of Argentina, "we had occasion to strongly criticise certain British owners who accepted charters to carry North American coal to the German Coal Company in Buenos Aires, and as a result of these criticisms the Committee of the Baltic in London warned owners not to accept charters from the States to Buenos Aires unless the consignee's name was clearly given. It is fully realised that British Law cannot cover commerce between two neutral countries, in fact it is very deficient even with regard to trade between Great Britain and a neutral country, but it is certainly up to every patriotic British owner or manager to take precautions against his steamer being placed at command of a German firm in any part of the world. Yet, despite the warning of the Baltic officials another British steamer discharged American coals into the D.K.D. depots last week. The vessel in question was the s.s. Penhale, and we note that she was consigned, according to the official data on the subject, to the local branch of the National City Bank of New York. It may be that the Penhale's charter was arranged before the warning was issued by the Baltic, and we sincerely trust that this will be the last case of its kind we shall have the pain to register. It must be excessively galling for the British captain and crew of a British steamer, to find that they have been carrying goods for a German company, and by law, they cannot evade delivery. There is no real necessity for any consignment to be made "to order" or to a local bank. American coal shippers do not send out cargoes on "spec." Whenever an attempt is made to hide the real name of the consignee, the owner may take it for granted that the coal is intended for the German company here. Most neutral steamers chartered by this concern arrive clearly consigned to the company, and it is only British carriers which are despatched to "order." It would be well for British owners to insert a clause in the charter to the effect that both charterer and consignee are guaranteed not to be subjects of an enemy nation.

"We have been thinking that if the committee of the Baltic has power to warn tramp owners not to accept charters to carry coal to the German Coal Company here, an association or Exchange should exist with power to when it has been so effective on so many occasions since the war started in exposing and scotching real abuses.

Yours etc.,

SUPPORTER.

P.S.—If the Italian Electricity Co. were able to supply all Buenos Aires with light and current, it is to be presumed that the C.A.T.E. would not have had any consideration from the British Government. Hence it is manifestly the patriotic duty of all the Allies to switch on to the new service as soon as possible. I have nothing whatever to do with the Italian concern, I may mention.

Penhale and Iolo Cases

"THE BALTIC" AND SHIPOWNERS

Shipping circles still display interest in the question of the employment of British vessels for the conveyance of coal to the German Coal Company.

The question of the Penhale has already received prominence in THE HERALD, and to-day a further letter on the subject appears below.

It is now stated that the British steamer Iolo has entered the port on a similar mission.

IGNORANCE OR PRO-GERMANISM

(To the Editor)

Sir,—Allow me to address you once more, I hope for the last time, to call attention to the crass ignorance or bluff of "Supporter's" statements in the HERALD of October 2. 1st, He lays great stress on the permit of the English Government to allow coal to be imported for the C.A.T.E., (German Electric Coy.). Take note Supporter that the Penhale is discharging her cargo to the deposits of the D.K.D. (German Coal Deposit Coy.) which has nothing to do with the C.A.T.E. She was even discharging yesterday (Sunday). This is the Company that supplied the coal to the "Eleanora Woermann" (and others of her breed) which sailed from the port of Buenos Aires to try and play havoc with our Shipping. 2nd, In "the small matter of the tugs" I think the English Government's proclamation includes all transactions with the enemy both great and small. All is grist for the German mill, and furthermore I don't know how a captain could put his ship in greater danger morally or materially than by putting her into German hands even for towing purposes.

Yours, etc.

CORRESPONDENT.

P.S.—Supporter's "trailed red herring" was not strong enough. Try a piece of good German sausage next time!

Oct. 4, 1915.

How strong a view "the Baltic"—referred to yesterday—takes of shady warn managers of regular lines not to accept cargo from, or for shipment to, German firms. We acknowledge, once again, that the Trading with the Enemy Act does not seem to cover this business of supplying German firms resident in a neutral country with British goods, or vice versa, but surely it could be stopped by the exercise of a little patriotism on the part of the clubs or liner associations. The Baltic evidently has power to warn tramp owners against certain charters, and it seems highly probable that the warning would not be issued were not the Baltic committee powerful enough to impose its wishes on the members; surely, then, the Baltic or some liners' Associations has sufficient power to establish that no goods, bought or sold by German firms, wherever resident, shall be carried by British liners. Quite possibly such a procedure might spell a little loss for certain lines, but this should not be given any weight whatsoever. Great Britain is at war with Germany, and it is just as much a commercial and trade war as a military and naval war. Therefore, every merchant, steamship owner and business man—to say nothing of the poor, suffering journalist—should do his little bit for King and Country. It is difficult, under the circumstances, to discover reasonable arguments in favour of this trade with enemies resident in neutral countries. We acknowledge that when the firm's nationality is vague or twofold, some excuse when the German colours are absolutely flaunted, without any pretence at hiding. The British law does not prohibit this trade, but British owners should absolutely reject it, if only on patriotic principles."

THE T. R. THOMPSON CASE

MR. SUTHERLAND AND THE ARGENTINE COAL COMPANY.

Apparently, the T. R. Thompson case is still far from being settled. Mr. R. W. J. Sutherland, the ex-director of the Anglo-Argentine Coal Co. Ltd., who repudiated the transactions with the German Coal Company, is still vigorously assailing the Company, and, from the following correspondence which he has forwarded to THE HERALD, it would appear that the Company's attitude will require more than a little explanation before their conduct can be regarded as entirely satisfactory. The letter from Mr. Sutherland is as follows:

132 Newport Road,
Cardiff.

Saturday, Aug. 14, 1915.

Messrs. The Anglo-Argentine
Coal Co., Ltd.,
Cambrian Buildings,
Cardiff.

transactions by British shipowners is indicated by the statements made in the subjoined article from the "Financial Times":—

MEMBERS SUSPENDED.

The following extract from the "Financial Times," whilst not referring specifically to the case of the s.s. Penhale, gives a very clear indication of the trend of feeling at home.

Rumour has recently been busy with the names of certain shipping firms, established in London, who, it is alleged, have been trading with the enemy, and, in consequence, they have been excluded from their customary business haunts. The matter is founded on fact to the extent that admission has been definitely refused in some of the principal shipping markets—and notably the Baltic Exchange—to those who have thus come under suspicion. In some quarters a disposition has been evinced to magnify the matter into a scandal of serious dimensions, but it is questionable whether the circumstances altogether warrant this view. There appears to be no doubt that certain cargoes dispatched from this country, ostensibly for Dutch ports, have eventually found their way into enemy territory and, while it may fairly be assumed that the consignors were aware of the possibility of such a development, it is not actually certain whether guilty knowledge can be brought home to the owners of the vessels employed. The case has been met, therefore, by leaving it to those implicated to prove their innocence, instead of adopting the alternative course of bringing the question of guilt home to them. This policy is open to the objection that it is as severe in its effect upon the persons concerned as though they had been really convicted of wrongdoing, and those with whom they have been in the habit of consorting in the shipping world are obviously unable to decide what attitude to adopt towards their former associates. There is, consequently, a considerable volume of opinion in favour of a statement of facts by the authorities of the Baltic. The latter, however, are understood to feel that the persons under suspicion should be allowed a period in which to bring forward proof of their innocence, if they can, and if, after the lapse of a reasonable time, they have done nothing, it will then be open to the Committee to publish the information at their disposal, if they deem such a course desirable. For both views there is a good deal to be said, but on balance the Committee have probably adopted the best way out of a difficult situation. Meanwhile the publicity which has been given to this matter in shipping circles is calculated to act as an effective warning to all whom it may concern that the slightest deviation from the path of absolute rectitude in shipping transactions, and particularly as regards the destination of cargoes and tonnage, will be visited with swift and heavy penalties.

Dear Sirs,

Re your supplies of coal to the German Coal Co., at Buenos Aires, since the war began.

You will remember that this matter came before the Cardiff Chamber of Commerce at their last meeting on the 22nd ult., when the Chamber heard my personal explanation to the effect that I had nothing to do with this supply and they accepted a copy of my correspondence with you.

At this meeting your representative Director—Mr. S. H. O'Callaghan—after I had finished my remarks, spoke on your behalf. This gentleman stated that I had written to the Coal Exports Committee with a view of stopping your licences, and that in consequence you were called upon for an explanation by that Committee.

As I had never written such a letter I would have at once informed the Chamber, but the President, being somewhat indisposed, did not wish a discussion. I therefore wrote to Mr. S. H. O'Callaghan asking him to give me the date of the letter I had written, or produce a copy of it, otherwise to withdraw his inaccurate statement before the Chamber of Commerce.

I received from him the following letter:—

Cambrian Buildings,
Cardiff,
July 26, 1915.

R. W. J. Sutherland, Esq.,
132 Newport Road,
Cardiff.

Dear Sir,

I have your letter of the 22nd inst. The authority for my statement is Mr. Russell Rea, M.P., Chairman of the Coal Exports Committee, who made it to Mr. Hughes, Secretary of Amaral, Sutherland and Co., Ltd.

The explanation to his Committee was the only one we were called upon to give. We voluntarily laid the facts before the Foreign Office.

This said, I have no intention of being drawn into any correspondence with you, nor has the firm.

Yours truly,

S. H. O'CALLAGHAN.

On receipt of this letter, I wrote to the Rt. Hon. Russell Rea, M.P., Chairman of the Coal Exports Committee, giving him a copy of Mr. O'Callaghan's letter.

I have received the following reply:—

Coal Exports Committee,
68 Victoria Street,
London, S.W.
Aug. 7, 1915.

R. W. J. Sutherland, Esq.,
Great Western Hotel,
Paddington, W.

Dear Sir,

Your letter of the 6th August, respecting the Anglo-Argentine Coal Co., Ltd., addressed to the Rt. Hon. Russell Rea, M.P., has been placed before this Committee, and they desire me to state in reply that neither they, nor so far as they know, the War Trade Department, have received any communication intended for the purpose of stopping licences to the Anglo-Argentine Coal Co. No statement to the contrary effect was made by Mr. Russell Rea nor by any other Member of this Committee to the representative of Messrs. Amaral, Sutherland and Co., who appeared before the Committee, or to anyone else.

I am, Sir,

Yours faithfully,

E. J. ELLIOT,
Secretary.

I think you will agree with me that I have effectually proved that your representative made two deliberate false statements—one that I had written a letter and the other that the Rt. Hon. Russell Rea, M.P., had said so.

You will see how necessary it has been for me to make it public that my hands were quite clean in this supply of coal to our enemies, in view of the way in which you can appear before such a body as the Cardiff Chamber of Commerce; give utterance to statements and afterwards put them in writing—statements that are wholly untrue.

The letter quoted from your representative Director touches upon your explanation of the affair to the Foreign Office and to the Coal Exports Committee. This is in reply to my letter, of which the following is an extract:—

"You also stated that in consequence of my letter your Company was called upon by the War Trade Department for an explanation, which you gave to their satisfaction."

"If the opportunity had been granted to me to-day of replying to you, I would have pointed out that it is evident by what you stated that your Company has been called upon twice for explanations."

"If you will refer to your Company's letter to me, dated June 2nd, 1915, you will find the following paragraph:—

"You are fully aware, from information which we learn you obtained from Mr. Amaral when he was in England, and from inquiries which we find you have caused to be made, that His Majesty's Foreign Office was fully satisfied with the bona fides of our action in the matter you write about."

"It is clear, therefore, that the letter you refer to from the Foreign Office did not cover you for all time, otherwise the Government would not, according to what you stated to-day, have called upon you for another explanation."

"I have no comment to make on this beyond saying that I am very glad you referred to it, as it clearly shows that I was right in asking a public body such as the Cardiff Chamber of Commerce to put on record my personal statement."

"It was necessary for me to deal with facts, not explanations."

All I wish to say in support of my statement as to you having been called upon twice is that you are evidently not aware that your Secretary had to appear more than once on your behalf to explain matters before Admiralty officials at the Admiralty. For Mr. O'Callaghan's guidance I may say that the Admiralty is in Whitehall and the Foreign Office in Downing Street.

In the light of the above, the statement of your representative Director that you have only been called upon to give one explanation is peculiar. You "voluntarily laid the facts before the Foreign Office"—your representative had to appear before the Admiralty—and the above letter says that your representative also appeared before the Coal Exports Committee. I wish to point out that you did not appear before the Coal Exports Committee in consequence of any letter of mine, as your representative Director informed the Chamber of Commerce, "they desire me to state in reply that neither they, nor so far as they know, the War Trade Department, have received any communication intended for the purpose of stopping licences to the Anglo-Argentine Coal Co."

You will see that I have been obliged to clear myself by correspondence, and all this would have been saved if you had given me a copy of a letter you months ago are reported to have received from the Government on the matter: such a letter would also have saved your

FLAME WREATHS

OFFICER'S STORY OF GERMAN DEVILRY.

A young officer, interviewed at Dover on his way home to Edinburgh on leave, tells a graphic story of the recent fighting in the flame-wreathed trenches east of Ypres.

"The new German trick," he says, "was a surprise to us. Everything for yards around that could burn seemed to be wreathed in flame, and in addition to the intense heat which was blistering us all over we felt a choking sensation in the throat, and we became so thirsty that we could have drunk the sea dry. Our men gradually gave ground as the heat became unbearable, and then we began to realise what this new horror meant, for we could hear the pitiful cries of the wounded lying among the flames."

"One company was so keen on going back to the relief of their stricken comrades that they had their wish. They charged right into the advancing Germans, who were preceded by the flame squirts, and they cut them up badly. By now the ground from which we had been forced was all ablaze, just as if somebody had spilled gallons on gallons of whisky or oil and applied lights. The men picking their way through to the wounded were scorched at every turn, and some had their clothes burned. Still they kept at it, and cleared away all the wounded before they fell back again under stress of a new attack."

"The sights of some of the men carried out of the flames was the saddest thing I have seen in a war made of infinitely sad sights. Their faces were burned in many cases out of all recognition to the human form, and some were one mass of blisters from head to foot, where the flame had gone through their clothing. One poor chap, as black as a cinder in some places, begged hard to be killed, he was in such pain. It was a terrible lesson in German methods of waging war that will not be forgotten soon by our men."

"It is only right that the public should know that our men met this new barbarity with the spirit that has ever characterised the British soldier. There was nothing in the nature of panic. Men lay on the ground quietly watching the wreaths of flame slowly coming nearer and nearer, and at each advance the heat became more and more intense, and as far along as one could see there was a line of men mopping their brows, from which sweat was streaming."

"In the midst of it one man found time for a grim jest. 'Billy,' he said, 'if we only keep this up long enough, by the time the fire reaches us there'll be sweat enough to put it out.' Then the enemy began to squirt the flames directly on to where our men were lying; but still they kept their ground until the order came to retire by companies, and at that they rose and started to march back, each company turning to fire into the Germans behind the flame wreaths at intervals."

representative appearing months after before the Coal Exports Committee.

I wished my many commercial friends to know my position before you are possibly called upon for further "explanations."

I can quite understand you do not wish to conduct further correspondence on the matter.

I have already informed you that my name has been the most prominent one in connection with it and I cannot hide behind the term "Anglo-Argentine Coal Co., Ltd."

Your two principal proprietors—Mr. D. A. Thomas, of the Cambrian Coal Company, and Mr. T. J. Callaghan, of L. Gueret Ltd.—are not in the same position as I am of having sons and are therefore not interested to the same degree.

I remain,

Yours faithfully,

R. W. J. SUTHERLAND.

ROSS'S

Belfast
Ginger Ale

PICTORIAL EXPLOSIONS

Whoso goes to the National Art Exhibition galleries in Arenales, Plaza San Martin, should, unless very strongly constituted, wear smoked glass eye preservers, carry a flask of brandy and a smelling bottle, and have the ears stopped with cotton wool. These precautions are necessary to seeing the pictures in anything like a calm and judicial frame of mind. The first two rooms contain some exceedingly noisy subjects. For example, 369, "La femme qui rit"; this lady, really, does not laugh; she leers, and a very unpleasant and Satyr-like leer it is. Sidling with fingers sprawled starfish wise on one hip, across the canvas in a green silk coat which yells from the canvas, she has the face of "a woman of no importance" of the worst type, and the eyes of a soul from the Pit. In addition, the colour is crude and raw, the whole effect most unpleasant. The pictures are fairly well hung; some as well as they deserve. There are among them some charming examples, but the new poster or ultra new school clamour wildly from the walls. "A girl at a sewing machine" is an undigested mass of colour laid on apparently with a trowel. At 50 yards it may be pleasant. A constantly increasing impression seems to prevail that through the most rabid eccentricities lies the way to fame, or rather notoriety, which the aspirants probably prefer. One of them might achieve it alone; but, with a number in the gallery, it becomes "a mere vulgar brawl" of colour, often "without form and void." This cheap assertive pretentiousness can't take the trouble-to-finish cleverness is rampant. One is almost inclined to pardon the Royal Academy for its excessive conservatism in excluding some of the examples of the scene painter's and hoarding art. No. 119 is rather good; there are fresh red lips, and after search, the ghost of a face is found attached to it; however it means something. No. 67 is simply a supreme achievement in haggard insistent ugliness; it is called "El Primo de Manuelita." The hag in the foreground may be Manuelita, but looks like the witch of Endor. It is priced at 2500 pesos. On referring to No. 98 to ascertain some clue to its meaning, it is found to bear the title "Naturaleza Muerta"—yes, dead, and damned, too. These alleged studies, for 97 is a bird of the same feather, are literally "painted with a squirt." A lively altercation is going on generally as to what they mean. There is a fine portrait piece of a tortoise shell comb and a mantilla, with a Señorita attached; its validity is a pleasant contrast to the nightmares rioting on the same walls. A second examination confirms the impression that there is plenty of ability in the Salons, and that neither figure nor landscape art, really and worthily representative of the country, is absent. No. 28, a study of a girl in a black mantle, in which the face is the only bright note, is very pleasing. A well painted and dignified half length of a lady by Sr. Luis Boni is No. 41. It is remarkable for the sane conventionality of its treatment; but in No. 58, a study of a head, Sr. Alejandro Bustillo shows that it is possible to be at once daring in manner without being extravagant and unpleasant. The head is full of character and careful study, and has a rich warm tone. In 79, "Abandoned," and 80, "El rancho en la loma," Sr. Ceferino has two typical Argentine subjects full of the wide air, the openness and the melancholy of the camp. They are oases of rest among the shrieking striving crowd in the same room. An example of spotty harsh and unpleasant colour is 144, "The Blue Garter." Why the lady has been painted at all in this intimate costume is doubtful. She is far from attractive, her legs and arms are badly drawn, and her maid is a sister of the witch of Endor.

Sr. Alfredo Guido has a portrait of his mother, with a background of violent blue, the figure painted in low tones; nevertheless it is, although startling, dignified and arresting.

CATTLE THIEVES

GROWING INSOLENT WITH IMPUNITY.

The afternoon Press states that quattrerismo (Anglice, Cattle Thieving) is assuming greater proportions than ever in the provinces in consequence of the crisis. For once, it is not porque de la guerra.

In Santa Fé, Corrientes, Buenos Aires West and South and Pampa the evil is assuming alarming proportions and seriously threatening the important stock industry. Estancieros will not submit to be constantly the victims of these marauders who operate with comparative impunity, and in some cases prefer to leave the district, a most detrimental result to national prosperity. If the authorities tried the effect of unflinching pursuit of the thieves and relentless severity when they are caught whoever they may be and however great their "respectability" or the importance of their connections, the trouble would soon become manageable and would ultimately disappear.

In "Mi Amigo," No. 338, the artist has done his friend an ill turn, but as there is not a return portrait he does not appear to have resented it.

In No. 314, "A French landscape," Sr. Silva Ramon has what looks like an insurrection in a $3 50 oil colour box in which the yellows have triumphed with the assistance of red. It would not be possible to sleep near this composition.

A full figure in satin skirt, with mantilla, fan, red rose and the other accessories of a lady in Spanish portraiture, 225, "Mercedita," is bright, clean and forceful.

In "El ventana del Faun," the colour is astounding and so exceedingly powerful and rich that it quite overpowers the subject. The name might equally be "Design for a Carpet."

Only a few of the really good things, of which there are very many, have been mentioned here; the blazing indiscretions will hit the visitor in the face the moment he enters. While the function of Art (which no four out of an assembly of five can agree upon) is not merely to depict the pretty pretty, or the goody goody, or the moral, it may be said that pictures like 1914 are physically nauseating, bad taste, bad Art, although evidently much to the taste of the Hanging Committee.

On the decorative side, the exhibition is strong and there is a great deal of careful and conscientious work displayed. There is ambitious sculpture, too, although perhaps with a decided leaning to the rugged style of Rodin and a taste for the tragic and even lugubrious. No. 153 is a most delightful head of child, and across the room is the head of a Crusading Knight, a face of great strength and well modelled, but with obviously hazy notions as to the basinet and mail hood.

Men's Fashions. "Short, Full, Shirts." Hitherto shortness in a shirt has not been considered a commendable quality but rather a valid reason for returning it on the hands the shirt-maker. In spite of a prominent announcement of what is apparently a new fashion, many men will continue to prefer their shirts long whether in sleeve or body. Fullness scarcely compensates for other deficiencies. It would appear to be a return of an old fashion which was "the mode" in 1862 for in an account of a ball at the White House in that year, the great Orpheus C. Kerr records, "The shirts made by the noble women of America for the soldier are noble articles, my boy, as far down as the collar, but are not suitable for use as an only garment." Those desirous of securing these unique "camisas" should hurry. Probably their sale will not be advertised after Monday.

BRITON.

THE ARMENIAN MASSACRES

INTERESTING VIEWS OF EMIR ARSLAN

IN "LA NOTA"

On the subject of the Armenian Massacres, there is in this week's number (8) of that excellent weekly "La Nota," an interesting and well informed article written by the Emir Emin Arslan. Unlike other Young Turks, such as Enver and the infernal Talaat, this gentleman is as we know not only a man of profound culture, but of heart, and his discussion of the circumstances and causes is very illuminating.

He recalls the terms of the old massacres under Abdul Hamid (whom Gladstone termed "Abdul the d—d"). Three days and nights of massacre were stopped instantly by his order, and it was noted that at that time, not one Jew, not one European was killed by mistake.

Evidently these killings were done to order, and as the writer recalls when angry Europe called the "Red Sultan" to cease, and to slay no more, only the infamous Kaiser thought it a fit time to send him his portrait as a token of esteem. It has since proved that Abdul Hamid was the better man of the two.

Now the massacres have recommenced, again to order, the order of the Young Turks and their German Friends, and especially of the German Ambassador.

These massacres are quite logical for, if the Germans have not abstained from wholesale murder of Christian Belgians who are Europeans, have destroyed Christ's temples, the Turkish Government are naturally emulous of these noble deeds. Only the credulous will suppose that Christian solidarity, fear of public opinion or of the verdict of History will prevent them. But these simple people, who are blind and do not want to see, do exist. They shut their eyes and fold their arms in presence of these horrors. "I who am not a Christian," says Emir Arslan, say that this war is proving to us the Bankruptcy of Civilisation, of human solidarity, and above all, of the Christian Spirit." It is a common error of the Press to accuse the Turkish people of these atrocious crimes. The Ottoman Nation is innocent. Read the works of all travellers in the East. They concur in saying that there is no better nor honest people than the Turkish, and the proverb is manifestly untrue which says "Every People has the Government it deserves."

CHARGES OF FRAUD

THE EX-INTENDENTE OF ROSARIO ON TRIAL.

A trial which is exciting some comment and excitement is in progress at Rosario. The ex-municipal intendente is accused of setting aside for his personal benefit several thousands of dollars of the public funds. The prosecution is at present proceeding, and it has been in vain that the Intendente has been asked to formulate his defence.

So carefully are the figures and accounts being gone into that the present Intendente will have no difficulties whatever concerning his audit. "La Capital" definitely states that the ex-Intendente has defrauded the public funds and that he alone must suffer. With the payments and such like matters there is no question that everything is satisfactory, but it is the public works, roads and other matters affecting the city that are in question, and such practices as using one's position to one's own advantage are so rare—almost unknown—in the Republic, that when a case of suspicion does occur, the law must take its course.

It would appear that it is the habit of prisoners to make a statement of defence, if not confess, and because the ex-Intendente of Rosario has not done either one or the other, the prosecution is in difficulties. The trial is exciting considerable interest.

BRITISH AND AMERICAN BENEVOLENT SOCIETY

The monthly meeting of the general committee of the British and American Benevolent Society was held in the board room of the Royal Insurance Co., Calle Bmé. Mitre 478, on Monday, the following members being present: Mr. H. G. Mackie (in the chair), Mrs. Huntington, Mrs. Lighton Robinson, Rev. Dr. McLaughlin, Mr. W. H. Robertson, Mr. E. Millington Drake, Rev. W. M. Laing, Rev. J. Stuart Cameron, Col. Palmer, Mr. R. W. Huntington, Mr. James Marr (Hon. Treasurer), Mr. G. H. Hayward (Hon. Secretary), Mr. Alexander Law (Superintendent).

Apologies for unavoidable absence were received from Rev. Dr. Fleming, Rev. F. O. Spanton, and Mr. F. Phillips.

The minutes of the previous committee meeting were read and approved.

The Hon. Treasurer then presented his statement of receipts and expenditure for the month of September, which was duly approved, the following being a resumé of the disbursements:—

	m/n.
Charity grants	$328.00
Pensions	291.00
Salvation Army Shelter	55.25
Loans	20.40
General Charges	185.00
	879.65
British Aged and Infirm Fund	177.00
	$1,056.65

The Hon. Treasurer again expressed his concern at the financial outlook of the Society, and pointed out that whereas the subscriptions and donations received in the same month last year reached nearly $1000 m/n, this year they only amounted to a little over $200 m/n, and the expenditure for the month was therefore four times as much as the receipts.

Whilst the Committee naturally have to disburse charity with the utmost economy, it will be recognised that there must always be some cases, besides those of the pensioners, that must be relieved so long as there are funds in hand, and the Committee, in bringing this before the notice of the British community, wish to impress on them the good and necessary work of this old Society which is absolutely dependent on their sympathy and generosity.

Various applications for relief were submitted to the committee, and after full consideration, were dealt with according to circumstances.

PRO-GERMAN CONSUL

RESIGNATION ORDERED BY WASHINGTON.

Washington, Sept. 20.

The United States Consul-General at Munich, Mr. Thomas St. John Gaffney, has been instructed by his Government to tender his resignation which will be accepted immediately.

The action of the United States Government has been caused by the anti-British attitude assumed by Mr. Gaffney, the indiscretions of which he has been guilty, and his criticisms of the foreign policy of President Wilson.

DOLPHIN CAUGHT IN THE RIVER

Yesterday afternoon some fishermen plying their trade in the estuary of the river, noticed a large dolphin sporting himself in the water. They gave chase and succeeded in harpooning the fish and bringing it ashore.

It is now on exhibition at the La Plata market. The lucky fishermen thus brought into notoriety were an Italian named Gargiulo and his mate Frenkel.

FANCY FAIR

AT PRINCE GEORGE'S HALL

$12,500 In Aid of Missions to Seamen

Under the most favourable auspices the Missions to Seamen Bazaar was opened on Oct. 1 at Prince George's Hall by H.B.M. Minister, Sir Reginald Tower, who is always willing to back a worthy cause. The familiar hall was transmogrified as much as bunting and clever stall erections, although of course ephemeral, could change it. As the "Red Duster" is prominent, a gigantic red ensign and an Argentine bandera of equally noble dimensions practically hid the end wall and the orchestra nestled in the lower folds thereof. The stalls were arranged round the sides, with at the top a ship of somewhat indeterminate rig which was a skeleton like the spectral craft seen by the ancient mariner. She was very impressive all the same, had a fiddle bow and two masts, with a chinese lantern hanging at the fore truck. A young lady attired, as to her upper person, most accurately after the navy's white dress, was in attendance. In the centre, the Flower Stall was a bower of greenery and real blossoms, a riot of purple, green and white (deadly coincidence — the Suffragist colours) from the interior of which damsels of the most attractive aspect and the most persuasive tongues sallied forth to prey upon the unwary passer-by. The refreshments, served by blooming Hebes, occupied the recess, and appeared to do a, not roaring nothing so loud, but a very brisk business, and the destruction of "masas" was phenomenal. Mr. Chevallier Boutell had presented some authentic war relics which lay on a table, the helmet of a Prussian Guardsman bearing the honour "Waterloo," the skull that wore it in the sepulchre, an Austrian sword-bayonet from the Carpathians, a clip of German machine gun cartridges with their nickel pointed bullets, a gleaming Gurkha khukri, the deadly crescent blade of the Nepal hillmen, and other interesting items.

About 500 were present at 3 p.m., when the Rev. Mr. H. Westby Brady, Chaplain to the Missions to Seamen, announced that Sir Reginald Tower was about to open the Bazaar. "God save the King" was rendered by the orchestra, all standing. As the Minister ascended the rostrum, a photographer in the gallery gave the necessary "horrors of war" touch by exploding a powerful charge of magnesium powder. Sir Reginald smiled perceptibly and said that it was his privilege to be present there, and he was sure that all concerned in this work felt a pardonable pride in what had been so well prepared and with such an excellent prospect of success.

A just meed of praise was due to the Women's Association and the Girls' Friendly Society for their arduous and unremitting work in connection with this Bazaar. It was they who were responsible, and therefore it was to them that honour was due.

Grumblings, of course, there were. "Things which not even critics criticise" were rare in this world. What were the special charges made against this present venture?

1. "A Bazaar is an unpopular and unproductive form of raising money." Such an argument was usually adduced by men, the ladies deciding in their wisdom that the system is, generally speaking, the most productive of good results; and so they were there to-day.

2. "That two institutions working separately exist for the benefit of the sailor, who is thus over well treated in Buenos Aires." A couple of years ago, they endeavoured to bring about an amalgamation—a partial amalgamation—between the Missions to Seamen and the Victoria Sailors' Home. He had a right to speak of this there, as he had a small part in preparing the draft which was to be the means of bringing the two seamen's institutions under the same roof. He could truthfully say that it was not the Missions to Seamen which prevented the realisation of what all felt to be desirable in the interests of the British sailor.

3. "It was unpatriotic at the present time to do anything save what is intimately connected with the war." He did not think that anyone who has read the article in the current number of St. John's Magazine on the subject of this Bazaar would be of opinion that an entertainment which conduces to the welfare of the British merchant marine can be otherwise than patriotic.

What our merchant sailors are doing was known in some measure to most of them. If any doubt should exist as to the efficacy of the work of the Missions to Seamen, let such critic tackle Mr. Brady, and there is no doubt that he will become a wiser man, converted to the pride felt in our merchant flag, and willing to lend a hand towards lightening the burdens of the esteemed Naval Chaplain. Were they not here in specially close touch with the men who still, thank God, sail these South American waters under the red ensign, taking as they do their full share in the Empire's responsibilities in the present war?

Some lines in the last "Spectator" on the British Merchant Service came into his mind:—

"A rough job and a tough job—he's handled two or three—

And what or where he won't much care, nor ask what the risk may be. . . .

For a tight place is the right place when it's wild weather at sea!"

It was for the Mission which ministers to these sailors that the present Bazaar had been organised, and he commended it very heartily to their support. Bring all friends to-day and to-morrow, and let the receipts be commensurate with the interest they must all wish to take in the excellent cause.

He had now great pleasure in declaring the Fancy Fair open and deserv- ing of their patronage.

Mr. F. Chevallier Boutell, on behalf of the Missions to Seamen, heartily thanked Sir Reginald for his presence and encouragement. M. Henri Jullien, the French Minister, kindly attended as a further evidence of the close cordiality between the partners of the Entente Cordiale, and the orchestra played the Marseillaise, Russian Hymn, La Brabançonne, and the Italian March.

At 3.30 the pupils of Mme. Reed and Miss Hughesdon Smith gave a charming display of dancing in the upper hall. The programme was as follows:—

Mazurka, Misses N. Davies and H. Turner. Skipping solo, Miss A. Platt. A Dance of Youth, Miss A. Nieva. Tarantelle, soloists Misses A. Vasquez and I. Villamil. Trio, Misses E. Murchison and J. Bates and Master W. van Konynenberg. Club solo, Miss A. Grey. Nymph quartette, Misses L. Capriole, B. Klappenbach, K. and J. Furness. Coppelia, Miss A. M. Vasquez. Oriental Dance, soloist Miss G. Andrews. — Interval.

Irish Jig, Miss S. Tornquist. Eastern Dance, Miss T. Paton. Castenet Dance, Miss C. Rugeroni. Pizzicato, Miss K. Furness. Hungarian Dance, Miss G. Andrews. La Nuit, Miss V. Bissett. Czardas, Misses A. Nieva and A. Woodgate. Rosette quartette, Misses A. Vasquez, T. Villamil, G. van Wassenaar and C. Rugeroni.

Accompanists: Miss Lucy Gordon and Mrs. Heslop.

Sales appeared to be brisk in the late afternoon, and a fresh raid was made on the tea room about 5. Then set in the most perilous time for the unprotected visitors, when pretty girls carrying cushions, bonbon boxes, lace doyleys, table centres and other necessities of masculine existence perambulated the hall with an air of determination to sell either the article or a ticket for a raffle. Many were the victims who went away with waistcoat pockets full of numbered paper vouchers.

At 8.30 a concert was given upstairs with marked success, the artistes being Miss Lily Moss, Miss Dreyfus, Dr. and Mrs. Sibbald, Mrs. Thompson, Mr. Charles Gabb, and Miss Dorothy Small.

The stalls and stall-holders were as follows:—

Fancy Stall: Mrs. Boote, Mrs. Bowden, Mrs. Dulhunty, Mrs. E. E. Taylor, Miss Boote, Miss Estella Boote, Miss Tova Fernandez. Variety Stall: Mrs. Hope Gibson, Mrs. Tomás Bell, Mrs. Chevallier Boutell, Mrs. Thornton, Miss Hope Gibson and others. Women's Association Stall: Mrs. Herman Krabbé, Mrs. Mackern, Mrs. Gardner, Mrs. Steed, Mrs. Schroeder, Mrs. Briggs, Mrs. Mohr Bell, Miss Mitchell, Miss Hall, Miss Oldham, Miss Taaffe. Toy and Children's Stall: Mrs. and Misses H. McLean, Mrs. Cowlishaw, Miss Marie Dodds, Misses S. and L. Neill, Miss D. Simons. Fish Pond and Bran Pie: Mrs. Lloyd, Miss Forbes. Flowers, Fruit and Provisions: Mrs. Pearson, Mrs. Spanton, Miss Bulpin, Miss Peard, Miss L. Drabble, Miss Mackenzie, Miss V. Scott. Merchant Service Stall: Miss Gregson, Miss Page, Miss Lett, Mrs. Lodi, Mrs. Evans, Miss Paterson, Misses Jenkins, Miss D. Stuart Small. Sweet Stall: Mrs. and Miss Rendtorff, Miss Doty, Miss Furrs, Miss Delisle. Art Stall: Mrs. Hume, Miss K. Gregg, Miss Lily Moss, Miss Hayward, Miss Romero. Misterio Stall: Mrs. Wigg, Mrs. Banbury, Mrs. Leslie Wilson. G. F. S. Tea and Refreshment Stall: — Mrs. James Corbett: Misses Corbett, Cowan, Garrett and Minney; Mrs. Lowe Brown: Misses Shearburn, White, Foster, Musgrave, Watters; Mrs. J. Hall: Misses Henderson, Hunter, Fisher and Brown; Mrs. Wilson Woods: Misses Wilson, Denton, Lillian, James, Evelyn and Samson; Miss Gregg: Misses Bideleux, Holtum, Corbett, Doty, Alice Murray. Palm- istry Tent: Mrs. Ferrari Olazabal. Parcel Stall: Mr. E. Leslie, Miss Fleury, Miss Macdonald.

It should be mentioned that some attractive fairy costumes were present in fair Dutch girls, Greeks, etc., and a young gentleman of tender years equipped as a lieutenant in khaki, complete with rank marks, puttees, brown boots and Sam Brown belt.

THE CLOSING DAY

The Missions to Seamen Bazaar at Prince George's Hall has not only commanded success, which the dubious person who addressed Sempronius stated was "not in mortals," but it has filled up this old tag by deserving it also. When the Pelf-master General and his aides finished their financial perquisitions on Friday night, they found that over $7,000 m/n had been taken, and the debt was already exterminated. At the moment of writing, the actual takings for Saturday are not to hand, but Mr. F. Chevallier Boutell, who has had some experience of Bazaars, Fancy Fairs, Sales of Work, "Ye Olde" this and that, and their like, prophesied with confidence that a sum of considerably over $10,000 would result. During Saturday business proceeded to desarollar itself in a normal and continuous manner, but towards night, refreshed by libations at the tea room, the lady assistants became more dangerous, more enterprising, and more deadly than ever. They were never weary in well doing. (Cruising incessantly with flowers, bottles of blissful stickiness in the way of bulls' eyes, boxes of chocolate, sumptuous cushions much too handsome to defile either with one's back hair or boots, they waged incessant and successful war on the masculine intruders.

That the result is so good, so remarkably good in spite of the somewhat unsatisfactory state of business generally, and the croakings of the ravens of woe, is very gratifying, and Mr. F. Chevallier Boutell, who, like the Rev. W. H. Brady, has been on deck almost continuously, says that it is well, for the officers and seamen and firemen for the Merchant Service are well worthy of what we can do for them. Coolly pursuing their ordinary dangerous avocation in the face of an enemy of unparalleled malignity and unscrupulousness, they also are assuredly "doing their bit," and giving an example of coolness and "a business as usual" attitude vastly more praiseworthy than that to which the phrase was originally applied. It should not be forgotten that the Royal Mail, Pacific Company, and other shipping concerns have liberally contributed in the loan of flags, and very specially the fine orchestra of the s.s. Vasari have worked like Britons giving their services and their music gratuitously to the cause. They include Mr. A. W. Looney, bandmaster; Mr. B. Marshall, violin; Mr. G. F. Simms, violoncello; Mr. Stembridge, contra bass; and Mr. John Deacon, piano. Their ability and execution were equal to their kindness and patriotism, which is saying much.

During the evening a concert was given in the hall upstairs. The programme announced was arranged as follows:—

Part I.—8.30 p.m.

Piano solo, Miss Dorothy Small.
Song, Miss Cowes.
Dance, Miss Tassie Paton.
Song, Miss Gallacher.
Song, Mr. Bideleux.
Song, The Kerry Dance, Rev. H. W. Brady.
Dance duet, Miss Dorothy Small, Mr. E. Pettigrew.

Part II.—9.45 p.m.

Song, Mr. Gabb.
Song, Miss Cowes.
Dance, Miss Small ("Swan Dance").
Song, Miss Gallacher.
Song, Mr. Bideleux.

All the ladies are stated to have worked very hard and achieved marvels, and Mr. Boutell awarded special medals to Mrs. Hope Gibson, Mrs. C. H. Pearson, and Mrs. Thomas Bell.

$12,500!

EXCELLENT RESULT OF FANCY FAIR IN AID OF MISSIONS TO SEAMEN.

(To the Editor).

Sir.—May I take this means of expressing my sincere and grateful thanks to all those who have had a share in the work of the Fancy Fair, to whom is due the credit of its undoubted success.

I appreciate most deeply the unstinted labours of the Ladies of the Women's Association, and of the Girls' Friendly Society on whose shoulders the larger burden of work had fallen. I realise what sacrifices have been made of time, labour and talents, and I value it as being given indirectly to the men of the Merchant Service. I wish to thank also those who made articles and donated gifts to the Stalls, and lent a hand in other ways, and also those ladies, gentlemen and children who gave their services so readily in helping to entertain. It is some return to stall holders and helpers to know that through their efforts nearly $12,500 clear has been made for the Missions to Seamen.

Yours, etc.

J. WESTBY BRADY,
Chaplain.

Mainly for Women

Conducted by "Egeria"

WOMEN IN THE ARGENTINE

The "Jus Suffragii" has the following "par" about "Women in the Argentine":—

South America still remains unrepresented in the international suffrage movement, but here and there women's aspirations begin to take shape. A Feminist Library has been started at Buenos Aires, with Mrs. Kay Robertson as president, Miss Banbury Perkins as secretary, Miss Mackinnon as treasurer, and Mrs. Urquhart as librarian. There is yet very little interest in suffrage among Argentine women who marry very young, have large families and are under clerical influence. Argentine women and girls cannot go out unchaperoned, and those outside the towns are separated by great distances. The laws, however, are more just to women than in some European countries, notably better than in England, where in matters of inheritance women are still treated in a medieval spirit. Moreover, children born out of wedlock inherit on the same terms as "legitimate" children. Being a Catholic country there is, however, no divorce law, though one is under consideration. The white slave traffic is very active and deadly, girls being imported from Europe. Efforts are being made to protect the girls by meeting the boats, etc., but though society tolerates the traffic it thinks any mention of it indecent. An influential Englishman has built a hostel where women artists can lodge, as they are exposed to great difficulties and dangers, being charged exorbitant prices in hotels. Although it has so far been considered very derogatory for a woman to work, a beginning has now been made by women as teachers and in the post office. The terrific heat of summer does not conduce to activity.

It is interesting to read that women artists are exposed to great difficulties and dangers! Does "Jus Suffragii" mean the Argentine women artists? And are the difficulties and dangers greater for artists than for other women, and do they exist for all the sex?

I notice that the "Feminist Library" has Englishwomen as officers, and probably the Anglo-Saxon element is working out a leavening influence among the native women for many Argentine women do go out unchaperoned; although some of those who dare not depart from the conventional path, prefer even a "baby" as chaperone to none at all; and women weighing at least a couple of hundred-weight may be seen engineering themselves through the streets, while a child of tender years (the chaperone) toddles along in the rear, carrying a parcel or a handbag, or anything as long as it be something to mark the servitude, and tell the tale that she is the chaperone! Or a big fat mother may be seen taking the air after the effort of adding to the "big family" referred to, while a diminutive "chaperone" acts as nurse also, and behind the bundle of baby and clothes she may be discovered after careful search, or by the aid of a microscope. Certainly the average Englishwoman or Britishwoman living in Argentina knows very little about native life. Everything is strange and repugnant at first—the crowded narrow streets, the manner of living, the language, the food (or the manner of preparing it), and failing to shelter within the friendship of other exiles, she shrinks snail-like into her shell, just waiting and praying for the ship to come which will take her back to her own country, feeling as stranded and miserable as any castaway on a desert island. If fortunate enough to find congenial friends, she lives more or less the parochial life, to which she was

THE AFTERMATH

No woman can read the papers from day to day without realising that the aftermath is going to be of more importance to her sex than that word usually implies.

To-day women in England are not only working in munition factories, they are helping with the hay harvest, wearing overalls, leggings or putties and broad-brimmed sun hats. They are employed to the number of 2,000 as patrols organised by the National Union of Women Workers their work being to give kindly oversight and practical sympathy to young girls in military centres; they are licensed tramcar conductors, vo-accustomed before fate or fortune brought her to Argentina, although if it be the latter, she does not wait, she goes back by the next boat. I met one lady who had firmly resolved "to stick it," as she said. She did—for a month—three weeks of which were spent in the British Hospital, and during the other she was so overcome by the general satisfaction, silently and otherwise expressed, in her beauty (she was more than ordinarily attractive) that she told her friends "when the basura man makes audible comments on my appearance and calls after me "Que linda!" I think it's time for me to go back to England." And she did!

Another lady could never overcome her fear of the "native," and would not even travel in a tram with him. She was sick of the filth and the habits and the smells, and the "awfulness" of it all; and after nearly dying from nervous prostration, her husband returned to the small salary of London and relief, sacrificing present wealth and future prospects, the wife preferring "to do" for them both, rather than "to be done" to an early grave in Argentina. But the dangers to our womenkind are more imaginary than real. "You get used to it," is a trite remark, but a true one. The white slave traffic may exist; it evidently does, since a lady is placed in watch and ward to prevent the illicit business; it may be dangerous and difficult for women who have to deal with the natives, and the sex may be charged exorbitant prices; but the grievances of most Britishers are purely personal ones, as far as I can judge. Unless they are incompetent to take care of themselves, they can live very safely, if not pleasantly, in Buenos Aires. Nobody molests them, indeed the natives are so accustomed to foreigners that they smilingly help the helpless, when shopping, or walking, and it must be a poor, timid mouse of a woman who cannot buy what she wants, if she have the money, or go where she pleases, in the Capital of Argentina. The morality is certainly different, from the Government down, but that is the affair of Argentina, and need not affect the average stranger within its gates. I do not question the accuracy of the "Jus Suffragii," but I think a reader in England, for instance, might say "What a terrible place, by no means let us go there," and therefore I say the paragraph is misleading: for, speaking from a year's experience, I should judge that Buenos Aires is not more "terrible" than London. My experience is by no means a wide one, however, were I a lady journalist, I should find it my duty to find out the truth, and all the things mentioned by "Jus Suffragii," and get busy with these weighty subjects; but as "Egeria" is but the fairies' midwife, her "subjects" are purely feminine, and considering her vocation, she remembers a saying which states "Fools rush in where angels fear to tread."

hunteer postmen, rate-collectors and gas-meter inspectors, they are porters, drivers and in fact are employed in every kind of trade and industry. And what are they doing in the war as doctors and nurses? One nurse speaks of the daily work. Breakfast at 7 a.m., at 7.30 a.m. they go on duty, two of them, and they have 36 beds each, one row on one side and another on the opposite side of a huge ward; and of these the two nurses have complete charge. The hospital in question is in Malta. And with 36 beds no one of which is ever empty, what work are the nurses doing? And the fact that the number of women on the British Medical Register has increased from two 40 years ago to 1,000 at present, is something which needs no argument. And to this may be added another fact that women are in Australia acting as justices of the peace. The following may be considered interesting, as it tells of the first time in the history of the British Empire that a lady has occupied a position on the Bench. The first practical result of the recently adopted policy of the Government in the matter of women justices of the peace, was witnessed at the Adelaide Local Court, when Mrs. Price, the wife of a former Premier (Mr. T. Price), occupied a seat on the Bench with Mr. Commissioner Russell. Keen interest in the innovation was evidenced by members of the Bar. The lady justice did not begin her career as an assistant on the Bench under auspicious circumstances, for the harsh and seamy side of life was revealed to her in a long-drawn-out succession of claims against debtors, who failed to meet their obligations for small amounts.

At the conclusion of the proceedings his Honour referred to the fact that this was the first time in the history of the British Empire that a lady had occupied a position on the Bench. He had taken the opportunity of inviting lady justices to take a seat so that they would gain enlightenment and experience, which would help them in the duties they had to perform as holders of the Commission of the Peace. In view of the times it seemed fitting that ladies should be appointed justices for they were frequently called upon to appear in court in other capacities, such as contractors and parties to agreements. In other States they were permitted to practice at the Bar. He hoped they would frequently avail themselves of the opportunity of hearing cases in that court.

Questioned subsequently, Mrs. Price said that she realised that Mr. Commissioner Russell's invitation would help lady justices considerably in gaining a knowledge of judicial matters. Her experience that morning had been useful to her, and her eyes had been opened to many things which were unknown to people in ordinary walks of life. "I was sorry to see so many women in court," she added, "and many of the debtors looked so young. It is a pity they should begin life wrong, as so many seem to have done, judging by the long list of summonses to-day. I was also struck by the great amount of poverty revealed."

But to this side of the question there is an opposite, for already the nations are making demands for population. A speaker in a British community recently said:—

"Population is demanded to fill the gap made in the ranks of the patriotic who have fallen in the present war and to fill the vacant places in our contingent. The patriotism of dying for one's country is not greater than prudently marrying for her, and having—if possible—a family of at least four children. The civic worth of an individual is the measure of useful life as a social unit. As an asset to the nation the individual value depends upon the amount of mental and physical work he or she can produce, and the capacity of breeding and rearing children healthy in mind and body. No intellectual communion of mature minds can compensate for physical disadvantages of too long deferred marriage. If a woman has to wait till she is 30 or more before marriage she is so much

SOME WOMEN AND MANY THINGS

Among the leading workers in the Civil Ambulance Corps of St. John's Brigade, Sydney, is Miss Wanhöpe. She was one of its founders twenty years ago, and has taken a strong part in the work of Hospital Saturday, Sydney.

In South Australia, we understand, it has been decided to appoint a woman inspector. There are women inspectors in Britain, but the colonies have curiously lagged behind. The woman inspector clause was dropped out of the New Zealand Education Bill last year.

Madame Miura, a pretty and gifted Japanese singer, is taking a leading part in "Madame Butterfly" at the London Opera House. She is a great favourite with British Royalty, before whom she has sung repeatedly. In Japan she has been the leader in a movement to introduce Western music in the Land of the Rising Sun.

An infamous law has been recently passed in the non-suffrage Legislature of New York, increasing the working hours for women and children in canneries for 60 hours a week to 72—that is twelve hours a day. These workers are the most poor and helpless in the community, and this outrage of greedy capitalism is likely to stimulate the voting when the suffrage issue is brought up there in November.

Wyoming has just passed a law to make divorce obtainable only after a year's residence in the State instead of six months. This change has been the work of the enfranchised women of Wyoming, who sent a petition for their representative, Mrs. Norma Wood, to present in the Capitol. Nevada has affirmed the six months' clause, the Legislature there having been elected before the lately emancipated Nevada women were able to vote.

"I am determined to live just long enough to see the victory of France and the reparation of the disaster of half a century ago." In these words the ex-Empress Eugenie replied to the congratulations offered her on attaining her ninetieth birthday recently.

The death of Mrs. Cass will be greatly mourned by English soldiers and sailors. Last September in the first confusion of organisation, she did marvellous service in bringing soldiers' families into touch with the authorities. Her methodical work prevented much suffering and put new machinery in use on behalf of needy dependents.

the less likely to be a healthy woman and have healthy children; and if a man does not marry till he is middle-aged, he either runs risks himself or imposes them on other people. He will also be past his prime when his growing family needs him most.

"Unless women are prepared to risk marriage economically possible for young men they will be condemned in increasing numbers to celibacy, not because there are not enough young men to marry, but because men will increasingly learn to do without marriage.

"Women now complete with men in a number of professions and walks of life. What shall it profit woman if she gains the whole world of work as her sphere and loses the prospect of marriage? The cheap labour of women is one of the foundations of a luxurious civilisation; luxury is inimical to home and family life, and so a vicious circle is established.

"Among middle class women there now obtains a standard of personal comfort which is, sociologically speaking, luxury and those who marry later frequently 'can afford only one child' and are at an age when a normal family is far less easy to face with equanimity. Teachers, typists, and clerks are being trained, while mothers, wives, and cooks are required."

Land of Lilliput.

Conducted by Egeria

My dear Lilliputians,

Naturally you are interested in the heroes of the war. I will tell you of one of whom perhaps you have not heard. His name is Lance-Corporal A. Jacka, and he belongs to the 14th Australian Infantry Brigade. He is the first Australian to win the coveted Victoria Cross, for conspicuous gallantry. Mr. Jacka is only 21 years of age, and his parents live in Victoria, Australia. Before he went to fight for his country's Motherland, he was employed as a fencer—or in making fences,—for the Victorian Forestry Department.

Now you will like to know how he won the Victoria Cross. The story in short is that he, with four privates, was holding portion of a trench at Courtney's Point, which is on the Gallipoli Peninsula,—and I am sure you will not want me to tell you which map to look at for Gallipoli Peninsula!—on the night of May 19-20, when they were heavily attacked. His four comrades were killed, and Mr. Jacka disposed of seven Turks singlehanded shooting five and bayoneting the others. Don't you think he is proud of his honour?

Do you know I think all the Lilliputians ought to be regular walking encyclopedias by and bye, when they leave the Land of Lilliput, because so many things in every land are being discussed now, which were not thought of before the war.

For instance Geography should be an interesting study, and knowledge of it easily acquired to-day; and History—such a bugbear to many Lilliputians—is now a daily study and a current event with the war so that, too, will be something that is not a hardship to commit to memory. Then, many interesting facts are discussed now, in place of the weather, for instance, and so even those of you who have poor memories, will not be able to help learning and remembering some of them.

Speaking of the weather you all have heard of the Eiffel Tower in Paris I expect. (I once heard a lady ask who built the Eiffel Tower! Of course you all know that it was named after its "maker"!) Now you may be surprised to read, that the Eiffel Tower, rising, as it does, high above the city of Paris is, in itself, a thermometer, the largest in the world. You know how the column of mercury in the glass tube of the ordinary thermometer, expands and contracts with the changes in the temperature. In a similar manner this great tower of steel expands and contracts with every change in the weather. And as we measure temperature by noticing the rise and fall of the mercury column, so do the French scientists determine temperature by measuring the expansion or contraction of this huge structure. France's most powerful wireless station is located in the Eiffel Tower, and so it is the especial target of the German airmen who sail over Paris dropping bombs. The Germans would very much like to destroy this tower and interrupt wireless communications now maintained with London and Petrograd, as well as with all parts of France. It is guarded with rapid-firing guns, and search-lights are mounted upon it.

Many are the stories told of the experiences in the trenches. One concerns the winning of the Victoria Cross, in quite a different fashion to that of Mr. Jacka. A subaltern, says Professor J. H. Morgan, who vouches for the absolute truth of this story, possessed a pair of Zeiss binoculars, of which he was very proud, and he bored everybody by always talking about them and exhibiting them. One day our men were driven back from their firing trenches by a German attack, in which we lost heavily. They retired into support trenches, and the men were being mustered when suddenly the subaltern exclaimed, "Great Scott!" and, to the captain's amazement, ran back to the trench in possession of the Germans. "He was given up for lost," says Professor Morgan, "but a sergeant who was very devoted to him ran after him. After an interval the sergeant came back alone, and said to the company commander, 'Sir, he has captured the trench.'" The company commander collected support and went up, and when he got round the corner of the traverse, he found the subaltern with a revolver in each hand, facing a row of Germans holding up their hands, having laid down their rifles. The company commander, who told Professor Morgan the story, remarked to his junior officer: "That is a very fine thing; you will probably get a V.C. for this, but it was an extraordinarily foolhardy thing to do. What on earth did you do it for? Why did you go to recapture the trench single-handed?" "I didn't go to recapture the trench," replied the subaltern. "I went to get back my binoculars." You of course know that the binoculars were field-glasses. And now you will enjoy the rest of the story begun last week.

With love

EGERIA.

"ON ACTIVE SERVICE."

(Conclusion)

"Now then," said the lieutenant, turning to Pat again. "You're thirteen and a quarter, medically fit, and you know drill. What about raising a troop of Scouts, if there isn't one in your neighbourhood? There are some boys out there to begin upon; and I was a Scoutmaster before war broke out—if I had your address I could send you papers and things. How would that do?"

Pat's eyes shone. Such a plan had never before occurred to him, but it was one after his own heart.

"I think I could manage it, sir," he said, eagerly. "Shall I write down my address?"

"Do, while I speak to those chaps outside. Get your troop together, and make it efficient, and there's no saying what use it may be put to by and by."

Primrose listened a little wistfully to what followed, hearing the officer talk to the boys in a quick, convincing tone, which caught and held their attention; then Pat arranged a time and place of meeting, undertaking to bring along some of the boys from his own village. At last, when the lieutenant was stepping into his car again, he felt a timid touch on the sleeve of his khaki coat.

"Please," Primrose reminded him, "you were going to find a job for me."

"Oh, I beg your pardon," he said, and stood for a few moments deep in perplexed thought.

"What about knitting?" he inquired then.

Primrose dived into her bag, and produced the mitten on which she had been working.

"I'm knitting every spare minute," she said earnestly, "but I want something else to do besides. I've learnt first aid, and I can bandage, can't I Pat?"

"You ought to be able to, anyhow," affirmed Pat, "for you're always practising on me."

"Do you know Mrs. Adam?" asked the officer. "Colonel Adam's wife? She lives over in your direction. Because she's getting a house ready to take in some of the wounded when they're sent up here, and she might take you on to run messages—especially as you've got a bike. You could try, at least."

"Thank you," said Primrose, brightening. "I'll go there now, and ask her, while Pat is collecting boys in the village. Good-bye, and thanks awfully for all you've done."

He laughed and saluted as he drove off, and the children mounted their bicycles.

"We'll eat our lunch in a field on the way back," said Pat. "I feel quite hungry, now my job's fixed up, and I'll have to work hard all afternoon getting chaps to join. I must have Beach's permission, too, to drill them in his field, because it's the most convenient place I can think of."

When they had finished the provisions packed for them by Sarah, they parted and went different ways, Primrose riding at her best speed along the high road, towards a square white house, which stood back among some trees at the head of a long drive.

Under ordinary circumstances she was very much afraid of Mrs. Adam, who hid a kind heart under a stern exterior; but war alters many things, and gives people courage where before they lacked it. At the gates of the drive Primrose met the lady in question, seated in her high dog-cart, and giving some parting instructions to the lodgekeeper.

"What do you want, little girl?" she asked. "Oh, it's Primrose Orr! Have you come with a note from your grandmother?"

"No," said Primrose nervously. "Grannie's gone into Glasgow to-day to buy blankets and things for dad dy's regiment. We've just been to the recruiting office at Milton, and there was an officer there who gave Pat a job, and he told me to come and ask you if you'd please let me do something to help. I'm bigger than I look, and I know how to bandage, and I could go messages on my bike."

She stopped, out of breath, and Mrs. Adam smiled.

"Humph! so you could," she said, "We're badly in want of a messenger, both indoors and out and I like your spirit—running round the countryside in search of employment. Do you think your grandmother would let you do errands for me while we're getting the house into shape up there?"

"Oh!" said Primrose fervently, "I'm quite sure she would, if I promised not to scorch down the hills. Can I really? Oh, thank you! Shall I begin at once?"

"No," said Mrs. Adam. "I don't need you at present. Report to me at ten o'clock to-morrow morning."

And bringing her whip to her hat in salute she drove off smiling.

Primrose returned the salute, and rode joyfully home. Despite such inconveniences as youth and sex, she too was to serve in this great war, and the one time "colonel" of a nursery regiment felt her heart swell to the bursting-point with patriotism and zeal.

The sight of the Major, crossing the lawn with wagging tail to meet her, brought a new inspiration. Why should not he (who still wore the order of the Pierced Farthing, awarded for conspicuous gallantry) also serve his country? The dolls, in home-made uniforms, lay neglected in the nursery cupboard; the non-com.—most placid of white rabbits—slept with his fathers and a frozen thrush, under the guelder-rose bush; William the Brigadier sunned himself sleepily on the doorstep too old even to have a grievance nowadays; but the Major was brisk and active as when he won his medal.

Primrose walked thoughtfully into the house, and took a clean table-napkin from the sideboard drawer. Spreading this out on her desk in the schoolroom, she printed the legend "Your King and Country Need You" in fat letters of red ink on the shiny white surface. Finally she sewed a length of tape to each corner, and carrying it out to the gate, where the Major stood on guard, watching for Pat she tied it saddle-wise across his back.

"Now" she said triumphantly, "go and take a walk through the village. Major dear, for you're on active service too. To-morrow I'll send the dolls to the little Belgian refugees."

SOME WOMEN AND MANY THINGS

A telegram from Berlin via Brussels states that the wife of M. Carton de Wiart, the Belgian Minister of Justice, has been sent to Berlin Military Headquarters as a civil prisoner to undergo three months and 14 days' imprisonment for having maintained secret correspondence with her husband, distributed prohibited pamphlets, and intercepted a letter addressed to the German Administration, but delivered by mistake at her house (says the "Glasgow Weekly Herald.")

Another telegram states that the 16-year old Countess Helene Jonghe d'Ardley has been sentenced to three months' imprisonment for publicly insulting a German officer. Her grandmother was sentenced to imprisonment for complicity.

A private letter from Ghent tells how the Countess was walking in Ghent with her grandmother, and both ladies were wearing medals with King Albert's picture. A German officer tore the medals from their breasts, "Away with that King without a country!" The Countess picked up the medals, and answered proudly, "We Belgians prefer a King without a country to an Emperor without honour." She was immediately arrested.

Many curious stories have come from the front, but perhaps one of the most interesting and extraordinary is that of an angel host appearing in the sky during the battle of Mons, and which is believed by many to have saved the British army from annihilation, which at the time seemed almost inevitable. The story was told to a lady in England by a returned soldier and was as follows. Just when defeat seemed almost certain, this angel host was seen by some of the officers and soldiers, the man who related the incident having actually seen the vision himself. No one seems to be able to explain or understand why or how, but with the appearance of the host the tide turned, and in some miraculous way the British escaped what shortly before had looked like annihilation, and the enemy came off distinctly the worst. The lady to whom this story was told was quite incredulous as to its being true, and on returning home related the story to her brother and two fellow-officers, who had come through the battle of Mons. To her astonishment, when she had finished and remarked that of course it was just a romantic story, although told in all good faith by the wounded man, one of the officers said: "That story is no hallucination; it is perfectly true. I saw it myself." Such an authority is not to be questioned. There can be no doubt that it did happen, and the resulting influence was great to the British engaged. Such things have happened before, and this wonderful inexplicable vision is just one of the many marvellous happenings which have taken place during the present war.

According to a recent London paper, no less than 19,648 boys who have received their training in reformatory and industrial schools in Great Britain have served during the war in the naval or military forces. Three of them have won the Victoria Cross.

When Fellsmere, a new city in Florida, planned its charter, says "Jus Suffragii," it gave married women an equal vote with men at all municipal elections. This was to attract women from other parts of Florida to Fellsmere. Times have changed in the South, when a city can best advertise itself by courting favour through woman suffrage.

The death of Mrs. L. B. Walford removes one of Britain's standing minor novelists and a link with the mid-Victorian literary period. She grew up in cultured surroundings, and enjoyed fame at a comparatively early age. Her reminiscences are full of the great names of last century. Her books have commanded a sure audience and a steady market.

SACRED CONCERT AT LOMAS

IN AID OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH CHOIR.

A musical recital, both instrumental and vocal, was given on Oct. 4 at the Lomas Methodist Church. Both from a financial and musical point of view the recital was a success. Apart from the substantial collection made in aid of the Choir Funds, chiefly for requirements of new musical works, the actual recital given was of all round excellence. Mr. Llewellyn Hawes as an exponent of soloist organ work is unequalled in the British section of South America, and again last night demonstrated his capacity and control over the organ. In the very small church, rather low in structure, there is an organ of remarkable volume and power, and unless handled by the touch of a true musician it would lose all effect in a thrown back reverberation of sounds, and it speaks highly for Mr. Hawes' playing that his control over this instrument obviated all this. Especially noticeable was this fact in the Postlude in conclusion, which was rendered to the perfection of control.

The lighter works of the programme were undoubtedly more suited to the church, and it was the performance of Mr. Hawes that rendered the other works even possible.

Mr. Stanley Parker in De Koven's "Recessional," or rather in the music set by De Koven to Kipling's "Recessional," was excellent. His solo work was clear and good. In respect of the music, it must be said that while quite fair, it does not reach the heights of the sublime words, the greatest and purest ever penned by a master. In the singing of the item the choir was good, and the same can be said of all the choruses.

Handel's "Angels ever bright and fair" was well sung by Mrs. F. A. Howard, to the great appreciation of those present.

Madame Edgard was in good voice in Liddle's interpretation of "Hope of Ages." Her rich contralto suited the organ and the capacity of the church, which the singer realised to perfection. She was accompanied by Mr. Hawes, while Mr. W. H. Crispin was responsible for all other accompaniments.

Special mention, too, should be made of the singing of the chorus—of whom there were at least 30—in the final, "By Babylon's Wave." They certainly admirably expressed the sentiment of Gounod's music. During their unaccompanied singing they were conducted by Mr. J. W. Fairclough.

Mrs. Howard, Miss Yorston, Mr. Fairclough and Mr. Jones, was the composition of a quartette which rendered "In this hour of softened splendour."

The sacred concert was the first held in the church, and was so fully appreciated that another will soon be arranged. The church was full, and the general result of the opinion—materially expressed—of those present will be of quite comfortable benefit to the Choir Fund.

MISS ADELA VERNE

A WELCOME RE-APPEARANCE.

The brilliance of Miss Adela Verne as a pianist has exhausted practically every adjective in the English language. Superlatives have been expended liberally on her genius as a pianist and they have been well deserved. After a lengthy absence, due to illness, she re-appeared at the Odeon Theatre, and once again she merited the encomiums showered upon her during her last season in the Capital. Almost every item—from Beethoven to Chopin—in a programme of sustained interest was warmly received by the audience, and the programme met with unanimous approval.

Those who have neglected to visit a Verne recital have missed a feast of real music; those who intend visiting one of her performances have a delight in store. To hear Adela Verne is to appreciate the possibilities of the piano, and to dwell in the domains of superlative art. Her recitals are wonderful.

VICTORIA SAILORS' HOME

MRS. EIDELBERG'S CONCERT.

The remarkable success of Miss Kathleen Knight at the concert arranged by Mrs. Marie Eidelberg, and given at the Victoria Sailor's Home on Oct. 2, was the feature of an entertainment that has had few equals, in this home of good concerts.

Miss Knight is always generous with her singing, and her desire to oblige. Always the same charming personality and singer, last evening she excelled herself, with the result that she "brought down the house." During the past three months Miss Knight has steadily improved in her singing, and in her technique, and much of this improvement is doubtless due to Mrs. Eidelberg, who has lately had charge of Miss Knight's voice. Never has a singer at these concerts had such a reception as was the case last night. Six times recalled, Miss Knight favoured her audience with her very best.

Mrs. Herald was her usual entertaining and humorous self. She gave recitations in the first half of the programme, and her "Japanese Love Song" called forth a double encore in the second half of the programme, when Mrs. Herald sang "My little wet home in a trench," and "I want to go to Idaho" in a most entertaining and inimitable manner. So great was the enthusiasm of the audience that during the second half of the programme, a simple encore did not satisfy, and repeated calls became the order of the evening. Mr. Stanley Parker was in good voice, and his singing was most acceptable. Mr. Gough was in great form with his "comics" and was also most amusing. In fact, there was no seeming end to the good things of the programme.

Mrs. Eidelberg herself was in splendid voice, and rendered with her usual charm a "Waltz Song," "Our Countries Call," "Angus Macdonald" and "Home Sweet Home." This last song Mrs. Eidelberg rendered to perfection, and the storm of applause that followed, was only fitting.

During the whole evening, Mrs. White was untiring at the piano, apart from her solos, she accompanied all through the evening without a break, and considering the immense number of encores, it can be readily realised that much of the success of last night's entertainment was due to her.

KILLED IN ACTION

CAPTAIN H. K. CASSELS.

Another local loss is recorded from the firing line, as is indicated by the following official telegram received by Mr. W. R. Cassels, of Cassels and Co., Maipu.

W. R. Cassels,
271 Maipu, Buenos Aires.

Deeply regret inform you Captain H. K. Cassels, Berkshire Regiment missing believe killed. Lord Kitchener expresses sympathy.

Secretary, War Office.

The Captain Cassels referred to is a son of Mr. W. R. Cassels. No details further are available at present. General sympathy will be felt for Mr. Cassels.

GELRIA STOPPED BY CRUISER

GERMAN STEWARD ARRESTED.

Rio de Janeiro, Oct. 4.

The captain of the Dutch steamer Gelria which has just arrived here, states that while in the English Channel he was stopped by a British cruiser which sent an officer and detachment of men on board.

They arrested the chief steward on the ground that he was of German nationality and took him away with them.

OBITUARY

MRS. FRANCES WARD DE CAIRNIE.

Some beautiful wreaths and floral tributes were sent by the many friends of the late Mrs. Cairnie who was buried at Chacarita Cemetery on Sept. 30. Amongst those who did so were:—

From father and children, Evar Mendez, A. C. Collins and family and Mary, Miland C. Curtis, Luis Castellano, and Emilia Paravaña.

At the house the Rev. Dr. Fleming attended to take the service, while the Rev. G. Stuart Cameron performed a similar duty at the graveside at the British Section of the Chacarita Cemetery.

Amongst those who escorted the cortege to the graveside or who sent cards were the following:—

The Rev. W. M. Laing, Mr. R. Sanchez Bars, Miss W. Cameron, M. A. Fontanella, Mrs. C. Hartman, Mr. J. H. Colven, Miss R. Colven, Mr. W. P. Hardie, Mrs. W. Bayley, the Misses Bayley, Mr. J. Meregrini, Mrs. S. McGard, Mr. and Mrs. Colven, Mrs. I. Cowan, Miss I. F. A. Ryan, Mrs. A. A. Cowan, Miss E. Richmond, Miss C. Lean, Mrs. B. Attwell, Mr. J. Roy, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Codd, Mr. G. Lean, Mr. R. Larraz, Mr. J. Lean, Mr. and Mrs. Henderson, Mr. T. Attwell, Mr. Jorge Attwell, Mr. and Mrs. MacCulloch, Mr. L. Castellano, Mr. E. Attwell, Mr. G. Estrella and family, Mr. A. H. Hanner and family, Miss E. A. Tanner, Mr. Hope Gibson, Mr. J. Lacrampe, Mr. E. Cowan, Mr. E. Mendez, Mr. A. Cowan, Mr. J. Colven, Mr. G. E. Kidd, Mr. J. Sinclair, Mr. E. Berra, Miss G. Campbell, Mrs. L. Robson, Mrs. F. F. Baker, Mr. J. Rasmussen, Mr. D. Black, the Clydesdale family, and Mr. D. Palumbo.

MR. A. P. HIGGS.

On Thursday, Sept. 30, the late Mr. A. P. Higgs, was interred at Quilmes Cemetery. A funeral service was conducted at the house and afterwards at the graveside by the Rev. Mr. Basset. Wreaths were sent from his loving wife, Ma and Tene, Gertie and Frank, Tom, Jack and Alf, Charlie and Dolly, Mabel, Charlie and Willie, Harry Evie and Leslie, Mrs. Crundall and son. The following were present or represented:—Mr. N. Chavarri (jr.), Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Broughton, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Avery, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Charman, Mrs. and Miss A. C. Collins, Mr. H. C. Crowther, Rev. and Mrs. G. H. Knight-Clarke, Mr. C. L. Torre, Mr. N. Fornari, Mr. E. Attwell, Mr. F. H. H. Logan, Mr. A. H. Tanner (jr.), Mr. H. E. Crundall, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Croucher, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Douse, Mr. A. Lennox-Samson, Mr. and Mrs. W. Allison Bell, Mrs. A. Hawtrey, Mr. H. F. Fornari, Mr. E. K. Walsh, Miss M. R. Bell, Mr. P. Rojo, Miss C. Lean, Mr. G. T. Mazdon, Mr. and Mrs. E. V. G. H. Sharpe, Miss M. Más de Ayala, Mr. M. Daly, Miss A. E. Despeyroux, Mr. V. Huisi, Mr. R. Pacheco, Miss C. T. Gonzalez, Mr. C. Más de Ayala, Mrs. E. Smith, Mrs. D. Regan, Miss E. K. Broughton, Mr. and Mrs. L. Zabala, Mr. M. Huisi, Mr. R. C. Barnes, Miss Ross, Mr. A. Hawtrey, Miss G. B. Campbell, Mrs. M. A. de Despeyroux, Miss M. J. Despeyroux, Mr. and Mrs. C. Sanders, Mr. P. Hudson Shepherd, Mrs. W. H. Logan, Mr. S. F. Nicholson, Mrs. Nathen and Miss M. Nathen. Telegrams of condolence arrived from Mr. J. E. Morton, Mr. J. Semaden, Mr. E. Rivero, Mr. A. Durante, Mr. G. O. Neville, Mr. P. Ingouville, Mr. W. Blake, Mr. R. J. Bird, Mr. A. Harvey, Mr. C. Maresca, Mr. R. Roji, Mr. G. Bardier, Miss I. Más de Ayala, Toppino family, Mrs. E. M. A. de Bardier, Mr. J. Hermida, Mr. E. Miles and Mrs. T. B. Higgs.

OUR ILLUSTRATIONS

This week we are able to publish several photographs and drawings of special interest in view of the recent success of the Allies. The frontispiece shows a mountain spur in the Alps in possession of the Italians. The chapel or monastery has been turned into barracks for the troops holding the position, and is painted to be invisible at any great distance. Number two shows how the French and the British take advantage of the work of their own artillery, or mines. Huge craters are formed by the big shells, or wherever a mine is exploded, and before the enemy can recover the Allies rush the position and turn it into a miniature fort, which is made the base for further operations. The picture gives a good idea of the maze of defences which are established, and as the Germans have made similar use of such craters, it can be imagined against what formidable obstacles the Allies have recently made such splendid progress. The accompanying picture shows the gun and projectile by means of which craters are made. The mine, or bomb, weighs over 200 lbs. It bursts on landing and will make a hole 25 yards in diameter by ten or twelve feet deep. The Canadians have greatly distinguished themselves around Ypres, and recently made a desperate charge by means of which four German trenches near Hooze fell into the hands of the Allies. The scene of desolation at Clermont-en-Argonne is typical of the destruction which has taken place in the hottest part of the western war zone. The Allies have taken many thousands of prisoners at the Dardanelles. The problem of guarding them has been lessened by the use of the wire protected positions captured from the Turks. In the picture a group of prisoners is shown behind the wire entanglements at Sedd-ul-Bahr. The last picture is a remarkable photograph taken from a French aeroplane operating with a squadron which was sent up to beat off an attack on the Allied lines by German craft. The picture shows one of the French aeroplanes flying above the clouds at 10,000 feet.

RETURNED FROM THE STATES

RECEPTION TO MR. B. A. SHUMAN.

About two hundred were present at the Y.N.C.A. on the occasion of the reception to Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Shuman on their return from a visit to the United States. The popular Manager of the Y.M.C.A. had so much handshaking that he must have felt as if in training for President.

Tea and cakes were served in great proportion throughout the afternoon and a few musical renderings by Mr. Stanley Parker and others were given at intervals. A few of the many who were present were:—Mr. J. C. Zimmermann, Andrew Hugo Wilson, Mr. W. Field, Dr. McLaughlin, Mr. Alberto Frias, Mr. W. C. K. Jone, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley T. F. Reavis, Mr. P. B. Massen, Mr. E. E. Escobar, Mr. W. Thompson, Mr. A. A. Hunter, Mr. Jay C. Field, Mary Blanchard, Mr. J. Gilles, Sara Mier, Mr. P. Gardiner, Mr. C. Ehlers, Mr. L. Echeverria, Mr. E. Prins, Mr. J. A. Aird, Mr. G. R. Gowland, Mr. J. S. Barbier, Mr. Frank Hodge, Alice A. Torre, S. C. Eccleston, Mr. S. T. Raymond, Selina Owen, Julio Peña, Mr. J. C. Rodriguez, Mr. Quiruga, Lydia Abeldo, E. E. Pilling, Elisa Cortes, Danton Gazardo, R. O. Davidson, Mr. and Mrs. Beek, S. W. Gracey, Baron Bagel, F. Bernardo Podesta Costa, T. C. Colbet, E. J. Hercus, E. Simonie, Mr. Eisle, Mr. F. Tapper, J. P. Novak, A. W. Pearson, F. Bernardo, Mr. W. C. Currie, Elisa Currie, J. Synn Hazelton, Rev. M. S. Turner, L. G. Colby, Maud Coobe, H. W. Dixon, A. B. Watson, A. Waldstrom, Alberto Hale, J. Alvear, Mr. and Mrs. Zalbran, Fred Meyer, A. S. Loheed, Mary Storer, D. J. Nogens, A. R. Peterson, F. Ibañez, E. N. Ward, Ida Rombo, Mrs. Persis Breed, Gilda Seniorile, W. B. Brie, L. Olmos, G. E. del Rey, E. Irving, Mr. and Mrs. J. Monteith, Drysdale, Irene Shepherd and others.

LONDON AND BRAZILIAN BANK

DIVIDEND OF 14 PER CENT.

The London and Brazilian Bank have been advised by the Head Office in London that the directors have decided to pay a dividend of 14 per cent. for the year, less income tax.

AN ENTRENCHED ITALIAN POSITION ON A MOUNTAIN SPUR, WITH A CHAPEL USED AS BARRACKS FOR THE TROOPS.

A FORTIFIED SHELL CRATER, SHOWING THE MAZE OF DEFENCES, SIMILAR TO THOSE ATTACKED BY THE ALLIES RECENTLY.

FRENCH TRENCH ARTILLERY. AN 80mm. MORTAR FIRING AN "AIR" MINE.

THE CANADIANS CHARGING AT HOOGE WHERE THEY CAPTURED FOUR TRENCHES.

CLERMONT-EN-ARGONNE. A SCENE OF SOME OF THE RECENT HEAVY FIGHTING.

TURKISH PRISONERS BEHIND TH EIR FORMER DEFENCES AT SEDD-UL-BAHR.

WAR AT 10,000 FEET. THE PHOTOGRAPH SHOWS A FRENCH AEROPLANE FLYING TO ATTACK GERMAN MACHINES.

AN UNDESIRABLE ACQUAINTANCE

BY P. P. C.

I knew him as Giambattista, though I have no other reason for supposing that to be his name than the mere fact that it was daubed in straggling letters on the crazy pea-nut engine which he pushed along the streets. Italy was written all over him. He had all the accessories of the stage Italian, from the absurd sugar-loaf hat and gaudy neckerchief, to the bulky cotton umbrella. His face was dried and wrinkled as the shells of the nuts which he peddled, though he was by no means old. He was undersized and inoffensive—an ideal butt for all the rough jokes and cruel banterings of the youth of the streets. When I first saw him he was in sore trouble. Some half dozen rowdy lads were taking pleasure in bullbaiting him imitating the sound of his little brass horn, and mimicking, with gross exaggeration, the manner of his speech. He had no repartee with which to counter their coarse jests, and his occasional mild rushes into their midst only served to spur them to further devilment. One youth had snatched his hat, and in his clumsy attempt to retaliate with the tattered umbrella, the pea-nut engine was upset. There was a shout of wicked glee from the young ruffians, who danced exulting at his misfortune. Against these odds he cut such a pathetic figure of helplessness that I was moved to interfere. I dispersed the boys and lifted the fallen engine, reinstating it upon its little barrow, while Giambattista sat disconsolately on one of the handles. "Ai, Dio mio," he moaned, "Ai, Dio mio." I tried to hearten him with the assurance that the engine had suffered no irreparable damage. He only muttered a few hurried words of thanks, and with many doleful shakes of the head proceeded on his way. Such encounters were evidently all in the day's work, for soon I heard him tooting away on his brass trumpet and uttering the unintelligible cries of his trade. After that day, Giambattista had a nod for me when we met. There was about him a suggestion of such utter loneliness, that I would often stop and exchange a word or two. I learned that he had practically no friends in this vast city. All his friends and relations he had left behind in Italy. What combination of circumstances, I wondered, could have caused him to leave his home so far away for a life of persecution in the streets of Buenos Aires. He had come eagerly, it seemed. He had heard of the wonderful future in store for Argentina. In Naples he had run against one, recently returned, who painted Buenos Aires in such glowing colours that Giambattista had practically put on his hat and come. Yes, he had come eagerly, hopefully. But, oh, how woe! had been his disappointment. One had to work hard here—and for a bare existence. He had been lucky in finding work, it is true, but it was arduous work. Road repairing was no light job, especially that part of it which had fallen to his lot. The heavy wooden block with which he had to drive home the newly-laid stone setts was too great a tax on his strength, and he soon tired. Besides, he explained, his heart was not in it. They put him later in the street-cleaning department. This was much lighter, and though it was not exactly work after his own heart, he had kept at it steadily till chance had thrown him in the way of acquiring a half interest in a peanut engine. That was six months ago. He had his own engine now and was much better off. He was his own master. He had every reason now to be contented. Times were hard, though, owing to this awful war, and summer was coming on. He could manage to provide for himself, but that was not enough—he must save. He must save enough to bring Amadeo out. That was his brother—not like Giambattista—much younger, and bigger, and

NEW TAXES ON CLOTHING AND COTTON GOODS

PROTECTING NATIONAL INDUSTRIES!

In a short while the Executive Government of the country will consider the national finances and search around for new sources of income and new commodities to tax.

The proposal is being made to put a tax on certain imported goods which are also capable of being manufactured in the Republic. It is intended to do this under the somewhat hazy purpose of "protecting the national industries," but in reality it is to discover another source of income.

Taxes will be increased on all cotton goods and ladies dresses, tailor-made costumes and the like. It is stated that this will prevent a North American commercial invasion and will "stimulate the manufacture of these commodities in the Republic." In the meantime the public will have to pay while the stimulating effects of the new taxes are being brought to perfection.

stronger. Amadeo would be a match for those awful "muchachos." Yes, if he only had Amadeo with him, then he really would be happy. He had written home telling them all his plans. "Pero, Signori," he said despondently, "sonno due mesi che non ho ricevuto lettera." Every day for two months he had looked eagerly for that letter. That very morning he had walked right to the post-office and scanned the long lists of undelivered correspondence, without result. Now he was in despair. "Was it any wonder," he appealed to me pitifully, "was it any wonder that his heart no longer seemed to be in anything?" I could only preach the doctrine of patience, and assure him that the long looked for letter must come, in time—perhaps to-morrow. Each morning I enquired hopefully, but each morning Giambattista passed on with a melancholy shake of his head. Then one day I missed him. He was not at his accustomed spot, nor could I hear the faintest sound of the little horn. "The letter has come," thought I, "or better still, the brother, Amadeo." That would indeed be great news. I found myself speculating with pleasurable interest on the just retribution in store for those awful "muchachos," and my fancy peopled the street with hordes of boys flying in very terror from that young giant. I was smiling with satisfaction at the picture I had conjured up, when my attention was arrested by a great noise. Round the corner there had dashed a motor-car full of men. All were shouting and waving arms and flags. "They are reservists," some one said, "they sail to-day for Italy." I stood for a moment looking on with idle curiosity. Then I saw him. There, with his absurd little legs dangling over the back of the car, the noisiest of them all, sat Giambattista. Excitedly I shouted his name. He saw me at once, and in the wildness of his gesticulations nearly fell from the car. "Per la patria," he yelled. "Viva l'Italia." I saw him fumble hurriedly in his pockets, and next instant he was flourishing aloft the familiar little brass horn, whilst I waved vigorously in response. He himself was soon lost to sight in the traffic, but there came floating down the street the echo of a terrific blast on the old peanut bugle, and in the new and strident note which reached me I realised that Giambattista's yearnings were at last finding expression. His heart was in it.

Addio, Giambattista. May good luck go with you. I am very much afraid a search through the Immigration records would establish the fact that in this country you were classed as an "undesirable." Will they so class you in your own beloved Italy, when 'midst the beating of drums and the blare of trumpets you march forth in answer to your country's call? Will you be an "undesirable" then? I wonder,

MONEY FOR NOTHING

THE AMERICAN VERSION.

The demand of some employers for "human encyclopaedias" at less than a peon's wage is well known. Although THE HERALD is not prepared to guarantee the authenticity of the attached communications—sent in by a humorous reader—it publishes them as an item of interest.

(A true copy)

Bearden, Ark. July 15, 1915.
Mr. W. Dibble,
1221 Eight Street,
New Orleans La.

Dear Sir,

We have your favor of the 13th inst. with recommendation of the Southern Commission Co., Ltd., and in reply beg to inquire if you are a Remington operator. Please state what speed you have attained in dictation, also in transcribing.

In regard to salary will state that we have always paid $50 to $60 per month, according to capability, but this is a fair salary compared to the very reasonable living expenses at this place.

A single man can live on $15 per month, a married man, with or without family can live on $30 to $40 per month.

You will readily see, therefore, that this is a very desirable place for a man who is anxious to save money.

We append a memorandum of the duties we would expect our stenographer to perform, and trust that you will kindly write us at once giving the above information, when we will be pleased to further consider your application with others now before us.

Yours truly,

(Signed)—C. H. Hohemeyer.

Cotton Belt Lumber Co. Ltd.

Memorandum of duties. Dictation and transcribing, filing and indexing correspondence, operating the oscillating mimeograph occasionally, hitching pony to the cart and driving twice daily to town for the mail, sweeping and dusting the office every morning.

(A true copy)

New Orleans La, July 18, 1915.

Mr. C. H. Hohemeyer,

Secretary Cotton Belt Lumber Co. Ltd.

Bearden, Ark :

Dear Sir,

Yours of the 15th inst. to hand. In answer to your questions would state that I am a first class Remington, Smith-Premier and Fox operator with a speed of 100 words, stenographic dictation about 160 to 175 words per minute. Not having given you full information as to my capabilities in my letter of application, I beg to put them before you now.

As stated, I am 42 years old, have had 23 years active experience, being connected with the United States Embassy at Madagascar, and feel confident that if you will give me a trial, I can prove my worth to you.

I am not only an expert biographer, proficient stenographer, excellent telegrapher and erudite college graduate, but have several other accomplishments which may make me desirable.

The light duties that you enumerate in the capacity of stenographer, indexing clerk, mimeograph operator, stable boy and office porter, would not keep me busy, and would not be enough to keep me from getting homesick. I am an experienced snow shoveller, a first-class peanut roaster, have some knowledge of removing superfluous hair and clipping puppy-dog's ears, and have a medal for reciting "Curfew."

Am a skilled chiropodist and a practical farmer, can cook, take care of horses, crease trousers, open oysters, repair umbrellas, cane chairs and am also the champion plug tobacco chewer of Louisiana, my spitting record is 38 1/2 feet.

Being possessed of great physical beauty, I would not only be useful but ornamental as well, lending to

VESSEL BOARDED AND ROBBED

EXCITEMENT AT VALPARAISO.

An affair which occurred some six weeks ago at Valparaiso has just been made public and the matter is creating a vast amount of comment and excitement.

It concerns the audacious boarding of a small vessel in Valparaiso harbour and a number of thefts on board. From the reports that have been forwarded from the scene of the occurrence, it would appear that the thieves did their work in the cleverest manner possible and have the police and the marine authorities at their wits end.

La Gaviota is a small vessel belonging to Sr. Luis Recart and has been engaged in bringing to Valparaiso some large shipments of locusts for consumption. The captain of the vessel Sr. Dellinger, owing to an illness in his family, was absent on the night the vessel was boarded and the crew of five men were asleep. Shortly after two o'clock in the morning the boat was boarded by four mysterious individuals who stripped the ship of everything of value and on leaving made sufficient noise to wake one of the members of the crew. His surprise at seeing the ship stripped was sufficient to cause him to awake his mate.

Later, the port authorities and the police were notified, but the robbers had been too clever and had succeeded in getting clean away.

The reason that the whole affair is attracting attention is the fact the Sr. Recart, the proprietor, has returned and is demanding some satisfaction from the authorities.

So cleverly have the thieves done their work and covered their tracks, that were the losses of the owner less serious, the matter could be regarded as a most humorous one.

The sea-faring community have been expecting all kinds of serious occurrences, armed police have been patrolling the harbour side and the general excitement has been so great that bodies of civilians have been searching night and day for the outragers of the vessel "La Gaviota."

It might be remarked that $50 represents the sum total of the loss suffered, but the insult to the absent owner, captain and the sleeping crew is too serious a matter for peace and quiet.

the sacred precincts of your office that delightful charm that a Satsuma vase or a stuffed billy-goat would. My whiskers being very extensive and luxurious, my face would be useful as a penwiper and feather duster.

I could after office hours, take care of the children and prepare them for bed, and having use of the pony and cart, I could act as public dog catcher on my way to and from the Post Office.

I can furnish recommendations from Chauncey M. Depew, Jacob J. Coxey, Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, Captain Clark and Carrie Nation.

As to salary, I would feel I was robbing the widowed and swiping sponge cake from the orphans if I were to take advantage of your munificence by accepting the fabulous sum of $50, when my expenses would be but $40, and would be willing to give my services for $45, thus enabling you, not only to increase your donation to the church, pay your butcher and keep your life insured, but also to found a home for indigent fly-paper salesmen, and endow a free bed in the cat's home.

Really, Sir, your unheard of bounties border on the supernatural, and to the unsophisticated, must appear like reckless extravagance.

By the way, I might ask if it would be objectionable if I should practice on the cornet in the office during my leisure moments?

Hoping that this will appeal to you and that you will further consider my application, I beg to remain,

Yours very truly,

(Sgd.) Wm. H. Dibble,

Sports and Pastimes

THE TURF

PALERMO

There were one or two features incidental to the racing at Palermo on Sunday, which gave the afternoon a flavour all its own. In the first place there was the remarkable riding of Domingo Torterolo, who had a mount in every race, and in none of these did he finish farther away than second, and out of the eight races he was successful three times.

This however, does not quite convey an accurate picture of the performance. Of course Torterolo had horses to ride with potential winning chances in each event, but it can be said with exaggeration that in spite of this no other jockey could have got some of the horses up as he did. Another rider would in all probability have lost on both Gringoire and Palanta, and would never have succeeded in bringing in Alsacia, to say nothing of La Commune and Egnazia into second places. One other thing too is interesting, and that is that at least four of the races resulted in gruelling finishes. At the end of the day, it is small wonder that he lost on Borbollon by half a length, he undoubtedly felt the strain of a strenuous day. It was however a fine—a very fine—performance, and one which deserves the fullest recognition.

There was yet another matter that gave especial flavour to the meeting, and that was the magnificent victory of Pan Pan in the classic race. Once again he proved himself unbeatable over the mile. He won his race exactly as always (except that he took the lead), by coming along the rails and gaining his usual verdict of three-quarters of a length over the second horse. Again the time was good (and Pan Pan's time is always good), but not sensational.

Last Reason, San Paulo, La Natita, if not also Alsacia, have all beaten the time, Last Reason on quite a few occasions. And yet they can none of them beat Pan Pan. It must be that he gives them a gruelling in the first 800 metres somehow, and that they fail under the strain. This is one of the remarkable points about the mile running of the son of Ducato. On Sunday he took the lead (a very wise move), and thus prevented any chance of the light weights getting on the rails and smothering him. It was a magnificent race and just as we expected, that game little mare Alsacia ran well into second place, just scoring over Last Reason's tremendous rush at the finish. It seems that it is Pan Pan's fondness for the rails that scores him victories too, and he is the kind of wise old horse who costs his jockey the minimum of effort to ride him, to guide him, and get him through. In fact it would not be surprising if we heard the statement from the jockey himself, that Pan Pan knows just as much about a mile race and what to do as Rivero does, if he has not actually taught his rider how to do it. Pan Pan is a great horse.

There is little to be said concerning La Natita in this race. She was beaten stiff, and all the stuffing was knocked out of her long before the finish. It was really the general public's money that made the winner the favourite, for the majority of the real racing men—experts if you will—preferred the chances of La Natita, to their sorrow and cost.

Magnificent weather favoured the meeting and gay costumes, bright frocks, and straw hats, were much in evidence and gave a reminder, if any were needed, that summer is once more upon us.

Generally speaking the racing was splendid, the finishes were close and exciting, the track perfect, but excepting Pan Pan's mile, and especially Posadas' 1700 metres in 1.43 2/5, times were poorish. The great G. P. had a real day out. Five favourites won, and only one real reversal was suffered when Borbollon lost.

In the first race Ermita won from start to finish, beating La Commune by a length and three quarters, with Thamar third and La Once fourth. Thus the four probable candidates were the most prominent. Incidentally this was the easiest win of the day, and the only time Acosta scored.

Encore won the second event a neck from the debutante Egnazia, with Perez third. Although Encore scored her win she was or should not have been a complete surprise. Twice she has run quite strongly in her seven outings, and making her third favourite was perfectly reasonable.

La Esfinge ran a shocking race, coming in a poor last, entirely unresponsive to Acosta's energy. Whether the energy was intended to be wasted we cannot say, but it looked like it. Paloma ran fairly and should win before long.

A most strenuous race was the next, and resulted in a dead heat between Gringoire and Juez de Raya, with Strap two lengths away third.

Ducal was backed as though a more than likely winner. No doubt he is a good colt, the very spit, in looks and action, of his famous half brother Pan Pan, but we could not see where his chance came in with Gallardo up. However Ducal is a certain winner soon.

In the fourth event Posadas only just scored over Red Bonnet, after making all the running. Red Bonnet came with a great finish and would have caught a tiring horse within a few more strides. El Tony again ran well, but Nitrico was a disappointment, and was very tender about his fore legs after the race. The interesting point of the race was the time which was exceptionally fine.

The sixth race brought about some change in the tactics of the winners to date. It is worthy to note that the first five races of the day were won from point to point. In this event Lord French took the lead followed by Lovelace and Palanta. Retiro came down lightly and threw Rivero, before 20 yards had been travelled. Lord French did not get far enough ahead to become dangerous, and when the real fight started he was slowly beaten down, and a grand race ensued between Palanta and Lovelace. The former only just squeezed home a head, after a tremendous finish.

Blanco lost the next race on San Simon, and thus allowed Stagno to win in first class style. Contrary to possibilities and expectancies, Blanco was not left at the post, but took the lead and the race really should have been all over bar the shouting, but Torterolo put up a great show and without doubt won the race through superior riding.

The last event was upsetting, to say the least of it. Mingo took the lead on Borbollon from Evoé and Hidrato, the only other two runners. Tired as he was, we have never seen Torterolo put up a worse exhibition. He did things in this race absolutely the reverse of his usual style. First he took the lead, secondly in doing so, and on several occasions during the race he was turning round looking where Arcuri was, and thirdly when the finish came, he was vigorously or rather by vigorous movements trying to urge Borbollon along. This is a thing he has never been seen to do, when riding to win. He is generally as steady as a rock, and wins by sheer "lifting power," he never gets fussy on a horse, like he did on Borbollon, who should never have lost by the half length he did lose by.

It was a bad finish to a great day for the jockey, and the only possible excuse is that he was overfagged. There should have been no more certain winner on the card than Borbollon on Sunday.

LA PLATA

There were some very nasty knocks given on Sunday at La Plata races. It was not as though there were any sensational prices paid out or as though any rank outsider scored, but the favourites and the horses with reasonable chances of prominence, went down one by one, and completely upset the book in the majority of cases.

The weather and track were perfect, but perhaps the heat had something to do with at least some of the upsets.

Fox, who was so hopeless at Palermo the earlier part of the year, has been running well and scoring consistently. He won again on Sunday.

Duquesita another Palermo failure, has been doing likewise. There were three dividends well over $20, but in spite of general failures, the following results show the racing as having been of interest.

PREMIO CACHITO, 1100 metres.—1. Agorera 52 ks, C. Capra; 2. Ogham 57; 3. Marguerite 55.

Also ran: Rubinet, Cap Piazza, Festolin, Cumbay, Health, Ganancia. Dividends: $26.50 and $6.90; 2nd, $8.80; 3rd, $3.20.

Won by half a length; a neck. Time: 1'8" 1/5.

PREMIO CAMPESINO, 1300 metres.—1. Peugeot 48, A. Quinteros; 2. Macaulay 48; 3. Hamburgo 50.

Also ran: Genial, Dear Friend, Poco a Poco, Quiroguita, Chiriguano, Herb, Mari Pepa, Sajonia, Estenia (4), Pichuleta, Molleja.

Dividends: $10.20 and $4.60; 2nd, $14.60; 3rd, $25.40.

Won by a neck; a head. Time: 1.21.

PREMIO CAMPERO, 1400 metres.—1. Chillar 56 ks. F. J. Perez; 2. Real Envidio 56; 3. Chichú.

Also ran: Malón II. Dividends: $9.90 and $4.20; 2nd, $3.80.

Won by a length; 1 1/4 of a length. Time: 1'29 2/5.

PREMIO CANARIO, 1400 metres.—1. Octavio 53 ks., J. Arismendi; 2. Apiz 43; 3. Honorable 54.

Also ran: Glou Glou, Effusion (3), Edgardo, Misionero, Heresy. Dividends: $7 and $3.10; 2nd, $4.60; 3rd, $5.10.

Won by a head; a length and half. Time: 1'27 2/5.

PREMIO CATRIEL, 2000 metres.—1. Fox, 57 ks., J. Arismendi; 2. Monecita, 44; 3. Clora 51.

Also ran: Mérito, Forajido, Perilino, Liberty, Puro, Pillería, Renta (4), Nervio, Ica, Chambery, Manito de Oro.

Dividends: $6.50 and $3.90; 2nd, $8.60; 3rd, $8.80.

Won by half a neck; half a length. Time: 2'7.

PREMIO CAROLA, 1200 metres.—1. Ardilla III. 52 ks., A. Lauria; 2. Matatias 57; 3. Arrogante 53.

Also ran: Bonci (4), Diorita, Belgrado, Marabú, Mal Palo, Arrogante, Isolina II., Fiereza, Mónica, Arma, Divinitá, Pitina II.

Dividends: $24.90 and $7.10; 2nd, $5.20; 3rd, $4.90.

Won by half a length; half a length. Time: 1.13 3/5.

PREMIO CABURE, 1600 metres.—1. Duquesita 50, J. M. Peña; 2. Salta 52; 3. Variación 50.

Also ran: Tremus, Gorrión, Fable, (4), Pedernales II., Coquin, Villemil, John Wood, Torre de Oro.

Dividends: $4.60 and $3; 2nd, $4.10; 3rd, $14.70.

Won by half a neck; two lengths. Time: 1.40 4/5.

PREMIO CHANILAO, 1300 metres.—1. Floweret 43, C. Capra; 2n. Gacilla 52; 3. Electro 57.

Also ran: Go Bang, Cherobayá (4), Mabelle, Pionono, Lady Love II., Cárcano, Finette, La Morena.

Dividends: $24.60 and $6.80; 2nd, $3.20; 3rd, $5.20.

Won by a length; half a length. Time: 1.20.

ROSARIO

Book form was in great evidence at the Rosario Hippodrome on Sunday afternoon, with the result that the public had an excellent day. The weather was perfect, and a considerable crowd were present at the races. The feature of the day was the victory of Mi Nene in the classic, carrying top weight. With 59 kilos up, this excellent filly had an easy win over Lord Bramble 57 ks., by 1 1/2 lengths. The results were as follows:

PREMIO MARTE, 1200 metres.

1. Topacio II. 57 ks., P. Claverie; 2. Hélix 53; 3. Lingera 54; 4. Narváez 53.

Also ran: Verdi 54; Aveiro 57; Yelmo 53; Sigomar 56; Colla 56; Nacela 52.

Dividends: $5.55 and $2.70; 2nd, $6; 3rd, $4.45.

Won by three-quarters of a length; Time: 1.12 4/5.

PREMIO REMATE, 1300 metres.

1. Lacar 52, P. Claverie; 2. Miruca 43; 3. Gigantea 50.

Also ran: Fantome 44 (4), Lugones 47, Breccanecca.

Dividends: $7.30 and $5.80; 2nd, $4.

Won by a neck. Time: 1.40.

PREMIO ECURIE LUCIFER, 1300 metres.

1. Hermética 54 ks., V. Moreno; 2. Sandfly II. 56; 3. Malambo 56.

Oranga 54, (4), Premier 56, Olazábal 53, Galliard 56, Paraguay 53, Don Clorindo 56, Resorte 56, Gala Day 51.

Dividends: $11.75 and $3.75; 2nd, $2.65; 3rd, $12.

Won by two lengths. Time: 1.20 1/2.

PREMIO DIABLO II., 1200 metres.

1. Pink Bramble, 46 ks., P. Ibarra; 2. The Libel 49; 3. Gallardia 51.

Also ran: Pochita 60 (4), Ladkin 50, Mangaso 50.

Dividends: $12.95 and $4.15; 2nd, $2.60.

Won by half a neck. Time: 1.13.

PREMIO CORRIENTES, 2200 metres.—1. Mi Nene, 59 ks., A. Torres; 2. L. Bramble 57; 3. Tric Trac, 55.

Also ran: Audax 54 (4), Apple Tart 52, Cocainera 55, Trinchera 52.

Dividends: $2.65 and $2.90; 2nd, $3.70.

Won by 1 1/2 lengths. Time: 2.18 1.5.

PREMIO MADCAP, 1200 metres.

1. Socarrona, 53 ks., F. Bagú; 2. Tripailao 55; 3. Topacio II. 51.

Also ran: Formosa 48 (4), Duna 56, Suzana 57, Flashlight 53, Freyre 54, Vinicio II. 51, Ormilla 52, Marobé 43.

Dividends: $6.25 and $3.05; 2nd, $7; 3rd, $3.35.

Won by half a head. Time 1.20.

PREMIO FARRISTA, 2500 metres.

1. Sopotón 41 ks., M. Cabrera; 2. Opulento II. 53; 3. Everest 44.

Also ran: Idolatria 51 (4), Farward 62, The Temper 40.

Dividends: $18.15 and $6.85; 2nd, $4.85.

Won by two lengths. Time: 2.37 1/2.

A.C.A. MEETING

PATRIOTIC RESOLUTION.

The Argentine Cricket Association held their annual meeting on Sept. 30, at 5.30 at Maipú 187, Mr. J. J. Dowson, the President, in the chair.

Having heard the minutes and report with balance-sheet read and approved by the Hon. Secretary, Mr. E. W. S. Thompson, the meeting approved them. Expenditure showed a total of $2,114.14, and bank balance $558.64. Officers were re-elected en bloc as last year.

In view of the present exceptional circumstances, the meeting passed the following resolution, which cannot fail to commend itself generally to all members of the British community:—

"That in sympathy with the cricketers who have left us to do duty for their King and country, and following the precedent of cricketing bodies at Home and in the Colonies, there shall be no official championship matches during the season of 1915-1916."

There being no further business, the meeting then adjourned.

EQUESTRIAN SPORTS

PATRIOTIC FUNCTION AT
PALERMO.

Sunday's Hippic Festival at Palermo was in aid of the Officers' Families' Fund, and although the nett results cannot yet be indicated, they are known to have been gratifyingly successful.

The weather was all that could be desired, indeed it was almost too summer-like, although late in the afternoon it was as near perfection as can be expected in this imperfect state.

Banners of all the Allied nations and of the Republic made the approach to the area gay, and the trees, palms, and shrubberies gave a green and restful background. Those who removed their attention from the attractive toilettes in the grand stand, saw some picturesque figures in the ring. Divers gentlemen in pink and hunting caps, one in a purple plush cap, a distinct novelty, several ladies in riding habits, some riding astride, others adhering to the conventional side saddle.

The jumping was, on the whole, excellent. Several nervous horses which were good at timber spoiled their riders' chances by baulking, but nobody was unhorsed. In the bell ringing the ladies seemed handicapped by their shorter reach. Altogether the spectacle was very pretty, and the equitation was of a high standard. The results were as follow:—

Premio Red Cross, over 10 obstacles.

First prize, a silver cup, won by Señor Antonio Maldonado.

Second prize, a silver cup, presented by Messrs. Simons and Company, won by Señor Gustavo Tornquist.

Third prize, a silver medal, presented by Messrs. H. Walter and Co., won by Señor Horacio Maldonado. There were 21 entries.

Premio Gymkhana.

Five obstacles had to be cleared, and a threaded needle to be returned.

Gent's first prize, a silver cup, presented by Messrs. Mappin and Webb, won by Señor C. Tornaquera.

Ladies' first prize, an enamelled comfit box, won by Miss Macdonald.

Second prize, a silver cup, presented by Messrs. Barlow and Company, won by Señor Horacio Maldonado.

Third prize, a silver medal, presented by Messrs. Walker and Co., won by Señor A. Pelleson. Miss Gonzalez was the winner of the ladies' second prize. There were 15 entries.

Premio Bell Ringing.

First prize, a silver cup, won by Señor Antonio Maldonado.

Second prize, a silver medal, presented by Messrs. Walter and Co., won by Señor Juan José Esterez.

This was an event full of amusement.

Premio Musical Chairs.

First prize, jewel case, presented by Señor John O'Connor, won by Senorita Clara Marin.

Second prize, an enamelled jewel case, won by Senorita Sara Villa.

Premio "La Roseta."

First prize, a silver cup, won by Señor L. Lacey.

Second prize, a silver cup, presented by Messrs. A. N. Guy, won by Señor Horatio Maldonado.

Third prize, a silver medal, presented by Messrs. H. Walter and Co., divided.

H.B.M. Minister Sir Reginald Tower and the Consul-General, with Mrs. Mackie, were present during part of the contests.

A special vote of thanks was passed to those who had generously presented prizes, and specially to Señor F. Molino Campos, to whom the success of the Officers' Family Fund is largely due.

HURLING

INTERNATIONAL MATCH

ARGENTINA v. IRELAND.

It was a happy idea of the Hurling Federation to hold an "International" every year at the close of the season, and at Saenz Peña on Sunday, judging by the number of spectators present, Ireland's national game stands high in local public favour. The possibility of having a cup for this match is now being considered by the different clubs, and it is suggested that some sporting Irishman should come forward and present such a trophy for an annual match.

Sunday's game was between born Irishmen and Argentines. Argentina had the advantage of having an immense number of players to select from, while Ireland this year had great difficulty in fielding a full team. Nevertheless in a true sporting manner the Irlandeses made the best use of the material they had, and were the first to enter the field, being loudly cheered by the spectators, and at that very moment the band of the "Asilo de Huerfanos" struck up "The Wearing of the Green." Argentina immediately followed, and were equally well received.

Dr. José M. Pagliere, who refereed, soon put the ball in motion, and the great struggle began. Argentina quickly got into their stride, and at once made tracks for goal, Marchetto with a splendid puck, doing useful service. Hesitation on P. J. Kelly's part gave Ireland a chance which let in Kiely, who nicely passed to O'Douran, and this player, lifting the ball smartly, got in a powerful drive which completely fooled Berra. How the Irish cheered! First blood for Ireland.

It was, however, a shortlived success. Argentina again got going, Dunleavy, Duffy and Donnelly playing like demons, drove the leather to Ireland's 25 mark, a bad miss by Ireland was quickly noted by Donnelly, and this young player shot hard and true, beating O'Byrne, while amidst wild applause from the followers of the blue and white, the green flag was hoisted, marking a goal for the Republic.

Give and take play followed till Kiely got in a useful puck, after having robbed P. J. Kelly of possession, but O'Reilly easily relieved pressure, and pucked hard to mid-field. A "free" for Ireland for off-side was not taken advantage of, the forwards being much too slow, and were run off their feet by the Argentine boys, though Andy Harte showed glimpses of his old form when he was able to keep his feet.

Shortly afterwards half-time was called, with the score:

Argentina 1 goal.

Ireland 1 goal.

During the interval which followed, tea was served by Mrs. G. Gonzalez and Miss Nancy Ballesty.

Play being re-started, Ireland's hopes were great, for now Argentina had to face a strong sun, and the wearers of the green and gold were using more judgment in their shots. Smart play by MacCarthy gave O'Reilly some trouble, nevertheless he cleared, finding touch mid-field. Shortly afterwards Andy O'Regan, who is always dangerous, got in a scorcher, beating the Argentine backs but the ball struck the goalposts. It was truly hard luck for Ireland.

Berra now all but let his side down by muffing the puck out from goal, but the Irish forwards were painfully slow, and Captain Kenny very quickly drove the leather out of the danger zone. Again the Argentine forwards tried hard to beat the Irish defence, but O'Byrne and "Goodplayer" stopped shot after shot, eventually the ball passing harmlessly over the line.

A powerful puck-out by O'Byrne gained ground for Ireland, but the forwards were unable to get a move on, their shots being entirely lacking in judgment. Smart play by Argentina gave Dunleavy his chance, and lifting the leather neatly, he beat Ryan easily for Argentine's second goal.

FOOTBALL

ESTUDIANTES (0) v. RIVER
PLATE (0).

A pointless draw was the result of the meeting of these two teams at Palermo on Sunday.

The game, which was contested between the following teams and refereed by Señor M. Gondra, was a fast and fair one. The shooting was poor. Teams:—

Estudiantes.—M. Croce, A. Spinelli, T. Pawlovsky, J. Madero, J. Ivanzevich, J. Vaccari, A. Bownas, M. Susan, J. Antequeda, A. Pawlovsky, A. Ochandio.

River Plate.—C. Isola, A. Chiappe, E. Calneggia, A. Peruzzi, C. Garcia, A. Lanata, A. Fraga Patrao, A. Ameal, A. Penny, A. Riso, H. Rivas.

PORTENO (1) v. ROSARIO
ATLETICO (0).SEMI-FINALS OF COPA DE COMPETENCIA.

Before 2,000 spectators at Avellaneda on Sunday, the semi-finals of the Competition Cup were played between the following teams:—

Porteno.—J. J. Rithner; R. Gonzalez, Escarra; O. Beltrame, J. Ayala, E. Uslenghi; V. Abadia, E. Izaguirre and M. Garat.

Rosario Atletico.—J. Bruno; J. Morgouse, C. Chichone; S. Sanchez, M. Gonzalez, J. Johnston; N. Mastrogiovani, G. Potocuijak, N. Dacarola, T. Zavallia and J. Barfoot.

Mr. Pat MacCarthy was the referee, but he was seldom called upon, as the game was a good and clean one. The goal scorer was Izaquirre, who scored a clever "header" in the first half, and this gave his side the victory.

This player was good throughout the game, but chief honours fell to Bruno, the Rosario custodian.

FIRST DIVISION CHAMPIONSHIP.

SAN ISIDRO (2) v. WESTERN RAILWAY (1).

In a championship game at San Isidro on Sunday, the home team once more demonstrated their prowess by defeating the Western Railway by 2 goals to 1. The scorers were Sayanes, Moggio and Juan Fernandez.

QUILMES (1) v. ARG. DE
QUILMES (0).

Played on the ground of the latter, the result was a good game, won by the visitors by 1 goal to nil. This was scored by Brown. The teams were as follows:—

Quilmes.—C. F. Pearson; A. Cerutti, J. D. Brown; H. Reid, J. C. Pollini, E. Derante; B. Hoare, C. Sinclair, P. Raggi, H. Crundall, C. Guisani.

Arg. de Quilmes.—R. M. Drogue; C. Falibeni, F. Cabana, R. Martinez, J. Ortega; M. Bertes, G. Posse, J. Escobar, J. Molachino, G. Ciucotta.

Referee: Sr. E. C. Rolon.

Strong shooting by Ireland's backs per O'Byrne and "Goodplayer" followed, but Ireland's forwards were now done with, and Donnelly easily made a third score for Argentina, while another goal and a point by Dunleavy followed soon afterwards till full-time was called, with Argentina still pressing.

Result: Argentina 4 goals, 1 point. Ireland, 1 goal.

The following were the teams:— Argentina.—P. Kenny (capt.), P. O'Reilly, J. Mullen, M. Donnelly, B. Dunleavy, M. Mullins, P. J. Kelly, D. Duffy, A. Vinay, T. Dormey, S. Noonan, P. Horan, H. Marchetto, E. Dag-nino, V. Berra (goal).

Ireland.—P. "Goodplayer" (capt.) D. Biggan, J. O'Riordan, Y. Mullins, J. O'Regan, J. MacCarthy, J. Biggan, M. Ryan, A. O'Regan, M. Murphy, Dour-rin, J. O'Dournan, J. Kiely, A. Harte, T. O'Byrne, P. Ryan (goal).

Goal Umpires for Ireland: J. P. Harte, W. A. Scannell.

Goal Umpires for Argentina: G. A. Berra, A. Pagliere.

Linesmen: B. Massetti and P. Ryan.

Referee: Dr. José M. Pagliere.

LAWN TENNIS

BELGRANO ATHLETIC CLUB.

The week-end weather was in all localities most favourable for the progress of the various lawn tennis tournaments that are now being played, and it is not surprising that a large number of matches were played off. The Spring Tournament at Belgrano, which is exciting so much interest, was attended by a large number of spectators. The surprise of Sunday's play was the defeat of Prescott by Smyth in the singles. Miss Anderson is an improved player over last season, and has so far won her various matches with comparative ease.

The results of the tournament play over the week-end are given below:—

Mixed Handicap.

Miss I. Anderson and Sheward beat Miss Rendtorff and Keen, 6—1, 6—2. Miss Goñi and Cerboni beat Miss Lanusse and D. Urquiza, 6—2, 5—7, 6—3.

Miss Goñi and Cerboni beat Miss Sastre and J. Villegas, 6—3, 8—6.

Miss Goñi and Cerboni beat Miss Anderson and Sheward, 7—5, 0—6, 7—5.

Mrs. Mackenzie and Jenkins beat Miss Smith and Leslie, 6—4, 6—1.

Miss Mackenzie and Villegas beat Miss Capdepon and Durañona, 7—5, 6—3.

Miss Mackenzie and Villegas beat Mrs. Crawford and Rugeroni, 6—1, 6—2.

Miss Wilmart and Podesta beat Miss Palacio and Milberg, 6—4, 2—6, 6—4.

Miss Guerrico and Pero beat Miss Moss and Heriot, 8—6, 6—1.

Men's Doubles Handicap.

Durañona and Podesta beat Medici and Pero, 8—6, 0—3.

Mackinnon and Allchin beat Etche-pareborda Bros., 6—3, 10—8.

Hoevel and Goñi beat Prest and McKechnie, 7—5, 3—6, 6—3.

Leslie and Sheward beat Lang and Fierro, 7—5, 4—6, 6—3.

Gent's Singles Hcp., Class "B."

Pero beat Roberts, 6—3, 6—2.

Thomson beat Hughes, 6—2, 4—6, 6—2.

Fierro beat Boam, 6—2, 7—5.

Gent's Singles, Scratch.

Jenkins beat Colville Jones, 7—5, 6—4.

Leslie beat Jenkins, 6—4, 3—6, 6—3.

Smyth beat Prescott, 6—3, 7—5, 2—6, 6—4.

Class "A," Singles Hcp.

Hoevel beat Rugeroni, 5—7, 7—5, 8—6.

Jones beat Mackinnon, 6—0, 6—3.

A. J. Villegas beat D. Urquiza, w.o.

Ladies' Doubles, Handicap.

Miss Feilberg and Miss Dumas beat Miss A. Moss and Miss Guerrico, 3—6, 6—3, 6—3.

MARMOL v. GENERAL URQUIZA.

A WIN FOR THE VISITORS.

The return gentlemen's double match between the above clubs was played on the Marmol courts on Sunday. The visitors succeeded in winning 9 matches out of the 15 played, after some really good and enjoyable games. The results were:—

For Urquiza:

Messrs. Mayne and Joyce beat Wallace and Kelly, by 4—6, 6—4, 6—2.

Walker and Andrews, by 1—6, 6—0, 9—7.

French and Mackenzie, by 6—3, 6—2.

Messrs. Tynan and Horwill beat French and Mackenzie, by 6—2, 6—1.

Walker and Andrews, by 6—2, 6—2.

Wallace and Kelly, by 6—3, 6—4.

Messrs. Murchison and Warburton beat French and Mackenzie by 6—3, 5—6, 6—0.

For Marmol:

Messrs. Pentreath and Robinson beat Tynan and Horwill, by 6—0, 3—6, 6—3.

Gallishaw and Andrews, by 4-6, 6-3, 6-4.
Murchison and Warburton, by 5-6, 6-3, 6-1.
Messrs. Wallace and Kelly beat Gallishaw and Andrews, by 6-5, 6-2.
Murchison and Warburton by 6-1, 6-3.
Messrs. Walker and Andrews beat Murchison and Warburton, by 6-3, 1-6, 6-4.

OLIVOS SPRING TOURNAMENT.

Continued play in the tournament at Olivos was indulged in on Sunday in perfect weather. Some close and interesting games resulted as follows:

Gent's Singles Handicap.

Valentine beat Quesada, 6-4, 1-6, 6-1.
Boronino beat Broome, 6-3, 6-3.
Boronino beat Lush, 6-0, 6-0.
Chiswell beat Rodriguez Pelliza, 6-0, 7-9, 6-4.
P. Logan beat O'Curry, 6-4, 3-6, 6-2.
M. Candegabe beat F. Candegabe, 6-3, 9-7.
L. Quesada beat A. Chiswell, 6-2, 6-4.

Ladies' Singles Handicap.

Miss Perkins beat Miss Haynes, 6-2, 7-5.
Miss C. Casares beat Miss O'Connor, 6-2, 6-3.

Ladies' Doubles Handicap.

Mrs. Chiswell and Miss Brightman beat Miss Griet and Miss Regnier, 6-3, 6-2.

Gent's Doubles Handicap.

Boronino and A. Pelleja beat Wells and Winchester, 2-6, 6-4, 6-2.

Mixed Doubles Handicap.

Mr. and Mrs. Pratt beat Mr. and Mrs. Taylor, 6-0, 8-6, 6-3.

In the Gent's Singles Boronino played a fine game when he beat Lush, without allowing him to secure a single game in the match.
Mrs. J. E. Bowen provided tea.

SAN ISIDRO OPEN TOURNAMENT.

Excellent progress was made at San Isidro over last week-end, when play was continued in the Spring Tournament. All the finals have now been reached, and will be played next Saturday and Sunday, when the Championship rounds also commence.

A fine game was witnessed between W. Neill and D. de Urquiza. After 32 games had been played, the latter retired.

The scores and games played were as follows:—

Ladies' Singles.

Miss B. Anderson beat Miss E. E. Hoevel 6-3, 6-2.
Semi-finals: Miss M. T. Obarrio beat Miss B. Anderson 6-1, 5-7, 6-1.
Miss E. Escalada beat Miss I. Heale 6-2, 6-4.

Ladies' Doubles.

Semi-final: Misses Obarrio and Capdepon beat Misses Escalada 6-2, 6-2.

Mixed Doubles.

Mrs. Butler and O. G. Babington beat Miss M. Obarrio and M. A. Goñi 6-4, 6-4.

Miss Escalada and B. D. Crawley beat Miss J. Palacios and O. Milberg 6-4, 6-2.

Singles "A."

W. Neill beat D. de Urquiza 9-7, 7-9, retired.

W. Neill beat W. G. Edmonds, 6-3, 4-6, 6-1.

Singles "B."

C. A. Barreiro w.o. A. Podesta.
A. Anderson beat A. R. Arriola 6-3, 4-6, 6-3.

Gents' Doubles.

J. Malbran and J. de Urquiza beat L. de Urquiza and C. A. Barreiro 8-6, 10-8.

J. Watson and H. Manley beat R. Hoevel and D. de Urquiza 5-0, retired.

Watson and Manley w.o. Ahumada and Sansot.

O. G. Babington and D. G. Davidson beat W. Russell and S. J. Parry 6-2, 4-6, 7-5.

BASEBALL

FRIGORIFICO ARMOUR v. BUENOS AIRES.

"It was some game." That is what everybody said who witnessed the first meeting between the Frigorifico Armour and Buenos Aires at Talleres on Sunday. There was not a dull moment throughout the afternoon, and, barring the first inning, high-class ball was played throughout.

In the first inning, due to nervousness, aided by a couple of errors, the La Plata boys allowed B. A. to score up 6 runs, but after that they played air-tight ball until the 9th inning, which found them in front with the score 8 to 7 in their favour. "Then came the fireworks." In their half of the 9th La Plata failed to score. Then the B. A.'s took to the bat for their half. Herrod hit safely for a single. Raymier, who batted for Dawson, flied out. Hitlin sent a liner to Park, who found it difficult to handle, and reached first base. Herrod, advancing to second, Hendrie struck out. Volkening sent a hot one to Yehle at second, who fumbled it and then made a bad throw to first. Herrod and Hitlin scored, which gave B. A. the game with the score of 9 to 8 in their favour. "Nuff Sed."

Scores:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	R.	H.	E.
Bs. As...	6	0	0	0	1	0	0	0	2	9	13	4
Armour..	0	3	0	2	0	1	2	0	0	8	14	5

Batteries: Wright and Volkening for B. A. Lopez and Gottman for Armour.
Umpire: Vaites.

NOTES ON THE GAME.

The ladies were very much in evidence, and seemed to enjoy the game.

Houston and Noonan played good ball around second base, and with a little practice together will make a "nifty" combination for B. A.

O'Keefe's throw from deep centre to home was "a corker."

Hitlin got three nice ones in left field.

B. A. go to La Plata on Sunday to play the La Plata Cold Storage team.

Stratton at short for La Plata carried off the fielding honours.

The league seems to be a "go."

"Shorty" went home happy.

Mr. McAuley, of Armour's, was an interested spectator.

The La Plata boys looked well in their new uniforms.

"GAIETY" EDWARDES DEAD

FAMOUS MUSICAL-COMEDY MAGNATE.

London, Oct. 4.

Mr. George Edwardes, the theatrical manager, died to-day after a long illness at the age of 63.

Mr. Edwardes was chairman and managing director of the Gaiety Theatre Company and sole lessee and manager of Daly's Theatre. He has at various times been manager of the Duke of York's Comedy, Garrick, Criterion and Hicks' Theatres. He first entered into management with Mr. John Hollingshead at the Gaiety.

GOLF

ARGENTINE GOLF CLUB.

EMILIO MITRE CUP.

Play for the Emilio Mitre Cup on the Argentine Golf Club links on Sunday ended in a win by one stroke for Mr. S. Smiles, who returned a card of 164 against A. Leslie's 165. The winner of the handicap play for the day was Mr. F. Martinez de Hoz, who gained, with his handicap, a two-stroke lead over Mr. Leslie.

At the close of play Señor Lequizon presented the winners with their cups.

The weather throughout the day's play was perfect. The results are given below:—

	O.	I.	G.	H.	T.
F. Martinez de Hoz	92	83	175	20	355
A. Leslie	82	83	165	8	338
T. Y. Galvez	90	87	177	20	354
A. J. Wilson	95	82	177	20	374
L. S. Serstevens	94	95	189	32	310
L. G. Dodds	93	85	178	20	356
F. Madero	95	100	195	36	356
S. Smiles	81	83	164	4	332
C. G. Dodds	86	86	172	12	366
A. F. Sansiena	95	90	185	24	364
E. Anchorena	92	101	193	32	358
Dr. Petty	83	87	170	8	348
E. Alvear	101	93	194	32	360
G. A. Leslie	91	94	185	20	360
J. M. Bultillo	105	108	213	48	366
M. F. Gildersdale	99	95	194	28	366
F. Elortondo	87	85	172	4	348
E. van Peborg	98	101	199	30	368
E. M. Pixton	94	107	201	32	364
B. R. Chantrill	103	104	207	38	364
C. G. Palmer	91	91	182	12	356
M. G. Guerrico	96	94	190	20	360
S. W. Lewis	88	93	181	10	352
A. H. Gibson	97	98	195	24	371
R. E. Cranwell	98	106	204	32	372
W. G. Beeston	100	108	208	36	372
S. J. Dodds	87	92	179	4	352

SAN ANDRES G.C.

PLAY FOR THE BUCHANAN CUP.

A bogey competition over 18 holes was played over the San Andres links on Sunday. The tie which resulted between Mr. H. D. Masters and E. C. Brown will be played off later to decide who shall become the possessor of the Buchanan Cup. The scores were as follows:—

	Sc.	Hp.	Nt.
H. D. McMasters	-1	-1	-2
E. C. Brown	-2	0	-2
C. H. Bartlett	-2	-2	0
J. H. McCrum	0	0	0
R. E. Hunt	0	-1	-1
A. F. Hubbard	-5	-3	-2
H. L. Prettyman	-1	-1	-2
Dr. Ahumada	0	-2	-2
C. F. Bowden	-2	-1	-3
H. R. Lawrence	-3	-2	-5
F. W. Dodd	-2	-3	-5

PACIFIC RAILWAY GOLF CLUB.

STROKE COMPETITION.

With a net score of 81 each Messrs. B. H. Smyth and J. Bauer tied for first place in the stroke competition over the links of the Pacific Golf Club on Sunday. Although quite a number of cards were taken out, only the following seven were returned.

	St.	Hp.	Nt.
B. H. Smyth	93	12	81
J. Bauer	105	24	81
F. A. Chiswell	97	15	82
E. Tebbutt	105	18	87
G. W. Thomas	106	18	88
G. W. Munday	115	17	98
H. L. Stevens	123	24	99

$2,000 PATENTE

An Attempted Swindle

BY A MUNICIPAL INSPECTOR

An impudent attempt to extort money under pretext of a new municipal ordinance was made recently.

One of the inspectors of the Municipality called on the proprietress of an English lunch and tea room, and advised her that under a new regulation the employment of girls as waitresses was prohibited. He added that girls could only be employed on payment of a patente of $2,000 per annum. Failing payment the restaurant would have to be closed, or men employed. The proprietress pointed out that other restaurants employed waitresses, and she was sure these establishments did not pay so high a license as $2,000. Furthermore, she explained, one of the waitresses in her tea rooms was her own daughter. The inspector stated that it did not matter who the waitresses were, and in the case of other lunch rooms he asserted that they had secured exemption. There was no explanation and no protest, he added. The patente must be paid at once, or the girls dismissed.

The proprietress called at THE HERALD office and explained the dilemma in which she was placed. She was advised to consult a lawyer and have some investigation made into the new ordinance and the legality of the inspector's demands. In turn the lawyer advised her to ignore the demand, which he explained could not be legally enforced until made in writing.

The restaurant is still open and the waitresses have not been dismissed. The inspector is still waiting for his $2,000.

SAN ISIDRO GOLF CLUB.

MONTHLY HANDICAP COMPETITION.

On the San Isidro links on Sunday the last monthly competition of the season resulted in a win for Mr. A. Moffatt, who played off the tie with Mr. H. E. Lawrence and came out the winner by doing the round again in 73, while Mr. Lawrence took 80.

The weather was good, but a fresh breeze prevented accurate play. The following 14 cards were returned:

	Out.	In.	Tl.	Hp.	Nt.
R. Moffatt	46	51	97	24	73
H. E. Lawrence	53	44	97	24	73
E. Pueyrredon	51	48	99	18	81
J. E. Virasoro	49	48	97	16	81
C. H. Jukes	51	42	93	10	83
J. B. Sheridan	52	51	103	20	83
A. M. Haynes	52	49	101	18	83
H. Torre	51	49	100	16	84
J. W. Gilbert	46	55	101	16	85
H. K. James	43	46	89	4	85
R. King	50	55	105	18	87
F. Baillie	54	49	103	16	87
W. Oliphant	48	49	97	8	89
A. H. Wade	64	47	111	20	91

Replay—

A. Moffatt	47	50	97	24	73
H. E. Lawrence	51	53	104	24	80

FERNET-BRANCA

Tonic, bitter, appetizer and digestive

HOFER & Co., B. Aires.—Sole Agents

CORDOBA NEWS

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT].

Sept. 27, 1915.

Spring Tennis Tournament, C.A.C.

Much interest is being manifested in the Spring Tennis Tournament which starts at the Cordoba Athletic Club Courts on next Saturday, October 2. The following entries have been received for the three scheduled events:

Ladies' Singles (Handicap). Prize presented by G. E. Morton, Esq.:— Mrs. Walters, Mrs. Lang, Miss Glancy, Mrs. L. G. Babb, Miss Brumley, Miss Gladys Guppy, Miss Phyllis Davis, Miss Phyllis Symonds and Miss Gladys Symonds.

Gentlemen's Singles (Handicap). Prize presented by R. H. F. Stuart:— G. E. Morton, L. G. Babb, M. L. Zimmer, E. W. Marks, A. D. Dunbar, H. McCulloch, S. T. Harris Smith, P. P. Schultz, S. A. Parker, J. W. Schibler and R. J. Cochrane.

Mixed Doubles (Handicap).— Mr. and Mrs. Walters, Miss Phyllis Symonds and Mr. L. G. Babb, Miss Gladys Symonds and Mr. P. P. Schultz, Mrs. George Lang and Mr. A. D. Dunbar, Miss Phyllis Davis and Mr. J. W. Schibler.

Bogie Golf Tournament at Alta Gracia, C.A.C.

Golf Captain A. D. Dunbar has kindly offered a prize for a Bogie Golf contest to be played at the Alta Gracia Golf Links, on Sunday, October 17. The match will be played under sealed handicap, and it is hoped that as many of our golfers as possible will enter their names for the contest.

Cordoba Athletic Club.

A thunder storm, followed by a small hurricane, visited Cordoba on Sunday afternoon. Tennis and croquet were interrupted at the Athletic Club; but as the storm was of short duration, play was again resumed after about a forty-five minutes wait.

Inter-Provincial Football Match for Cup donated by General Manager Cabrett, of the Central Cordoba Ry.

The Inter-Provincial football match between the Traffic Department of the Central Cordoba Railroad of this city versus the Central Cordoba team from Tucuman, was played at the well appointed field of the General Paz Juniors on Sunday afternoon, and resulted in a victory by four goals to one, for the home team after a well played contest.

Cordoba League Matches.

Due to the five teams of the General Paz Juniors resigning from the league, the usual large number of matches played on Sunday was considerably less. Only one match was played in the Second Division between Belgrano and San Martin, which resulted in a win for the former by the score of 3—1.

Jockey Club Meet.

The American jockey, George Mountain, had quite a field day at the General Paz Hippodrome yesterday, when he rode three winners and also scored a second. His first race the Premio "Stud San Antonio," was easily won on "Pedante," his second win was the Premio "Stud Pamela," when he piloted Gilda IV, home before a field of seven starters. The next race was the classic "Dean Funes," and Mountain had not much trouble in bringing "Claymore" past the judge's stand in front of the rest of the field. The last race of the day, the Premio "Stud Auld Boy," was quite exciting, the popular Yankee jockey just missed first money on "Montesuma" in a hot finish on the home stretch.

Italian Reservists.

The "Comité Italiano Pro-Patria" of this city have been actively engaged in providing funds for transportation

BAHIA BLANCA NEWS

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT].

October 3.

Shipment of Grain.

From the beginning of the year up to September 30 the cereals shipped from the different ports here have been:—

Wheat—	Tons.
Bunge and Born	368,769
L. Dreyfus and Co.	147,181
Huni and Wormser	72,582
Sanday and Co.	80,552
Weil Hnos.	67,440
Nicholson and Rathbone	52,452
H. Ford and Co.	51,385
General Mercantile	39,470
H. C. Ehlerl	30,714
Dorignac	373

Oats—	Tons.
Bunge and Born	145,495
L. Dreyfus and Co.	90,239
Huni and Wormser	47,621
Weil Hnos.	38,642
Sanday and Co.	37,210
H. Ford and Co.	29,132
General Mercantile	28,258

Barley—	Tons.
Bunge and Born	23,230
Weil Hnos.	1,860
L. Dreyfus	1,566
H. Ford and Co.	75

Rye—	Tons.
Bunge and Born	182

Bran—	Tons.
Bunge and Born	3,297

Brassseed—	Tons.
Bunge and Born	300

The largest amount shipped by one firm was that of 541,273 tons loaded by Bunge and Born. The total shipped is, up to the present, 1,358,018 tons, although there is still a lot more to go away as grain is being stored at Port Galvan. At Ingeniero White there are now three ships under the elevators loading for Europe.

The Inter-Railway Sports.

The Inter-Railway sports which are to be held on Thursday, November 11 on the ground of the Pacific Athletic Club at Maldonado, are devoting half the sum of the monies obtained towards the Red Cross Fund. The Secretary is Mr. Webb, of the Light and Power Company, and the Treasurer, Mr. Robinson of Ingeniero White. The meeting will, as usual, be an all day one and luncheon will be served on the ground. The entrances may be given either to Messrs. W. H. Langlands, F.C.B.A. Pacific; G. Maples, Tramways; or A. P. Webb in Bahia Blanca, and in the Port to Messrs. Bennett or Robinson.

The charge for entrance to the ground will be $1, children under five free, and up to 15 $0.50 each. Several people have already given prizes for these sports.

District Notes.

Several residents on the Patagones line are now asking that the Government compel the Pacific Railway to conclude the line from here to Patagones as it is over 10 years since this first concession was given. The fact that it is as much to the railway's advantage as to that of the residents to finish this line, should circumstances permit, seems to have been overlooked.

A Record Discharge of Coal.

A record discharge of coal for this for the reservists who have left from the Province of Cordoba since the start of Italy in the war. 2,120 reservists have left for the front from this district. The Comité are providing funds for the expenses of 33 families composed of 104 persons whose "gastos" are $1,620 per month. The total of $8,234.85 has been spent for the transportation and other expenses of the reservists and their families in assisting them in their journey home, where the men will join their regiments and go at once to the front. Sr. José Parlanti and the rest of the committee are to be congratulated on their excellent work in making the mentioned provisions.

district, if not elsewhere, was made a few days ago at Port Galvan when the s.s. Atlantic arrived there with coal from Durban to discharge for the Pacific Railway. The contractors discharged a cargo of 4613 tons in 38 working hours, averaging a total of 34.42 tons per gang per hour, this being at the rate of more than half a ton discharged per minute, and a daily average of 971 tons. On September 13 when four gangs worked half a day they discharged 393 tons. On September 14 for one day, four gangs put out 1,246 tons; on September 15, four gangs did 1,157 tons; on September 16, the same number of gangs did 1,072 tons; on September 17, two and a half gangs in one day did 645 tons; and on September 18, one gang working for two hours, or quarter of a day, finished the ship by putting out 100 tons. There were also two there coal ships in Port discharging at the same time at Ingeniero White so that it cannot be said that all the best coal men had been picked out for the occasion; but at the same time it is well known that the facilities for discharging coal are greater at Port Galvan than at Ingeniero White, as in the former port the cranes work more quickly and there are very few low sided waggons used, the majority of them being able to hold 40 tons of cargo.

Safe Robbery.

On Monday night of last week, thieves broke into the office of Messrs. Harcastle and carried off the safe. This does not reflect much credit on the police force here, as it is said that although one or two persons are known to have been implicated in the crime, up to the present no arrests have been made, on the ground of want of evidence. The premises from where this safe was taken are almost in the centre of the town. There is a big arc lamp there and there is, or supposed to be, a policeman always on duty at that corner, whilst opposite is a big German hotel which is open night and day. The safe door was afterwards blown open with dynamite and for all their trouble and expense the robbers only got two hundred and forty dollars, which would not go very far among five or six of them.

Rough Measures.

A few days ago a man of Irish nationality was in the streets here, probably having come off one of the ships in Port, and being rather inebriated, was making himself objectionable with his noise and language. Three policemen attempted without success to take him to the prison and a fourth coming up on horse back, they at length got the chain handcuff on his wrist, the other end being held by the policeman on horseback, who when the Irishman fell down, trailed him along in a brutal manner. The crowd looking on hooted and jeered at the policeman and their methods.

Asparagus from Argerich.

Large quantities of asparagus are now being sent in daily from the estancia of Dr. Argerich, at the station of that name on the Southern line. The asparagus is, on arrival, being offered for sale at the price of 20 and 25 cents per bundle.

Concessions for New Railway Lines.

The National Senate have granted the necessary permission asked for by Sr. F. Doel for the construction of branch lines from General Acha to Port San Blas passing by through Rio Colorado district; a branch from this line to Bahia Blanca; a branch starting from the station of Iris on the Pacific line and joining the first line at Rio Colorado; and a branch which will start from the first named route for Port San Antonio passing through Meridiano V.

The Rural Show.

The fourth Show of the Rural Society is to be held here during this month. The entries, which closed recently, have been numerous and varied, amongst them being 2 Durham bulls from "La Elena" in Tres Picos,

THE NEW POST OFFICE

Yesterday the representative of the contractors for the new Post and Telegraph Office interviewed the Minister of the Interior on the subject of renewing the works, stopped some time ago on account of the Government scheme of economies.

The contractors have offered to resume operations, even if the Government do not pay in cash, and will accept Treasury Bonds to the amount of not more than three millions of pesos, until the national finances are again in a normal condition, when payment in ordinary currency may be resumed. The Minister, who is himself favourably disposed to the proposal, replied in that sense, that provided he can obtain the consent of his colleague of the Finance Department, with whom he will discuss the question to-day, that he will endeavour to arrange for the resumption of the building. The addition to the original estimate for interest will, he thinks, be only small and the benefits of the plan indisputable.

30 Lincoln rams from "La Sucursal," a Durham bull and 10 Lincoln rams from "La Carlota," 4 draught stallions from "San Enrique," Corti (F.C.S.), 20 Lincoln rams from "San Ramon Chico," 20 Lincoln rams from "San Felix" Ombuctu, also rams from "Las Carolinas" and "La Esperanza," 11 Hackney mares from the estancia of Sr. Agustin de Elia, bulls, rams and pigs from "La Catalina" Algarrobo, Durham cows and bulls from the estancia "Espartillar," Clydesdales, sheep, bulls and rams from "El Alba," rams from "La Tomasa," Durham bulls from "La Criolla" also from "Santa Narcisa," rams from "Curamalan Chico," from "San Blas" bulls, sire horses, rams and pigs, a Berkshire boar from "Kia Ora," a Hereford bull from "Villa Maria," rams from "La Catalina," Merino rams and Hereford bulls from "3 de Febrero," 5 Shire horses from "Las Delicias," Merino rams from "La Rabona," Hereford bulls from "Santa Sabina," sire horse from "La Carolina," Hereford bulls from Sr. A. Yeoman's estancia "La Norumbega," Durham bulls from the estancia of "Cochico," Herefords from "Las Hormigas," bulls and Lincoln rams from the "Dos Marias," Merino rams from "Santa Teresa," sire horses, pigs and fowls from "La Esther," Hackney mare from "San Emilio," sire horses and Polled Angus cattle from "Curamalan," Hackney stallions from "Cabaña Tatay," Clydesdale stallions from "4 de Octubre," sire horses from "Las Cortaderos," bulls, horses and fowls from "La Gleba," and various other lots from different estancias including quite a large number of fowls.

Trouble on Board Ship.

A few days ago, on board the American schooner Monie P., the "nigger" cook and steward refused to do as he was told, and used some very insulting language to the captain, who ordered him to be put in irons. The man resisted, and during the struggle the captain was shot in the leg. The "nigger" was arrested but liberated again the same evening, and was instructed to be paid off and to return to the ship in order to fetch his clothes. This latter he has not done up to the present, probably as he does not wish for another interview with the captain.

"Live" Advertising.

Amongst the different and varied ways of drawing customers is an advertisement appearing now in one of the local papers, in which it is stated that anyone having spent the sum of fifty dollars in purchases at an almacén near the market will be given an order on a registry office here by means of which they will be found a position free of charge, although the interval between these two events is not stated.

Agricultural & Pastoral

CAMP NOTES

(By Our Agricultural Editor.)

The week's weather has been favourable for camp prospects, and the recent rains are reported to have saved the harvest in many of the drier localities. I was told by an estanciero from San Luis that more rain was badly wanted, before they could count on any harvest at all, while many had begun to plough up their wheat, with the intent of sowing maize. Wheat that has sufficient moisture to carry the plant life beyond the critical period and enable the roots to get a firm hold, will not suffer from the drought to the extent that later sowings do. The drought has already penetrated into the soil to such an extent that the young tender plant roots do not find the necessary nutriment and moisture to continue their growth, hence the very unsatisfactory appearance of the later sowings, while the earlier sowings are coming away well. If a good rainfall does take place on the drier zones within a fortnight, the yield ought to be satisfactory, but failing the rainfall, the yield will suffer considerably.

The week's sales of imported pedigree animals have been somewhat firmer than could be reported of the previous week's trade. Mr. Joseph Shepherd's bulls give an average of $2769 a head, which, though by no means high, considering the good quality of the animals on offer, denoted a certain firmness in the trade. Messrs. P. and G. Hughes had an average of $3118, which was quite satisfactory considering the recent sales. The slight improvement noticeable in the demand for imported bulls is likely to continue till the finish of the season, as there will be a shortage of imported bulls.

There was a sale of imported Lincoln rams from New Zealand during the week, but purchasers did not support the sale as they ought to have done, considering the very fine class of wool carried by these sheep. Unfortunately for their sellers they had been recently shorn, and consequently were not presented in the long wool, as is essential for the successful sale of young rams in this Republic. Their quality warrants their evoking a better demand when next offered for auction.

The sales in Britain of heavy draught horses appear for the present to be so indifferent that exporters from this Republic cannot continue shipping. Horses for remount purposes are still being shipped, though from private letters the Argentine horse is not improving on his reputation in Europe. It is appalling to see the amount of nondescript horses on almost all estancias in this Republic, and the owners are foolish to think that these brutes fulfil the requirements of any particular class of work. Native horse-owners have in many cases been disgusted with the scrutinising and selection of purchasing agents for the home markets, and are always inquiring, "Why was such a horse rejected?" Possibly because he was not the required height, or the symmetrical form of the animal did not warrant his selection, or his unsoundness was the cause of his non-inclusion in the draft. Despite the great number of horses in this country, and the very general interest evinced by all Argentines in horse flesh, it is surprising what a meagre knowledge is possessed by the generality of estancieros, regarding the soundness or saleable qualities in a horse, to be afterwards exposed for sale on the British market.

Having a wide experience of this Republic and its class of horses, I am not surprised that they have not been recognised in Britain, as embodying the necessary good qualities for competing with the home-bred animal. This Republic is full of horses. One sees immense numbers scattered all over the camp, but they are of such a nondescript class of brutes, embodying so many different types, and though undoubtedly of considerable use in this country, under the conditions ruling here, are not serviceable under the changed economic conditions in Britain. In this Republic, one sees tied to the big carts as many horses as are necessary to move the loaded waggon, the feed being obtained in the camp, or the wide drove roads, where pasture at certain seasons abounds. The different conditions in Europe where horses, so to speak, are artificially maintained, demands the minimum of mouths with the maximum of pulling abilities.

The light legged varieties have received more attention than the heavy draught class. Innumerable expensive high-class sires have been acquired for improving the breed of light-legged horses in this Republic. The heavy draught varieties have not received the same attention, though the demand and prices paid for heavy draught stallions at the annual Palermo Sales have never been very remunerative to their breeders. Current prices paid were not likely to induce breeders of these classes of horses to import the extra good quality sires from Britain, where values for good class heavy draught animals are higher than any importer could pay and expect to realise here to advantage. Individual estancieros have at times imported very good quality sires, as also mares, but notwithstanding the large number of breeders of so-called "mestizo" potros, few show the necessary quality for exportation to the home markets. It is immaterial what the breed may be, but the animals must combine the necessary qualities for this successful sale in Britain. Given a good class of Shire mares, and using an equally good kind of Clydesdale stallion, this combination ought to produce a class of big colts, unbeatable for heavy carting work anywhere. I have at times seen the result of this cross, and the type and size of the progeny would please the most exacting carting contractor in Britain, or for that matter anyone who was looking for a big upstanding strong horse, with a certain activeness about his movements. The admixture of the Clydesdale with the Shire forms an excellent combination of good points. It is not so much the want of size, but more the lacking of quality, as embodied in a "well put together animal" that shippers complain of. There is an absence of these nice flat boned clean legs and springy pasterns of the Scottish Clydesdale, whose big, well spread good hoots are also wanting in the Argentine heavy draught horse, even of the so-called Clydesdale type. The animals here have a certain plainness about them which is very adverse to their successful sale on the British market. If this Republic expects its heavy horses to meet with acceptance on the British market, then it must produce the class and type that buyers want to purchase as best befitting their requirements, as determined by their saleable value.

Shipment of Horses.

The British remount commission are shipping by the s.s. Clutha River a select lot of 350 horses. The consignment will be under the charge of that well-known expert, Mr. W. Silvester, who has had many years' experience in the shipment of live-stock, and invariably with most satisfactory results.

Mr. Juan Lalor, the well-known cattle salesman, has compiled the following list of prices obtained for animals sold by him during the week at

DEHORN YOUR CALVES with our LIQUID CHEMICAL DEHORNER

This is a perfect substitute for the ordinary chemical Dehorner in sticks of which there is no more in stock in the Argentine.

CALASTREME & RATTI
Veterinary Establishment,
MAIPU 247, BUENOS AIRES.

the Linieres market. Bueyes Mestizos especiales from $210 to $260; Bueyes especiales $180 to $200; Bueyes carne gorda $100 to $130; Novillos mestizos especiales from $250 to $280; novillos mestizos para frigorifico from $210 to $230; novillos carne gorda from $140 to $170; vacas mestizas excepcionales, from $145 to $170; vacas mestizas especiales from $125 to $135; vacas mestizas gordas from $105 to $120; novillitos mestizo excepcionales from $105 to $120; novillitos carne gorda from $90 to $100; novillitos carne gorda from $90 to $100; vaquillonas mestizas especiales from $110 to $115; vaquillonas mestizas gorda from $95 to $105; vaquillonas carne gorda from $80 to $90; terneros mamones especiales from $35 to $40.

Messrs. Emilio Casares and Sons have arranged to load on the Highland Laird 130 specially selected horses of the Clydesdale and Shire breed, for sale in England. Mr. James Garlick, whose selections of horses for export has been so favourably commented on, has on this occasion as formerly purchased and selected the shipment. Some exceptionally good quality animals from Mr. John Lett, Venado Tuerto, are included in this consignment, which it is hoped will meet a good selling trade in Britain.

A FAMOUS SOUTH AFRICAN SHOT.

The following reference to a Morayshire man—a brother of Mr. J. MacCulloch, presently residing in Banfield, and well known as formerly manager of several important estancias, will no doubt be of interest to some of his countrymen in this Republic. "Herbert James MacCulloch, of the National Bank of South Africa, Ltd., Pritchard Street Branch, who is one of the best shots in the Union, has been granted leave by the general manager on half-pay in order to proceed to Europe to offer his services to the War Office. He leaves Johannesburg accordingly on Thursday evening by the Natal train at 8 o'clock, and will sail from Durban by the Balmoral Castle on July 18th. Mr. MacCulloch's patriotism has led him to take this step. He feels that, in Kitchener's phrase, his country needs him, and it was with the intention of doing his little bit at this time that he applied for leave to proceed to Europe, and he was fortunate in having as patriotic an official as the general manager, who acquiesced in the request and granted him leave on half-pay, a fact which has been appreciated not only by Mr. MacCulloch but by the other members of the branch staff. Mr. MacCulloch carries with him the best wishes of his colleagues for a safe return, and that he may be as useful as he is willing in helping to end the war is the wish and hope of his many friends. Mr. MacCulloch, it may be remarked, some years ago accompanied a South African Bisley team to England and won several prizes. He has likewise been a frequent prize-winner at South African Bisley meetings. May good luck attend him."

THE SPEYING OF CATTLE.

Some Useful Information.

During the last few weeks I have received many inquiries regarding the speying of cattle, and I have come across some very interesting information, given by Mr. S. S. Cameron, M.R.C.V.S. (who is not by any means unknown in Argentina), in an article he has contributed to a recent number of the "Victorian Journal of Agriculture."

The writer remarks that the most suitable age for speying cattle is prior to the first calf. At this period there is the minimum risk of mishap. If older cows are to be speyed, they should be in store condition, and not in calf. In-calf cows often slip their calves after speying. The operation should not be performed on cows in season, nor within a month after calving. The most suitable time for speying is the early summer, when the nights are warm and dry. The subjects for operation should be kept short of food for 24 hours before the operation.

There are two methods of operation in vogue, viz., the flank operation and the operation per vaginum. Where considerable numbers are to be speyed, the flank operation is usually preferred. The cattle are secured in a long, narrow race or crush, with fence-work sides, so that the operator can work through the rails. When the number are few, they may be tied or strapped, right side on to an ordinary three-rail fence. The seat of operation through the flank is on the right side, in a position similar to that described for gastrotomy, and the incision is made in the same direction, downwards and forwards across the direction of the hair down to the peritoneum. The right side is chosen in preference to the left, because the operator's manipulation is not interfered with by the presence of the distended paunch. Before making the incision, the hair should be clipped off an oblique strip, and the part washed with an anti-septic solution. The hands and arms of the operator should also be similarly washed between each operation. The peritoneum or thin membrane lining the abdominal cavity should not be broken until the haemorrhage from the outside wound is somewhat allayed. It is then cut through, and the hand introduced into the abdominal cavity in search of the ovaries. The one furthest away (the left one) should be grasped first, and removed from its corded attachment by snipping with knife or scissors, or if it is desired to avoid haemorrhage totally, the ecraseur is used. The right ovary is then grasped and removed. Some operators stitch the peritoneum, though this is scarcely necessary. Usually the wound is stitched with three or four strong sutures, taking in a half-inch of skin at each side. A dressing of carbolic oil or tar is then smeared over the surface, and the operation is complete.

MCKEENA'S BUDGET

THE MASSES AND THE CLASSES.

(To the Editor.)

Sir,—The remarks by "Bahia Blanca" are well merited.

The British soldier, be he regular or volunteer, is defending the land of his forefathers, and the land from which only can wealth be produced.

Houses, crops, businesses are the product of someone's individual energy—and as such should be respected as the producer's private property.

The land of the British Isles is now in the hands of certain individuals. This possession should not be interfered with. They are "owners" of same—and the title that society has given to them must be respected.

To-day the value of these lands is, however, the product of something communal—the action of the British Army, — and while the landowner's title should be respected, the community should see that the British landowner pays the community for what he has received or is receiving from the community, in form of defence of "his land."

If the cost of this war be collected by a tax on the value of the lands of the British Empire, the deer parks will soon become a thing of the past.

Every Britisher is prepared to do his bit towards the defence of the Empire, but it's quite another matter when it comes to paying the cost of the defence. Those who get the benefit should foot the bill.

If the Chancellor requires money to pay the cost of this struggle, how can he better obtain it than by taking for the nation's good what the people's army is producing?

A stiff tax on the value of land in the Empire would result in the deer parks being handed over to intensive cultivation, and after the war Mr. 14/- per week would find work at 25/- per week. Before the war he earned 14/-, now he is earning 25/- defending the land; and if the tax was made stiff enough to absorb the whole rent, that man would earn, after the war, his 25/- per week as easily as he is earning the 25/- per week in the trenches—and with a good deal less risk.

If the deer walks were forced into production, the problem of the unemployed would in a large measure be solved, while the British Isles would become at least nearer self supporting than they are to-day.

Land taxation will not perhaps solve all the problems the people will be called upon to face after the war is over, but it would go a long way towards the equitable distribution of the cost of same.

Mr. Reginald McKenna may fancy it's good business to tax the people's breakfast table, putting 9 pence per pound on the tea used, and similar increases on other articles and on incomes; but surely if he takes for the nation's needs what the nation's army produces, the cost will be paid by the nation without it feeling the charge, great though it undoubtedly will be.

Some may say that it is unjust that land values only should be taken to provide the cost of the war; but let me here ask: What would be the value of the Duke of Norfolk's estates if the Kaiser's Kultured hordes entered the City of London to-morrow?

If, therefore, the nation's troops keep the Kultured hordes from entering the territory of the Empire and gradually shove them back across the Rhine, who should pay the cost of the operation? Should not the Duke of Norfolk and his fellow land owners foot the bill, instead of the returned wounded soldier or the dead soldier's widowed mother being asked to stump up 9 pence per lb. more on his or her tea and so much per lb. more for sugar? Would it not be fairer that his Lordship paid the cost out of the rent he collected from the clerk or tradesman, instead of the nation collecting from these a percentage of what they earn?

Let the Duke of Norfolk enjoy all he earns. He is entitled to all that

Luis Costantini

Agriculturist & Seedsman

TREES, AGRICULTURAL, AND HORTICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS.

WE OFFER OUR LARGE STOCK OF FRUIT, FOREST AND ORNAMENTAL TREES AT VERY MODERATE PRICES.

ASK FOR OUR CATALOGUES.

Seeds from the well-known firms of:—

VALMORIN, ANDRIEUX AND CO., OF PARIS.

CHARLES SHARPE AND CO., OF SLEAFORD.

Also FROM OUR SPECIAL PLANTERS IN ITALY.

Implements for Agriculture and Horticulture from the celebrated firms of:—

C. F. SKELTON AND CO., OF SHEFFIELD; and

DITTMAR FRERES, BUENOS AIRES.

HEAD OFFICE AND WAREHOUSE AT RIVADAVIA 6717 to 25.

U. T. 919 FLORES.

OFFICES AND GARDENS AT RIVADAVIA 5956.

U.T. 196 FLORES.

LARGE GARDENS IN LUJAN, F.C.O.

Cabaña 'Lujan' y 'Las Hermanas'

= DE =

R. HERRERA VEGAS É HIJOS

LUJAN, F.C.S.

J. M. GUTIERREZ, F.C.S.

Carneros Lincoln y Oxford Down.Toros Hereford y Durham. :: ::

FLORIDA 832 - BUENOS AIRES

his abilities produce. At the same time, let the small tradesman and the giant shipowner or merchant have all their respective abilities' produce. To take from the individual what his work or ability produces is not necessary. The Duke's land is his, but the value of that land is not produced by that owner. That value comes from the collective action of the people of the nation; and, if such be the case, surely that value should be used up before the product of the labour of the individual is taken to meet the nation's needs. The land is the Duke's; but there is a way of making him use same, and that way is by putting the taxes of the nation on land-values—a tax equal to a small percentage on what the community gives, in the form of privilege, to the land owner. If the land owner uses his land in the production of things the nation or consumers require, then the tax does not fall on the owner, but on the consumer, for it is passed on in the price of the article produced. But if the owner desires a deer park, desires to keep the land idle or out of active production of those articles that the nation requires, then let him pay to the nation a percentage on the value of his land thus held up. He then pays for the privilege he enjoys—the privilege of keeping idle the latent riches that are within his reach if he will but work the land or let others do so.

The value of the land within the bounds of the British Empire is being maintained by the fighting men, by the men who are daily risking their lives in defence of the Empire. Under present systems, the Duke of Norfolk and the 2 per cent. of land-holders in Britain get all the benefit, for they are allowed to appropriate, practically without payment, what the fighting men produce or conserve. Let the land owners have their land, but let them at the same time pay to the nation the cost of the conservation of same from the gentle visit of the Kultured Rhinelanders. Don't ask the returned soldier to pay one penny of the cost out of his earnings, for he has already contributed quite enough to the "National Fund" when he fought for the soil of the Empire.

After the war, the nation should tax what the people's army has produced.

Then, if his Lordship does not like it, let him move to Baden or Hamburg. He can take himself there, but neither he nor any of his ilk can take away one half-acre of the land he calls "his," while the nation can and should keep the value of what their army has produced, and collect that value every year by a tax.

The exit of the Duke, even if accompanied by all the drones that live on the industry of others, will not make it more difficult for the man who wishes to work to knock out his 25/- per week instead of 14/- received by many agricultural labourers before they went to the trenches at 25/- per week.

Yes, Mr. Editor, after the war the returned soldiers will have questions to ask, and they will see that they are answered. They'll not try, however, to get their answers as has Germany, by force. No; they will use a milder and yet—to the drone—a more terrible weapon than even the cannon. They will use the ballot box—a weapon the Duke class don't like.

That way the returned soldier and the women of the nation will get their rights more easily and more rapidly. Both have as good a claim on the full advantages of the citizenship as have the plural voters.

By the use of the ballot box, the working masses of Britain can and will strike a blow at the Land Mono-

IMPORTED POTATOES

HIGH PRICES AND OFTEN LOW QUALITIES.

France continues to send us heavy cargoes of potatoes; they are also arriving in large quantities from Spain and from North America.

Huge quantities of the tuber so intimately associated, in tradition but little else, with the Green Isle, are stored in the extensions of Docks 3 and 4, all of which does not prevent prices being perfectly shocking and quality often villainous. Potatoes from the sandy coasts of Ireland, Scotland and England have no superiors, but they do not come here. Instead, many of the immigrants are pallid, waxy, watery and ill-flavoured, with all the worst characteristics of the lowest class of "bog 'praties." New potatoes are unknown, all the arrivals being of mature years. Within the last day or two, 42,000 cases have been landed by the Amiral Vilaret de Joyeuse and the Amiral Jaureguiberry but it is safe to prophesy that prices will continue to sit up aloft.

poly group—a blow more severe and more far-reaching than Kaiser Bill would have struck had he and his Kultured hordes carried their warfare into the British Isles. The Kaiser would have fixed things up allright for the classes—the masses he has no time for;—but in dealing with Britishers he's got to deal with the masses' representatives and not those of the classes. Before this war is done with, and its after-effects, both Kaiser Bill (of Germany) and the classes—as they are called in England—will realise that the present struggle was the beginning of the end of at least one form of monopoly, and that the very worst.

In Germany, the masses don't count. In the British Isles, there are many who think that way also. "Yes, these soldiers are very fine fellows—fine fellows dontcherno—d—d fine fellows,—but just fancy Bill Jones' wife getting 25/- per week while he is in the trenches—really it's preposterous—dontcherno"—is more the style in too many of the upper class circles.

Some may think 25/- per week too much to pay to men for defending the land their forefathers lived in—too much for running the risk of getting knocked out.

The British people were just on the point of settling who should pay the cost of Government in the country—the masses or the classes. At the very moment that the Irish people were to receive their cherished demands, some fellows over the water, Belgium way, fancied they had a better right to Belgium than the Belgians, and so took possession. The British people didn't see things that way and asked the intruders to get out, which request was refused, and so the Land of the comparatively free took up the Little Man's Battle. They will settle the intruder—it's only a question of time,—and when they have done the job the same men can be trusted to take on the job of freeing their own land from another intruder just about as prejudicial to the nation as the Kultured intruder was to Belgium.

This war is a costly evolution towards freedom. Had the struggle taken place within the borders of any one nation, we'd call it revolution; but now that seven nations are mixed up in it we call it war—but it's merely the coming of an era of freedom for the downtrodden, not only of Germany, Austria and Turkey, but also of France, Britain, Italy and Serbia, while many other nations will most likely learn the lesson without paying as dearly as those mixed up in the struggle.

Thanking you in anticipation for the insertion of this screed,

Yours, etc.

A. V. S.

Buenos Aires.

SALES OF IMPORTED SHORTHORNS

Yesterday afternoon Messrs. A. Bullrich and Coy. disposed of that select lot of imported Shorthorns, the property of Messrs. P. and G. Hughes. There was a large attendance of interested spectators and though bidding was by no means brisk, a fairly good selling trade was experienced. The bulls sold were a very attractive lot and realised the satisfactory average of $3,118 for all animals sold. The extra large attendance of yesterday's sale was a fitting testimony to the high esteem in which this firm's importations are held; earned through a long business connection with this country and a thorough knowledge of the class of animals likely to give the best results to their purchasers.

On October 4, before a large attendance of Argentine breeders, a most select consignment of imported Shorthorn bulls, the property of Messrs. Emilio N. Casares and Sons, were sold by the Messrs. Bullrich and Co. and realised very satisfactory prices. Mr. Edward Bullrich, acted as auctioneer in his usual efficient manner and was successful in establishing the record sale for this season of an imported bull, in selling Gainsford Emperor, a noteworthy specimen of the breed, at $35,000. This handsome Shorthorn sire was the means of bringing together one of the most representative attendances seen at a sale since the Palermo show and sales. Experts anticipated that this bull would make a very high figure though few were prepared for his passing the thirty thousand dollars. The other bulls exposed for auction also met a very satisfactory trade at the following prices:—

1 Shorthorn bull, Gainsford Emperor, sold to Sr. Francisco Bonadeo, at $35,000.

1 Shorthorn bull, Villager, sold to Sr. Juan Castagnino at $5,500.

1 Shorthorn bull, Whittlebury Emperor, sold to Sr. Juan Castagnino at $3,200.

1 Shorthorn bull, Marden Gallant, sold to Sr. Victorio E. Scala at $1,800.

1 Shorthorn bull, Carbon, sold to Sr. Becker, at $4,000.

1 Shorthorn bull, Notlan Physician, sold to Sres. Casares Bros. and Diehl on commission, at $10,000.

1 Shorthorn bull, Privet Hawk, sold to Sra. M. de Etcheverry at $2,000.

1 Shorthorn bull, Daybell, sold to Sr. Vicente Siré at $2,500.

Tuesday, Oct. 5.

Yesterday afternoon, the Messrs. Yriondo and Co., sold a splendid lot of imported Shorthorns, the property of Mr. G. Campbell. There was a large attendance of breeders and a very satisfactory trade was experienced for all the bulls, though many of the heifers only realised moderate prices considering their breeding. The following is the sale list:—

1 Shorthorn bull, Prince Julian, sold to Sr. Pedro Estanguet at $11,500.

1 Shorthorn bull, Hindley Surprise, sold to Sr. F. Bonadeo at $7,000.

1 Shorthorn bull, Holker Duke 13th, sold to Sres. Lacau y Seré at $3,500.

1 Shorthorn bull, Rose Duke, sold to Sr. E. Santamarina at $5,200.

1 Shorthorn bull, Master Violet, sold to Sr. E. Rodriguez, at $2800.

1 Shorthorn bull, Merchant of Venice, sold to Sr. Alberto Castex at $13,900.

1 Shorthorn bull, Eyton Ideal, sold to Sr. Pedro Estanguet at $12,500.

1 Shorthorn bull, Pathfinder, sold to Sr. Emilio Meyer Pellegrini at $6,000.

1 Shorthorn bull, Moresky Augustus, sold to Sr. Tomás Anchorena at $3,000.

1 Shorthorn bull, Champion Cup, sold to Sr. E. Rodriguez, at $3,000.

1 Shorthorn bull, Colston Viscount, sold to Sr. E. Santamarina at $4,200.

1 Shorthorn bull, Village Pye, sold to Sr. E. Meyer Pellegrini at $4,700.

1 Shorthorn bull, Healing Marshman, sold to La Forestal at $2,600.

1 Shorthorn bull, King of Rothes, sold to Sres. Juan Bedon and Sons, at $2,000.

1 Shorthorn bull, Masterman, sold to Sr. E. Rodriguez at $1,800.

1 Shorthorn bull, Suret Prince, sold to Sr. Tomás Anchorena at $1,700.

1 Shorthorn bull, Gunthorpe Brierwood, sold to Sr. E. Rodriguez at $3,300.

The heifers sold at prices ranging from $1,200 to $5,000 paid by Sr. Pedro Estanguet for Maud 38, a very sweet roan heifer.

SALE OF IMPORTED LINCOLN RAMS

Yesterday afternoon the Messrs. Bullrich, disposed of that select consignment of Lincoln rams, imported by Mr. W. Candy. Trade was scarcely as animated as has lately been seen at sheep sales and the average was $566 a head for the 18 animals sold.

NEW ZEALAND LINCOLN RAMS

The Messrs. A. Bullrich and Coy. exposed for auction a very useful lot of Imported Lincoln Rams from New Zealand; but trade was somewhat slow and only six found purchasers at the moderate price of $475. These rams carry fleeces of extra fine wool though unfortunately they are shown at a very disadvantageous period as their wool is still short. Sheep buyers here are accustomed to see all two tooth sheep shown in the long wool, hence the unfavourable appearance of rams that have been shorn, as these apparently were, only a few months ago. There were many interested onlookers at this sale but bidding was slow and the owners decided to postpone the sale till a more favourable opportunity.

HORSES FOR EUROPE

47,500 IN ELEVEN MONTHS.

It is interesting to remark upon the latest official figures published in respect to the exportation of horses from the Argentine to France, Italy and Belgium. Before the outbreak of the war in Europe, there was a small, but unimportant trade between France and this country, but as a commercial business no other exportations were worthy of note.

One month after the outbreak of war, the shipment of horses exceeded any shipment for the period of a year. Officially the figures shew that from Dock No. 1 from the month of October up to Wednesday, Sept. 29, some 43,920 horses and 3,779 mules had been exported to either France or England. The exact figures for France were given at 35,459 horses and for England at 8,211 horses and 3,779 mules. Italy had received 50 horses only, but is now stated to be purchasing strongly. Further shipments are taking place throughout the coming week. For Marseilles on Sunday next another 500 horses will be shipped in the "Indralem," while although the details are not to hand, it is known that Italy, France and England will receive several vessels of horse shipments.

U.S. WHEAT

SENSATIONAL RISE IN CHICAGO "PIT."

Chicago, Sept. 30.

A sensational advance took place to-day just before the close of trading in September delivery wheat. Month end covering by shorts ran quotations up to $1.15 14 per bushel, as against $1.03 last night. Notwithstanding this the rise was steeper than has been witnessed at any time since the beginning of the war, and the excitement was correspondingly great.

Transactions were mostly in small lots by belated September shorts and the squeeze did not affect the market as a whole.

WHEAT & WINE CULTURE IN SAN JUAN

EXCEPTIONAL OUTLOOK.

A remarkable amount of progress has been made this year in agricultural matters in the province of San Juan, and the appreciable advances in the amount of land put under cultivation over that of last season is due to the increased demand for wheat. The latest returns from the province state that over 40,000 tons is the estimated amount of this year's harvest. It would appear that the production of the grape is equally exceptional and according to experts may be calculated at $12,000,000 value. The economic situation of this province bids fair to change for the better.

RICE CULTIVATION

DEMAND FOR SEED INCREASING.

A great demand is being made for rice seed supplied by the Government and the sub-office attached to the main Agricultural Department, whose duty it is to encourage all kinds of agricultural pursuits has published a statement concerning the supply of government rice seed in the various parts of the Republic.

The Japanese agricultural expert, Shatunko Ito, who has had the handling of this matter for some months, telegraphed yesterday from Tucumán to the Minister of Agriculture requesting a further grant of 80,000 kilos of rice to be placed at the disposal of sowers in Tucuman. The amount already distributed from the twelfth to the twenty second of this month has been 154,874 kilos, divided as follows:—

	kilos.
Tucumán	100,162
Misiones	10,000
Corrientes	15,000
San Juan	12,000
Mendoza	2,262½
Salta and Jujuy	14,450

NEW PETROLEUM TAX

THE CHAUFFEURS' OUTCRY.

The problem of taxing petroleum and the coal tar products, which is suggested by the Government is a matter of more serious import than would appear at first sight. The chauffeurs claim that the new proposition will mean a complete paralization of the motor industry of the Republic, or rather be it said, of the taxi-cab and motor traffic of the capital.

The present price of oil is $6.50 per case of 2 tins. Each taxi-cab consumes on an average 3 tins per day. The chauffeurs claim as an average expenditure some $21 per day.

This amount seems somewhat exaggerated, but at the same time, it is pointed out that a taxi earns $30 per day, which is 50 per cent less than in 1912 and 1913. A further reduction in earnings is bound to come, on account of the increase in tube and train traffic and the extension of the lines.

Garage hire, wear and tear, exploitation of their business is in the capital an expensive item to drivers. Half their old time trade has gone and now the new tax will, they claim, make the business of taxi driving not worth the candle. The extreme severity of the taxes, of licenses, rights to drive around the streets seeking passengers, hiring of taximeters and all such government imposts are quite sufficient and if the government official who attempts to increase the tax on oil one day finds his "self importance" without a vehicle to carry him to an important function, he will only have himself to blame.

The policy of the government in financial matters at the moment is an unsound one and is an exact reminder of a nursery story, that of "killing the goose that lays the golden egg."

DISGRACEFUL SCENE IN A THEATRE

SEVERAL SPECTATORS INJURED.

From Cordoba comes the report of a disgraceful scene which occurred at the theatre San Martin at Belle Ville. The play, "El trovador nacional," produced by the impresario, Señor Enrique Podesta, was in progress when the scandalous behaviour of a group of students put an end to the play and caused the wounding of several members of the audience. How the excitement, which ultimately led to a tumult, arose is unknown, but it is probable that certain members of the audience became annoyed at the low behaviour of the students, and an altercation, which led to a free fight and much damage to the theatre ensued. The police were powerless, but later succeeded in making many arrests.

COLON THEATRE CONCERTS

THE RETURN OF Mlle. GENEVIEVE VIX.

The Management of the Colon Theatre have contracted the renowned singer, Mlle. Genevieve Vix, as soprano soloist in the forthcoming series of classical concerts to be held in the Municipal theatre under the conductorship of Mr. André Messager, the well-known composer of "Veronique," "The Little Michus," etc.

The return of Mlle. Vix will be an added attraction to these concerts, which in themselves promise to be highly interesting. It will be remembered that this artist's singing and acting during the recent Opera season charmed the public.

The first concert will be given on October 12. A series of popular concerts will also be held on Sunday afternoons, at reduced prices.

SALE OF HORSE FLESH

PROTESTS BY THE TRADE.

If one half the world does not know, (and probably does not care) how the other half lives, it is no less true that a good half does not know what it, personally eats. The Confederación Gremial de Locatarios de Mercado de la Capital has stated that certain outside influences are responsible for the sale of horse flesh in the markets and likewise in some of the ferias francas.

It is pointed out in safeguarding the interests of butchers who trade legally, that the prices alone prove that the meat is not what is represented to be as under present conditions, beef even if of inferior quality cannot be sold at less than 40 cents per kilo while high class heifer meat is 75 cents as may be ascertained by enquiry. Those therefore who while approving "hippie contests" object to hippie diet will understand that cheap joints are not the best nor even what they claim to be—beef.

THE LATE MANOEUVRES

At the conclusion of the regional manoeuvres the troops engaged have been making their return marches under torrid conditions. The First Division under General Ramón Jones arrived at Lujan after a swift and successful march from Campo de Mayo via Pilar. Under General Arana the Second Division left their camp at estancia Los Ombues, halting two hours during the afternoon at estancia Duggan and proceeding later to San Antonio de Areco. Third Division after being encamped at Arroyo Yeraú is proceeding to Arroyo Grande. The Fourth Division marched yesterday from San Ignacio to Soconcha. All the troops appear to be fit and in hard condition after the exercises.

Mainly About People

Dr. John Halahan has returned from his visit to Britain.

The second child of Dr. Herrera Vega, Calle Juncal 848, was operated on for appendicitis on Monday evening.

Madame de Mello wishes her friends to note change of address, 3437 Blanco Encalada, Belgrano. "At Home" Sunday, Oct. 24th, 3 till 6.

It is announced that the marriage will shortly take place of Miss Jessie Dolan with Mr. George Bird, both are well known residents of Capilla del Señor.

As announced on page 2, the general agency of the Atlas Assurance Co. Ltd. has been transferred to Messrs. J. F. Macadam and Co., Balcarce 326.

Mr. George A. Kuhlert, Manager of Dutilh-Smith, McMillan and Co., leaves to-day for New York by the s.s. Saramacca. He will probably be away for three or four months on business matters.

The American Consulate General, Laval 341, has received news of personal interest to Joseph Steinberg, Mrs. Michilangelo Diangelis (née Esabeta Giliberto), Demetrius Romeo, and Pedro and Fortunato Dozal.

Dr. K. M. Walker, of Calle Córdoba 460, who has been working since last March at the Duchess of Westminster's hospital at Le Touquet, France, is now on his way back to the Argentine and is expected to arrive about October 18.

Mr. Cyril R. Lowder, who went home in July (by the Demerara), after a residence of eight years in Argentina, has been gazetted to a Lieutenantancy in the 14th Battalion Royal Fusiliers; a circumstance of much satisfaction to his friends.

The funeral of the late Mr. W. H. Philpotts took place yesterday morning from his residence in Calle Vidal, Belgrano. Mr. Philpotts was highly esteemed by all who knew him and sincere sympathy is felt for his widow and all the family. The service at the house and in the British Cemetery was conducted by Rev. Dr. McLaughlin.

Mr. H. W. Williams, of the staff of the Royal Mail Offices, left for England on Monday by the "Deseado" to offer his services for the front. Mr. Williams was a prominent member of the Quilmes Musical and Dramatic Society, and has been closely associated with the many successful performances given by that Society during the past few years. May he have the best of luck and a safe return.

DAY BY DAY IN ROSARIO.

(From Our Correspondent).

October 5.

I see by the Times that a daughter was born to the Rev. Canon Charles Pepys and Mrs. Pepys at 25 Pulteney Road, Bath, on the 4th ultimo.

The evening services at St. Bartholomew's Church have reverted to the former hour, 8.45, the attendances at the 6 o'clock services not having been sufficiently encouraging to confirm the change.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Barker are away on a pleasure trip to Buenos Aires, and are due back to-morrow night.

Mr. William Danby, formerly of Rosario, was married on August 10 at Godstone Parish Church, Surrey, to Miss Edith Pyman, sister of the late Rev. R. F. Pyman, formerly Chaplain of St. Bartholomew's.

I have not yet details of the Polo Tournament at Las Rosas, but I hear they had some splendidly contested games, one of the semi-finals calling for three extra churkers. I hope to send down particulars in a day or two.

News has been received that Mr. Walter James, who was well known in this city some years ago, has been killed in France. He had recently occupied a post with the firm of Leach Hnos., of San Pedro de Jujuy. He went home to join the colours about the end of last year. Many men of the Stores Department of the F.C.C.A. will remember in him a former colleague, whose friendship they much esteemed.

The Church Council invite the Alberdi friends of the Rev. J. A. and Mrs. Rickards to be present at a social gathering to be held at the Colegio Inglés on Friday evening, at 8.45 p.m., when a presentation is to be made to the retiring Chaplain, who has during six years' representation of the South American Missionary Society endeared himself to all with whom he has come in contact.

A visitor to Rosario is Mr. Johnston, who represents the Studebaker Motor Company, and proposes to open a branch here.

On Saturday evening, at 8 p.m., a social gathering will be held at the Talleres Church Hall for the purpose of saying "good-bye" to the Rev. J. A. and Mrs. Rickards. I hear that Mr. J. P. Crouch will be in the chair. On Sunday evening Mr. Rickards will preach his farewell sermon in Talleres Church and introduce his successor, the Rev. S. C. Deacon.

DAY BY DAY IN CORDOBA.

(From Our Correspondent).

October 4.

Messrs. Arthur Hughes has returned to town from a trip to his estancia in La Cumbre.

The Rev. Cyril Moore was a visitor in town on Sunday last.

Among the members of the English Church who are on the committee appointed for the arranging of the concert to be held soon in aid of the Church Building Fund are Mrs. F. Lindeman, Mrs. Walters and Mr. Webb.

Mr. T. G. Ferguson has returned from his holidays which were spent in Buenos Aires.

Eight different groups of young ladies members of our first society were busy on Saturday last disposing of flowers in aid of the poor. The very satisfactory sum of $1550 was realised.

Dr. E. J. Roney, is disposing of his race horses preparatory to leaving for Buenos Aires where he will embark for the United States.

Mr. V. R. Sadler is now much improved in health and Mrs. Sadler has returned to Alta Gracia.

Mr. Emeric will spend to-morrow in Calera on business for the Cordoba Light and Power Company.

Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Marks have taken up their residence on Calle Pringles, near 24 de Septiembre, General Paz.

Bank auditor, Mr. Burnes, is at present in Cordoba on business.

Tickets for the Ball to be given at the French Hall on October 8, in aid of the British Red Cross, can be obtained from the following members of the Sub-Committee:—Messrs. A. D. Dunbar, Arthur Hughes, L. G. Babb, C. A. Brigstocke, F. Lindeman, Miss Muriel Hobbs, Mrs. L. G. Babb, Miss Phyllis Symonds and Mrs. Hobbs, who is giving the dance and defraying all the expenses.

The Jangostas visited this city on Saturday and Sunday and a large army settled on the tennis courts and croquet lawn of the Cordoba Athletic Club; but they soon made their escape when the balls began to fly.

WEDDING

MACFARLANE — THOMSON.

A very pretty, but quiet wedding, was celebrated at St. Andrew's Scotch Church by Dr. Fleming, on October 2nd. Owing to the death of the bridegroom's father a few weeks ago, the ceremony and following reception at the Phoenix Hotel were attended only by the intimate friends of the family.

The bride, Miss Alice Lovell Macfarlane, was the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Macfarlane, of Campana, and the bridegroom was Mr. Henry Bell Thomson, son of Mrs. J. J. Thomson, of London.

The bride, who was given away by her father, looked charming in a dress of white satin, chiffon and Chantilly lace. Miss Girleen Keen, in white taffeta and a big white hat, was the bridesmaid, and the little trainbearer, Miss Adeline Hope, was most daintily dressed in pink liberty satin and hat to match.

Mr. J. Brown acted as best man.

After the reception, the bride and bridegroom departed for "somewhere in Cordoba," amidst showers of rice and the best wishes of their friends to spend their honeymoon.

There were a great number of beautiful presents, amongst which were a platinum watch bracelet, the present of the bridegroom to the bride, and an emerald and pearl tie-pin, the gift of bride to bridegroom. The latter also gave sapphire and pearl brooches to the bridesmaids.

Amongst those who attended the reception were noticed Capt. and Mrs. Warskitt, Mr. and Mrs. Keen, Mr. and Mrs. John Bramwell, Mr. and Mrs. Sokuel, Mr. and Mrs. Destique, Mr. and Mrs. Greenwood, Mr. Harold Warskitt, Messrs. Brown, Prescott, Alker, Neele and several others.

DAY BY DAY IN BAHIA BLANCA.

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT].

October 3.

Señora Epstein has recently been making a collection of clothes and money for the Belgian soldiers, and on Friday a large quantity of woollen clothing was handed over to the Belgian Consul, M. Pawly.

Mr. Poole, the manager of the Singer Sewing Machine Co. here, has taken up his residence with his family in Bahia Blanca.

Amongst the recent visitors here have been Messrs. Evans, Davies, Putler, Williams, V. Cooper, Sewell, McCombie and Edge.

Mr. Harding Green and Mr. and Mrs. Carpenter returned from Buenos Aires on Friday morning.

The concert held at Ingeniero White last night in aid of the Anglican Church Fund proved a great success and was well attended, there being quite a large number of people down from Bahia Blanca, the amount collected for the fund being about $140.

On Saturday a concert and entertainment is to be held at Maldonado in aid of the Red Cross Fund. There will afterwards be a special train back to Bahia Blanca for the visitors.

Mrs. Pilling returned to the Port last week, after being in the British Hospital for over five weeks undergoing a very painful operation. Mrs. Pilling was accompanied by Mr. Pilling and their eldest son, who has just returned from school in England.

Mr. Silver has returned here after an absence of some few days on a business trip in the neighbourhood.

Mr. and Mrs. Sheepshanks have been in town for a few days, and were staying at the South American Hotel.

COMPULSORY SERVICE

AND THE ROYAL COLONIAL INSTITUTE.

Mr. W. Warden, local Secretary, Royal Colonial Institute, has furnished THE HERALD with the following interesting extract from United Empire, the official organ of the Institute:—

"While few people outside the War Office are in a position to judge whether or not the response to recruiting has been equal to the strain imposed by the needs of the new armies, and while the necessity of supporting the Government in whatever measures may be considered by them to be most effective is strongly and widely recognised, the feeling in favour of a more equitable distribution of the duty of National Defence has been growing, coupled with the view that the present emergency calls for a practical demonstration that the nation is determined to throw its whole weight into the conflict. On August 27, at a special meeting of the Council of the Royal Colonial Institute, the following resolution was unanimously passed, and has been forwarded to the Prime Minister:— 'Bearing in mind that the fundamental object of the Royal Colonial Institute is the unity of the Empire, and in the conviction that they are expressing, and that it is their duty to express, the feeling of the vast majority of their members both at home and overseas, the Council of the Royal Colonial Institute desire to place on record their unanimous opinion that at this time of crisis it is the duty of every efficient person, male or female, between the ages of sixteen and sixty-five, to place themselves at the disposal of the Crown for the performance of such service, whether Military or Civil, as at the discretion of His Majesty's Government may be required from them in the interests of the State. They therefore resolve to support, by all means in their power, whatever measures His Majesty's Government may think fit to take in regard to National Service.'"

KILLED IN ACTION

LIEUT. D. C. BLYTH.

The many friends of Mr. A. Carleton Blyth, who for several years was representative of Messrs. J. G. White and Co. Ltd. in this city, and of Mrs. Blyth, will hear with deep regret of their severe loss by the death of their eldest son, Mr. Dennis Carleton Blyth, 2nd Lieutenant Royal Engineers, who was killed in action near Ypres on August 29. Lieut. Blyth was a clever engineer and a promising young officer. They will also regret to hear that Mr. and Mrs. Blyth's second son, Mr. Ricardo Carleton Blyth, Lieut. 7th Yorkshire Regiment, was, a few days later, wounded in the trenches by fragments from a shell; he was, however, progressing favourably towards recovery.

PATRIOTISM

(To the Editor).

Sir.—You will kindly give publication to the following:

One reads of Capt. H. G. Cassels' untimely end with nothing but profound regret, yet his relatives and friends have good cause to be more than proud of him. Born in Buenos Aires 22 years ago, therefore an Anglo-Argentine, but justly claimed by our King and Queen as having died in the service of "his country."

We have scores of Anglo-Argentines, born of purely British parents, in Railways, Banks, and other British capitalised concerns who should to-day be serving their King and Country, but they are lurking behind that thin-veiled excuse that they have chanced to be born in Argentina. My lads! continue to shirk your duty, but just think of your shame once the War is over.

Yours, etc.,

ANCIENT BRITAIN.

Bs. Aires, Oct. 5.

Our Point of View: "Herald" Leading Articles of the Week

THE DURATION OF THE WAR DESTRUCTION OF SUBMARINES

FRIDAY, October 1, 1915.

We have been taken to task by a reader for what he alleges to be our pessimistic attitude toward the prospect of an early termination of the war, with, of course, victory for the Allies. We are asked to justify our prediction that the war will continue for many months more, and the assertion made by us on several occasions that the end is nowhere in sight. It is not customary for a newspaper to enter into a controversy with its correspondents, but in this case the circumstances are exceptional, and we feel justified in setting forth an argument which is designed, not to instil pessimism but to inspire determination and confidence. We disclaim any suggestion of being pessimistic. Rather we assert that we are adopting the right policy in seeking to reveal the full magnitude of the task which lies before the Allies, and even of exaggerating it, in order that there should be no false hopes built up on a foundation of misconception.

In the very nature of things it was obvious from the outset of the war that the Allies faced a tremendous task. Speaking generally all of them were taken unawares, and were caught quite unprepared to wage a war of the magnitude which Germany thrust upon them. The only exception to this general statement may be made in the case of France whose people had been trained through forty years to face the prospect of a life and death struggle with their old enemy. Readers of Mr. Hilaire Belloc's wonderful analysis of the war will understand the frame of mind in which the French people were when the war burst on them. It was this frame of mind which really saved the Allies. The French people had been taught to expect a tremendous shock; the whole of their military strategy was directed to meeting this shock, and sustaining it without crumpling up. It was almost an accepted thing that Paris would be abandoned, and possibly half of France left to the enemy. France had been led to expect what may paradoxically be called the "unexpected." In other words she was prepared mentally if not physically to meet anything.

With this exception, which was as we have said, mental preparation, the Allies physically and mentally were totally unprepared for what happened. In a military sense they suffered at the outset a handicap of quite a year as compared with the Nation which had everything in readiness for a colossal campaign. No one can deny that Britain was, apart from her navy, quite impotent in a military sense twelve months ago. This may truthfully be said without disparagement of the magnificent feats of arms of her first expeditionary force which was utilised merely to help to sustain the shock which the French strategists had anticipated. Of armies as understood to-day in this struggle in which a million men appear to be a unit for purposes of comparison, Britain had none. We know what tremendous efforts she has made to build up supplies and reserves of munitions. She, in common with her Allies has practically spent the first year of the war in getting somewhere near to being on terms with her enemy in all that counts in military operations.

It is no exaggeration to say that the first twelve months of the war so far as the Allies were concerned were devoted solely to preparation. While this preparation was in progress the enemy clearly had the ad-

TUESDAY, October 5, 1915.

There appears to be fairly good ground for belief in the report that the British naval authorities have devised means by which the depredations of enemy submarines have been largely overcome. The official statement of the losses last week of British ships entering or clearing from British ports show that six vessels aggregating a tonnage of something over twenty thousand were sunk. This loss is quite exceptional if we take a period of some weeks back, and in fact it merely indicates that the Germans were rather fortunate, for in previous weeks they had secured practically no results. Certainly during the past two months their submarines have been strangely impotent, presuming that they are still afloat in any number.

According to an American report of an official character the losses of German submarines for some time past have been very great, it being calculated that between fifty and seventy have been destroyed. The report referred to indicates that this vantage in all respects that count when we come to consider subsequent events. The Germans for instance, though foiled in their first dash on Paris, undoubtedly were able to choose their own line of defence against the recoil they knew must come if their first attack were unsuccessful. This line they were able to fortify to an extent almost unprecedented in field operations. We know the reasons which prevented a vigorous offensive being taken by the Allies, which had it been made early in the war might have shattered the German lines. We should now understand that it is not reasonable to expect the line held for months to be broken in a day. We should also know, if we have any conception of military affairs, that while the first line is being battered, the enemy has time to prepare another behind it.

It is we believe, quite a mistake to suppose that the operations of the last week mean the crumbling away of the German defences, for in reality they have only now been seriously attacked. We have in other articles emphasised the immense political importance of the success gained by the Allies. In a military sense the success is only relative. Its chief effect is that the enemy must now draw in from other theatres of the war all available men. When Germany's forces are mainly concentrated in Flanders and Northern France, because they must be concentrated to face the increasing pressure there, and to avoid similar losses to those experienced lately, then it may be said that her days are numbered. When such a concentration takes place her offensive in Russia will terminate, and give place to pressure from that side. The Allies will always have a sufficiency of men to maintain the heaviest pressure on the western front. What forces they have to spare will be utilised in other spheres, such as the Dardanelles and Serbia. The time will come when the Germans and Austrians must draw in their forces. Turkey will be abandoned to her fate, and her allies will lapse into the state of besieged territories. Then it may be possible to calculate for how long they can stand the strain and pressure, before they sue for peace. At the moment no such calculation can be made. The war must draw on, and until further developments take place no one can forecast an early termination of hostilities.

loss has been inflicted on the enemy by the use of nets, and other devices, either designed directly to trap and destroy submarines, or to reveal their presence and bring destruction upon them. At anyrate the success achieved by the British in combating the attacks of submarines has clearly been of sufficient importance to warrant the United States Navy Department in declining to abandon the construction of capital ships in favour of great numbers of submarines. Another fact of considerable importance in support of the idea of the destruction of submarines is that the British Admiralty is absolutely silent. It is satisfied apparently to publish authentic statements of losses sustained in the mercantile marine by submarine attacks, and leave the world to form its own conclusions from the diminishing number and value of these losses, having, some time ago, given forth the announcement that means were being devised whereby it was hoped the submarine policy of Germany would be brought to failure.

It is idle to speculate on the possible means which the British Admiralty may be employing. Obviously there could be no authentic information on the point, because to give such information would be to advise the enemy what to avoid. The success of the Admiralty in its policy against submarines necessarily depends on secrecy. In the early days of the war we were told that steel nets placed at harbour entrances had resulted in the capture of submarines, and this statement was followed by a supposed official announcement that vessels so trapped had been raised and put into commission in the British submarine fleet. This may be quite true, but it is not information of the class the Admiralty would be liable to divulge, nor are we likely to learn anything while the war lasts, of the manner in which the pirate craft are being checked. That they are being checked to very good purpose is obvious, and it is interesting to note that their depredations have lessened considerably since Fisher was placed at the head of the new department which deals with naval inventions.

The reduction of the submarine menace to negligible proportions is something which might well have been anticipated in the light of naval history, or on the principle that for every poison there is an antidote, known, or to be discovered. In naval affairs this law is particularly regular in its operation. Against the torpedo there was designed the torpedo net; followed by the net-cutting device of the torpedo. Against the torpedo boat, naval experts designed the torpedo-boat-destroyer. The two branches of naval science, constructive and destructive, or offensive and defensive, have always closely balanced in the results obtained. The submarine was the last thing in naval destructiveness, although its real offensiveness was not fully appreciated except by a few experts until this war. It was, of course, never anticipated that it would be used to such an extent, or with so little regard to humane considerations, as the Germans have used it. Now apparently, under the stress of war conditions, there has been evolved an "antidote" to the submarine. This may be one device, or several. Whatever it is, the secret of it is being well kept, but the results are public property.

ABSINTHE FOR EXPLOSIVES

SEQUESTRATION BY FRENCH GOVERNMENT.

Paris, Oct. 2.

All the supplies of absinthe have been sequestered by the French Government, and will be transformed into alcohol for the manufacture of gun cotton. It is expected that by this means an enormous quantity of the explosive will be obtained.

MUNICIPAL FINANCE IN BUENOS AIRES

SATURDAY, October 2, 1915.

It is perhaps scarcely fair to saddle the actual Intendente with the financial woes of the Federal Capital, since it is patent to all the world that he has but inherited the troubles—and the debts—of various predecessors. At the same time one cannot feel that the suggestion to issue a $50,000,000 loan, bearing interest at 7 per cent plus a heavy charge of 3 per cent for amortisation, is ever going to be anything more than a suggestion, lacking as it does a sound foundation. The debts are certainly there, but the investor will not come forward to meet the city's needs until he is assured that the new loan will be put on a much more stable footing than ever were its many predecessors, and that the hand-to-mouth system of borrowing small sums for short dates is confined to local loans for the purpose of meeting temporary delay in the receipt of the city's income.

The floating debt of the Buenos Aires Municipality on August 31 is put at $53,000,000 odd, and the illuminating comment on the city's affairs made by the Intendente, to the effect that all the receipts from the beginning of the year have had perforce to be applied to paying outstanding accounts, and that there will be a shortage of some $8,000,000 when all is said and done, is not a good preface to a prospectus for a new loan. The real remedy appears to lie, not in a consolidation loan at heavy interest and rapid amortisation, but rather in the direction of bonds cancelable by purchase in the open market and by periodic drawings, bearing a fair rate of interest, say 6 per cent, and secured by preferential lien on part of the city's revenues. At the same time the whole machinery of rate collecting in Buenos Aires calls for revision, as indeed do many of the rates themselves, increase being in certain cases just as much desirable as are decreases in other instances. Broadly speaking it may be said that the suggested loan, even if it were immediately feasible, would be merely a palliative, and not a remedy. Utter mismanagement has for long been the key-note of Buenos Aires municipal finance, and it is this mismanagement that has thrown a shadow over the city's credit. Proportionately to her population and her income Buenos Aires is not as heavily loaded with debt as are many great cities in Europe who never have the slightest difficulty in finding all the money they want. But these latter communities do not go begging a few hundred thousands here and there for six months or so, forget all about them, quibble over re-payment, and as often as not take another short renewal at whatever rate the lender chooses to charge for the accommodation. Consolidation is all very well, but something more comprehensive and above all more fundamental must be brought forward if Buenos Aires is to have her accounts lifted from the slough of despond in which they are at present submerged.

'VARSITIES AND THE WAR

10,000 CAMBRIDGE MEN AT THE FRONT.

London, Oct. 2.

Dr. James, Vice-Chancellor of Cambridge University, in his address at the commencement of the Academic year, said that ten thousand Cambridge men are serving at the front or training. Already 470 of them have been killed and 700 have been wounded, and more than three hundred have distinguished themselves on the field of battle. He added that enrolment at the University had shrunk to at least a third of the normal number.

THE ATTITUDE OF BULGARIA

SUNDAY, October 3, 1915.

Judging by the most recent cablegrams it would appear that the diplomatic tug-of-war which has been going on in the Balkans is shortly to be ended with Bulgaria in the grip of the Germanic powers. The termination of a period of intense strain and anxiety may come at any moment, and the prospects of the Allies winning the diplomatic battle which has been going on, with Bulgaria's neutrality as the stake, now seem much dimmer than they were at the beginning of the week. Yesterday's cablegrams certainly suggested that what happened in the case of Turkey, has happened in Bulgaria, otherwise it would hardly be possible for German officers to be in control of the mobilisation of the Bulgarian army. It must be admitted that Germany's methods are as thorough as they are unscrupulous, and that high-handedness is one of their chief characteristics. The process of committing Bulgaria irrevocably is the simple one of taking charge of affairs, after having bought over a few leading politicians. This is just what happened in Turkey, and we shall learn that the same thing has occurred at Sofia. Bulgaria is being pushed into war.

It is highly satisfactory to believe that the governments of the Allied powers are fully prepared for all contingencies. Sir Edward Grey has described the advent in Sofia of German and Austrian officers as something very grave, but we may take it from his utterance of the other day, when he warned Bulgaria of the consequences of her actions, that he and the fellow ministers, are quite ready to meet Bulgaria's hostility. There is a remarkable difference between the situation to-day as it concerns Bulgaria, and the situation of last October, when Turkey was about to succumb to German wiles. Then the attitude of the British Government was one of resignation to fate. To-day it is one of defiance and determination. If Bulgaria decides to fight the Allies, then she may count on getting all the fight she wants. The difference in the attitude is indicative of the change which has taken place in the spirit of the British people, and more particularly in their government. We are not drifting to-day, and the old Micawber-like attitude appears to have given place to one which may best be described as the spirit which directs a destiny, and does not allow it to shape itself. Twelve, or even six months ago, a decision on the part of Bulgaria to attack Serbia and side with Turkey and other enemies, would have come more or less as a disastrous blow to the cause of the Allies. To-day such a decision is comparatively unimportant.

Even supposing that both Rumania and Greece remain neutral and indifferent to what Bulgaria may do, the Allies have profited by experience and we sincerely believe they have the Balkans situation well in hand. Between them they have enough troops to spare to counter-balance Bulgaria's addition to the Teutonic strength. Operating through Serbia, where they are already placed, these forces can well hold the new enemy in check, and effectively dispose of Germany's idea of hacking a way through to the support of Turkey. There is to be no surprise in the Balkans, whatever may happen. The reports of the co-ordination of the Allied plans, especially as they concern a general offensive, and a new campaign on the part of Russia are clearly well-founded. A general offensive in all theatres of the war would alone neutralise any advantage that might accrue to the Teutons by the accession to their cause of Bulgaria, and if we have any conception of military affairs this is what a hostile declaration by Bulgaria would inaugurate. If Rumania and Greece, either or both, step in then Germany will certainly have achieved no success by her subordination of Bulgaria, but in any case we believe the hostility of Bulgaria can be viewed with equanimity.

THE PLIGHT OF KITCHENER

WEDNESDAY, October 6, 1915.

The speech of Earl Kitchener to the people of Great Britain on the question of conscription reveals the extraordinary, and pathetic, if not tragic, plight in which he has been placed through the cowardice and incompetence of the politicians with whom he is associated in the conduct of the greatest war in history. The speech referred to was reported in our issue of yesterday. It was prefaced by the statement that the Secretary of State for War would get the necessary number of men he wants, "by one means or another." Then followed the Minister's message, delivered through the Labour leaders, "I know how many men I want. I know their names, and the numbers on their doors. If they do not come I will fetch them." It is almost incredible that Britain's War Minister, the first soldier of the Empire, and the best military organizer the Nation has ever had in its service, should have been forced to place himself in such a humiliating position as to be threatening and bullying his compatriots in this manner.

The sole reason for it is that the Government has compelled him to talk like a politician, instead of permitting him, and encouraging him, to act like a soldier. The Ministry is still merely a band of party politicians and accordingly quite incapable of viewing any question except through party spectacles. Some ministers are for conscription for party reasons, or for patriotic motives; others are against it for the same reasons, but all apparently have neither the courage nor the ability to grapple with the problem of providing the War Minister with the armies he wants. They talk and contradict one another. They bully and threaten, or flatter or cajole, when they should act; should lead, or should rule. They have at last made Kitchener like themselves—unable to do anything but issue pathetic appeals, or indulge in the tactics of the bogey-man, in order to get the armies necessary to save the Empire.

Earl Kitchener may or may not be a conscriptionist. We believe he is, but the point is immaterial. He of all men should know whether conscription is necessary or is not. Apparently he is aware that it is necessary, otherwise he would not be adopting the role of the bullying politician, and in that capacity be indulging in threats which have been heard so frequently that their effectiveness has long since disappeared. However he has had no alternative. The Cabinet which is responsible for framing and presenting the laws of realm has not had the courage to put forward the one law that would stop altogether the unseemly spectacle of a people being alternately flattered and abused because under a voluntary system, which the Government will not abolish, some people volunteer and others do not. How long is the farce to go on? How long will the people of the United Kingdom stand the haggling and browbeating to which they have been subjected? How long will it be before they rise and say:—"In the name of common sense, if you want conscription impose it. If you do not, hold your peace, and let us enjoy the right the law gives us to volunteer if we choose."

Clearly this is what the people may logically say, and should say. There can be no such things as "compulsory volunteering," and yet this is what the British Government is endeavouring to bring about by continually threatening the people with conscription if they do not volunteer. The policy is neither honest nor courageous. As we have said a score of times we say now, if conscription be necessary, let it be imposed. Do not let us as a nation delude ourselves that we can raise an army by voluntary recruiting, when the "volunteering" is done under duress—in this instance the threat of com-

THE PROBLEM OF THE BALKANS

THURSDAY, October 7, 1915.

M. Venizelos' resignation of the Greek Premiership has been accepted; King Constantine is opposed to the intervention of Greece in the War; meanwhile the Allied armies are disembarking at Salonica and proceeding towards the Serbian frontier. What all this means is the greatest riddle yet provided by the war, and, even though the truth may be known to the Chancelleries of Europe, not even the expert laymen have any clear conception of what is to happen during the space of any given twenty-four hours. Each succeeding cablegram, far from solving the mystery, merely adds to the general atmosphere of confusion surrounding a colossal enigma.

That M. Venizelos is still loyal to the cause of the Quadruple Entente and has visions of a great future for the Balkan states goes without saying. No one but a deep sympathiser with the aims of the Allied nations would have permitted the landing of an Anglo-French army at Salonica. The difficult problem to decide in the case of M. Venizelos however, is to what extent he may have been aware of the volte-face about to be taken by Greece. Did he know that an upheaval would occur and did he anticipate that event by allowing the Allies to progress while there was yet time? Or has Venizelos been surprised by a turn in events as dramatic as it was unexpected? An authoritative reply to these queries would go far towards laying bare the truth about the unparalleled situation in the Near East.

It is pointed out in Athens that the Premier may, after all, be following the famous example of Salandra who, after a strenuous fight to procure the intervention of Italy, resigned within a few days of the participation of King Victor's kingdom in the world war, and only resumed office as the leader of a united war party. Optimism at a moment when the fate of the Balkans is hanging in the balance may be carried to excess, but there are sound reasons for believing that the action of Venizelos is deliberate. Naturally, it contains a much greater suspicion of a gamble than did that of Salandra, but the probabilities are that he followed the only course remaining to him.

King Constantine is well known to possess strong leanings towards neutrality as a minimum and alliance with the Teutons as a maximum policy to be pursued by Greece. He has consistently thwarted every step taken by Venizelos in the direction of active participation in the war on the side of the Quadruple Entente; and the fact that the Premier to some extent permitted the landing of the Allied forces in Salonica enabled him to "defend the Constitution." Whether or not it was with the ruler's connivance that eight Ministers were persuaded to abstain from supporting the vote of confidence in the leader of the Government is a point on which there cannot be any immediate information, but the fact that they did so is significant. Probably it was a warning to Venizelos. He knew that his power was slipping from his grasp, and resignation was the only course left open to him if he desired to mould affairs into a shape suited to his purpose.

Upon the King, then, is thrown the responsibility of discovering a pro-Teuton Government. Can he succeed in an admittedly difficult task? The future of Greece depends on his sucpulsion. If the British Government has not the courage to alter the law and make military service compulsory, then it should not indulge in an abuse of the people who act in compliance with the present law, which allows service to be a matter of choice.

MISSIONS TO SEAMEN CONCERT

The concert organised by Mrs. Span-ton at the St John's Seamen Missions last night had the charm of originality and was enthusiastically enjoyed.

The "great" item was the Yen How chorus and the dancing of Miss Julia Palmer, combined with Miss Winnie Lee's reciting. Nearly every item was encored, and most deservedly so. Mrs. Heslop, Mr. Chiswell and Mr. Turner were the accompanists.

The programme was as follows:—

I.

Piano solo, Popular airs, Mrs. Heslop.

Song, "Philadelphia," encore "River of Years," Mr. Phillips.

Song (self-accompanied), "Japanese Song," encore "Cuckoo," Mr. S. T. Rugeroni.

Song, "Yen How," Master Jack Caminos with Misses Winnie Lee, Minnie Clutterbuck, Dorothy Blackburn, Mabel Riley, Alice Palmer, and Dorothy Davies.

Song, "A Quaker Girl," encore "Two eyes of grey," Mr. F. A. Chiswell.

Comic, "Joshua," encore "Row, row row," Mr. W. H. Thompson.

Duet, "Recruits," Alice Palmer and Dorothy Davies.

The accompanist was Ala Davies.

II.

Piano, Mrs. Heslop.

Dance, Flower Dance, Miss Julia Palmer; encore Castanet Dance.

Song, "Mandalay," Mr. Chiswell.

Recitation, "Bravo," Miss Winnie Lee; encore "Mother's cooking."

Song, "Mona," encore "River of years," Mr. Phillips.

Son, "Negro love song," encore "The confession," Mrs. Rugeroni.

Comic, "Pucker up your lips, Miss Lindy," "Who's your lady friend," "All aboard the boat for Dixie," Mr. W. H. Thompson.

Yen How was beautifully done in costume. Miss Palmer also was attractively dressed for the part.

Y.W.C.A.

A social held last evening at the Y.W.C.A. was a pleasant and enjoyable entertainment which was fully attended. The evening was passed in one or two musical items and the thorough enjoyment of several round games conjured up by the cleverness of some thoughtful folk who desired to make, and succeeded in making, the evening pass most pleasantly.

cess or failure. If the suggested coalition cannot obtain the requisite support of the deputies a dissolution is inevitable, and, with enemies threatening the very existence of the nation, a general election will have to be held to decide upon the policy to be pursued. A majority for King Constantine and neutrality would effectually remove Greece from the ranks of the possible allies of the Entente; a verdict in favour of Venizelos would make Greek intervention only a matter of weeks. It is, of course, very difficult to state with any assurance that the possibility of victory was foreseen by the late Premier and that he has deliberately staked his position on the result of a precipitated election, or, alternatively, the acquiescence of the King in the adoption of an anti-Teuton programme; but, from the Allies' standpoint at any rate, this is a comforting view to take. Should it prove incorrect; should Venizelos be once again an exile; should Greece abandon her treaty promises to Serbia; and, worse still, should the King insist on the withdrawal of the Allied forces from Greek territory, the Balkan situation will present a problem that the Quadruple Entente will find extraordinary difficulty in surmounting. In any case, the oft-repeated statement, "We Must Rely on Ourselves" must be taken to heart. Only by adopting such an attitude can disappointments be faced with equanimity.

Public Opinion as expressed in the Argentine Press.

THE PROVINCIAL BANK OF ROSARIO

(La Prensa.—September 30).

Public attention has been aroused in regard to the affairs of the Provincial Bank of Rosario, says La Prensa, owing to the importance of the accusations that have been made against it, important that is to say, when the accused establishment is a bank. It has been publicly stated that this concern, whilst refusing to discount for firms of undoubted solvency, has seen fit to make advances to members of its board of directors. Such a situation cannot, continues La Prensa, become general without its affecting the working of the institution, since its existence does not depend solely on the sums passing through its hands, but is also in direct relation to what may be termed its moral responsibility. A Bank that is publicly known for the judgment and seriousness that it exercises, is a leading factor in the promotion of trade, whilst at the same time it serves as a rampart against dishonest commercial interests.

To reach this position however it is indispensable that all its acts should conform to the strictest criterion of behaviour, a criterion that includes even the private life of its employees, who are rightly prohibited from attending certain circles that might militate against a proper performance of their duties. If a bank does not maintain this high standard of conduct, it is safe to say that its management is deficient, and in such a matter public opinion very seldom errs. On these grounds La Prensa deems it to be its duty to call attention to the charges made against the Banco Provincial, urging the Government to proceed with firmness and impartiality in the investigation of the alleged irregularities. If these administrative irregularities have taken place, then they are something more than mere incidents, treating as they do of a commercial centre of the first importance. Report has it that the Government of the Province has charged an important functionary with the task of investigation, and La Prensa concludes by expressing the hope that this duty will be faithfully carried out.

A SCHEME ABANDONED

(La Nación.—September 30).

Last night the ordinary sessions of Congress closed, and as usual, remarks La Nación, there were many measures put through at the last moment which have never been heard of during the past five months. Nevertheless there remain in suspense, again following the inevitable custom, many measures that await the decision of the legislative vote, measures of the first importance alike to the country and to its Government. The latter, for its part, has hastened to point out that the attention of the Chambers will only be directed during the extraordinary sessions to the Budget statements. Whilst admitting the transcendent importance of this law, and the work that a conscientious study of its several clauses demands, La Nación thinks that Government might well have asked Parliament to direct its attention to other matters, also deserving of a decision.

Quite possibly there are measures less beneficial to the country than that of the proposed exploitation of the

THE CLOSE OF THE SESSION

(La Prensa.—October 1).

Unprecedented sterility is the verdict on the Session of Congress that has just closed, remarks La Prensa, and the country owes nothing to its popular representatives, despite the fact that thanks to the freedom of the vote Congress is one of the most truly popular assemblies of recent years. If intelligence were lacking in the legislators, this result of a year's labours might be put down to intellectual ineptitude, but that is manifestly not the case. Nor does La Prensa venture to put it down to lack of patriotism, rather seeking to lay the blame on a want of a collective ideal or aim which is the evil that predominates in the party system. This observation, La Prensa is careful to say, must be taken as general, no one being excluded. All alike are responsible.

Nothing has been done to combat the deep economic troubles that have afflicted the country, and despite many efforts to arouse the legislators it has been impossible to get the Chamber of Deputies to give its attention to solving the factors that are causing the decay alike of public and of private wealth. The session is over, and no-one can say what the policy of any party may be when confronted with these grave problems. In no speech, no manifesto, no party orders, can one find the slightest indication of a settled policy regarding these grave matters. Yet the fact that the presidential election is approaching, together with the re-election of half the Chamber of Representatives, was but an added reason for defining the situation, instead of which these weighty reasons appear to have acted in an inverse direction. Nor has the Government seen fit to remedy this state of affairs by pro-roguing the ordinary sessions. The call to extraordinary sessions to discuss special legislation does not take the place of such a course, which is moreover the course that is normally adopted. In short La Prensa believes that the Argentine Republic is passing through a complete crisis, embracing economics, finance, Congress, and Government; a crisis proving that the country lacks a certain course, is without competent direction, and lies like a vessel abandoned to the winds and currents, at the mercy of its own resources. The ordinary sessions of 1915 having therefore been a complete failure, remains to be seen whether the Government will let matters remain as they are, or take steps to remedy their omissions.

forests of Argentina in order that this country may be independent of other lands in its endeavour to solve one of its great problems. Reference is made to the projected installation of a paper-making factory in Nenquen, designed to use the wood pulp of the araucaria imbricata, a tree growing there in vast profusion and useless for any other end. The Chamber of Deputies, before whom the project was submitted, had all the data before them wherewith to arrive at a decision. The report of its committee was favourable, the technical advisers of the Government agreed therewith, and the Government itself favoured the proposition. Thus there was no opposition of any kind, and the project might have been passed without further delay. Moreover, as La Nación points out, there are special reasons why it should have been brought up in the extraordinary sessions. Delay now means the loss of a whole year, since only during summer can the necessary preliminary work be carried out in the Neuquen.

MUNICIPAL ECONOMIES

(La Prensa.—October 2).

A few days ago, states La Prensa, it mentioned the proposal of a Municipal Commissioner, Sr. Espeche, to the effect that the Municipality give up all its official automobiles, save those used by the Intendente and the Asistencia Pública. In bringing forward his suggestion this gentleman stated that the experience of a national department showed that suppressing three automobiles and paying for cartage and transport in the ordinary way meant a very marked saving, showing at the same time where much money had leaked away. La Prensa applauds this suggestion, and declares that the Municipal Commission will not go far wrong if they adopt it, as again and again it has been proved that the municipal motor cars have been employed on private business to such an extent as to be nothing less than an abuse.

The present proposal is however limited to the introduction of the 1916 Budget, and La Prensa supposes that the reason for fixing this brief period is to be found in the need for immediate economy, which may perhaps have to be modified when the budget comes up for discussion, and when some departments may be able to prove that a motor car is a necessity if their work is to be efficiently carried out. At the same time the new measure is an excellent point from whence to start a campaign of economy in this regard, nor need the present Commission stop there. They are evidently imbued with a wish to take their mission seriously, and La Prensa therefore draws their attention to the scope that exists for reduced expenditure within their own circle. There is no reason why the existing citizens committee should go on with the costly train affected by the late Municipal Council.

FOMENTING INTER-AMERICAN TRADE

(La Nación.—October 2).

One of the problems that the United States Government is seeking to solve at the present time deals with the best way of establishing a permanent current of trade with South America, says La Nación. Mr. McAdoo, Secretary to the United States Treasury, has drawn up a programme including banking and shipping facilities for the South American republics, with special attention paid to the case of Argentina and Brazil, uniformity of commercial legislation relative to exchange, and finally a Pan-American Congress to meet annually in Washington for the purpose of consulting on all matters of importance that may arise, its work being seconded by travelling committees.

The prospect is favourable to the object pursued, says La Nación, but it must be remembered that these plans must not be based solely on the state of war in Europe. Plans for the permanent conquest of the trade of this country must also take into consideration the traditional ties that bind it to the European markets, since the latter are sure to try and regain their former pre-eminence, once the war is over. Financial initiative is required, but it is not so much banking facilities that are needed as the implantation of American capital destined to become part and parcel of the nation's progress. Loans destined to public works; railway exploitation; fixed as against commercial capital, in a word; these are the means whereby the United States may look to get a sure foothold for her trade in South America. Undoubtedly the present time is very propitious for the introduction of American capital in this form, having regard to the fact that Europe will not be in a position to supply capital for some considerable period, whilst the United States will have a large balance of surplus cash due to it from the several belligerents, and this balance it will necessarily seek to invest. Argentina,

CAPITALISM: AFTER THE WAR

(La Prensa.—October 4).

Argentine opinion is divided, says La Prensa, on the subject of whether capital will continue to flow hither after the war. One party thinks that a lengthy pause has set in; that Europe, needing all her resources to build up her own position, will have no spare means for foreign investment. On the other hand there are those who affirm that immediately peace is proclaimed investors will seek in the American market an escape from the heavy taxation that the war will perforce have left behind. Against this view is to be set the fact that small savings in Europe have always followed the lead of the various governments, but the supporters of the theory of immediate foreign investment argue that this does not apply to the financiers, whilst the war itself has provided America with its best advertisement as a productive country.

The magnitude and complexity of the problem makes it a difficult matter to pronounce for either view. One can only gather up such information as is available and try to throw a little more light on what is admittedly a very debateable theme. In Europe, especially in France and England, whence comes the major portion of the news, the problem of capital, is, says La Prensa, on an identical footing to the problem of capital in Argentina. M. Victor Cambon, the well-known scientist (both engineer and economist) in a recent address to the French Institute of Civil Engineers, dealt with the subject in somewhat sombre tones. Even admitting the complete discomfiture of Germany, it is doubtful whether France and England will be able to produce on the scale that would be desirable, owing to lack of technical labour and wastage of capital. The state will have to rebuild hundreds of thousands of factories, replace railways, and accomplish other works that will cost immense sums owing to high wages, the latter being due to a shortage of skilled labour.

In so far as matters financial are concerned, M. Cambon believes that there will be a great change of fortune; government purveyors will have benefited largely, the subdivision of wealth will be less, and taxation on that account will be difficult. Here M. Cambon places himself in accord with those who believe that capital will fly from Europe after the war owing to the heavy charges that it must bear. There is no questioning the fact that they will be heavy; in France alone the debt of the state will have increased by fifty thousand million francs, and it is easy to see a doubled taxation in less than two years. The same reasoning applies to England, Germany, Austria, Italy, and Russia. Counting on a war indemnity is useless. For either Germany must be only half beaten, or else she must be so thoroughly ruined that the intervention of her customs and her railways will give but little real benefit to the conquerors. And, as La Prensa adds, inverting the terms, the result is the same.

The point that Argentina wishes to solve is however that which concerns the movement of capital after the war. Will it accept the inevitable taxation, or will it go elsewhere? Europeans have given their lives for their country; will they give their money when peace is declared? La Prensa does not try to answer the enigma, merely pointing out that the new countries offer great attraction to the capitalist, and that the danger which M. Cambon foresees in the shape of an undue concentration of capital in a few hands, is the very thing on which the hope of those who expect to see an immigration of capital hither is founded.

thanks to its valuable products, ever in demand, offers a sure field for such funds, and the placing of fixed capital rather than the provision of circulating money ought to be the aim of North America.

THE RAILWAY PENSION LAW

(La Prensa.—October 5).

The railway companies, in accordance with the conditions laid down by Law No. 9653, are under the obligation of complying with its terms from the first of the current month. On this account, says La Prensa, petitions have begun to circulate among the various staffs which, when signed, are to be laid before the government with a request that the deduction to be made from salaries be nullified. The sum of 3 o/o of the wages bill corresponds to the companies, but if the amount payable by the employees is diminished, the companies will have less to contribute. Inasmuch however as the funds cannot be utilized for their destined end until the law regulating the working of the pension scheme is passed, if this petition is granted, and suspension allowed, the amount receivable will be smaller than was calculated when the original measure was passed. La Prensa therefore thinks that neither the companies nor their employees ought to be allowed to evade the intentions of the law, whilst the former are responsible for the due deduction from their employees wages.

The wishes of the employees have not been consulted, nor says La Prensa, ought they to have been consulted, seeing that the measure is one of public utility, to which the general public also contribute through the increase of 3 o/o on the tariff, an increase destined to the pension fund. Hence the aim of the petition drawn up by the railway employees ought not to be attained, since both employers and employed are responsible for a strict observance of the law, which is being temporarily administered by the Caja Nacional de Jubilaciones y Pensiones. To make compliance voluntary, or to pay heed to petitions deriving from a more or less self interested source would lead to a breakdown of the whole scheme, at the same time enabling certain employees and certain companies to veto legislation inspired by the general social needs of the country.

CHARGES ON PRODUCTION

(La Nación.—October 5).

The law whereby agrarian pledges were given legal warrant was expressly designed, says La Nación, to simplify the granting of credit to small agriculturalists, all contracts of this nature being declared free of tax, having regard to their fundamental reason, the increase of production. Some provincial governments have however looked at the matter in another light, among them the government of the province of Buenos Aires, and have thought the wide diffusion of the new system a fine opportunity for collecting funds by insisting on stamps and other charges being applied, thus overriding the first principles of the law. Now the national government, bearing in mind the condition of the small producer, has consistently refused to add to his charges, even turning its back upon all schemes for taxing exports, notwithstanding the advantage that such measures would bring to the revenues. This attitude is now nullified by the action of the local authorities, who merely see in the forbearance of the national government an opportunity for adding to their own receipts.

Thus the agrarian pledges, designed to aid the cultivator, have merely opened the door to oppression, which means that production is taxed unduly. As its name implies, this form of guarantee is designed to enable the small farmer to get credit on his working tools, and it is evident, La Nación concludes, that it ought to be treated with exceptional leniency by the provincial governments when taxation is in question. Unfortunately fiscal greed takes no heed of these reasons, and actually proves inexorable in the matter of additional charges, regardless of the fact that it is fleecing the very classes that the national government found it desirable to aid.

TUBERCULOSIS IN ARGENTINA

(La Nación.—October 1).

The "white plague" in Argentina has reached such extremes that, as Dr. Feinmann remarks in a scholarly yet easily comprehensible article in La Nación it ought to be looked upon as a national problem. The ever-increasing death rate traceable to this cause shows very clearly how useless are isolated efforts to deal with the evil: public and private charity have up to the present only served to mitigate, not to extirpate, the disease. Recently the Government has had this point of view brought home to it and has appointed a commission to report on the matter, and whatever may be the result thereof, the initiative is praiseworthy, and it may even have some bearing on the present situation, given the modern medical prophylaxis of tuberculosis. Like many other collective diseases, tuberculosis springs from certain social states that can be counteracted by altered social conditions. Apart from the specific microbe isolated by Koch, the cause is to be looked for elsewhere; bad food, unhealthy housing, popular ignorance, bad habits, and alcoholism, are all calculated to predispose the human frame to the fell disease.

Infection in such cases is easier than in the case of strong, well nourished, and generally healthy persons, and improved living conditions therefore react indirectly on the spread of the evil. The co-operation of the community must be sought if the plague is to be stayed, hence the need for popular education which should be directed to the struggle against tuberculosis, avariosism, and alcoholism, the contemporary triad of evil against which the present generation must fight. Already the mutual idea has taken root in the shape of a society formed among the employees of the Post Office, some 15,000 in all, destined to protect and aid its members in the prevention and cure of consumption. As Dr. Feinmann justly remarks, this initiative, founded on an English model, is beyond all praise. The accumulation of small monthly contributions has both a moral and a material significance that cannot be over-rated. For as the illustrious French doctor, Peter, has shown, sorrow and discontent are also contributory to tuberculosis, and the sick man who benefits in peace and quiet by the aid of a fund to which he has also contributed is physiologically in a better condition to resist the disease and eventually get better, than his fellow who is solely dependent on public charity.

COMMERCIAL TREATIES

(La Prensa.—October 6).

Commercial affairs are beginning to attract the attention of Argentine students, remarks La Prensa. Given the growth of the country, this interest in its economic problems is logical, and their study may reasonably be expected to produce profit. Books on such subjects, formerly somewhat rare, are multiplying rapidly and represent valuable contributions to a field of study hitherto somewhat neglected. Two recent volumes La Prensa declares to have specially called its attention; one is entitled "Argentine Commercial Policy," whilst the second, by the same author, bears as its heading, "Comments on Some Argentine Commercial Treaties," and is an able effort written in a telling and lucid style. After studying existing treaties between various nations and this Republic, it asks whether all the treaties are really contributory to the development of the country? If the contrary is the case, ought such treaties not to be altered, or even abrogated?

The author examines each point carefully, on the ground of whether equal value is obtained for what this country concedes, and argues that the majority of the treaties signed since the treaty with Great Britain of 1825 have been lacking in practical value, being drawn up by functionaries who had not studied the real needs of the Republic. Nor are the comments thus made mere criticism, adds La Prensa, being rather in the nature of useful indications which may well be taken to heart by all statesmen whose duty it is to lay down Argentina's commercial policy. In short it is a serious study of an important subject, which though it may not please everyone, ought to serve as a mental stimulant to those who read Sr. Pilla-do's work. It is very plainly shown that a commercial treaty calls for something more than the mere good wishes of the two signatories. To be useful it must be drawn in accordance with the conditions determined by the legislation of the two countries concerned, the state of their markets, a comprehension of their industrial and commercial needs, and the general trend of the commercial policy that actuates both states concerned in the treaty.

RESIGNATION OF THE VENIZELLOS CABINET

(La Nación.—October 6).

When everything led one to believe that Greece was about to form part of the group of powers who are fighting the Turco-Austro-German alliance, comes news that M. Venizelos' Cabinet has resigned. But a small majority approved his policy, and the Cabinet resigned, though another version has it that it was the King of the Hellenes who asked M. Venizelos to withdraw, on the ground that he could not support his policy. In any event, says La Nación, it can only mean that the Allies cannot for the present count on Greece to help them in their intended expedition to support Serbia, menaced by the Austro-Germans on the one side, and on the other by the Bulgars. There can be no question as to the prevailing desire of the Hellenes to go to the help of Serbia. Above and beyond the treaty binding the two countries is the fact that Greek sympathy is not with the Austro-Germans. The Greeks have not forgotten what they owe to France and England, but unfortunately their King does not think with them.

Indeed, remarks La Nación, King Constantine appears to favour Germany, probably influenced thereto by his marriage with the Kaiser's sister. Hence the dismissal of Venizelos may be regarded as a German triumph. At the same time it must not be forgotten that M. Venizelos still holds a majority, small it is true, but still sufficient to prevent a new Cabinet being formed by the King, and able to bring about a situation that may be very serious for the monarchy, whose head has doubtless not forgotten what transpired when he was Crown Prince and head of the army. The people are not always docile to their sovereigns, and at times take stern measures to recall them to their right road. Hence it would be premature to give too much weight to the resignation of the Venizelos Cabinet; the Hellenes may find it necessary to make themselves heard; may indeed find it advisable to recall the man who made greater Greece and saved the monarchy.

LONDON TO NEW YORK

WIRELESS PROGRESS DELAYED BY WAR.

Mr. Godfrey Isaacs, managing director of the Marconi Company, said yesterday to an interviewer:—

"Had it not been for the war we should now have been in communication by wireless with New York. As the outcome of successful experiments the United States Navy Department is now able to telephone from Arlington, Virginia, to Marble Island in California."

"Our experiments have been interrupted by the war and our stations are now being used for Government work; but we have carried our experiments far enough to know for a certainty that after the war we shall be able to talk to New York."

RED CROSS LECTURE

By MR. CHEVALLIER BOUTELL AT PRINCE GEORGE'S HALL.

Wed., Sept. 6

Mr. F. Chevallier Boutell's War Lecture last night at Prince George's Hall was attended by some five hundred, who had the pleasure not only of assisting at an interesting entertainment, but of feeling that they were directly benefiting the noble work of the Red Cross, of which Mr. Boutell is the Commissioner in Argentina, and who had most generously defrayed all contingent expenses for the hall lighting, attendance, etc. They also behaved better than the other 700 who should have turned up to make a full house. However, the company was select and appreciative.

The following introductory concert programme was rendered with great acceptance:—1 Pianoforte Selection, "Popular Melody," Mr. G. W. L. Huppler; 2 humorous sketch, "Singers and Songs," Mr. J. Jaye Jeffries; 3 song, "Tommy Atkins," Mr. F. F. Bideaux; 4 Song, "My heart's at thy feet," Mme. de Mello; 5 song, "Sailor's Bunkum," Mr. C. H. Soane; 6 transformations, Master F. Demortier; accompanist, Prof. F. Corbani. Mr. Huppler is an excellent pianist; Mr. J. Jaye Jeffries has the most irresponsible manner in the world when uttering the most outrageous nonsense with an air of preternatural gravity; Madame de Mello sang "My heart's at thy feet" in a truly delightful manner, with archness and abandon, and the clearest of trills, which commanded an imperative recall. Mr. Chas Soane, as the Ancient Mariner, recorded the horrid tale of shipwreck in Barking Creek, and Master F. de Mortier in "Transformations" showed precocious histrionic gifts and sang with remarkable clearness, scoring a distinct success.

The lecture and views, both lantern and biograph, covered a wide range of war subjects, showing many of the famous regiments and war implements now "familiar in our mouths as household words," which gain so much when one can thus realise their bodily presence. The new biograph, purchased by Mr. Boutell patriotically for this purpose, deserves all the fine things that have been said about it, and the lecturer deserves more for his energy and enthusiasm in working for the good cause. May he give many and highly successful repetitions. The United Club are also to be congratulated on having arranged the concert and provided for the formidable guard of Boy Scouts of the "Raven" (or was it Penguin?) Patrol, who "kept the door."

SUPPLIES FOR GERMANY

STATEMENT IN HOUSE OF COMMONS.

London, Sept. 30.

A question was asked in the House of Commons to-day by the Liberal M.P. for Houghton-le-Spring, Mr. Tom Wing, in regard to assurances that financial interests backing German manufacturers and American banks under German control would not be able to combine to evade the conditions governing concessions regarding the exportation of German goods.

The Parliamentary Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, Lord Robert Cecil, declared that he could see no possibility of evasion. The Under Secretary explained that transactions referring to such goods must have been completed before March 1st last. The stoppage of the goods, for which the purchaser is bound to take delivery on or before shipment, being therefore bound to pay for them in any event, inflicted no injury upon Germany but involved hardship to neutral purchasers only, and succeeded in doing the very thing that Britain wished to avoid.

CATTLE MARKET

ENTERED: 5,242.

Pigs 458
Prices: 18 to 30 cents per kilo.

Summary of Purchasers.

Sansinena 1,365
La Blanca 1,026
La Plata 661
Armour 431
Argentino 135

Total 3,618

Prices for Wednesday

SALES.

Juan Lalor—

From Pellegrini: 30 steers at $265, 4 at 276; from General Belgrano: 41 steers at 212, 42 do. from General Paz at 216, 10 do. from Bahia Blanca at 215, 10 do. from Chacabuco at 213; from Entre Rios: 49 steers at 206, 17 at 201; from Colon: 42 steers at 220, 26 do. from Pampa Central at 176, 44 do. from Coronel Suarez at 162, 16 do. from Giles at 187, 41 do. from Carmen de Areco at 190; from Santa Fe: 23 steers at 78.50, 22 at 87, 17 cows at 70, 14 at 64, 22 young steers at 57, 5 calves at 42; from Entre Rios 4 steers at 196, 26 at 178, 25 at 159, 14 at 140; from Rojas: 22 steers at 140; from Santa Fe: 12 cows at 171, 7 do. from Marcos Paz at 136.50; from 9 de Julio: 13 cows at 134, 4 at 105.50, 3 at 82; from Giles: 18 steers at 170, 15 at 185; from Matanzas: 42 calves at 47, 40 at 45, 28 at 38; from Entre Rios: 12 steers at 160, 4 at 132.50; from General Arenales: 7 bullocks at 209; from San Vicente: 4 cows at 54, 5 at 93.50; from Pellegrini: 4 cows at 139, 5 at 163, 5 steers at 146, 3 at 110.

Salaberry y Bercetche—

From Trenque Lauquen: 34 steers at $230; from Villegas: 9 steers at 223, 27 at 194, 1 cow at 166, 3 at 161, 1 at 122, 1 young steer at 139; from Olavarria: 50 steers at 173; from Tornquist: 16 steers at 179, 2 young steers at 140, 4 at 120, 3 at 110; from Coronel Pringles: 7 young steers at 120, 2 heifers at 147; from Lincoln: 7 steers at 158.50, 4 at 152, 11 at 130, 1 at 132, 1 at 125, 8 at 99, 2 bullocks at 83, 1 cow at 115.50, 2 heifers at 128.50, 2 at 139.50, 2 at 104.50, 3 calves at 78; from Olavarria: 18 cows at 149, 20 at 142, 17 at 146.

Pedro y Antonio Lanusse—

From Trenque Lauquen: 3 steers at $173.50, 9 at 168, 6 at 102, 1 at 96, 1 cow at 89; from Coronel Pringles: 15 cows at 131, 8 at 121.50; from Santa Fe: 5 cows at 138.50, 9 at 80, 11 steers at 147, 7 at 183, 5 calves at 14, 8 at 70, 5 at 58, 2 heifers at 119, 2 at 131.50, 6 at 65, 2 stags at 120, 4 heifers at 60, 6 at 48, 11 calves at 52, 6 young steers at 51, 15 at 58.50, 2 at 68, 7 at 67, 5 at 43.50, 13 heifers at 55, 1 stag at 117.

Julio L. Peña y Cia.—

From Tandil: 3 bullocks at $220, 4 at 110, 3 young steers at 170, 3 steers at 135; from Santa Fe: 30 steers at $120, 10 cows at 160; from Lincoln: 9 cows at 140, 7 heifers at 125, 2 at 80, 1 at 70; from Santa Fe: 6 young steers at 88, 7 calves at 62, 1 at 50; from Lincoln: 2 cows at 80, 1 at 75.

Petersen y Gutierrez—

From Cañada de Gomez: 69 steers at $195.

Bunge y Born—

From Pampa Central: 36 steers at $220.

Dubox y Rivera Ocantos—

From Lincoln: 40 steers at $144.

Accame y Bellini—

From 9 de Julio: 9 bullocks at $195, 2 steers at 160, 15 cows at 143, 6 steers at 129; from Chacabuco: 42 steers at 202; from Bragado: 11 calves at 38; from Santa Fe: 6 cows at 130.50, 10 at 162, 11 young steers at 86, 10 steers at 110, 9 calves at 52.50.

Juan Curutchet—

From Matanzas: 7 cows at $185, 12 steers at 160.

Ayarragaray S. y Gowland—

From B. Mitre: 20 steers at $195.

Ignacio Goñi e Hijos—

From Puan: 21 cows at $140; from Entre Rios: 11 young steers at 116, 7 heifers at 110, 16 bullocks at 146, 10 steers from Pellegrini at 125.

Bayona y Ferrazzini—

From Brandzen: 22 steers at $185.

Fernando Bourdieu (Hijo)—

From Arrecifes: 18 steers at $220.

Lourtet Hermanos y Cia.—

From Olavarria: 22 steers at $215.

Fortunato B. Arzeno y Hnos.—

From Pehuajó: 40 steers at $242, 10 young steers at 131.

Mihura Hermanos—

From Entre Rios: 5 steers at $230, 35 at 180, 57 at 165, 19 at 150, 6 cows at 110, 2 young steers at 95, 4 heifers at 90, 2 calves at 80.

Beltran Sansot—

From Laprida: 10 steers at $175.

J. M. Trelles—

From Alberdi: 38 steers at $227; from Caseros: 40 steers at 210.

Banco Ganadero Argentino—

From 9 de Julio: 17 steers at $215.

Estrugamou y Cia.—

From Las Heras: 35 steers at $230, 22 do. from Pehuajó at 210; from Chacabuco: 2 cows at 108, 7 young steers at 100, 5 calves at 95; from Lincoln: 5 bullocks at 250, 15 cows at 145.

Soc. Cooperativa de Hacendados—

From Pehuajó: 15 cows at $160, 9 steers at 275, 7 at 233.

Alejandro Schoo y Cia.—

From Junin: 84 steers at $235, 200 do. from Pehuajó at 220.

Gioja y Etchart—

From Carmen de Areco: 18 young steers at $115, 2 heifers at 105, 2 cows at 160; from 9 de Julio: 8 steers at $135, 2 bullocks at 112.

Santamarina e Hijos—

From Tandil: 42 steers at $226; from Trenque Lauquen: 57 steers at $215.

Cucullu y Cavo—

From Mercedes: 54 steers at $230; from D. Alvear: 22 cows at 156, 10 steers at 214.

Tomás Devoto y Cia.—

From Las Flores: 3 steers at $270, 38 do. from Navarro at 225; from Santa Fe: 11 cows at 167, 5 do. from Carlos Casares at 115.

Dodds y D. D. Ramsay—

From Tapalqué: 10 cows at $115.

Canetano Amoretti—

From Brandzen: 4 cows at $150, 5 heifers at 115; from Carmen de Areco: 2 young steers at 90, 3 calves at 48.

Enrique A. Thompson y Cia.—

From Florencio Varela: 44 steers at 250; from Colon: 46 steers at 236.

Florencio y Alfredo E. Lanus—

From Pampa Central: 24 steers at $130.

Miguel Ardohain—

From Bahia Blanca: 10 steers at $198, 9 cows at 140, 7 calves at 57.

Belloq e Hita—

From Lincoln: 21 steers at $205; from Bahia Blanca: 6 bullocks at 200, 29 steers at 180.

Delfino Hermanos—

From Pringles: 20 steers at $195, 6 cows at 150, 5 young steers at 105, 2 heifers at 100, 4 calves at 70.

Rodolfo Guillon y Cia.—

From Salto: 2 young steers at $125, 17 cows at 110.

Nicolas A. Calvo—

From Lincoln: 15 heifers at $90, 4 steers at 106.50; from Navarro: 3 cows at 151, 10 young steers at 61.50, 10 steers at 84.50; from Lincoln: 6 cows at 155, 10 steers at 197.

Bracht y Cia.—

From Entre Rios: 10 steers at $157, 3 bullocks at 190; from Carlos Casares: 3 steers at 101, 2 bullocks at 252, 4 heifers at 103, 2 calves at 55, 9 cows at 156.

TRADE MARK

BACTERIOLOGICAL INSTITUTE

LIGNIERES HERMANOS

(Adolfo Marcelo & Luis Lignieres)

Vaccine & Serums for Stock

VACCINE for CARBUNCLO, MANCHA, TRISTEZA, ENTEQUE, TUBERCULINAS, LOMBRIZ - TIFUS EQUINO. Etc., Etc.

Rats Exterminated by Virus

The Vaccine, and Serums are personally and exclusively prepared by Adolfo Marcelo and Luis Lignieres, which ensures successful results.

ORDERS AND INFORMATION TO:

748 Pueyrredon 748 - Buenos Aires

Mr. Joseph Shepherd

1 HATTON GARDENS, LONDON.

Exporter of High-Class Pedigree Animals.

HEAVY DRAUGHT-HORSES SUITABLE FOR EXPORT PURCHASED

Local Representative:

Mr. A. Machattie,

San Martin 254, Buenos Aires.

SHEEP MARKET

ENTRIES: $,053.

Local butchers 2,210
Sansinena 1,533
La Plata 1,491
La Blanca 1,191
Smithfield 635
Las Palmas 627
Argentino 458
Armour 202

Total 8,317

Prices for Wednesday

SALES.

Salaberry y Bercetche—

From A. Corti: 160 cap. frig. at $20.50, 25 cord. frig. at 9.50, 43 cord. mat. at 7.20; from Saldungaray: 85 cap. frig. at 14.30, 56 ovejas mat. at 13, 15 bgos. mat. at 10, 66 cord. mat. at 4.30.

Gabino Rodriguez—

From Estomba: 90 cap. frig. at $12.10, 123 bgos. mat. at 11.

Martinez de Hoz Hnos.—

From Chapadmalal: 55 cord. frig. at $10.30, 64 cord. mat. at 7.50, 97 cap. frig. at 18.50, 61 ovejas mat. at 17.50.

Mihura Hnos.

From E. Rios: 36 ovejas mat. at $11, 38 cord. mat. at 8, 24 at 6.

Cucullu y Cavo—

From Iriarte: 71 ovejas mat. at $23, 83 cap. frig. at 20.80.

Pedro y Antonio Lanusse—

From A. Corti: 30 ovejas mat. at $22, 60 cap. frig. at 18.50, 75 ovejas mat. at 18, 87 cap. frig. at 16.50; from Arano: 18 bgos. frig. at 14.80, 28 ovejas mat. at 16.50, 66 cord. frig. at 12.70.

Fernando L. Patroa—

From Villanueva: 35 ovejas inv. at $8.50.

Juan Terrarosa e Hijos—

From Sta. Elena: 204 cord. mat. at $5.20.

Antonio Errea e Hijos—

From Pelicurá: 91 cap. frig. at $14.10, 52 ovejas mat. at 16, 20 bgos. frig. at 13.30.

Carriguiry, Casaux y Cia.—

From Egaña: 82 cap. frig. at $16.50.

Beltran Sansot—

From Riglos: 25 cord. frig. at $12.80, 65 at 11.70, 25 cord. frig. at 9.80.

Mathieu y Cia.—

From Saldungaray: 75 cord. mat. at $7, 62 cap. frig. at 18.80, 70 ovejas mat. at 15.20.

Estrugamou y Cia.—

From Los Angeles: 320 cap. frig. at $21.80.

Francisco Ojan y Cia.—

From Pehuajó: 50 ovejas mat. at $21.50, 10 at 16, 10 cord. mat. at 8.

Coop. de Hacendados—

From Triunvirato: 110 cap. frig. at $16.00.

Ignacio Goñi e Hijos—

From Pelicurá: 72 cap. frig. at $14, 227 ovejas mat. at 14, 7 cord. mat. at 7.50.

Delfino Hnos.

From Santa Fé: 177 cap. frig. at $20.60, 45 ovejas mat. at 22.50, 119 at 18.30.

Juan Apheca y Cia.—

From Cereales: 88 cap. frig. at $16.50.

Juan Lalor—

From Ranch: 169 cap. frig. at $20.80; from De la Canal: 45 cap. mat. at 24, 115 cap. frig. at 21.80; from San Patricio: 38 cap. mat. at 19, 13 ovejas mat. at 15.50, 23 cord. frig. at 10, 30 at 8.20.

Florencio y A. E. Lanus—

From M. Riglos: 115 cord. frig. at $11.50, 15 ovejas mat. at 21.50, 41 cord. frig. at 11.50, 80 cord. mat. at 8, 84 cord. frig. at 10, 18 ovejas mat. at 26, 40 at 19.50, 65 cord. frig. at 9.30.

Miguel Ardohain—

From Cabildo: 100 cap. frig. at $16, 194 at 13.80, 65 cord. frig. at 10, 10 ovejas pel. mat. at 12, 10 bgos. frig. at 13, 160 cap. frig. at 19; from Doblas: 159 at 14.20.

José B. Casas—

From Cabildo: 110 cap. frig. at $18, 166 bgos. frig. at 14.

Nicolas A. Calvo—

From Vedia: 92 cap. frig. at $14.50, 70 cord. mat. at 8, 181 at 7.30, 170 at 6.60.

GRAIN MARKETTERMINAL CEREAL MARKET.*First Ring.

No operations.

Second Ring.

No operations.

Official Prices.

Wheat.
For October Darsena.	$11.40
For January Darsena.	9.85
Linseed.
For October Darsena.	11.45
For November Darsena.	11.55
For January Darsena.	12.10
Maize.
For October Darsena.	4.90
For November Darsena.	4.95
For December Darsena.	5.05

CHAMBER OF CEREALS QUOTATIONS.

Prices in the Bolsa de Comercio.
100 kilos waggon Darsena.
(Available).

Linseed.	11.25
Wheat for bread.	11.60
Do Barletta for Europe.	11.30
Do do for bread.	10.90
Do do (Export. Europe).	10.90
Do do (Export. Brazil).	11.30
Oats Bahia Blanca.	6.75
Yellow maize.	4.75

REGISTERED CONTRACTS.

(Delivered in Buenos Aires).

Linseed.
For January—200 tons at	$12.10.
For October—400 tons at	$11.45.
Maize.
For December—100 tons at	$5.62.

NATIONAL PRODUCE EXCHANGE.

(Rosario de Santa Fe).

First Ring.

No operations.

Second Ring.

Maize.
For November—200 tons at	$4.79.
For December—400 tons at	$4.90.

Official Prices.

Wheat.
For October.	11.50
For November.	11.50
Available.	11.50
For January.	9.90
Linseed.
For October.	10.70
For November.	10.90
Available.	10.70
For January.	11.90
Maize.
For October.	4.70
For November.	4.75
For December.	4.90
Available.	4.65
In Rosario.
Wheat No. 1.	12.05
Wheat No. 2.	nominal
Linseed.	10.90
Maize.	4.57½

BLOOD STOCK SALES AT PALERMOHARAS REYLES PRODUCTS.

There was a further continuance of the yearling horse sales at Palermo on Oct. 2, when some of the products of the Haras Reyles were put up to auction.

Most of the yearlings were sired by Le Samaritain, but the most noticeable was Penelope, by Elmstead Yerba Amarga, a peculiar coloured filly, but attractive in build and bone, with clean strong legs. She was sold to the Stud Mal Paso for $8000. Another good and promising youngster was Gonzalo de Cordoba, a grey colt by Le Samaritain—Quintasencia. He was rather expensive at $6500, given for him by the Boy Stud.

Perhaps the best colt sold was Morfeo by Le Samaritain—Secourse. A good standing, well built, and promising colt, he was bought by Mr. Edmund Fraser for $6000.

Other horses sold were:—
Condottiere, Le Samaritain—Flying Scud, $8000, sold to the Stud Montiel.

Capitilino, Le Samaritain—Santolina, $1200, sold to Señor Zabala.

Vive le Patria, Le Samaritain—Lota, $5500, sold to the Stud Amianto.

Mangredo, Elmstead—Nina, $3700, sold to the trainer Gabino Fernandez.

Cypria, Le Samaritain—Winkfield Fly, $2200, sold to the trainer, Felipe Nunez.

Gorgona, Le Samaritain—Morfinia, $2500, sold to the Florida Stud, at Montevideo.

Zanichette, Le Samaritain—Zanny, $2700, sold to Señor Juan Iralde (on commission).

OLD MAN AND ORANGE PRODUCTS.Tuesday, Oct. 5.

During the course of yesterday afternoon sales at Palermo there were quite a few decent youngsters put up by Messrs. Bullrich. The chief stock were products of Old Man and Orange. Some useful youngsters were sold. The prices ruled high and were on occasion fancy prices. Up to date, however, they were, in general, the best of the season.

A high price was paid for a brother of Deseada, Rosales and Buchardo. The colt was a black one by Orange—Borrasca and without question, a well built and clean limbed animal but, in spite of the breeding, the price was high for this country. Botalon, the name of the youngster was the best of the sale, but there were two others that were also especially attractive. These were two handsome racing looking fillies, one Miladi by Old Man—Maitresse, the other Silvia by Old Man—Silver Shot (of Carbine blood). This latter fetched $10,000 dollars and was cheap. The former sold for $11,000 which was fair and reasonable. The cheapest horse sold, not from the price alone, but from general points was a filly by Old Man—Floral (who is by Florizel II a full brother of Diamond Jubilee) and why no more than $4000 was paid for her is hard to say. She was the best and the cheapest filly sold.

Liberal, was a bargain also. A clean, nice looking colt by Old Man—La Froude, (with Neapolis and Le Sancy blood) was sold to Frazer at $7000. He will take plenty of work, but will make a good horse.

In brief, these were the best of the sale.

The animals were "hammered" as follow:—

Botalon, Orange—Borrasca, $30,000 to the Stud Orange.

Molinete, Orange—Maria, (Orbit blood) $7,900, to the Stud Mahoma.

Falseador, Orange—Filigrana, $4,500, to Luis Calistro.

Liberal (as above).

Fortin Uno, by Orange—Flecha, $5500, sold to T. Paredes.

Factotum, by Orange—Felicitas, $700, to the Stud Lowland Boy.

Desengaño, by Orange—Dark Duchess, $4500, to the Stud Peurs.

Piragna, by Old Man—Pilliwedex, $900, Stud La Posta, (sister of Pajonal).

Tarejeta, by Old Man—Traumerei, $9000, Stud Carrasco. (Montevideo), (Bend'or blood), a good filly.

Brecha, by Old Man—Bay Wreath, (Minting blood), $6000, to the Stud Federal.

La Tentación, by Old Man—L'etranger, $8000, Stud Sans Peu, a sister of Gringuito, (weak boned).

Miladi, as above, $11,000, to Sr. Guerrico, (a bargain).

Realeza, by Old Man—Reticence, (sister to Retiro), Isonomy blood, $10,000, Stud Los Rosales.

Fabula, by Old Man—Floral, as above, $4000.

Salvia, by Old Man—Silver Shot, as above, Stud Los Rosales, $17,000.

Panama Canal TroublesGOVERNOR RECOMMENDS CLOSING FOR ONE MONTH.

New York, Oct. 5.

Lieutenant-Colonel Harding, who is in charge of the Panama Canal, has officially recommended that in consequence of recent landslips in the Culebra cutting the canal should be closed until November 1st, as it will be impossible to clear the passage before that date.

PHILIP & CARRUTHERS

Camp and Live Stock Agents

Calle Cangallo 456

BUENOS AIRES

U.T. 3881 Avenida

WANTED : Heavy Horses
suitable for Exportation.

On Sale : Imported and Camp Bulls of all Breeds, Rams, Pigs, etc.

MEAT EXPORTS

Las Palmas Produce Company advise shipment by Vauban to New York of 2152 fore and 2148 hind quarters chilled beef. By the Highland Pride to London they have sent 5513 carcasses of frozen mutton, 900 of frozen lamb, 538 fore and 357 hind quarters frozen beef, and 1382 fore and 1381 hind quarters chilled beef. The same company sent to New York by the Vauban 2152 fore quarters and 2148 hind quarters of chilled beef.

La Blanca Company have despatched by s.s. Harmonides to Liverpool 5114 quarters of frozen beef.

La Plata Cold Storage Company have sent to New York by the Vauban 15,106 quarters of frozen beef.

Las Palmas Produce Company advise despatch by Zinal from Campana for Liverpool of 4,479 fore and 4,316 hind quarters of frozen beef.

The Smithfield and Argentine Meat Company, Ltd., advise despatch for London by the Highland Laddie of 702 fore and 736 hind quarters of chilled beef.

The Sansinena Meat Company have despatched to Liverpool by the Deseado 2796 quarters of frozen beef. By the Highland Laddie the same company has sent to London 776 carcasses of frozen lamb and 1623 quarters of chilled beef. The La Blanca Company have sent to London by the Highland Laddie 4391 quarters of chilled beef. By the Deseado for Liverpool the same Company have despatched 1797 carcasses of mutton and 8473 quarters of frozen beef.

The Armour Frigorifico has sent by the Highland Laddie to London 658 fore and 543 hind quarters, and 1255 chilled fores with 1244 hind quarters.

Las Palmas Produce Company has sent to Liverpool by the Highland Laird 3633 fore and 3626 hind quarters of frozen beef.

By the Highland Laddie to London the same firm have sent 2519 frozen mutton, 498 fore and 348 hind quarters frozen beef, 1790 fore and 2010 hind quarters chilled beef.

W. & R. LEGGOTT, Ltd.,

(BRADFORD)

Locks and Padlocks

Padlocks in sets, with master keys.

ESPECIALLY SUITABLE for ESTANCIAS

Sole Agents for Argentina and Uruguay:

CHARLES D. FOWLER & CO.,

Buenos Aires: Montevideo:
Chacabuco 431 — Piedras 412.

SALE OF IMPORTED SHORTHORNS

Yesterday afternoon the Messrs. A. Bullrich and Co. disposed of that select consignment of imported Shorthorns, the property of Srs. J. and I. Rawes, when a fair selling trade was experienced for the 18 animals offered. The top price was $5000 paid for a most fleshy dark roan, which at that figure passed into the ownership of Sr. Villafina. Trade was by no means animated; yet the satisfactory average of $2650 was obtained for the bulls sold.

SALE OF IMPORTED LINCOLNS

A handsome lot of 15 imported Lincoln rams, the property of Sr. A. T. Pears, were sold by the Messrs. Bullrich yesterday afternoon, when the satisfactory average of $330 was obtained for the 15 rams sold. This sale was unfortunately held after the bulls and a number of horses had been disposed of, and in consequence many prospective purchasers had left the yards. This lot of sheep were very good specimens of the breed and well shown.

BRITISH BANK DIVIDEND

The British and South American Bank have advice from the London Office that a dividend for the half year of 4 shillings per share, making 8 per cent. per annum will be paid. To Staff Pension and Guarantee Fund are placed £9800; written off investments, $75,000; and, balance carried to new account, £133,887.

LIGHTING ECONOMY$35,000 PER MONTH SAVED.

Further economies are being made in the lighting service.

From October 19, the Lighting Department will take charge of the care and changing of carbons in arc lamps. The present lessees have been charging the city $11.80 per lamp, and as it is hoped to reduce this to $6.50 or $7, a monthly saving of $35,000 will be effected. This sounds like sense as well as economy.

EARTHQUAKE IN BRITAINPANIC IN SOLWAY DISTRICT.

London, Oct. 2.

This morning a slight earthquake occurred in the Solway district causing no damage. In the afternoon new tremors were felt, causing a panic throughout a wide area.

PASSENGER LISTS

S.S. HIGHLAND LADDIE.

The Nelson Liner Highland Laddie sailed from La Plata homeward bound to London. Among the saloon passengers are: Mr. Andrew Campbell, Mr. D. C. Bruce, Mr. Tho. M. Deke, Mr. William Grieve Ewart, Mr. A. C. N. Wilcox, Mrs. Ada Ogdon, Master Robert Ogdon, Mr. C. East, Mr. W. Jamcey, etc.

S.S. HIGHLAND LOCH.

The Nelson Liner Highland Loch arrived on Sunday from London. Among the saloon passengers were: Mrs. Frederica Warwick Parker, Miss F. Patricia Parker, Miss Lucy Wallace, Miss Milicent Percival, Miss Mildred A. Glendining, Miss Frances E. M. Glendining, Mrs. Jane A. Hunter de Colville, Mr. Henry Ben. Thes. Von Castelberg, Mr. Robert H. Baker, Mrs. Anita Maroia Baker, Master Robert E. Baker, Master Luis A. Baker, and Master Walter E. Baker, etc.

R.M.S.P. AMAZON.

The following passengers arrived on Oct. 5 by the R.M.S.P. Amazon—

Dr. C. Azambuja, Dr. R. Azambuja, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Aylesworth, Mr. J. Andrieux, Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Bell, Misses M. I. and D. W. Bell, Mr. G. Japote Briand, Mr. E. T. Beckwith, Mr. and Mrs. J. Batalla and Miss L. Batalla, Dr. S. G. Beyrue, Mr. F. C. Branco, Mr. W. R. Cureton, Miss G. Graig, Mr. H. Coffey, Mr. V. Denis, Mr. G. Finkle, Mr. C. H. Fuller and Miss M. Fuller, Mr. H. R. P. Gunther, Mr. E. Gatti, Mr. C. Cleditsch, Miss M. Grazioli, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Gostling, Miss S. Grosman, Mr. and Mrs. A. Gerand, Mr. C. Gomez, Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Hopkins, Miss G. Hopkins, Mr. V. Hopkins, Mr. S. J. Hughes, Mr. O. H. Holton, Mr. A. Holland, Mr. W. Jenes, Miss M. Kingdom, Mr. B. Laycock, Mr. G. Lynch, Mrs. C. T. de Lopez, Mr. A. J. Mora, Mr. J. E. Nagington, Mr. L. Nagington, Miss L. Pratt, Mr. H. C. Poelzon, Mr. J. Roscoe, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Rowland, Miss G. Rowland, Mr. A. J. Ross, Miss J. L. Smith, Mr. L. E. Solomon, Mr. C. R. Smidt, Mr. C. J. M. Scallon, Mr. T. Throughton, Mr. A. Tuddenham, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Tramlett, Mr. D. H. Whitehead, Mr. C. Hay-Walter, Mrs. A. E. Zapata and Miss L. Zapata.

FOUR NEW VESSELS FOR THE MEAT TRADE

THE PROGRESS OF THE CHARGEURS REUNIS

The French Shipping Company, known as the Chargeurs Reunis, which has a considerable fleet of cargo vessels, trading between Havre and the River Plate, have at the moment under construction four new steamers of the "Malte" class. These vessels which are larger than others of their fleet are destined for the frigorifico trade, and are specially constructed for this purpose, as it is believed that a very considerable increase in meat shipments to Europe, will be noticed in coming months. The Chargeurs Reunis was founded in 1872 for the purpose of trading with Spain, Portugal, Brazil, and the River Plate. They commenced operations with eight vessels of some 14,000 tons in all, and have since added many more. They were the first firm to build vessels especially for the meat trade, for which purpose, the "Belgrano," "San Martin" and "Portefio" were the first vessels of their class.

From this small beginning the company now possesses 37 vessels of a total tonnage of 250,000, and with the four new vessels now under construction, the fleet will equal 41 ships of 298,000 tons in all.

HOMEWARD FIXTURES

HOMEWARD CHARTERS.

The following vessels (says the "Times of Argentina") were fixed during last week to load homeward: S.s. Otoy, 5060, 10 o/o, pr. San Lorenzo, U.K., grain, 60/-; S.s. —, 3700, 10 o/o, Oct. Buenos Aires, U.K., grain, 60/-; S.s. Southwaite, 5300, 10 o/o, pr. San Lorenzo, U.K., grain, 62/6; S.s. Don Arturo, 5200, 10 o/o, pr. Buenos Aires, U.K., grain, 58/9; S.s. Kassala, 5300, 10 o/o, pr. San Lorenzo, U.K., grain, 62/6; S.s. Trevesa, 5200, 10 o/o, pr. Buenos Aires, U.K., grain, 60/-; S.s. Amor, 4100, 10 o/o, pr. San Lorenzo, Mediterranean, grain, 58/-; S.s. Chile, 5000, 10 o/o, pr. San Lorenzo, Mediterranean, grain, 58/-; S.s. —, 4500, 10 o/o, 15 Nov. can. San Lorenzo, U.K., grain, 62/6; S.s. North Pacific, 7000, 10 o/o, pr. San Lorenzo, New York, linseed, 3/-; S.s. Zeno, 3800, 10 o/o, pr. San Lorenzo, U.K., grain, 62/6; S.s. Lundy, 4500, 10 o/o, pr. San Lorenzo, U.K., grain, 62/6; S.s. Othen Stathatos, 4600, pr. San Lorenzo, U.K., grain, 60/-.

THE LATE MR. ALFRED HOULDER

The shipping community in the City of London has lost one of its most valued members through the death of Mr. Alfred Houlder, which took place suddenly on Friday, July 30. Mr. Houlder was at his office, and apparently in his usual health, on the previous day, but on the Friday, while taking an early morning walk, he was smitten with apoplexy, and an hour later he had passed away. A son of the late Mr. Alfred Houlder, senr., he was a managing director of Messrs. Houlder Brothers and Co., Limited, and of the Houlder Line, Limited, for a number of years, but in 1908 he severed his connection with these undertakings, afterwards becoming a director of Houlder, Middleton and Co., Limited. He was 58 years of age.

CAPTURED BY THE HUNS.

The German Navy has for once been able to bring off a legitimate act of warfare against a merchant steamer, one of their torpedo-boats having captured the Belgian steamer Ambiorix off Skanoer (Falsterbo) and taken her as a prize to Swinemunde, where she has been condemned. This vessel, which had sheltered at Karlsrona since the beginning of the war, was making an attempt to reach Gothenburg, when fate overtook her in the form of an enemy war-vessel. The Ambiorix was owned by Messrs. Boys and Gylsen, Ltd., of Antwerp, whose fleet has already suffered several losses from war risks. Built in 1909, of 1,444 tons gross, she is insured in London against marine risks on a value of £16,000. At the time of capture she had no cargo on board.

THE PENHALE CASE

THE D.K.D. AND THE C.A.T.E.

(To the Editor).

Sir.—I have to thank "Correspondent" for his courteous correction. He is correct in saying that the coal ex s.s. Penhale goes to the D.K.D. They again, if I mistake not, are supplying the C.A.T.E. I repeat that the question of the tugs is a very small matter, and the safety of the ship is fully guaranteed by the fact that, supposing the tugs were to put her in jeopardy, damages would fall on the towing company. So much for the material danger. I am unable to estimate the amount of "moral" risk the average tramp steamer runs through passing its hawsers to a German-Argentine tug. Perhaps "Correspondent," who is evidently a firm believer in the "guerre de boutique," will be able and willing to throw some light on this point.

Yours, etc.,

SUPPORTER.

THE MAILS.

TO ARRIVE IN OCTOBER.

- 8.—Spanish by INFANTA ISABEL.
- 9.—Dutch by GELRIA.
- 8.—Italian by CORDOVA.
- 10.—North American by VERDI.

TO LEAVE IN OCTOBER.

- 9.—Brazil, Senegal and France by PROVENCE. Mails close at 8 a.m.
- 12.—Brazil, Senegal, Greece, Egypt and Italy by CORDOVA. Mails close at 8 a.m. Double postage at Port.
- 12.—Brazil, Australasia, South Africa, Canaries, France, Great Britain, Italy, Portugal and Spain by LEON XIII. Mails close at 2 p.m. Double postage until 7 p.m.
- 12.—London direct by HIGHLAND LOCH. Mails close at 8 a.m. Double postage until 4 p.m.
- 14.—Central and North American by VASARI. Mails close at 8 a.m. Double postage until 4 p.m.
- 15.—Brazil and Europe by GELRIA. Mails close at 2 p.m. Double postage at Port.

NOTE.—Letters only may be posted in the port for transmission by Italian, Dutch, and Spanish mail steamers, with double postage from closing time at G.P.O., until 10 minutes before departure of steamer. A temporary P. O. will be opened in the Galpon nearest the steamer for that purpose.

SHIPPING NOTES.

NEW ORLEANS HAS NEW LINE TO BRAZIL AND ARGENTINA.

Under date Sept. 1, the U. S. A. Commercial Agent forwarded the Department of Commerce the following report on the proposed New Orleans-South American steamship service:—"The Caribbean and Southern Steamship Company, Inc., announced this week the establishment of a regular steamship service from New Orleans to Brazil and the Argentine. The first sailing will be that of the Peter H. Crowell. This service opens up a new market for New Orleans and vicinity, for heretofore all freight from this port to Brazil has had to go via New York. New Orleans rivals New York as a coffee importing port, but has been on the triangular route system, vessels carrying cotton or other cargo from here to Europe and taking manufactured goods thence to Brazil. Only a few weeks ago an inquiry for cypress forwarded by one of the bureau's special agents from Brazil could not be utilised here because of lack of steamship connections. At present, several inquiries from Brazil for box shooks are directly affected by this announcement. The Caribbean and Southern Steamship Company, Inc., is an outgrowth of the Seeberg Line, reorganised and with increased capital. The Seeberg Line has been operating a Caribbean service out of Mobile and New Orleans with headquarters in Mobile. It is understood that New Orleans will be the home port of the new company."

PLAN VALPARAISO LINE.

Dr. L. S. Rowe, of the University of Pennsylvania, who is making a tour or South American countries in an effort to promote trade between them and the United States, held his final conferences on August 25 with the Chilean Minister of Finance and the high commission appointed in accordance with resolutions passed at the recent Pan-American conferences in Washington. Dr. Rowe will go to Callao, Peru, and proceed to Lima for conferences with the Peruvian high commission. Thence he will go to Panama.

At the conferences referred to, plans were submitted for fast steamship communication between Valparaiso and New York. A new parcel post arrangement and the subject of a 2-cent letter rate also were discussed.

Buenos Aires Herald

Weekly Illustrated Edition

CORRIENTES 672

Proprietor: THOMAS BELL.

All communications for the Editorial Department should be addressed to The Editor. Business letters should be addressed to The Manager. It is particularly requested that correspondence of an editorial or business nature should not be addressed to Mr. Bell, or to anyone personally, otherwise delay and inconvenience will result.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

WEEKLY.

Town or Camp:

Yearly $ 14 00
Half yearly. " 7 50
Quarterly. " 4 00

Other Countries:

Yearly (£1.13s.0d.) . . . $ 19.00 m/l
Half-yearly (17s.6d.) . . . " 10.00 "
Quarterly (9s.7d.) . . . " 5.50 "

DAILY.

Town or Camp:

Yearly. $ 20.00 m/l
Half-yearly. " 11.00 "
Quarterly. " 6.00 "
Per month. " 2.00 "

Other Countries:

Per annum (£3.7s.3d.) . . $ 38.50 m/l
POST FREE; PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.

BIRTH.

McCALL.—On September 28th, to Mr. and Mrs. Robert Mc Call, of Olavarria, F.C.S., a daughter. m3

ECCLESTON.—To Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Eccleston, on 4th inst., at 3127 Juramento, Belgrano, a daughter, to be called Laura Kathryn. m5

PEPYS.—On September 4th, 1915, at 25 Pulteney Road, Bath, the wife of the Rev. Canon Pepys, of a daughter. 231 m7

MARRIAGE.

MACDONALD-SMITH. — At Buenos Aires, on the 6th October, Angus Macdonald, La Oriental, Chubut, to Jeanie Little, younger daughter of James Smith, Auctioneer, Peebles, Scotland. 250 m7

DEATHS.

BLYTH.—On 29th August, killed in action near Ypres, Dennis Carleton Blyth, 2nd Lieut. Royal Engineers, aged 23, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Carleton Blyth, formerly of Rosario de Santa Fe, and late of this city. 221 m7

CASSELLS.—Killed in action. Captain Hugh Kennedy Cassels, age 23, son of Mr. W. R. Cassels and the late Elvina Tulla de Cassels. 200 m6

McGAREY.—Friends of Mr. L. S. McGarey, the young American engineer resident here a few years ago, will be very sorry to hear of his death on August 21st while undergoing operation in the Samaritan Hospital, Zanesville, Ohio, U.S.A. 249 m7

UDNY.—On the 5th of October, 1915, at Calle San Martin 689, Edward Ryan Udney, aged 59 years.

WYNTER.—At London, on Tuesday, 5th October, 1915, from wounds received in action at Loos on 27th September, Captain Cecil Donville Wynter, Irish Guards, late manager of the estancia "Sol de Mayo."

BAHIA BLANCA SHIPPING.

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT].

October 3.

Ingeniero White:—

Boyne, loading for Dreyfus and Co. Enxinos, finished discharging coal and awaiting orders.

Baron Baeyons, loading at elevators.

Monie T., discharging timber for Hardcastle and Co.

Silksworth Hall, loading at elevators for various.

Port Galvan:—

Sabia, loading for Rio.

Port Militar:—

Penlee, discharging coal for the Government.

Buenos Aires Herald

ILLUSTRATED WEEKLY EDITION

39th Year. New Series, No. 587

Buenos Aires, Friday, October 15th, 1915

Price 30 Cents

CAMPAIGN FOR CONSCRIPTION

Cabinet Ministers Seek to Compel Government Decision.

LLOYD GEORGE AND CHURCHILL DEMAND COMPULSORY SERVICE.

"Westminster Gazette" Warns the People

London, Oct. 13.

At a Cabinet meeting of special importance the members in favour of conscription demanded an early decision on the question of compulsory service.

The measure was principally supported by Messrs. Churchill and Lloyd George; but it was also taken up by Lord Selborne, Lord Lansdowne and Messrs. Bonar Law, Long, and Chamberlain.

DANGER OF A CABINET CRISIS.

The supporters of the measure hope to obtain the unanimous vote of the Cabinet; otherwise there will be resignations, and a Cabinet crisis.

KITCHENER WITH THE CONSCRIPTIONISTS?

The "Daily News" says that the Ministers in favour of conscription believe that Lord Kitchener is more inclined to favour the step than he was a month ago. They think that if the Government were to announce conscription at the present juncture, when the war in the Balkans is beginning, it would have a striking effect on the military situation.

COMMISSION ON DARDANELLES VENTURE DEMANDED.

Several Liberal M.P.'s are urging the Government to appoint a Commission to investigate the circumstances under which the Dardanelles expedition was commenced and the manner in which it has been conducted; but it is doubtful whether the Government will consent to it.

"THERE MUST BE NO SHRINKING."

The "Westminster Gazette," which has hitherto opposed compulsion, warns the public that the plans designed to keep up the strength of the British armies in the Dardanelles and on the Anglo-Belgian frontier, may not be adequate to meet the demands of three fronts. The paper adds that more men and munitions will probably be wanted, but there must be no shrinking from the logical consequences of the Government's decision to embark on this undertaking.

M. Delcasse Resigns

"ILL HEALTH" ALLEGED.

Paris, Oct. 13.

M. Delcassé, the French Minister of Foreign Affairs, whose illness was recently reported, has presented his resignation.

POINCARÉ ACCEPTS THE RESIGNATION.

Paris, Oct. 13.

President Poincaré has accepted the resignation of M. Theophile Delcassé, the state of whose health is giving rise to some anxiety.

The Press expresses much regret over the retirement of the distinguished statesman.

"GOTT STRAFE DELCASSE."

Amsterdam, Oct. 13.

The Berlin papers, commenting on the resignation of the French Foreign Minister, M. Delcassé, profess to consider it a significant event, which should not be allowed to pass unnoticed.

M. Delcassé is held to be the person chiefly responsible for the war. He was equalled by his zeal against Germany only by Grand Duke Nicholas of Russia, and it is a significant fact that both have now fallen from their high positions, showing that their respective countries have now formed a correct idea of the military and diplomatic situation.

France's Foreign Policy

IS THERE A CABINET "SPLIT"?

Paris, Oct. 13.

A semi-official statement was issued earlier in the day attributing the retirement of M. Delcassé from the Foreign Office solely to ill health, but this version of the incident has been challenged. The Chamber of Deputies took the view that there had been differences of opinion between M. Delcassé and other members of the Cabinet, although the President of the Council declared formally that there had been no discord between the Foreign Minister and other heads of the Government upon the foreign policy of the nation.

In announcing the resignation of M. Delcassé to the Chamber, M. Viviani said that the Minister first offered his letter of resignation upon his return from his recent trip to England, and again offered it last night.

At this point there were cries from various parts of the Chamber of "Read the letter!" while from other parts there were cries of "No, no!"

M. Viviani answered, "No one can oblige me to read the letter. I affirm that no discord occurred. All decisions in the Council were taken in perfect accord. I have nothing more to say to the Chamber." The President of Council then took his seat.

Professor Painlevé said that it saddened him to hear the Premier refer in veiled language to divergences between the Foreign Minister and the Cabinet. Professor Painlevé, who spoke as President of the Committee of Foreign Affairs, also in the names of the Presidents of the Army and Navy Committees, said:—

"I do not take the responsibility for the expedition to Salonica. It is the Government which has undertaken it. France has undertaken some engagements, that I cannot deny. It is therefore simply a question of co-ordinating our military efforts in order to spare the blood of our soldiers."

Professor Painlevé went on to say that the Chamber was entitled to explanations from the Government upon the measures taken for making the French armies effective upon all the fronts. He also referred to the Balkans and the importance of the relation of the German campaign to M. Delcassé's resignation.

The incident has caused widespread comment in diplomatic and Parliamentary quarters owing to the prominent part taken by the ex-Foreign Minister in shaping the foreign policy of the Government since the first months of the war. His retirement at this particular moment when the Balkan crisis is acute has caused surprise, although those who are closely identified with Governmental affairs were not entirely unprepared for the change.

The Government, at to-day's Cabinet Council, determined to hold itself ready to answer inquiries in the Chamber of Deputies this afternoon, and it was decided that M. Viviani should then for the first time speak as President and Minister of Foreign Affairs relative to the Balkan question.

A United France

PROPOSED NATIONAL ASSEMBLY.

Paris, Oct. 12.

It is announced that next Thursday there will be discussed a scheme for the amalgamation of Senate and Deputies into one National Assembly for the duration of the war.

Advocates of the proposal hold that by its adoption greater unity will be conferred upon the Legislative Council, and the complications arising from the debates in two separate Houses will be avoided.

Raid on Ghent

EXTENSIVE DAMAGE CAUSED BY ALLIES' AIRMEN.

Amsterdam, Oct. 12.

The "Echo Belge" states that Allied aeroplanes attacked and destroyed all the hangars and their contents in the German aerodrome at Ghent.

Colonials for Europe

INDIANS, CANADIANS, AND AUSTRALIANS.

London, Oct. 12.

The British Government is considering the question of bringing over fresh contingents of Australians, New Zealanders and Indians to increase the effective strength of the forces now in Europe.

TRANSPORTS AT ALGECIRAS.

Madrid, Oct. 12.

A communication from Algeciras reports the arrival of numerous British troop transports with reinforcements, and states that more are expected.

The British Admiralty is keeping a specially vigilant guard over the Straits of Gibraltar.

One Million Sterling Weekly

BRITAIN'S PAYMENT TO WIVES AND CHILDREN OF THE TROOPS.

London, Oct. 13.

It was stated in the House of Commons yesterday that the British Government is paying weekly over £1,000,000 to the wives and children of the men at the front.

Cotton as Contraband

STATEMENT BY SIR EDWARD GREY.

London, Oct. 12.

During to-day's session of the House of Commons, Sir Edward Grey announced that all kinds of cotton used in making explosives would be declared contraband of war.

GERMAN POSITIONS UNTENABLE

Probability of Retirement in Flanders

BRITISH SUBMARINES RETALIATE ON PIRATES

Baltic Routes Almost Closed to German Shipping

Amsterdam, Oct. 13.

The "Telegraaf" has received a message from Ghent which says that the Duke of Wurtemberg has moved his headquarters from Thielt to Ghent.

This is believed to foreshadow the retirement of the entire German extreme right to the railway line connecting Ostend, Roulers, Menin and Lille, about fifteen miles back.

The present line has been made untenable in places by the British and French domination of the railway serving several sectors.

THE FIGHT FOR TAHURE.

Paris, Oct. 13.

An official report of the fighting in the Champagne region on the 8th inst., which has been published by the War Office, says:—

"On the date in question the troops which on September 25 had reached the slopes of Tahure hill made a flank attack on the enemy's defences which a frontal attack had failed to take. The manoeuvre was notably successful, the positions being captured one after another.

"On the height known as "Tete du Sud," which had remained in the hands of the Germans, the defenders clung tenaciously to their trenches, and it was found necessary to employ more drastic methods to dislodge them. First of all a mine charged with 22,000 kilogrammes of explosive, laid along a distance of 80 metres destroyed a German trench. After this the ground held by the enemy was plastered by missiles from our heavy trench guns. At the same time his communication galleries were shelled day and night and the occupants raked by the machine guns.

"After some days the resistance of the Germans began to weaken. His losses had been too heavy. The survivors fled, and when we entered the defence works we found amid the mangled corpses forty-three wounded men who had been left to their fate. The wrecked trenches were piled up with rifles and ammunition. The defence had cost the Germans at least a battalion. We captured prisoners belonging to three different regiments.

"Further north, between Tahure and the La Goutte gully, the 8th inst. was marked by a similarly successful encounter.

"Early in the morning some of our battalions attacked and took the German positions. Our troops were rejoiced to find in them quantities of preserves, cigars, provisions of all kinds and a supply of ammunition for the 105 guns.

"A German battalion was caught by the fire of our artillery. Several companies broke up and dispersed in disorder, while others, cut off by a turning movement, surrendered. The whole action was carried out with rapidity and our losses were small."

SPLENDID FRENCH ARTILLERY FIRE.

Paris, Oct. 13.

The "Echo de Paris" states that when the Germans delivered their counter-attack to the south of Loos three regiments of German infantry were destroyed by the fire of the French artillery.

After the battle the French infantry soldiers rushed to the batteries and embraced the artillerymen.

GERMAN FAILURE IN THE VOSGES

Paris, Oct. 13.

The following official communiqué was published to-day:—

"Artillery action on both sides last night was particularly intense between the Somme and the Oise, in the Andreehy region, and to the east of Rheims towards Moronvilliers.

"The enemy's batteries violently cannonaded the region south of Tahure and east of Butte-de-Mesnil.

"Our artillery replied efficaciously, progressing meanwhile from trench to trench east of the Trapéze works."

Another despatch says:—

"There has been fairly active trench fighting in the Flirey sector, and more violent, with the occasional participation of the artillery of both sides, round Reillon.

"In the Vosges district, the enemy, after the entire failure of his attack on the Linge and Schratzmaennele front, renewed his effort at the close of day, preceded by an artillery preparation.

"The renewal of the attack along the whole front was followed by a fresh infantry assault which, on the whole, fared no better than the former. The Germans only succeeded in gaining a foot at one point south of the Linge pass, occupying our first line of trench on a front of 60 to 80 metres; and an immediate counter-attack on our part recovered part of the ground lost.

"A squadron of nineteen aviators bombed the Achiet-le-Grand bifurcation near Bapaume."

Allies' New Loan

THE CRITICS REBUKED.

London, Oct. 13.

The "Daily Chronicle" reproves those members of Parliament who raised objections to the interest chargeable on the Franco-British loan raised in the United States without taking into consideration the exceptional circumstances, and the reasonable conditions imposed as to repayment.

The paper considers that such actions show ingratitude towards the American capitalists who have at this moment been loyal friends to the British and have displayed their readiness to place their funds at the disposal of England if circumstances should require it.

More Munitions Needed

OUTPUT MUST BE INCREASED.

London, Oct. 13.

Military circles in London consider that in view of the new campaign in which British troops are to take part, the question of munitions assumes an aspect of increasing importance. It is held to be indispensable to adopt extraordinary measures to increase the output, even at the risk of eliciting remonstrances from the proprietors of the factories. In these views it is understood that the Minister of Munitions, Mr. Lloyd George, fully concurs.

WAR ON THE PIRATES

Britain Retaliates Against German Shipping

SUCCESSES IN THE BALTIC

Stockholm, Oct. 13.

The activity of the British submarines in the southern Baltic has virtually paralysed the lively mercantile trade between Sweden and Germany. All along the Swedish coast the steamships are being stopped. Submarines are frequently reported to be in the tracks followed by the big German ships.

Within the last twenty-four hours five vessels of considerable tonnage have been sunk. There were the Littlea, Germania, Nicodemia, Guthrune and another, the name of which is unknown.

The Germania was chased ashore by a shot from Submarine E 19. When the crew returned after hastily abandoning the steamship it was found that she had been boarded by British sailors and partly demolished by a charge of dynamite.

There are reports to-night of more German ships having been torpedoed. The ferry boats of the Swedish state railways from Trelleborg to Sanonitz have been replaced by reserve steamships.

BRITISH SUBMARINE'S SUCCESS.

London, Oct. 13.

A British submarine has attacked and sunk the German steamer Walter Leonard in the Baltic Sea. The crew were rescued.

BRITISH SUBMARINE'S SUCCESS IN THE BALTIC.

Petrograd, Oct. 9.

It is officially announced that a British submarine sank by cannonading a German transport in the Baltic Sea near the coast of Germany.

Reinforcements for Allies

PREPARATORY TO OFFENSIVE ON ALL FRONTS.

New York, Oct. 12.

A despatch from London announces that the Allies are organising new army corps for the various fronts so as to avoid the necessity of withdrawing troops from the more important points. The work is proceeding in France, Britain and Italy, and it is expected that within a few weeks there will be at their disposal sufficient troops to commence new offensive operations on all lines.

50,000 Shells

FIRE INTO BELGRADE.

London, Oct. 12.

The "Morning Post" publishes a despatch from Athens which states that the Teuton invaders threw over 50,000 shells into Belgrade, the hospitals, churches and synagogues being all destroyed. Many families were buried in the ruins.

The French artillery took part in the defence of the city, and the British, with several heavy guns, inflicted great losses upon the Germans and sank two monitors in the Danube.

Will Not Fight Russia

STATEMENT BY BULGARIAN RESERVISTS IN GREECE.

Paris, Oct. 12.

It is reported from Athens that all the Bulgarian reservists residing in Greece declare that they will desert sooner than fight against Russia.

CARSON RESIGNS

Disagreement with Colleagues

OVER CAMPAIGN IN SERBIA

London, Oct. 13.

The Attorney-General, Sir Edward Carson, has tendered his resignation owing to differences with his colleagues of the Cabinet over the campaign in Serbia.

Attack on Maidos

ALLIES' SUCCESSSES AT THE DARDANELLES.

London, Oct. 13.

Great activity prevails among the Allies in the Dardanelles. The big battleships have opened fire on Maidos, the further side of the Narrows.

The bombardment is seen to be very effective, loud explosions and conflagrations being produced by the showers of shells.

Simultaneously with the naval bombardment, the forces which have been landed at Anzac Cove and Suvla Bay are advancing on Maidos. It would appear that a plan for a combined attack by sea and land is being put into execution with great energy and activity.

TURKS RETREAT AFTER STERN STRUGGLE.

London, Oct. 13.

Desperate fighting is going on at this moment on the Gallipoli peninsula. The British have attacked the Turkish positions, and have captured several positions in spite of the determined resistance of the enemy. The ground is strewn with heaps of killed and wounded.

The Turks have brought up reinforcements and attempted to counter-attack, but were checked and compelled to retreat after a grim struggle.

The British losses are stated to have been unimportant.

Contraband for Germany

SMUGGLING THROUGH HOLLAND

Paris, Oct. 13.

It is reported from Amsterdam that the Netherlands Government has discovered the existence of a gang of men who are employed in smuggling contraband of war into Germany, making use of false passports. Seven soldiers belonging to the garrison of Zewnaar have been arrested.

A sensation has been caused at La Hague by an accusation brought by the "Telegraaf" against the Dutch Colonial Minister, that he has on frequent occasions authorised the introduction of tin into Germany without the knowledge of his colleagues in the Cabinet.

Blockade of Bulgarian Ports

ESTABLISHED BY ALLIED FLEETS.

London, Oct. 13.

The Allied fleets have established a blockade of the Bulgarian ports in the Aegean, where important operations are about to commence.

It is known that the British Government is developing a vast plan of campaign for the defence of Serbia and to defeat the machinations of the Central Empires in the Balkans. Reliance is placed upon the assistance which the Russian forces will be able to afford to Serbia.

IMPORTANT RUSSIAN VICTORY

60,000 Austrians Completely Demoralised

LAST LINE DEFENCES ON STRIPA RIVER PIERCED.

Complete Defeat of the Germans in Galicia

Petrograd, Oct. 13.

The last line of the Austrian defences on the Stripa river have been pierced by the Russians, who have gained an important victory which will compel General von Linsingen to regroup his forces to the southeast.

The Austrian fortress was taken by storm and three divisions of Austrian troops, or about 60,000 men, were thrown into a state of complete demoralisation.

RUSSIANS SUCCESSFUL AT MANY POINTS.

Petrograd, Oct. 13.

An official report issued to-day by the War Office says:—

"On our west front a squadron of German seaplanes flying over the Gulf of Riga was driven off by our destroyers.

"In the Tukum district our Ilyamrometz aeroplane threw scores of bombs on a German artillery transport column.

"In the Dvinsk region desperate fighting continues near the village of Dubelichky, northwest of Ilouust. The Germans succeeded in occupying part of our trenches. The fight has not ceased.

"Near Lautzeshei, northwest of Novo Alexandrovsk, our artillery dispersed the Germans. The fire of our artillery also forced them to abandon their trenches and the village of Jorjok, south of Lake Demmen, under cover of a fog. Our troops yesterday, without firing a shot, suddenly attacked the enemy near the southern end of Lake Demmen, captured three lines of his trenches and took prisoners and machine guns.

"Near Greesenthal, north of Lake Drisitate, we gained a success, also taking prisoners. Our aviators assisting the field troops threw fifty bombs in the enemy's lines in front of Lakes Medun and Drisitate.

"South of Lake Obgle our troops crossed the Prorvaand captured the villages of Rudzi, Golovitch and Gavransi. They also occupied a village on the northern end of Lake Boginskoie.

"Near the Oginski canal the enemy attempted to advance at some points, but were everywhere repulsed.

"Southwest of Ainsk the Germans were attacked and dislodged at the point of the bayonet from the village of Kohora. They fled in disorder, and suffered heavy losses from the fire of our machine guns."

GERMAN ROUT IN GALICIA.

Petrograd, Oct. 13.

It is officially announced that the Russians in their pursuit of the Germans across the Stripa captured 60 officers and over 2,000 men.

The Germans are in full retreat, followed by General Ivanoff in the direction of the Zlota river.

Along a front of fifty miles the Russians have advanced thirty miles in three days, crossing the Stripa and continuing the pursuit of the enemy. The defeat of the Germans in Galicia is complete.

Reform for Russia

CONCESSIONS TO ALL CLASSES.

Petrograd, Oct. 13.

The new Coalition of the majorities in the Duma and the Imperial Council adopted, prior to the prorogation of Parliament, a declaration, the main points of which coincide with the resolutions adopted by the Moscow City Council and merchants, which are making the round of the cities of Russia.

There is a movement on foot at Nijni Novgorod to call upon Congress and business men to take action to support the demands of Moscow.

The most important points of the new programme are, a provision that the Ministry shall be responsible to Parliament; the granting of an amnesty to political offenders and more equal treatment for the frontier races. Other leading points are, a more complete realisation of religious liberty; the introduction of a Bill to establish autonomy of Poland; the abolition by law of various restrictions upon the Jews; a conciliatory course toward Finland; the emancipation of the Little Russian Press, and the legalisation of Trades Unions.

Among the minor points are the introduction of a Cantonal Zemstvo, and the spread of District and Provincial Zemstvos throughout the frontier districts, and the organisation of Justice of the Peace Courts in districts where they are now unknown. These, and other demands of the Parliamentary majority and their supporters in the country are all well defined proposals of the Liberal and Progressive parties which have been familiar for more than a decade and a half.

Russian troops for Serbia

ANNOUNCEMENT BY FRENCH PREMIER.

Paris, Oct. 12.

Addressing the Chamber of Deputies to-day, the Prime Minister, M. Viviani, said that to-morrow Russian troops will be fighting alongside the French and British in the Balkans. France, Britain and Russia are in complete accord.

The Minister added that ample troops were available for the purpose without weakening any of the other fronts.

Diplomats Arrested

SWISS SOLDIERS' MISTAKE.

Geneva, Oct. 12.

The French Ambassador and the British Minister to Switzerland, travelling together in a motorcar, were arrested by Swiss soldiers near Neuchâtel, but subsequently, when the mistake was discovered, the diplomats were released with an apology.

Attacks and Counter Attacks

HEAVY FIGHTING ON ITALIAN FRONTIER.

Rome, Oct. 13.

A despatch from General Headquarters reports:—

"On the plateaux at the head of the Astico and its tributaries attacks and counter-attacks follow each other with rapidity.

An advance guard of the enemy which was marching upon Malga Secondo Posto to the north of Monte Coston on the morning of the 11th was driven back.

"On the upper Valdassa our troops made some further progress.

"Along the rest of the front, especially in Carnia, the customary but ineffective fire of the enemy's artillery continued.

"On the Carso table land on the night of the 11th the enemy, after an intense preparation of the ground by artillery and rifle fire, commenced a grand assault upon our positions east of Vermeigliano on Mount Sei Bussi; but the attack was soon stopped and the enemy repulsed with heavy losses."

AUSTRIANS TO ATTEMPT ANOTHER OFFENSIVE.

Rome, Oct. 13.

Reports of operations on the eastern frontier of Italy state that there is an active concentration of troops and much movement of the mobile batteries which supplement the action of the stationary defences among the Austrian positions on the lower and middle Isonzo.

It is evident from the observations of the scouts that, despite the rebuff recently administered to the Imperial troops on the lower Isonzo, the enemy intends to make still more determined attacks on the Italian positions both north and south of the Gorizia sector.

The Austrian commander plainly means to stake everything upon another attempt to relieve the constant and increasing pressure of the Italians on the entrenched stronghold of Gorizia, which is now under fire from five directions and cannot hold out much longer. The enemy is exasperated by the tactics of the Italian Commander-in-Chief, which are aimed at capturing the place with the last possible expenditure of life.

"Gott Strafe Italien"

DERNBURG'S ADVICE TO GERMANS.

London, Oct. 12.

A telegram from Amsterdam says that Herr Dernburg, former German Colonial Minister, writes to the "Berliner Tageblatt" recommending Germans to punish Italy for her disloyalty to her former Allies by abstaining from visiting the country for a period of at least five years after the termination of the war. This, he says, would mean a serious loss to Italy, in view of the great number of German tourists who used to visit the country every year.

Germany's Third Loan

SAVINGS BANKS SUBSCRIBE 2876 MILLION MARKS.

New York, Oct. 12.

Berlin reports that the savings banks of the Empire have subscribed 2,876 million marks to the third war loan.

Congratulating Von Kluck

KAISER'S BIRTHDAY MESSAGE.

Amsterdam, Oct. 13.

The Kaiser has sent a cordial message of congratulation to Marshal Von Kluck on the occasion of the seventieth anniversary of his birthday, to which the Marshal responded in suitable terms.

Wumbiagas Captured

BRITISH SUCCESS IN THE KAMERUNS.

London, Oct. 12.

It is officially announced that the town of Wumbiagas in the Kameruns has been captured by British forces on October 9 after an engagement of thirty hours. The enemy, who is in considerable numbers, is being energetically pursued.

MUTINOUS HUNGARIAN TROOPS

SHOT DOWN BY AUSTRIAN COMRADES.

Rome, Oct. 9.

Details have been received of a mutiny which broke out in the 14th Hungarian Honved regiment while marching to the Italian front in obedience to an urgent appeal for reinforcements.

After ten hours of marching without food the men refused to go any further and threw down their rifles and knapsacks.

A sergeant went to the nearest town for reinforcements and returned accompanied by four patrols of gendarmes, whom the mutineers received with laughter and hisses. The captain then shot the soldier nearest to him, and a great tumult arose. Soon after, a contingent of troops arrived on the scene and opened fire on the Hungarians. Only sixty survivors remained, and these were confined in the fortress of Toblach.

AUSTRIA'S THIRD LOAN

OFFERED AT 93.6 PER CENT.

Vienna, Oct. 8.

The third war loan placed on the market by the Austrian Government is being offered at 93.6, the bonds bearing 5 1/2 per cent. interest. Subscriptions are payable at the rate of 10 per cent. upon subscription, 20 per cent. on December; 6.20 per cent. upon January; 5.25 per cent. upon February; 5 and 25 per cent. upon March 6, free of taxes.

NOT TO BE PLACED ON BERLIN MARKET.

Paris, Oct. 8.

It is reported from Zurich that Germany has refused to allow Austria to place a loan on the Berlin market.

The Austrian Ambassador at Berlin is expected at Vienna.

STRIKE IN MARSEILLES

WORKERS' FEAR OF TRADING WITH THE ENEMY.

Marseilles, Oct. 8.

The men employed in the great oil refineries at Marseilles have gone out on strike, stating that lately large quantities of oil have been despatched to Switzerland which probably will pass over the frontier into Germany; and they refuse to work in order to supply the enemies of France.

Measures have been taken to prevent disturbances, some of the leaders of the movement who were trying to organise an attack on the Germans' houses having been placed under arrest.

The Government has taken the matter in hand.

BOMBAY COTTON FIRES

THIRD OF THE SEASON.

London, Oct. 8.

The fire which destroyed the Bombay cotton stores was the third of the kind during the present season. The result of the investigations into these conflagrations has not been made public.

BULGARIANS AGAIN DEFEATED

Serbia's Gallant Struggle Against Invading Armies.

POSSIBILITY OF JAPANESE AID

Rumanian Intervention Again Rumoured

Athens, Oct. 13.

The Serbian legation in this city announces that the Bulgarian troops which attempted to cut the Nish-Prachovd railway at Zagetchar have been defeated.

The Serbians are holding the heights which command Belgrade.

TEUTONS LOSE HEAVILY.

New York, Oct. 13.

A despatch from Nish reports that the fighting in the recent engagements was extremely severe, the Serbians inflicting tremendous losses upon the invaders. The Germans are known to have made an urgent application for more troops.

GRAND DUKE NICHOLAS IN SERBIA?

London, Oct. 13.

Bulgaria has formally declared war against Serbia and sent additional army divisions to three places on the frontier.

Bucharest reports that despatches from the Bulgarian frontier state that the declaration of war against Serbia was posted throughout Bulgaria last night.

The Serbian armies have defeated all the efforts of the Bulgars to advance towards the strategic railways.

It is rumoured here and in Paris that Grand Duke Nicholas as head of the Russian army is aiding in the defence of Serbia.

The high regard which the Bulgarian people have for the Russian Royal family is said to have caused the Grand Duke to be sent to head the army, as it is believed that the Bulgarians will be unwilling to attack the Russian forces under his command.

Japanese for Serbia?

FRENCH EFFORTS TO OBTAIN AID IN THE BALKANS.

Paris, Oct. 13.

It is confidently expected that a Japanese army will come to the aid of the Allies in the Near East.

The return to Tokio from Paris of Baron Kigujiro Ishii is likely to be followed by Japan reconsidering the international situation with special reference to her future attitude.

M. Hughes Leroux, editor of "Le Matin," has arrived at Tokio with letters from the French Minister of Foreign Affairs to discuss military matters with Japan, with a view to determining whether the Mikado will send troops into the Balkans.

Calling-up Reserves

SERBIA'S MANHOOD SUMMONED TO THE COLOURS.

Paris, Oct. 12.

The Serbian Legation in Paris announces that its Government has called to the colours all men between the ages of 18 and 50.

Numbers of Serbian reservists will be leaving shortly for Nish.

Serbian Vessel Captured

BULGARIAN "HAUL" IN THE BLACK SEA.

Paris, Oct. 13.

Information has been received from Bucharest that the Bulgarians have captured a vessel which was conveying munitions for Serbia. Three other vessels on the same errand took refuge in the Rumanian port of Carabia.

Jews Under Shell Fire

REMAIN IN BELGRADE.

New York, Oct. 13.

A telegram from London to the "Evening Sun" reports that during the bombardment of Belgrade by the Teuton forces hundreds of Jews gathered in the synagogue, and persisted in remaining there until the building collapsed under the enemy's shells.

Autonomy of Crete

RUMOURS OF SEPARATIST MOVEMENT.

New York, Oct. 12.

A despatch from Vienna says that a deep impression has been caused by the news from Canea of a separatist movement, the inhabitants demanding the autonomy of Crete.

The despatch apparently seeks to show that the movement has been inspired by Britain.

TEUTON - BULGARIAN PLOT

COMPLETED ON JULY 17.

London, Oct. 11.

A telegram from Athens says that Sir Francis Elliot, British Minister to the Greek capital, informed a representative of the Press that the treaty between the Central Empires, Bulgaria and Turkey was signed on July 17.

By virtue of this treaty all Albania and that part of Macedonia in the hands of Serbia and Greece were to be allotted to Bulgaria on condition of her siding with the Teuton nations and Turkey. These concessions included Salonica and the northern Epirus.

The British Minister, on learning the terms of the agreement, communicated them to the Greek Government.

Salandra's Belief

GREECE WILL INTERVENE.

Rome, Oct. 13.

Signor Salandra, the Italian Prime Minister, declares that the attack made by the Bulgarians upon Serbia constitutes a "casus foederis" for Greece, and therefore the Hellenic Government will probably not delay much longer in taking a definite resolution.

Allies and Serbia

PRESS APPROVAL OF M. VIVIANI'S ADDRESS.

London, Oct. 13.

The Press applauds the speech delivered yesterday in the French Chamber of Deputies by the Prime Minister, M. Viviani, announcing that the Russian Government is despatching troops to the assistance of Serbia.

The "Daily Telegraph" believes that the troops sent by Britain, France and Russia to the aid of the small but valiant Balkan State are numerous enough to crush "the traitress Bulgaria" and defeat the Austro-Germans.

The despatch of troops to Serbia is the principal theme of discussion in all the editorial columns of the newspapers, which universally express the opinion that it would be a criminal error to send anything but a strong force.

The general belief in England is that notwithstanding the attitude of King Constantine, Greece, who is still mobilising, will end by adopting the policy of M. Venizelos and join the Quadruple Entente.

CONFIDENCE IN ULTIMATE TRIUMPH.

Paris, Oct. 13.

In his address in the French Chamber of Deputies yesterday on the Balkan situation, M. Viviani, the President of Council, concluded as follows:

"We are in entire accord with the Commander-in-Chief of our army in France, and there is a perfect understanding between the British and French Governments. I cannot express myself better than as follows:—Henceforth France and Britain, in accordance with their Allies, are fully agreed to send assistance to Serbia, who has applied to us for it, and to assure, to the advantage of Serbia, Greece, and Rumania, the keeping of the treaty of Bucharest, of which we are guarantors."

"Both the British and the French Governments are at one as to the importance of the effective strength of these troops being in accordance with the opinions of their military authorities."

"Russia joins her Allies in aiding Serbia, and to-morrow her troops will be fighting at our side."

"We have fulfilled our duty to our Allies."

"Never was agreement between Allies more complete and close. Never have we had more entire confidence in our ultimate triumph."

Rumania Will Aid Allies

STATEMENT BY MINISTER TO ITALY.

Paris, Oct. 12.

A despatch from Rome announces that the Rumanian Minister, M. Bratiano, has declared that Italy may rest secure of Rumania's co-operation with the Powers of the Quadruple Entente. She will choose her own time for taking the decisive step.

CONFIRMATION OF MINISTER'S ASSURANCE.

Rome, Oct. 12.

Confirmation has been received of the statement that M. Bratiano, the Rumanian Minister, has informed the Italian Minister of Foreign Affairs, Baron Sonino, that the co-operation of Rumania with the Allies may be taken for granted. She will enter upon the campaign at the moment she considers most opportune.

ARMENIAN REFUGEES

ARRIVAL AT PORT SAID

London, Oct. 8.

It is reported from Cairo that six thousand Armenian refugees have reached Port Said, these being the few that have succeeded in escaping the persecution of the Turks through the presence of a French force near the coast of Anticquah.

Rumania Will Fight

RUMOUR AGAIN CORROBORATED.

London, Oct. 13.

The announcement that M. Bratiano, Rumanian Minister at Rome, declared that his country would undoubtedly side with the Entente is further confirmed by a despatch from Milan, which says that, according to a telegram from Bucharest, the Rumanian ex-Prime Minister, M. Take Jonescu, informed a correspondent of the "Corriere della Sera" that it was impossible for Rumania to avoid being dragged into the war; but that he was absolutely certain of the defeat of Germany, and would continue to believe in the invincibility of the Allies. Germany represented reaction, and therefore must be crushed. It was to be regretted that Bulgaria had thrown herself into the abyss. He would do all in his power to induce Rumania to throw her sword into the scales in favour of the Allies, as the majority of the people wished.

RUSSIA AND THE BALKANS

PETROGRAD PRESS VIEW.

Petrograd, Oct. 8.

The "Novoe Vremya" says:—

"Now that we know that in two of the Balkan States concerned in the present crisis, the people are for us, and only their dynasties, which are foreign to the people, are against us, we should make a bad mistake to suppose that the Balkans are lost to us. On the contrary, we are only beginning our task now, which is to make a wise use of the great popular movements which must be aroused in the Balkans."

"This is a task which finds no place in the ordinary framework of diplomatic activity; but it is entirely in accord with the tendency of the developments of this great war of liberation."

KIPLING'S SON MISSING

LOST DURING RECENT FIGHTING

London, Oct. 7.

The "Morning Post" announces that Mr. John Kipling, of the Irish Guards, son of the great British author and poet, is reported missing, probably killed.

Although barely eighteen years of age and of delicate health he possessed indomitable zeal and resolution.

TRY ANOTHER ROUTE!

ADVICE TO VESSELS WISHING TO USE PANAMA CANAL.

New York, Oct. 11.

Details of the last landslip on the Panama Canal show that it is the most extensive that has yet occurred on the Canal. It is roughly estimated that ten million cubic yards of earth will have to be dredged in order to restore traffic. The debris has formed an island of about 175 acres in area rising fifteen feet above the surface of the water.

It is expected that the hundreds of vessels waiting to go through the canal will be notified that they had better adopt some other route, as the work of dredging the canal clear will take a long time.

EARTHQUAKE IN EUROPE

VIBRATIONS REPORTED FROM BERLIN.

New York, Oct. 11.

It is reported from Berlin that the seismograph at the Stuttgart observatory has registered very pronounced vibrations during the last twenty-four hours. The disturbance is apparently in Central Europe. Marienbad has observed earth tremors during the morning.

BRITAIN'S INCAPABLE MINISTERS

LONDON PRESS ON THE BALKANS FAILURE

London, Oct. 9.

A large amount of editorial space has been dedicated by to-day's papers to the discussion of the Foreign Office's share in the outcome of the Balkan negotiations.

BLUNDERS WORSE THAN THOSE OF A PARISH COUNCIL.

The "Morning Post," after remarking that the Foreign Office's handling of Balkan affairs has been a series of blunders which would have been remarkable in a parish council, discusses at length the work of the Foreign Office and the diplomatic exchanges which preceded the war; then the contraband controversy over iron ore and cotton. It turns bluntly from this to the proposal for establishing an International Court of Appeal from the decisions of the Prize Court, saying:—

GREY'S RESIGNATION SHOULD BE DEMANDED.

"It appears that proposals are being entertained by the Foreign Office. We are glad that Lord Strachey will raise the question in the House of Lords. Should it prove to be the case that such a design is being prosecuted, we say plainly that, in the name of our national honour and security, the resignation of Sir Edward Grey and the reorganisation of the Foreign Office should be demanded. We do not propose to submit the decisions of a British Judge to a mongrel assembly of foreign jurists, in which Britain can be outvoted by the representatives of Ecuador, Bolivia, Switzerland and Germany.

FOREIGN OFFICE'S UNPARALLELED BLUNDERS.

"The record of the Foreign Office is sufficiently dubious. It may be that its series of unparalleled blunders are due to incompetence; if not, to what is it due?"

The paper lodges a vigorous protest against the old-fashioned secret diplomacy, remarking that the British Office always demanded absolute immunity from criticism or comment.

"Previous to the war," the newspaper declares, "the Premier and his friends assured us that nothing could be more friendly than the attitude of Germany to Britain. Last year, the result of diplomatic secrecy and misrepresentation was, briefly, war."

"OPTIMISM, CARELESSNESS AND STUPIDITY."

The "Daily Mail" says:—

"We frittered away our great prestige for power and tradition in the Near East, literally allowing it to be snatched out of our hands through optimism, carelessness and stupidity. Our failure closes a great page in history. What possible excuse has the Foreign Office to make to our Allies and our people? It is not surprising to find that the Government's record in relation to its Balkan policy is becoming a matter of public discussion."

BRITAIN'S ADVANTAGE FRITTERED AWAY.

The "Daily Mail," asserting that the shortcomings of British diplomacy constituted a painful theme, contends that Britain held a unique position in the Balkans, especially Bulgaria; for she alone among the Powers of the Entente had a reputation for complete unselfishness of purpose in regard to Balkan politics. Russia, France, and Italy all were regarded with suspicion as being too deeply interested. It concludes:—

"This priceless advantage has somehow been frittered away in recent

THE ABSURD CENSORSHIP

"DAILY MAIL" AND THE GOVERNMENT

London, Oct. 7.

"The Daily Mail" asserts that the German and the Italian newspapers give the name of the British Officer in charge of the Anglo-French forces landing at Salonica, although in England the Censor prevents the British public from knowing it.

The "Daily Mail" cites several other instances of this nature, which it terms the absurdities of censorship, and adds:—

"We can state in a very few words the opinion to which we have been forced by fifteen months' experience with the censorship. Nothing can be done that can more lower our reputation for honesty and good sense; nothing can be done more to delude our people at home, to hide from them the realities of war, and to dull the edge of their interest in its progress."

SUPPRESSING THE TRUTH

ABSURDITIES OF BRITISH CENSORSHIP

London, Oct. 9.

The newspapers continue to comment on the absurdities of the Censorship. The "Morning Post" says that the time has come for the Government to deal fairly with the country and tell the people the truth, recording misfortunes as freely as successes and suppressing only such information as may help the enemy. If the Government persists in its policy of sugared secrecy the consequences may be serious.

The "Pall Mall Gazette," asserting that probably no journal has supported the censorship with more loyal patience, says, in an article of vigorous denunciation of the manner in which that censorship is applied, that the evidences of abuse of the exercise of power by the department have become too glaring to be ignored. The legitimate function of the censorship is to blind England's enemies, not England herself; and when there is unpleasant news which the enemy already knows, but which the Censor suppresses for the sake of preserving an atmosphere of false optimism, he is perpetrating a combination of insult and injury which the country has every right to resent.

The paper says that the treatment of the news that the Premier of Greece had resigned seems a clear instance of the reluctance to let unpleasant facts reach the public ear. The intelligence was sent from Athens in plenty of time to be published. It appeared in a French journal; yet the people of this country were deprived for many hours of news which was fully at the disposal of our Allies and enemies.

The killing of a mutilated despatch through its being mistaken for an item of news is a sufficiently humiliating exhibition of the ignorance of a public office; but that was overshadowed by indications of positive breaches of trust in the relations between the Censorship and the public.

U.S. WHEAT HARVEST

RECORD FIGURE OF 1,000 MILLION BUSHELS.

New York, Oct. 7.

The yield of the wheat harvest in the United States is reported to have reached the record figure of 1,000 million bushels.

months, largely as the result of inattention, half-heartedness and want of definite policy. It can still be regained, but only by vigorous Government action, backed by the whole weight of public opinion."

PRINCE OF WALES SHOT

WOUNDED BY FRENCH SERGEANT

New York, Oct. 9.

A telegram from Paris says that the papers relate an incident which befel the Prince of Wales on September 20 last.

The report is that the Prince was having tea at a canteen near the front, and was being waited upon by a handsome woman of the name of Barthou.

At this moment her lover, Sergeant Huguet, entered, and, under the impression that the Prince was paying attention to the lady, in a fit of jealousy he fired twice at the Prince, wounding him slightly in the arm, and then shooting himself through the head.

The Prince has been removed to London.

INCIDENT OCCURS NEAR YPRES.

New York, Oct. 9.

It is reported from Amsterdam that it was near Ypres that the incident occurred in which the Prince of Wales was slightly wounded.

RECRUITING IN BRITAIN

EARL DERBY ASSUMES COMMAND OF THE CAMPAIGN

London, Oct. 7.

The appointment of Earl Derby, at the request of Lord Kitchener, to take charge of the recruiting campaign comes at a moment when the recruiting problem is becoming the subject of serious public criticism.

Lord Derby has been an indefatigable worker, striving to obtain the best results from the voluntary system; and he is expected to command the confidence of all parties.

The Liberal papers are very hopeful of his success. The "Daily Chronicle" says:—"What is wanted in the War Office recruiting department is, frankly speaking, a new broom; and if a person of Earl Derby's authority and antecedents cannot discharge that difficult problem, the Augean stable must be even worse than some suppose it to be."

LABOUR AND THE WAR

APPEAL FOR RECRUITS.

London, Oct. 8.

An appeal for recruits was issued yesterday by the authorised representatives of the Parliamentary Committee, the General Federation of the Trade Unions Committee and the Executive Committee of the Labour party, which declares that tens of thousands of men of military age and fitness have not yet joined the colours, and stating that the equipment, supplies and munitions for these men are ready.

The appeal urges them to immediately assume their share of the Burden, and declares that the failure to do so must be attributed to the fact that they do not appreciate the seriousness of the situation.

Thousands of recruits weekly, the appeal states, must be raised in order to maintain the efficiency of our armies and secure a victory that shall free the world from the fear of the military tyranny that Germany would impose. At no time in the history of the nation has it been faced by a crisis of such gravity as now.

GERMANY'S POTATO CROP

60,000,000 TONS.

Amsterdam, Oct. 11.

The German potato crop this year has yielded 60 million tons of potatoes, the largest on record in the Empire. As a consequence the Government has cancelled the decree forbidding the exportation of potatoes.

"BLUE MONDAY"

"NO TREATING" ORDER IN LONDON.

London, Oct. 11.

To-day the new licensing regulations relative to the practice of "treating" came into operation.

The approach of "Blue Monday," as the opening day has been known, was heralded by a marked increase in the amount of treating during the week-end; consequently there were a large number of cases of drunkenness before the courts to-day.

At the North London Police Court, many defendants pleaded that they had been "treated" for the last time, whereupon the Magistrate intimated that from to-day all "treaters" risked six months imprisonment with the alternative of a fine of five hundred pounds sterling.

The advent of the new order has been received with good-humoured tolerance, although the bar managers take a gloomy view of the situation. Publicans argue that it will be necessary to establish a police tribunal in every public-house to decide what is or what is not treating. The provision that treating is only permissible in those cases where a meal is ordered further intensifies the problem.

Those people interested in the decrease in liquor consumption hail the new order with delight. They assert that now London has been included in the growing list of cities where "no treating" is enforced it will be easier to carry out what seems to be clearly aimed at by the authorities: viz. a great decrease in the liquor consumption throughout the country. It has been conclusively established that where the "no treating" order is in effect there has been a 50 per cent reduction in drinking.

MACHINE GUN CORPS

BRITISH ARMY INNOVATION.

London, Oct. 7.

The announcement that the King has approved of the formation of a special machine gun corps, although not unexpected, has been received with general approval. It is considered that these corps will form a most important adjunct to the British army. With the adoption of the machine gun corps the army will have at its disposal forces which, on account of its lightness of equipment, can readily be transported anywhere.

BRITAIN'S LOST OFFICERS

17,076 CASUALTIES SINCE OUTBREAK OF WAR.

London, Oct. 7.

The total casualties among the British officers since the beginning of the war up to September 27 amounted to 17,076, of which 5,176 were killed or died of their wounds, 10,469 were wounded, and 1,420 were missing.

During the fortnight ended September 27, the lists show 131 officers killed, 290 wounded and 11 missing.

The Indian contingent had 20 killed and 39 wounded, the Australians 8 killed and 12 wounded, and the Royal Field Artillery 8 killed and 15 wounded; but, apart from these, the losses of individual regiments did not exceed 15 for the fortnight. Two Brigadier Generals were wounded.

BRITAIN'S TRADE

HEAVY INCREASE IN IMPORTS.

London, Oct. 7.

The Board of Trade figures for British commerce for the month of September show a large increase in importations, amounting to £25,286,000. Of this amount, £10,000,000 are for foodstuffs and £5,000,000 for raw materials, the remainder being for manufactured articles.

MORE SHELLS NEEDED

THE ROAD TO BERLIN

WILL BE WON BY HIGH EXPLOSIVES.

Paris, Oct. 9.

M. Thomas, the French Minister of Munitions, has just reached Paris after a conference with his British colleague, Mr. Lloyd George, in London.

To a representative of the Press the Minister said:—

"If you ask me whether we have enough shells, I reply: No, we have not; and, what is more, we never shall have enough, because the more we use the more we want.

"We have by no means reached the limit of my programme, and when that is reached we shall not be satisfied until England's output has exceeded our own.

"You have seen on the Champagne battlefields what a good supply of shells can do. Shells drove back the enemy in the Artois and the Champagne regions; but we must have many more to drive him out of France and Belgium. The road to Berlin will be won by high explosives.

"My trip to London has been very satisfactory. Probably I shall go there again, as, on account of the British organisation, it is more convenient for me to go there than for Mr. Lloyd George to come here.

"England is increasing her production of munitions very fast. I noticed a great increase since my last visit; but the British workmen must learn that every shell saves the life of a soldier. Bothering to calculate how many shells it takes to kill one soldier is perfectly useless. The sweetest music that soldiers can hear is the song of the shells on their way to the German trenches."

3,000,000 SHELLS

CANADIAN CONTRACT WITH THE RUSSIAN GOVERNMENT.

Montreal, Oct. 8.

The Canadian Car and Foundry Company of this city has accepted a contract to supply the Russian Government with 3,000,000 shells the total cost of which will be 60 million dollars.

NO TRADE IN MUNITIONS

NEW ORDER BY FRENCH GOVERNMENT.

Paris, Oct. 9.

The French Government has just issued a decree forbidding any person residing in France or the French colonies from having any commerce in ammunition or war materials with any persons residing in any country whatever, without specific authorisation from the Government.

AMERICAN AIRMAN MISSING

WHILE ON SERVICE WITH THE FRENCH ARMY.

Paris, Oct. 7.

The American aviator Bach, serving in the French army, who left for a reconnaissance of the German lines thirty hours since, has not returned to his base of operations, nor has any news been received that he has been captured by the enemy. It is feared that he has been killed.

FRENCH DIRIGIBLE CAPTURED

Paris, Oct. 7.

The French dirigible Alsace was obliged to land in the German lines near Bethel, at the head of the Aisne river, and those on board were made prisoners by the Germans.

THE LANDING AT SALONICA

PROTECTED BY THE FLEET

London, Oct. 8.

A despatch from Salonica to the "Daily Mail" reports:—

"At 8 o'clock on Tuesday morning last a great fleet of transatlantic liners, followed by another fleet of smaller transports with war material, all escorted by fast torpedo boats, entered Salonica harbour, while big warships guarded the entrance from any surprise.

"The landing, which took place at the quay in the western part of the harbour, began at 9 o'clock. Greek gendarmes, under the command of the chief of the Macedonian Gendarmes, Toupakis, kept order among the population waiting on the quay. There were also present Colonel Mes-salas, a Greek officer, two French Colonels, and two officers of the Serbian General Staff.

"At the opposite quay were anchored several Greek transports with mobilised troops just arrived from the Piræus.

"When the first detachment of French troops landed they were heartily welcomed by the French Minister at Athens, who had gone to Salonica for disembarkation.

"The landing operations proceeded quickly, and at 9.30 the first gun was ashore. The soldiers, in companies preceded by drummers and trumpeters, marched to the camp prepared for them, and paraded in the streets among the curious but silent inhabitants, arriving at camp at noon. Four officers of the British General Staff were waiting there.

"The British encamped on the higher ground, the French occupying the lower levels.

"The transports were loaded with many batteries of the famous French 75 quickfire field pieces, machine guns, munitions, horses and food. The camp was surrounded by French sentries, and civilians were barred.

"The streets of Salonica were very lively, the French and British officers and men mixing freely with the newly arrived Greek soldiers who admired the splendid field equipment of the Allies."

IAN HAMILTON IN COMMAND

OF ALLIED ARMY AT SALONICA.

London, Oct. 9.

It is reported that the troops land-

GENERAL SIR IAN HAMILTON.

ed at Salonica are under the command of General Ian Hamilton.

BRITISH CONSUL'S DEATH

KILLED BY PERSIANS AT ISPAHAN.

New York, Oct. 7.

It is reported from Berlin that a despatch from Constantinople announces that the British Consul at Ispahan and the guards of the Consulate have been killed by the Persians.

DESTROYING A PEOPLE

OBJECT OF TURKEY'S OPPRESSION OF ARMENIANS.

Copenhagen, Oct. 9.

The local newspaper "Politiken" says that Turkey has attempted no less a task than the destruction of the whole Armenian people. The heartless, gruesome horrors which the accounts of these deeds reveal are without parallel in the history of the world.

The "Vortland" says:—

"One would have thought that Germany would have been glad to have done something in this matter, if only in the hope of obliterating to some extent the memory of Belgium.

"European Christians who, with any justification, can be accused of having some responsibility for these gruesome events, will find their "culture" held in slight esteem."

All the papers ask what degree of firmness the United States will exert in the enforcement of its protests, and they unite in urging all neutral

GENERAL CASTLENAU;
Joffre's Second in Command

States to join in vigorous representations to Turkey.

In the early stages of the Caucasus campaign it was not until Enver Pasha's army invaded Russian territory that the Armenians began to suffer. According to the Russian newspapers and the American missionaries 2,000 Armenians were slain in north-west Persia, and from 2,000 to 5,000 in the Bashkala district.

It has been said that the policy of massacre and deportation was not undertaken until after the Armenian defence of Van; but the London "Times" professes to have information to the effect that the massacres began long before that date.

Talaat Bey said at Bitlis:—"I intend to prevent any talk about Armenian autonomy for fifty years to come."

SIR PHILIP CHETWODE;
the British Cavalry Leader

CYANHYDRIC ACID GAS

"MERCIFUL" HUNS' NEW ASPHYXIATING WEAPON.

Paris, Oct. 8.

An officer of the French Medical Corps who has arrived from the front reports that the Germans in the Champagne region are using a new kind of poisonous gas against the French troops.

The statement is based on the declaration of three soldiers who have been fighting in the Souain, Suippe and Moranvilliers sectors, who say that they found themselves enveloped in a cloud of green-coloured gas with a pleasant odour.

Those who were not wearing gas protectors were asphyxiated, while those who did wear them became insensible for a short time. Some of the men suffered from attacks resembling epilepsy, and when they reached the Paris hospitals the pulse was found to be very weak, the sufferers giving signs of general depression. There was, however, no resemblance to the symptoms produced by the asphyxiating gases formerly used.

The medical officer referred to believes that the base of the new gas is cyanhydric acid.

RIGHT TO DESTROY MAILS

GERMANY'S REPLY TO NORWAY.

New York, Oct. 8.

It is reported from Berlin that the German Government has sent a Note to that of Norway in reply to the protest against the seizure by the commander of a German submarine of part of the correspondence on board the Norwegian steamer Haakon VII on August 18.

The Note says that an inquiry has been held into the case, and that the commander of the submarine stated that the parcel thrown overboard contained contraband. Further than this, correspondence is not protected by the La Hague Convention, since the clause was not ratified by several of the belligerent Powers.

Also, German mails on board neutral ships had been examined by enemies, and the neutral nations had not opposed the actions; so Germany claims the right to do the same. The Government therefore holds that the protest of the Norwegian Foreign Office is unfounded.

COLONIALS FOR EUROPE

40,000 AUSTRALIANS; 30,000 CANADIANS.

London, Oct. 11.

A cable message from Melbourne announces that there are 40,000 well-trained and fully equipped Australian troops ready to go where the British Government requires them.

Other despatches from Montreal report that the Canadian Government is about to send across to England another 30,000 fully organised troops.

SWEDISH ELECTIONS

WOMEN AT THE POLLS.

Christiania, Oct. 11.

The general elections are taking place to-day, in which women are voting for the first time. The number of votes recorded so far amount to 170,000. The newspapers predict that the feminine vote will result in an increased representation of the Socialist party in Parliament, making it the strongest single party. The Government expects to keep in by means of the combination of three groups.

The Socialist programme consists principally of anti-militarist propaganda. That of the Government includes a grain monopoly, old age pensions and restrictions on the sale of alcohol.

ARGENTINA'S PARADOX

Bureaucratic Finance and Private Prevision

MONEY WANTED; BUT UNDER COST PRICE

Anything more paradoxical than the present financial position of Argentina it would be impossible to conceive. Private individuals are rolling in wealth, judging of course solely by the bank returns, whilst the republic, officially considered, does not know how to make ends meet. The bills discounted with the local banks some six months ago to the tune of $60,000,000 more or less, are about due, and the Government will exercise its option of renewal, on condition that the interest is reduced from 6½ % to 6¼ %. Its indications will doubtless be attended to, but one shudders to think of what would happen if the banks, one and all, were to insist on ready cash. It simply could not be found. And the same applies to many other Government transactions.

The pity of it is that it is all so unnecessary. Two countries stand out to-day as receiving exceptional and immediate benefit from the state of war into which Europe has been plunged for over a year and a half; the United States and Argentina. But whilst the States have grasped opportunity with both hands, Argentina is still debating as to where she can get the best hold. Admittedly she has had past mistakes to pay for, but it is equally certain that she has not gone the right way to work to square the account. The salient feature of Argentine finance is the whole-hearted distrust of his own country's future that is shown by the average Argentine. He has no faith whatsoever in his administrators, his national system of government, or his country's financial institutions. On the other hand officialdom will not or can not realise that this attitude exists among the majority of thrifty Argentines. Hence its financial arrangements are all made with a view to meeting the needs and exigencies of the foreign investor, now nonexistent, the while empty verbiage and ridiculous conditions are characteristic of the so-called attempts to tap the truly national capital cash assets.

An ample Government guarantee with a high rate of interest and a brisk market for stock might attract the local investor. The Cedula, bearing 6% nominal interest, and actually yielding close on 7%, is being bought more and more by discerning people. But the connection of the Cedula with landed property, and the depreciation in the present values of the latter estate, is a real drawback to the popularization of this security among the semi-literate class who hold such a large proportion of the ready cash of the republic in the stocking or in the banks. A clearly worded Government bond, easily fractionable, or better still confined to one type, say of $100 each, bearing 6½ % interest and carrying 1% amortization, with the national guarantee behind it, properly advertised through the length and breadth of the land before issue, would be at least a business proposition. Trying to fool people who, however ignorant they may be on many matters, know very well what the yield is on their hard-earned savings, that it will pay them to lend the Government money at 1 to 2% below market rates, is the culminating point of official stupidity.

It is all very well to say that 5% is the market level of Argentine credit. It may have been in Europe; certainly it never was the maximum here. Nor is it probable that when peace is declared and all Europe is

PRO-ALLY PROPAGANDA

An Important Development

COMMISSION TO UNDERTAKE THE WORK

The persistent efforts made by THE HERALD since last October to arouse the community to a sense of the danger of permitting the vigorous pro-German propaganda to go unanswered have at last borne fruit, with the result that an organisation is now in existence for the purpose of combatting the attempt to Germanize Argentina.

Within the last few days the Comisión de Propaganda Pro-Aliados has come into being and already is actively at work spreading information regarding the war, its causes, conduct and effects as viewed from a pro-Ally standpoint. The Comisión originated among the staff of one of the biggest British business organisations in this country and its usefulness will be extended immediately its aims and objects are known and understood. The Comisión is working under the auspices of the British Patriotic Committee and has received the hearty approval of that influential body, which has given it the status of a special sub-committee. The Comisión also has the enthusiastic co-operation of the British Patriotic Committee in Montevideo, which originated the pro-Ally Commission in Uruguay, responsible for the production of the very valuable fortnightly publication "Por la Civilización."

The Comisión de Propaganda Pro-Aliados will be glad to receive applications from all over the country, either for literature printed in the Spanish language or for affiliation in order that its work may be extended. The postal address of the new organisation is Casilla de Correo 735, Buenos Aires.

ATTEMPT TO SMUGGLE NAPHTHA

A RARE OCCURRENCE.

An attempt made yesterday to smuggle some cases of naphtha through the Customs failed, and the affair has been reported by Sr. Edward Martin to the authorities. The attempt was a bold one and was on a large scale, as 8,000 cases in all were in question. The consignee has suffered to the extent that half of the amount has been confiscated, and on the other half full duty has to be paid.

Such attempts are exceedingly rare, and during the past two and a half years only four such cases have been publicly reported.

The affair has created some excitement on account of the rumour of the names of certain prominent business men being connected with the attempt. Dr. Oliver is enquiring into the circumstances.

seeking for loanable capital, Argentine investments will command better conditions than they do to-day. Admitted that the mobilization of local capital is desirable, the methods suggested up to the present all defeat that aim. They smack too strongly of bureaucracy and red tape; they offer little likelihood of revivifying the channels of trade; and the latest ingenious theorist who calmly proposes to switch off the deposits now made with the Banco de la Nación by means of a pseudo-government loan governed by extraordinary conditions certainly does not lead one to hope that there is as yet any gleam of light in the darkness of official Argentine finance.

NEW PORT WORKS

An Important Meeting

RUMOURED SETTLEMENT

It is reported that an important meeting was held late yesterday afternoon at the office of the Ministry of Public Works between the responsible persons for the New Port works and the Minister, Dr. Moyano.

The result of this meeting, it is stated, was that the Government have agreed to come to some satisfactory arrangement concerning the payment for the work done and to be done, other than in Government script, which were the terms in the original contract.

The Government will find money to carry on the work, and it is further reported that the Government securities will be used for the payment of the personnel of the administration.

OFF TO THE WAR

DEPARTURE OF UNITED CLUB MEMBERS.

Mr. W. Hewitt and Mr. W. J. Atkins, both members of the Villa Ballester Branch of the United Club, sailed by the Highland Loch on Oct. 12, the former to accept an important position in a Munition Factory, somewhere in England; the latter to join "The Devil's Own" O.T.C. May fortune favour the brave!

There was a grand foregathering of the clans on the evening of Oct. 8, to bid farewell to "Our own Tommy Atkins" who was the recipient of a "recuerdo" from his comrades, a silver cigarette case suitably inscribed, which Mr. Burney Wall, on behalf of the members of this Branch, asked Mr. Atkins to accept as a small token of esteem.

Mr. Atkins made the oratorical hit of the evening, voicing, among other happy thoughts, the mutual sentiments that he would have the luck to return and find the United Club still flourishing.

The evening was brought to an appropriate termination by the singing of Auld Lang Syne. The other members present were: Messrs. Whitechurch, Finlayson, A. C. Robertson, Howell, J. Wall, Beaumont, Buckley, and O'Neill.

GENERAL VELEZ SECOND DUEL

"GOD BLESS ME FROM A CHALLENGE."

General Gregorio Velez, late Minister of War, will not find time hang heavy on his hands if matters continue with him in their present posture.

The gallant General had already one affair of honour for the desperate arbitrament of the field of arms on hand and lo he has another.

General Uriburu and he are some day presumably to measure epies, fleurets, sabres or two handers or to burn powder together at twelve paces, but, thus is not enough for the fiery General who has now exchanged defiance (more or less mortal) with Deputy Dr. Tomás de Veiga, (another legislator flouting the law). Very appropriately the latter gentleman's seconds are Doctores Melo and Le Breton while one of the General's is General Ramón Jones.

Apparently General Velez is in a hot corner one that would suit a D'Artagnan or Sir Andrew Aguecheek of whom it could be said that he was "A very devil in private brawl

Souls and bodies hath he divorced three."

It is to be hoped that no more challenges will eventuate until the present tally has been wiped off.

IN THE OFFICE CHAIR

"And in some corner of the hubbub
coucht
Make game of that which makes as much of thee."

OMAR KHAYYAM.

"uds hilts and blades, flints and powder."

The number of challenges flying about just now in high Argentine military and political circles, appear to indicate a very inflamed and irritated state of mind among many persons of exalted position. Whether it is the Spring, or el Crisis, or Porque de la Guerra, who shall decide? Summonses to the field are almost as thick as bills on election days, and these warlike cartels are quite possibly not unconnected more or less with the political situation. At present our Captain Bobadils run comparatively little risk of scathe in these encounters, and the duels of former times seem to belong to another race and age. Bloodless as many of these combats are, however, they show a contempt for the law very unbecoming in legislators and officers of rank, who, no doubt, consider themselves persons of much greater culture than, say, the Duke of Buckingham, Rawlings, "Little Jermyn," or Richard Sheridan. One hundred years ago duels were serious and bloody affairs, but now they seem to be merely retained as a picturesque survival. They should either be quietly dropped, or a few fought "a outrance," for if two persons really thirst for each other's blood, the few drops displayed under the surgeon's glass can scarcely be considered a draught sufficient to appease thirsty "Honour."

German Convict Soldiers.

It has been a favourite theme of German writers to represent the British army as comprised of the scum of Society, jailbirds, burglars, petty thieves, "et hic genus omne."

This delightful and thoroughly German falsehood has been utilised to obscure the fact that Germany herself is employing, not only the unconvicted scoundrels who have been guilty of so many bestial and infamous excesses, but actual prisoners released from the jails to fight for the Fatherland and the Kaiser. Proof is forthcoming, for on September 4 the "Kölnische Zeitung," which is not remarkable for publishing facts damaging to Germany, stated that, "Under various amnesties issued in Saxony since the beginning of the war, 12,737 men liable to military service have been pardoned, or criminal proceedings against them have been stopped." This represents Saxony's contribution only of cut throats, thieves, and brutal rogues; the numbers from other States, especially Prussia, must be very large. It seems likely that the choicest pickpockets and burglars have been collected for the guards of the Crown Prince, who so well knows how to utilise their peculiar talents. Their example has inspired the entire German army, and after all, it would be illogical to keep these men in prison for committing crimes which are daily rewarded with Iron Crosses by the Most All Everything. The German army is rising to the criminal level.

Crocodile's Tears.

The last interview between Ferdinand (the Ignoble) and the French Minister at Sofia, seems to have been remarkable. "I lament," said the King, "your departure. Germany will win. I have French blood myself. I advise caution to France." He is certainly descended from the Bourbons of the Orleans branch, but since Phillip esteem for these Princes from the Egalité no one has had any special regard for this particular breed of Princes from the point of view of loyalty. In reply the French representative told him, with cold sternness that after the war, he also would have cause to beware. This wretched opportunist will certainly lose his throne, and if he lose his life also there will be no cause for lamentation.

BRITON.

ROSARIO NEWS

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT].

Oct. 12.

Rosario City Mission Sale of Work.

The Sale of Work organised by Miss Studdert and the ladies of the Work Party in aid of the Rosario City Mission took place on Saturday afternoon. Soon after 3 o'clock the Rev. F. Middleton asked Mr. W. J. Martin to open the proceedings. Mr. Martin said that had the President Mr. Barnett, who is not expected to return from England until February been present, there was no doubt he would have been able to make an interesting speech, giving an account of the Mission to which he and Mrs. Barnett gave such whole-hearted support. For his part, however, he wished only to ask them to give all the help possible to Miss Studdert, who had taken so much trouble to arrange this sale, and he trusted that by 7 o'clock, when the sale ended, there would be a handsome sum to hand over to the funds of the Mission. Sales then proceeded briskly, and after four o'clock the tea and concert room was well patronised. The final result was a sum of about $620 to be handed over to the Treasurer of the Mission.

Amongst those present were Mrs. J. P. Crouch, Mrs. A. Martin, Mrs. Every Miller, Mrs. and the Misses Van Oppen, Mrs. Van Horne, Mrs. and Miss Watson, Mrs. Roberts, Mrs. Ryberg, Mrs. and Miss Benedict, Mrs. C. H. Montgomery, Rev. F. and Mrs. Middleton, Miss Gillbee, Miss Searle, and many others.

Social at Alberdi.

A very successful social evening was held in the High School, Alberdi, on Friday, October 8. The rooms were nicely decorated with roses and evergreens, and with the Union Jack and Argentine flags. An impromptu concert, in which Miss Searle, the Misses Watson, Miss Daisy Unwin, Miss Starkie, Mr. Ransdale, and Mr. Hearn took part, was much appreciated. Before the interval Mr. Ransdale said that he had been asked to present Mr. and Mrs. Rickards with a slight token of esteem from the Church workers in Alberdi. There had been some difficulty in the choice of a present, as they wished to find something which would be a continual reminder of the "good old days he had spent in the land of sunshine." As he was going back to the cold and fog of an English winter, it was agreed to purchase a Guanaco skin rug, and he hoped it would prove as useful as it was ornamental. At the same time a bouquet of roses was presented to Mrs. Rickards. In a few words Mr. and Mrs. Rickards thanked all present for their very handsome gift, and Mr. Rickards then took the opportunity of introducing his successor, Mr. Deacon, saying that he was sure they would all afford the same help and encouragement to Mr. Deacon that they had given to himself and Mrs. Rickards during their six years in Alberdi.

Mr. Deacon said that there was no need for him to make a speech, he could only reiterate Mr. Rickards' hope that they would all help him to carry on the work so ably commenced. A few remarks were then made in Spanish by Señor Nuñez Regueiro. The evening was brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem after which three hearty cheers were given for Mr. and Mrs. Richards and Miss Gillbee, who had worked hard to ensure the success of the evening.

Forthcoming Garden Fete and Sale of Work.

On Saturday and Sunday, the 6th and 7th proximo, Mrs. J. P. Crouch, assisted by a number of local ladies, is organising a Garden Fete and Sale of Work at "The Quinta," Tallares, Rosario, in aid of the Officers' Widows and Families' Fund. There are to be four or five stalls, and various attractions in the way of competitions. Saturday afternoon's programme will include competitions for children, and already many little people have begun dressing dolls. On Sunday the competitions for men will include attempts at hat trimming, which should convince some of the men that after all, fifteen guineas or so can hardly be called remuneration for a "creation." I may mention that Mr. Rickards has kindly handed over to Mrs. Crouch a variety of articles left over from the Talleres Bazaar, to add to the store of other things which have been and are being made.

Talleres Bazaar. Final Figure.

The final figure returned by the Committee of the recent Bazaar at the Talleres is $7,300 m/n, a cheque for which amount has been duly paid in to the proper quarter and suitably acknowledged.

Plaza Jewell's Chastened Joy.

The Committee of the Rosario Athletic Club are in a mood of chastened joy at having to pay over to the Municipality the sum of $3,500 or thereabout towards the cost of paving in the vicinity. I say chastened, because they do not like paying it a little bit. It will probably knock the Gymkhana on the head for one thing, but I add joy, because the authorities set out to demand about $8000, and the members have Mr. Middleton to thank for initiating an assault on the necessary "wires" with a view to securing the reduction.

Alberdi Ladies' Work Party.

The ladies of the Alberdi Working Party, which meets on the 1st and 3rd Mondays of the month in the High School are arranging a Sale of Work to take place on the 8th of December, the proceeds to go towards liquidating the debt on the High School. A doll dressing competition is being organised, the conditions of which are that the whole cost of doll and materials for dressing shall not amount to more than $1.50. The dolls may be in either of two categories; those in which the clothes can be taken off, and those in which only the general effect of the dressed puppet counts.

I believe that some misunderstanding has arisen out of a paragraph which appeared in this column a week or two ago. What I wished to convey was not that the parents of pupils in the High School fail in their loyalty and support, but that it is amazing that given such a school in the district, it should not receive wider support, in which case the debt would naturally liquidate itself automatically.

Severe Hailstorm.

On Wednesday last week there was experienced one of the most severe hailstorms in the memory of the inhabitants of the strip of country visited. It took a line from S. by E., and made havoc of all gardens and nurseries in its track. It was very local and was definitely demarcated, reaching on the Rosario side just beyond the Funes Cemetery, and in the other direction away out beyond Roldan. The hailstones ran some of them to an inch in diameter, and driven by a heavy wind, they battered all plant life into the ground, stripped trees of leaves and fruit, and even bark in the case of saplings, and generally took the heart out of the amateur gardener. One or two nurserymen must have lost thousands of dollars' worth of stuff.

The Markets.

Wheat.—With more tenders for October delivery the market, as I anticipated, has declined until October wheat is quoted at $11. Of new crop there have been a few transactions in January delivery, as high as $10.25 having been paid, but trading is by no means general, and what little is doing is of a purely speculative character, as prices are nearly $2 a quintal above export parity. There have been further rains during the week, and the condition of the new crop is excellent, except perhaps in the North, where locusts have done some damage. Maize.—Maize is easier than a week ago, but holders do not seem to be in any hurry to meet the decline; rather the contrary, as they are only selling small quantities to keep their movement going quietly. Freights have had a reaction from the boom of

CORDOBA NEWS

(From Our Correspondent.)

October 11.

Church Services.

The Rev. W. J. Sugden conducted the Church Services on Sunday at the English Church Hall. Communications for the Rev. Sugden should be addressed to that gentleman at 24 de Septiembre 1186, Pueblo General Paz, Cordoba.

Billiard Tournament at the English Club.

Only a few pairs have started in the Billiard Tournament (Handicap) which is now taking place at the English Club. Mr. Brock defeated Mr. Robinson and Mr. Harris Smith was successful against Mr. McCulloch. The attention of the competitors is called to the fact that all first rounds must be played on or before October 14, and all second rounds by October 20.

The Spanish Bank Mystery.

About a year ago the sum of $166,000 was reported short at the Spanish Bank, and several of the bank staff were detained by the police authorities while the investigation was taking place. Some time afterward all the members of the staff were released with the exception of Ernesto Escuti and Manuel Lopez Cepeda. The local press now announce that Escuti has been found guilty of the fraud, and has been sentenced to 10 years' imprisonment at the Penitentiary, and that Cepeda has been convicted of being an accomplice, and must serve a sentence of 7 years at the same place. In addition to these sentences the missing money must be replaced with interest, and all the court expenses, etc., must be paid by the convicted men.

Spring Tennis Tournament. Cordoba Athletic Club.

Last Saturday and Sunday several matches were played in the Spring Tennis Tournament, with the following results:

Gentlemen's Singles.—Zimmer v. Harris Smith, Zimmer w.o. Schultz defeated Babb, 6-4, 6-3. Morton beat Cochrane, 6-1, 1-6, 6-3.

Ladies' Singles.—Miss Glancy beat Mrs. George Lang, 6-4, 6-3.

Mixed Doubles.—Miss Florence Morton and Zimmer beat Miss Phyllis Symonds and Babb, 6-3, 6-3. Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Marks beat Miss Phyllis Davis and Schibler, 3-6, 6-5, 6-4. Miss Morton and Zimmer beat Mrs. Geo. Lang and Dunbar, 6-3, 3-6, 6-2.

The time limit for playing the first rounds has been changed from Sunday, October 10, to Monday, October 18. All competitors not playing their first rounds by the latter date will be scratched. The time limit for the Gentlemen's Doubles has been extended to Monday, October 25. The handicaps and draw for the latter event are as follows:—Mark and Babb, minus 40, v. Parker and Schultz minus 46 30; Dunlap and Scrivener, scratch, v. Dunbar and Ferguson, minus 30; Harris Smith and Walters, scr. v. Schibler and Davis, minus 15; Morton and Zimmer, minus 40, v. Cochrane and McCulloch minus 26 30.

The handicapping in the matches played has worked out satisfactorily in every case, and some very exciting tennis has taken place.

Golf Tournament at Alta Gracia.

The majority of the golfers taking last week. It is reported that a steamer has been chartered for late October loading at 65s., which makes a decline of 5s. on the business done last week. This reaction is doubtless traceable to the easier maize markets in Europe.

ARGENTINE ANARCHIST

EXPULLED FROM ITALY

An Argentine citizen named Isias Schveide, has secured the distinction of expulsion from Italy on account of an anti-militarist propaganda which he has been actively conducting there.

The Buenos Aires police identify him with an individual who figured here as a professor of Anarchical opinions and was in the "Federacion Juvenil Socialista."

His wife was expelled at the same time from Italy. In any case the devotee of Peace has the misfortune to possess a German name, which tends to explain his attitude.

part in the Bogie contest at the excellent Alta Gracia Links for the Captain's prize, given by Mr. A. D. Dunbar, will take the 8.30 a.m. train Sunday morning from the F.C. Central Argentine Station.

Dance in Aid of the British Red Cross.

Considering that the Sub-Committee appointed for the carrying out of the arrangements for the dance given by Mrs. Hobbs at the Hall of the French Society on Friday night last, had less than two weeks to make all the preparations, they are to be congratulated on their strenuous work. The hall was most tastefully decorated with the flags of all the Allies, with the orchestra concealed behind beautiful palms. Among the prominent British, French, American and Italian residents present were the following: Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Dunbar, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Davis, Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Morton, Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Babb, Mr. and Mrs. V. R. Sadler, Mr. and Mrs. F. Lindeman, Mr. and Mrs. George Lang, Mr. and Mrs. Harrison, Miss Muriel Hobbs, Mr. Hubert Hobbs, Miss Florence Morton, Miss Phyllis Davis, Mr. Leonard, Miss Leonard, Mr. Reynier, President of the French Society, Mr. Even, French Consul, Mr. Bracke, Belgian Consul, Mr. Galot, Mr. Moroni, Mr. Domingo Castellanos, Mr. George A. Brigstocke, Mr. P. P. Schultz, Mr. Arthur Hughes, Mr. Brock, Mr. Donald Smith, Mrs. Baxter, Miss Gracie Baxter, Miss Gladys Symonds, Miss Phyllis Symonds, Mr. and Mrs. Zimmer, Miss Glancy, Mr. and Mrs. Walker, Mr. Land, Miss Land, Mr. and Mrs. S. T. Harris Smith, Mr. Kennard Davis, Mr. Schriber, Mr. A. Prince, Mrs. Wilkinson, Miss Hilda Wilkinson, Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Marks, Miss Brumley, Mr. Kenneth Struthers, Mr. and Mrs. A. Guppy, Miss Gladys Guppy, Miss Blanche Guppy, Mr. Cubas, Mr. Maldonado, and others. It is estimated that the total receipts which are applicable to the fund will be about $600.00. All returns of tickets and money should be made as soon as possible to the Hon. Secretary of the Sub-Committee, Mr. L. G. Babb, in order that the exact amount to be turned over to the Fund may be ascertained at the earliest opportunity.

Jockey Club.

The racing at the Jockey Club meeting on Sunday was of more than ordinary interest, the several events resulting as follows:—1st race, dead heat between Rodante and Pan, Rodante proving the winner in the run off. 2nd race, won by Valerosa, second Romelia. 3rd race, won by Turqueza. 4th race (classic), purse $3,000, won by Fanatico, Lehman second, and Galo third. 5th race, won by Pilosa, 2nd Gleusman. At the next meeting on October 24, the $3,000 classic will be the most interesting race of the season. With the last year's champion, Sir Florizel, who will be piloted by George Mountain, and also Montezuma in the same race, it will be a surprise to the talent if one of the Royal Stud thoroughbreds do not win. This will be Sir Florizel's first outing of the season, and great things are expected of him.

Alfredo J. White

Solicitor and Accountant

Cordoba 1321, Rosario

Tel. No. 5191

A LONDON LETTER

TO BRITISH PATRIOTIC COMMITTEE OF URUGUAY

(Exclusively Communicated.)

London, Sept. 6, 1915.

Underseas Warfare.

Justification has come with unexpected swiftness to those who refused to believe that Germany could regulate her submarine warfare in the manner foreshadowed in Count Bernstorff's pledges to America. As President Wilson argued in one of his earlier Notes, there is only one way of observing the rights of neutrals or non-combatants at sea, and that is to refrain from attacking innocent persons whether by torpedo or otherwise. It is useless, as the sinking of the "Hesperian" shows, to lay down rules and limitations for a species of warfare which if it is to be carried on at all must be conducted in practical defiance of legal and humanitarian considerations. Presumably the submarine that sunk the "Hesperian" had been forewarned of the new conditions, but owing to circumstances found it inexpedient to comply with them. So it is likely to be in future instances, for it is plainly impossible for a German submarine to resist temptation. Possibly the commanders of those craft may have had a hint from Admiral von Tirpitz not to construe their new instructions too stringently, but whether that be so or not, it is clear that if President Wilson desires to make sure of his diplomatic victory he will have to revert to his first demand and insist on the abandonment of undersea attacks on non-combatant vessels altogether.

Germany's Lost Submarines.

From American sources comes the suggestion, confirmed to some extent by Mr. Balfour, that Germany's pretended surrender in the submarine controversy represents, so far as it goes, a British rather than an American victory. In other words, the measures taken by the British Admiralty to deal with Germany's undersea boats have proved so effectual that the German Admiralty are glad of the American pretext as a means of helping them to cover up their discomfiture. Probably there is something in the theory. A French authority has pointed out that, thanks to their system of correspondence with the different belligerent countries, the American newspapers are more fully informed than the British Press as to the German losses in submarines. In England all that is publicly and officially known (apart from a few earlier announcements of isolated successes) is that the losses have been important and formidable. If the American inference founded on fuller information is correct, the losses must have been important indeed. Public curiosity concerning the position has been agreeably stimulated by those hints, which, so far however, have failed to provoke the Admiralty into further disclosures.

President Wilson's Policy.

As to the importance of Germany's so-called concessions to President Wilson's demands, there have been different opinions from the beginning. At first the general disposition here, as in America, was to hail the event as an almost unqualified triumph for American diplomacy. On any interpretation, that was a mistaken view, for even if the new undertaking were intended to cover ships carrying cargo as well as vessels usually described as passenger liners, it would still fall short of the assurances originally sought by the United States Government in the name of law and humanity. Merely to warn such vessels that they were about to be sunk, and that their crews and passengers had better take to the boats would clearly not be sufficient, and, whether sufficient or not, President Wilson has put his claims much higher and may now more than ever be expected to insist on their recognition. After all, in the military phrase, he has pierced the German line of defence and has reached a position which enables him to improve on the advantage thus gained. From the British point of view, this is the most promising aspect of the dispute in its latest phase. International jurists here would consider it a calamity if neutral States were meekly to subscribe to the theory that a belligerent State might legally destroy or place in jeopardy neutral lives on such flimsy conditions as those indicated in the German "concession."

Maritime Law and the Germans.

As an approach to a discussion of a subject which is now touched upon in nearly every German official communication, the bargaining with America may have a far-reaching sequel. No formal attempt, it seems, is to be made to make the negotiations depend on America's attitude in relation to the "freedom of the seas," but none the less it is clear that Germany hopes to establish a claim on America's good offices in the matter. Whatever the phrase may mean—and assuredly it sounds a little incongruous on the lips of the authors of the Lusitania, Arabic and Hesperian outrages—the subject of maritime law, as Sir Edward Grey has acknowledged, will form a fitting question for international consideration at the close of the war. But Germany, we are told, cannot wait till the close of the war. Not in her own interests—because her statesmen publicly express their gratitude to England for a naval policy which has enabled the German people to develop their internal resources beyond all expectation—but in the interests of the smaller States she insists that the seas should be thrown open now, and German ports made fully available for neutral commerce. Perhaps the argument discloses more than is intended. One thing which it undoubtedly reveals is that Germany's internal resources, despite their boasted impregnability, are beginning to feel the weight of the British sea blockade.

Teuton Peace Terms.

In the circumstances of the moment, with the growing strength of the Allied forces in the Western field and the improving prospects of a culminating success in the Dardanelles, the "peace terms" circulated in America by the Central Powers have caused even more derision than indignation here, qualified, it must be owned, by some incredulity. Yet it is probably the very imminence of a decision in Gallipoli that has suggested to Germany the idea of dangling before the eyes of the Balkan States her proposals for a territorial redistribution in that part of the world, partly as a bribe and partly as a menace. Whatever be its move, there is an air of desperation about the proceeding highly encouraging to the hopes of the Allies. It is probably not too much to say that the proposals circulated in America are a reflection of the fears of Constantinople.

National Service and the Army.

When Parliament resumes its sittings within the next few days, it is probable that the subject of conscription—or, as it is now more generally called, national service—will come up for discussion. Yet on the whole, opinions seem to be hardening against the recent tendency to deal with this vital matter as an ordinary controversial issue. Several statesmen of the highest eminence—one need name only Lord Roseberry and Lord Cromer—have declined to take part in the discussion solely on the ground that it is for Lord Kitchener and the Government to decide what is wanted, and for the nation to respond when the decision is announced. Nobody

PATRIOTIC NOTES, URUGUAY

THE COURTESY OF THE BRITISH SOLDIER.

The following letter of thanks has been received by an Anglo-Uruguayan contributor to the fund for supplying tobacco to the troops:—

Dear Mrs. Fitzpatrick,

I have received the cigarettes sent by you, and wish to thank you very much for your great kindness. All the boys are strong and well here, and we have just had a little smack at the Germans and took some trenches from them. I have been dodging them for months now, and hope to do same till the finish of the war. Must now close again thanking you for your kindness. Trusting this will find you in the of health.

Believe me

Yours sincerely,

A. WOODROFFE,

Lance-Corporal

OFF TO THE WAR.

"B" Company, Royal Fusiliers.

Mr. D. M. Dinwiddie, Assistant Engineer in the Central Uruguay Railway Company, sailed by the s.s. Roturua to volunteer for the front. He will shortly be followed by Mr. Cyril Gwynn, Traffic Superintendent; Mr. Simesen, Assistant Traffic Inspector, and probably another employé of the Central Uruguay Railway Company intent on the same patriotic mission. Mr. Simesen is by nationality a Dane, but in his desire to fight for the cause of the Allies he hopes to don the uniform of a British soldier and fight side by side with the latter in humiliating the impudent bragging Hun.

Mr. Felix Vitale, son of Dr. Vitale, who was studying for an engineer in England, has already received a commission as Second Lieutenant in the 3rd South Staffordshire Regiment. Mr. Felix Vitale is a son of Uruguay. All honour to him!

THE ASISTENCIA PUBLICA

MESSRS. PICCARDO'S GIFT.

A most welcome and valuable gift has been presented to the Asistencia Pública by the firm of Messrs. Piccardo and Company. The gift consists of an immense amount of drugs and medicines of an indispensable nature and of which this public body has of late been extremely short.

Yesterday the first large consignment arrived at their chief offices in Esmeralda, and other consignments will continue to arrive until the whole gift has been delivered. The generosity of the firm can be estimated when it is understood that the present will be sufficient to supply all the hospitals in necessities during the course of next month. The approximate value thereof is $15,000.

doubts that a patriotic response would be forthcoming even if the call of the Government were for some system of State compulsion. Meanwhile no such demand has been made, and it is for that and for no other reason, as neutral observers would do well to realise, that the sectional agitation for conscription is provoking so much hostility. On the merits of the question there is a general suspension of judgment. So far as the country is at present aware, Lord Kitchener may have as large an army as he desires. Nobody outside the official ring knows the precise numbers, but it is no secret that the flow of recruits has been increasing for the last thirteen months, and that it is still going on steadily and without pause.

B.A.'S POPULATION

IS IT DECREASING?

"La Razon" states that like London, Berlin, and Paris, Buenos Aires though not the capital of a Belligerent State, is suffering alarmingly from depopulation. This appears to be a very pessimistic view.

In September there were 3969 births and 2147 deaths, a credit balance of 1822. The alarming figure is evidently that of overseas arrivals and departures which were 2500 of the former, and 10,000 departures. All these however were not inhabitants of the Capital, and the causes of these declensions, which even if continued for some time, cannot be serious, are purely temporary and will adjust themselves.

JAPAN AND THE ARGENTINE

SPECIAL REPRESENTATION AT MIKADO'S CORONATION.

The celebrations in respect to the coronation of the Mikado will take place in Tokio on November 10.

This decision has obliged the Argentine Government to appoint an especial representative and a vessel of the Argentine to be present at these festivities.

To this position Doctor Francisco Ortiz has been appointed by the executive. The Chilean Government, too, have acted in a like manner, by appointing Doctor Herboso their plenipotenciary for the occasion.

The vessel selected is the "Presidente Sarmiento," under the command of Captain Jalour.

IMPORTED CIGARS

REQUEST FOR REDUCTION OF DUTIES.

The tobacco and cigar importers have approached the Executive to obtain a modification of Law 9467, in which a substantial addition was made to the import tax on cigars. The petitioners suggest that the figure at which the tax stood before the increase should be reverted to.

Consideration is being given to the request by the Minister of Finance, and the importers are hopeful of getting the reduction, or some reduction, as they allege that the burden placed on this class of business is at the present time such as to cripple it seriously.

MARTIAL HONOUR

SOLDADOS CHALLENGE BY WIRE

As a consequence of interchange of telegrams, which the high discordant parties mutually considered offensive, an incidente has arisen between General Gregorio Velez and General José F. Uriburu. Being men of the sword they feel it incumbent on them to be "sudden and quick to quarrel" and have, to carry on the affair consistently sent their seconds to each other, by telegraph. General Velez is returning to Buenos Aires but General Uriburu's whereabouts is not specified. Possibly the combat also will be conducted by wire and the comedy will be complete. What an excellent example for the army.

THE BOER WAR

(To the Editor)

Sir,—Correspondent would be glad to know the exact date the Boer War commenced, and the exact date "Peace" was proclaimed.

Thanking for your reply.

Yours, etc.

CURIOSA.

Buenos Aires, Oct. 8.

(The Boer ultimatum to Britain was delivered on October 9, 1899—sixteen years ago to-day. War broke out at 5 p.m., Oct. 11, and the first shot was fired at Kaippan (Cape Colony) on the following day. Peace was signed on March 23, 1902.—Ed. THE HERALD).

ROSS'S Belfast Ginger Ale

PATRIOTIC FUNDS

BRITISH PATRIOTIC COMMITTEE

61st LIST OF SUBSCRIPTIONS.

The following remittances have been made this week:—

Prince of Wales's Fund . . .	£1,000
Red Cross Fund	£150
Belgian Relief	£50

PRINCE OF WALES'S FUND.

Amount already acknow- ledged	$139,921.98
F.C.C.A. Magazine (see List "A")	533.30
Leng, Roberts and Co., Staff Mrs. Harold G. Brown . . .	156.00
I. and R. P. Bank, Tucuman Branch	40.00
Bahia Blanca British Relief Fund	527.50
Anonymous	5.00
F.C.S. Stores Dept., Talleres (See List "B")	60.00
La Plata and District Branch (See List "C")	297.00
Alfred W. Towse 5.04 o/s . .	11.45
A.	10.00
Per L. and R. P. Bank, Ltd. : Leach's Argentine Estates .	245.25
C. Sibley	10.00

$141,827.48

List "A."—Geo. H. White $10, Elect. Staff, Victoria 140, J. A. Meelboom 50, W. J. Lambert 10, S. J. Johannessen 5, F. F. Wieland 5, A. Paterson 5, M. H. Green 3, Dundley L. Chalk 2, W. S. Harris 3, W. J. Waller 2, L. MacNeish 2, A. E. Headon 5, W. Hill 3, J. H. Paris 5, H. H. Knowles 5, W. F. Hamilton 5, E. Erickson 3, C. A. Manley 1, S. Sinigen 1, W. Astbury 1, M. E. Polack 1, S. M. Tami 1, S. Kasas 2, J. G. Pire 1, E. G. Jones 1, A. Barclay 1, E. Geromini 1, T. R. Foster 1, R. Kean 3, T. de la Vega 1, J. W. Radford 3, H. G. Lewis 3, E. H. Doveton 3, E. C. Browne 5, A. W. Charman 10, C. Ferreira 5, A. J. Tipple 5, W. Dull 3, F. C. Salacroup 3, F. Aragon 1, E. D. Marquez 1, R. O'Donoghue 3, J. A. Lopez 1, E. Bujeiro 1, A. Rebagliatti 1, R. E. Roberts 2.80, W. J. Atkins 3, Thos. Dixon 2, M. Gaume 1, C. Cavanna 1, F. Cooper 1, W. J. Burton 3, C. L. Thomson 3, G. Nottage 3, T. Pride 25, L. Pride 10, H. D. Emery 10, W. N. Gardiner 10, A. Postel 10, G. Huntington 10, G. Jarrett 10, E. P. Bowling 5, W. J. French 5, H. Hurden 5, H. G. Horne 5, T. Seddon 5, W. Gallacher 5, J. MacCormack 5, F. Gonzalez 5, E. Jones 5, J. Hetherington 5, F. G. Bird 5, H. B. Thompson 5, A. L. Macfarlane 5, "Campana's Bull Dog" 5, J. Ihler 5, F. Fielder 2.50, J. W. Crosby 2, J. C. Espriu 2, J. Iglesias 2, J. C. Porter 2, M. Mastro 2, P. Bondes 2, E. Bruce 1, E. Bruce 1, H. W. Battecock 1, F. Furlong 1, A. E. Walmsley 1, L. Cudotti 1, J. de la Salle 1, F. A. Rios 1, D. Maestre 1, A. Larramendi 1, J. Perea 1, H. Conlin 1, J. Carolli 1; total $533.30.

List "B."—L. J. Boyer $20, "Suffolk" 6, "Anon." 5, H. J. Streton 5, A. Lambden 5, C. Dixon 3, J. Oates 3, W. E. Scorey 2, "N. N." 1, T. W. Ludlow 5; total $60.

List "C."—J. van Began $10, J. F. Chalmers 5, W. B. Hunt 20, V. Lindop 200, W. Puleston 20, W. Stringer 10, G. Shadforth 10, Mrs. G. Shadforth 10, "No. 675" 2, C. Westberg 10; total $297.

RED CROSS FUND.

Amount already acknow- ledged	$19,704.10
Bahia Blanca British Relief Fund	40.00
Mr. and Mrs. W. Wyatt Hay- ward	100.00
J. L. Q.	10.00
Geese	14.15
P. H. Chevallier Boutell: Amount received from the British community of Ju- juy, per Miss E. Leach . .	827.00
A.	10.00

$20,705.25

BELGIAN RELIEF FUND.

Amount already acknow- ledged	4,636.10
Fablon	10.00
A.	10.00

$4,656.10

OFFICERS' FAMILIES' FUND.

Amount already acknow- ledged	1,000.00
Bahia Blanca British Relief Fund	4.50
Colonia 16 de Octubre, Chu- but (see List "D")	756.66
Per L. and R. P. Bank, Ltd. : C. Sibley	10.00

$1,771.16

List "D."—Subscription taken up in "Colonia 16 de Octubre," Chubut, in commemoration of the 28th of July, 1915, being a subscription to the Widows' and Orphans' Funds of the Allies. One-third part to the British. —T. Freeman $100, J. Freeman 50, G. J. Austin 50, R. Austin 50, E. Austin 50, Salsamendi Hnos. 50, B. Roberts 50, J. Uthuralt 50, J. Morgan 50, V. Avestaran 50, Barber y Vallogia 50, A. Montaner 50, D. O. Williams 50, E. A. Hainge 50, W. G. Rees 50, D. G. Rees 50, D. Garsindin 30, R. P. Gabito 25, S. Williamson 10, W. Ll. Jones (Glyn) 100, W. T. Thomas 50, B. Evans 50, B. J. Mulhall 50, C. G. MacWilliams 50, R. Clarke 100, H. Ch. Roberts 50, R. Brunt 100, J. Autuenao 50, F. Calatynd 10, E. Owen 50, R. Owen 50, L. Ferrari 5, S. T. de Vallogia 25, Ll. Jenkins 50, P. J. Evans 50, D. P. Roberts 50, A. Miguens 25, A. M. Pugh 50, D. Williams 25, J. E. Evans 20, M. Evans 10, E. Evans 5, S. Evans 5, E. Evans 5, G. Retamal 10, J. Samuel 10, E. Williams 15, J. Williams 100, H. Williams 15, J. Evans 50, J. Tudor Williams 50, X. X. 50, D. T. Pugh 20, total $2,270. (One-third part corresponding to British Officers' Families' Fund, $756.66).

GENERAL FUND.

Amount already acknow- ledged	$152,166.96
F.C.C.A. Magazine (see List "E")	196.00
Percy Grant	25.00
W. F. Nixon	10.00
J. E. Buchanan	10.00
W. F. Walker	10.00
Adrian James	30.00
Ernest D. Drabble	100.00
G. L. S. Wood (September and October)	50.00
L. and R. P. Bank, Tucuman Branch	150.00
Fablon	30.00
E. S.	50.00
F. A. Kane	5.00
Colonia 16 de Octubre—Chu- but (see List "F")	694.00
2nd Devon	25.00
E. P. Vint	10.00
A. Anthony	250.00
Rev. W. Fleming, D.D. . . .	5.00
La Plata and District Branch (see List "G")	186.00
James Dey	100.00
John Lloyd	20.00
Anonymous	150.00
A.	10.00
F.C.O. Mechanical Staff, Lin- iers (see List "H")	91.50
Per British Bank of S.A. : Officers and Staff of British Bank	242.00
F. L. Johnson	5.00
D. N. Ward	5.00
J. V. Holtum	10.00
A. Ferrari Olazabal	5.00
Per Anglo S. A. Bank : F. Furlong	5.00

$154,601.46

List "E."—T. $10, G. F. Sampson 15, W. M. W. 5, J. R. S. Fox 5, J. B. 10, C. Frank 5, W. J. H. 1, S. E. M. 10, H. W. 10, J. Morgan 5, W. T. Brough 5, A. M. D. 2, A. E. W. 10, T. K. B. 10, B. de la Ouesta 5, W. J. Lambert 10, W. H. Porteous 3, J. N. Robertson 5, J. Goodfellow 2, J. E. Armstrong 2, K. A. van Wassenaar 10, A. H. Wade 5.

W. Sleet 3, R. M. Livingstone 3, G. Hayes 2, P. Rogers 2, W. Martin 1, Patrick Malone 5, J. Harding 5, A. H. Conner 5, C. A. R. Stuart 25; total, $196.00.

List "F."—Subscription raised in "Colonia 16 de Octubre," Chubut, in commemoration of the 28th July, 1915, in benefit of the British Patriotic Fund.—Mrs. W. C. Thomas $20, D. R. Thomas 20, G. C. Thomas 10, Gwen C. Thomas 5, D. C. Thomas 1, A. C. Thomas 5, M. C. Thomas 1, L. C. Thomas 1, Mrs. R. H. Williams 5, M. J. Williams 5, W. A. Williams 5, Winifred Williams 5, G. Jones 10, Mrs. G. Jones 10, N. Jones 5, F. J. Jones 5, S. A. Jones 5, L. Jones 5, N. Jones 5, G. Jones 2, E. Jones 1, L. Jones 1, A. Ll. Jones 1, A. Pimentel 5, M. E. Jones 30, J. E. Jones 5, T. Nicolls 10, R. O. Williams 10, V. Carbone 1, H. Howells 5, S. G. Underwood 50, D. Evans 5, P. H. Williams 10, E. H. Hammond and family 100, M. Silva 5, R. Williams 5, O. W. Jones 20, Mrs. J. Evans 10, B. and E. Evans 10, C. Evans 2, E. Evans 1, M. Evans 1, T. H. Parry 2, G. Thomas 15, E. A. Jones 10, M. Jones 5, J. D. Evans 15, E. Evans 1, J. Evans 1, G. Jones 5, W. G. Jones 10, Mrs. W. J. Jones 5, A. Jones 10, A. Jones 30, D. Williams 10, J. Williams 10, W. M. Davies 10, R. L. Roberts 10, S. Ingram 10, I. Hughes 10, J. D. Evans 20, P. Branesce 5, R. F. Jones 12, W. A. Thomas 25, Mrs. E. Thomas 5, W. B. Roberts 10, J. Owen 20; total $694.

List "G."—A. Dick $10, J. Eiriz 1, W. J. Hughes 50, Mrs. W. J. Hughes 50, R. C. Osborne 10, Puleston Boas and Co. 60, A. H. Quirk 5, total $186.

List "H."—W. Squire $3, C. LeLievier 1, E. Hansen 3, G. Airth 5, G. C. Ferreira 1.50, C. R. Gabb 5, C. Chapuis 2, C. Ainsworth 1, A. H. Dudbridge 3, G. James 3, C. W. Airth 5, G. Hopkins 5, J. McGough 3, J. Nicholls 1, L. Ruythink 2, A. B. Comber 3, J. A. Ranger 10, J. Rudolf 2, C. Jones, jr. 0.50, G. H. H. Culley 5, M. A. Gonzalez 0.50, A. Wareing 5, A. W. Bannatyne 20, A. Smith 3; total $91.50.

Subscriptions should be sent to the Hon. Treasurer, Mr. Thos. Lloyd, Calle Sarmiento 459, or paid into the accounts opened in the L. and R. P. Bank, Ltd., British Bank of S. A., Ltd., L. and Brazilian Bank, Ltd., Anglo S. A. Bank, Ltd.

For general information, subscription forms, etc., application should be made to the Hon. Secretary, Mr. H. E. Powell-Jones, Calle Sarmiento 643.

AEROPLANE "RIVER PLATE NO. 2."

LIST OF ADDITIONAL DONATIONS.

Previously acknowledged . . .	$6,240
E. E. E.	7.00
M. C. Roberts	10.00
Thos. Norkett	50.00
David Hogg	50.00
Chas. C. Cumming	20.00
B. O. C.	100.00
J. M. and Staff	84.00
J. D. T.	20.00
W. E. Egerton	10.00
E. C. Runnacles	50.00
F. R. Bentley	10.00
J. Manning	5.00
S. Holland	10.00
H. Worthington	10.00
Collected by P. A. McKerr- row: Mrs. Pye $5, E. T. 10, J. S. Manfredi 3, "Not wanted in Sam- aria" 160, Proceeds of Football Match 700 . . .	878.00
D. McNab	10.00
E. H. Pons	10.00
C. 45	5.00
S. P. Garfield	10.00
A. S. Hume	25.00
T. P. Kavanagh	10.00
Mrs. T. P. Kavanagh . . .	10.00
J. G. Kavanagh	5.00
M. H. T.	5.00

Collected by Alfred Miles:

T. Garaghan $22.90, F. Hnos. 1.10, A. Miles 20, R. E. Boulton 10 . . .	54.00
C. H. Turner	20.00
C. W. Martin	5.00
G. James	2.00
R. H. W. Martin	2.00
S. T. Marsh	5.00
W. H. Taylor	5.00
A. W. Brown	50.00
James Porteous	20.00

J. R. Holmes	10.00
E. Noble	50.00
Miss F. A. Lucas	5.00

Collected by Mrs. C. C.

Cumming:—Nora Mac- Donald $10, Ailsa Mac- Donald 10, Keith Mac- Donald 10, Walter Mur- ray 10, James Geddes 10, A. W. Kidd 10, A. McKerrow 10, N. Marrs 5, J. McCombie 10, L. Reynold 10, A. E. Con- ran 10, P. Harrington 5, Frances Anthony 5, Eve- lyn Richards 5, Geo. Campbell 10, Dilys Cum- ming 5, S. A. Copper 10, F. O. Stevens 10, J. Hutton 2	162.00
E. Thurtell	10.00
G. J. Vinnicombe	10.00
Miss M. J. Dawson . . .	5.00
Miss J. A. Baker	25.00
A. A.	1.00
M. E. N.	10.00
Mr. and Mrs. Hearn . . .	10.00
A. S.	2.50
M. S.	2.50
"Amours Propres"	80.00
G. B. S.	5.00

Collected by N. H. Neil-

son:—C. M. Thomas $5, G. J. McMullen 5, D. S. S. 3, T. Granger 5, N. H. Neilson 25	43.00
--	-------

Manager, Staff and Collections from 212 lists sent to different railway stations of the Buenos Aires Western Railway 3,830.45
From the Boys at Sta.
MacLellans

$12,148.45

BAHIA BLANCA CONTRIBUTIONS

The following is a list of donations, monthly subscriptions, etc., received towards the Bahia Blanca British Relief Fund, from July 31 to September 30, 1915:—V. R. Abell $50, W. Anderson 10, E. H. Alt 15, W. K. Birks 10, M. Blanchfield 10, F. Brooks 4, J. Berry 50, J. H. Brewer 40, C. Ball 10, W. Butler 2, G. Clark 20, R. L. Carpenter 20, E. A. Conran 100, W. Den-nie 3, W. H. Drew 10, H. Furmston 40, J. V. Fursman 15, G. Falconer 2, S. Foot 3, D. Guillen 2, C. H. Graham 10, W. B. Harding Green 100, E. Horne 5, J. Horne 1, Mrs. Jas. Hilton 60, Jas. Hilton 40, A. Hutton 20, T. C. S. Haslam 20, J. Hutton 20, S. Iglesias 20, D. Jones 10, C. E. Joliffe 2, C. Joliffe 8, B. Jacobsen 10, R. G. King 20, W. Kennedy 40, A. H. King 6, H. McCoubrey 2, G. McKenzie 13.50, J. McCoubrey 2, A. Morrison 5, G. McKay 10, T. J. McCombie 50, T. Marshall 10, G. Moore 10, L. W. Migotti 20, H. McAllister 50, B. Nunn 10, J. Poodts 5, F. C. Pearson 80, P. Powell 5, Port of Bahia Blanca Athletic Club 47.18, T. Quigley 1, W. Ross 4, W. Ratcliffe 5, C. Rogers 10, A. Sims 1, Mr. Sims 3, W. Sheriff 2, Rev. J. Sanderson (proceeds collection on August 4) 112, E. H. Shilton 60, J. Sullivan 30, F. B. Tregarthen 15, H. Theobald 10, G. Thomas 5, J. M. Vergara 20, A. P. Webb 10, H. Woodward 1, Annie and Juanita Plunkett, from sale of plants and flowers 30; total collected $20,275.21; expenses $69; total $20,206.21.

DISTRIBUTION.

Relief of Reservists' Families	252.00
Relief of Widows and Orphans of Soldiers and Sailors killed in the War	703.30
British Red Cross Fund . . .	1,125.75
Payment of Volunteers' pas- sages	100.00
Prince of Wales's Fund . . .	18,025.16
	$20,206.21

LETTER FROM H.M.S. GLASGOW.

H.M.S. "Glasgow" at Sea,

August 13, 1915.

Dear Sir,

On behalf of the officers and ship's company of H.M.S. "Glasgow," I wish to thank the British community of Bahia Blanca most sincerely for their kindness in sending on several occasions gifts of warm clothing and read-

BRITISH WOMEN'S PATRIOTIC ASSOCIATION

The monthly meeting of the Association was held on Friday morning, October 8th, at the Plaza Hotel, Sir Reginald Tower, the Honorary President, in the chair.

After the minutes of the previous meeting had been read and confirmed, Sir Reginald Tower said:

"On October 10th of last year, I had the honour of presiding at the first meeting of the British Women's Patriotic Association after my return from England, and it is exceedingly gratifying to me to be invited again to occupy this position and to have an opportunity of reviewing in some sort the arduous, loyal and efficient work of this Patriotic Association during an unparalleled twelve-month.

"Let me first allude briefly to the genesis of the Association. When war broke out in August last year, Mr. Norman, then His Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires, took the necessary steps to form a committee to represent the community. With this intent he organized a central body for purposes of patriotic effort and to deal with enquiries arising out of the war. This Committee is the British Patriotic Committee, the usefulness and activity of which require no explanation from me at this moment.

"The work to be done would have been sadly incomplete if the British community had relied on the Patriotic Committee alone. In their wisdom (and I can say it, as I was on the high seas and had no voice in the deliberations), our Chargé d'Affaires and his counsellors issued invitations for a further meeting—this time to be composed of ladies—and on Sept. 19, a large and representative gathering of over 100 ladies took place. It then took concrete form under the name of the British Women's Patriotic Association. They did me the honour of appointing me Hon. President; a large Council was elected with the express purpose of including prominent and zealous residents in districts both within and without the Capital, and Mrs. Hope Gibson and Mrs. Boote were named Hon. Treasurer and Hon. Secretary respectively.

"The object of the meeting was to decide how the British women in the Argentine Republic, and particularly in Buenos Aires and neighbourhood, could best assist the men who are fighting, and at the same time minister to the welfare of the wives and families of those absent on active service. It was felt that although much had already been set on foot by the initiative and energy of individuals, the formation of a Central Association, including the name of every British lady in the Argentine Republic, elected without the formalities usually incident to such Societies, would facilitate the efforts of those who were able and anxious to help.

"The chief aims of the Association from the outset were (1) manufacture, purchase, and despatch of comforts for the troops; (2) collection of funds for the various charitable and relief funds organised at home and (3) organisation of entertainments locally which should give all alike the opportunity of participating in patriotic endeavour.

"What the energies of the Women's Association have been—and I would specially single out Mrs. Hope Gibson and Mrs. Boote as Hon. Treasurer and Hon. Secretary—during the year is known to all here, and I ing matter, all of which have been very much appreciated by us. The warm clothing especially has been a great benefit during the times when the ship's duties have made it necessary for us to live in cold climates.

I regret that there has been a delay in writing, but it is not always easy to identify from what sources the goods arrive.

I am,
Yours sincerely,
(Signed) JOHN LUCE.

should indeed be glad if any words of mine could carry to all members of our community the gratitude we owe them for the Patriotic organisation connected with this work.

"The funds for which money has been collected and remitted home are:

The Prince of Wales's Fund.
Belgian Relief Fund.
Officers' Families' Fund.
British Red Cross Fund.
Pipe and Tobacco Fund.

"The methods by which the Association have helped the various funds are: Dances, bridge-drives and bridge teas; ice festivals at the Palais de Glacé; an equestrian Gymkhana; mixed foursomes at golf; dollar fund—this last highly productive; tableaux vivants by school children, raffles, etc., etc.

"Work in many ways has been organised, and the products in the shape of knitted and other garments, tobacco, and what not for the soldiers have been sent home and warmly appreciated. I have personal experience of the share Argentine ladies have had in contributing to the comfort of our troops in this regard.

"To all such I repeat our warmest thanks.

"I have already had occasion to bring to the notice of H.M. Government the effective work done by the B.W.P.A., and I sincerely trust that the good work will continue undiminished till the end of the war. We can then feel that we have done our bit, each and every one, and shall ensure a lasting memory being preserved of the splendid assistance rendered cheerfully and unselfishly and efficiently by British womankind throughout the Empire in general, and in our own circle in particular. Whether as worthy followers of Florence Nightingale, as workers in ammunition factories, as tramway or railway officials, in a thousand useful occupations, or the militants of yesterday transformed into workers of to-day, our women are truly setting a splendid example. Can we not also gratefully record our admiration for the position assumed by French women during the war? Many who were considered frivolous, caring for nothing but fashion and pleasure have shown themselves to be heroines in every sense. What Italian ladies are doing here in Buenos Aires, in connection with the reservist's families can only be believed when seen, and I was proud to witness the extent to which the ladies concerned in their loyal work are carrying effective administration.

"Are not all these signs a happy augury for the future of our allied countries? Assuredly they are.

"One word, and I have done. Last year I commended to your notice a scheme for raising subscriptions for the account of the Prince of Wales's Fund or the National Relief Fund. These subscriptions have yielded substantial sums and it is now considered that a special preference might for the future be given to the Officers' Families' Fund. This fund which must appeal particularly to the sympathies of the members of this Association is not only deserving of every support, but must require a pecuniary support in increasing measure with the continuance of the war. I throw out this suggestion that at all events for the present our generous well-wishers be urged to earmark their subscriptions and donations (the monthly subscriptions for choice) to the Officers' Families' Fund.

"I will now call upon Mrs. Hope Gibson to present her statement of the finances of the Association, but before doing so, I would like in the name of all present to express our heartfelt sympathy with her and her family in the loss of Capt. Wynter, who has fallen on the field of battle."

The statement presented by the Hon. Treasurer was as follows:

Statement of amounts received and remitted during the year:

Prince of Wales's Fund—
Received: $40,332.30; remitted: $39,279.80 (£3,490.6s. 3d.) Balance: $1,053.50.

Pipe and Tobacco Fund—

Received: $1,070.20; remitted: $942.20 (£82 14s. 2d.) Balance $128.

Belgian Relief Fund—

Received: $2,854.65; remitted: $2,722.86 (£239 7s. 11d.) Balance $131.79.

Officers' Families' Fund—

Received: $6,293.65; remitted: $5,800.97 (£507 10s.) Balance: $492.68.

Red Cross Fund—

Received: $4,707.90; remitted: $5,612.11 (£500). Deficit: $904.21.

Totals—Received: $55,258.70; remitted: $54,357.94 (£4,819 18s. 4d.) Balance $900.76.

Further remittances to leave by the Amazon:

Patriotic Dollar Fund.

Remitted to St. John's Ambulance Association . . . $9,270.77
Remitted to Officers' Families' Fund . . . 7,481.75
Remitted to Prince of Wales's Fund . . . 530.00
Remitted to Belgian Refugees . . . 381.00
Remitted to Red Cross Fund . . . 1,324.60

Total . . . $18,988.12

The meeting passed a hearty vote of thanks to Sir Reginald Tower for his remarks and attendance, and it was unanimously resolved that the Association continue its work on the present lines, remitting all amounts collected to the headquarters of the various funds in Great Britain.

The following letter was read from Mrs. Cook, of London:

"I have followed with interest the splendid work being carried on by your committee, but venture to make a suggestion and at the same time offer my co-operation should no such scheme already exist, and you care to make use of my services.

"Of the thousands come over to serve, there must be hundreds at the front who have no parents, relations or even friends on this side to whom they can apply for little necessities or luxuries to be sent them.

"Likewise parents and relations in Argentina, so far away from their dear ones, for lack of some one here to attend to the purchasing and forwarding of small parcels to the Continent are deprived of the pleasure of sending them.

I am sure it would be a great satisfaction to those in the far off home as well as to those on the battlefield, or perhaps in "prisoner's" camps in the enemies' countries, to know there is some one with whom they may communicate comparatively near at hand.

"On behalf of the Committee, or else independently on behalf of those interested, should you prefer, and will make it generally known, through the local press, or otherwise, I shall be glad to attend to any commissions (free of all charge, except actual out-of-pocket expenses), if accompanied by full particulars as to articles wanted, address of recipient and remittance. I enclose a list of what may be sent from any large store in London, for 10s., smaller or larger hampers ranging from 5s. to 15s., for one man are also made up.

I am, Sir,

Yours faithfully,

(Mrs.) JESSIE E. COOK.

P.S.—The following list gives an idea of contents of hamper, value 10s. which is packed and delivered free to prisoners of war and soldiers in France: 2 tins café au lait, 1 tin Ideal milk, 1 tin cocoa, 1 tin corned beef, 1 tin Cheddar cheese, 1 tin Bath Oliver biscuits, 1 tin marmalade, 1 tin butter, and 50 Navy cut cigarettes.

An additional charge of 1s. is made for postage to the Dardanelles.

A letter from Lady Lansdowne was also read, thanking the Association for the generous contributions they had sent to the Officers' Families' Fund.

A miniature of the King of the Belgians, donated by Mrs. K. Gregg, and by Mrs. R. Paton, was won by Mrs. Frank Foster, the holder of No. 117, and realised the amount of $242 for the Officers' Families' Fund.

A vote of thanks was passed to the proprietors of the "Misterio" cigarettes, and it was reported that the Red Cross Fund had benefitted to the extent of $250 by the competition organised in connection with the Mission to Seamen Bazaar. It was further reported that the Ice Carnival at the Palais de Glacé, has realised the amount of $1,724.95 for the benefit of the Red Cross Fund. Particular thanks were expressed to Messrs. Harrods (Buenos Aires) Ltd. for their generous assistance.

The Prince of Wales's Fund was increased by $62, as the result of the word competition organised by Miss F. M. Brown.

It was announced that a garden party in aid of patriotic funds will be held in Hurlingham on Saturday, Nov. 6, under the auspices of various ladies resident in Hurlingham. Further details will be announced later.

A special vote of thanks was accorded to Sr. Gavuzzi, Manager of the Plaza Hotel, for his great kindness in putting a room at the disposal of the Association for their monthly meetings throughout the year.

The following list gives details of articles sent home to hospitals and men at the front during the year:

1232 pairs socks.
101 helmets.
36 pairs stockings.
133 pairs mittens or wristlets.
272 mufflers.
229 day shirts (flannel).
208 night shirts.
43 wither pads.
54 house wives.
7 pairs knee caps.
8 pairs armlets.
2 chest protectors.
85 slings.
4 waist coats (knitted).
57 knitted bandages.
5 jerseys.
14 sweaters.
25 pairs pants (woollen).
30 woollen vests.
65 suits pyjamas.
10 blankets.
12 towels.
4 sheets.
4 feather pillows.
324 pillow cases.
212 body belts.
22 bed jackets.
835 respirators.
2 bed quilts.
Gloves.
Cigarettes.
Post-cards.
Pencils.

And 35 cases for Belgian refugees. 4 cases were sent home by the "Amazon" as follows:

1 case for the Hospital (sent to the St. John's Ambulance Association):

2 blankets.
2 sheets.
1 quilt.
4 suits pyjamas.
3 body belts.
6 pairs socks.
6 towels.

1 case for the soldiers (sent to St. John's Ambulance Association):

6 flannel shirts.
19 mufflers.
49 pairs socks.
7 pairs mittens.
5 wither pads.
3 body belts.
2 helmets.
9 slings.

1 case for Queen Mary's Guild.
1 case for the Belgian refugees.

The following articles are acknowledged:

Received for the soldiers:
N. N. 11 mufflers.
Miss M. T., 3 pairs socks.
Mrs. Lea, 4 pairs socks.
Mrs. R. V. Dawney, 8 slings, 2 pairs knee-caps.
Mrs. R. Paton, 3 cholera belts, 1 pair socks, 2 scarves.
Mrs. P. Brown, 2 shirts.
Castletown, 1 pair socks.
Anonymous, 3 mufflers, 2 helmets, 1 pair knee caps.

ROYAL COLONIAL INSTITUTE

CIGARETTE FUND.

Further subscriptions are required if friends desire to send Argentine cigarettes to volunteers at the front and in training camps. Subscriptions should be sent without delay to Mr. Basil Gwyn, 278 Calle Balcarce. Shipments now made will arrive about Christmas. The first lot were much appreciated, as proved by many letters received from volunteers, the following two being typical of many others received.

"I have just received this morning your magnificent 'recuerdo' in the shape of a box (10 packets) cigarettes which are very welcome indeed as Argentine cigarettes are by no means easy to procure, and not to mention the fact the pleasure given in being remembered by friends in Argentina. With very many thanks, Yours faithfully,—C. R. TISDALL, 1st Battalion Irish Guards, Guards Brigade, B.E.F."

"I beg to acknowledge receipt of the package of Argentine cigarettes so kindly forwarded by our friends in Buenos Aires. It is a real treat to have an enjoyable smoke again, and nothing could have been more acceptable than this reminder that we are not forgotten by our friends out there. I would ask you to convey to Buenos Aires my sincere thanks for the very welcome gift. Yours faithfully, — J. SMITH WILSON, (Corporal) A Coy., 22nd Bat. Royal Fusiliers, Bhurtpore Barracks, Tidworth, Hants."

Mrs. Ricketts, 4 pairs socks, 2 pairs knee caps.

G.F.S. members in Alberdi, 1 pair socks.

Mrs. A. Logan, 3 pair socks.

Hurlingham, 1 pair socks.

Mrs. Saunders, 1 pair socks.

Mrs. Owen, 2 pairs socks.

Parcel for the Belgian refugees: Mrs. Ricketts, Miss Ricketts, Mrs. P. Brown, Miss Tassie Paton, G.F.S. members in Alberdi, Miss Annie Green (Vedia), the British Society.

Parcel for Queen Mary's Guild: Seven members in Belgrano: Mrs. Ricketts, Miss Ricketts.

Prince of Wales's Fund.

Previously acknowledged. $40,332.20

Miss F. M. Brown (result word competition) . . . 62.00

Mrs. Anthony Walker . . . 10.00

Subscriptions August and September . . . 2,465.00

$42,869.20

Pipe and Tobacco Fund.

Previously acknowledged. $1070.20

Collected by Mrs. Withington . . . 61.00

$1,131.20

Belgian Relief Fund.

Previously acknowledged. $2854.65

Miss Inez Garrett (raffle of picture) . . . 100.00

$2954.65

Officers' Families' Fund.

Previously acknowledged. $2854.65

Mr. Duncan Munro . . . 40.00

Mrs. John Runnacles (eggs and chickens) . . . 30.00

Miss Gregg (raffle of miniature) . . . 242.00

Hurlingham Ladies' Golf Competition . . . 32.00

Mrs. Paterson . . . 6.00

Donation from Irish Bachelors' Ball . . . 165.75

$6809.40

British Red Cross Fund.

Previously acknowledged. $1737.95

Mr. Duncan Munro . . . 40.00

Dance at Plaza Hotel on Aug. 26 . . . 1245.00

Festival at Palais de Glace Cakes for September . . . 1724.95

10.40

Mrs. John Runnacles' sale of eggs, etc. . . . 37.10

Mrs. Seward and Miss Holmes Brown, Belgrano Tennis Tournament . . . 150.00

Donation from Misterio Cigarette Co. . . . 250.00

Miss Olga Bulman . . . 3.00

$5198.40

RED CROSS FUNDS

ACKNOWLEDGMENT OF DONATIONS.

(To the Editor)

Sir,—I would feel very much obliged if you would kindly acknowledge through your valuable columns the following amounts I have received towards the Funds of this Society:—

Already acknowledged . . .	£200
Already acknowledged . . .	$11,523.20
From Mrs. Sara Murray Hudson, being proceeds of Entertainment on Rosario Golf Links . . .	202.00
Per N. H. Neilson Esq. (Names and individual amounts as per List attached)	216.63
	$11,941.83

and sundry anonymous amounts. Total £258.16.4

Anticipating my best thanks.

Yours, etc.

F. CHEVALLIER BOUTELL, Representative of the British Red Cross Society in Argentina.

LIST OF SUBSCRIPTIONS TO THE "BRITISH RED CROSS SOCIETY."

(Collected by N. H. Neilson.)

Captains :	Steamers :	$
Murray	Winlaton . . .	1.00
Clarke	Dunbar . . .	5.00
Jas. Atkinson	Don Arturo . . .	10.00
Cherry	England . . .	10.00
Moss	Kelvindale . . .	10.00
Harding	Trevessa . . .	5.00
Tod	Fred. Knight . . .	5.00
Lowry	Penhale . . .	5.00
Park	Sahara . . .	5.00
Smith	Kassala . . .	3.00
Hurst	Helmsloch . . .	3.00
Prince	Corby . . .	5.00
Watson	Cloutsham . . .	2.00
McGill	Orteric . . .	5.00
Ward	Hartlepool . . .	5.00
Brooke	Star of Ireland . . .	3.00
Owen	North Wales . . .	3.00
Rees	Pennine Range . . .	3.00
Shirley	Colingham . . .	10.00
Geo. G. Davidson	Trevessa . . .	2.00
Ivor Matthews	Trevessa . . .	2.00
Harold Hitchman	. . .	1.00
G. Mayochi	. . .	5.00
Pallavidini Guiseppes	. . .	1.00
Rodolfo Bagnasio	. . .	1.00
H. W. Warskitt	. . .	5.00
Juan Olivari	. . .	3.63
N. H. Neilson	. . .	50.00
Bill Sykes	. . .	2.00
Dr. Sibbald	. . .	10.00
F. Richards	. . .	5.00
William Neilson	. . .	10.00
Arthur Woods	. . .	1.00
Francisco Rivano (hijo)	. . .	1.00
W. Beckford	. . .	2.00
Thomas Moore	. . .	2.00
Proprietor of "Cabin" Rest.	. . .	5.00
Fred. E. Hiscocks	. . .	5.00
Geo. Stanley	. . .	5.00

BRITISH RED CROSS FUND

A LA PLATA DONATION.

(To the Editor).

Sir,—Kindly permit me to acknowledge the following from: Mr. Wm. B. Hunt, Puerto La Plata—the sum of $721—being nett proceeds (less $50 to the Seafarer's Tobacco Fund) of a Smoking Concert held on the evening of 9th instant at Central Dock, Ensenada.

I beg to express my gratitude to the subscribers for this excellent addition to the Fund of the Society I represent in this country.

Yours, etc.,

F. CHEVALLIER BOUTELL, Representative of the British Red Cross Society in Argentina.

"HERALD" MOTOR AMBULANCE

MR CHEVALLIER BOUTELL'S THANKS

TO OUR READERS

Those readers of THE HERALD who contributed to the fund for the provision of a motor-ambulance for use at the front will be gratified at the following letter of appreciation received by the Managing Editor from Mr. F. H. Chevallier Boutell, yesterday:

"I have received yours of even date enclosing me cheque for $6,671.80, representing the amount actually collected to date by you in aid of THE HERALD Motor Ambulance—and note you have $350 to collect in order to complete the $7,021.80 recorded as the total of your list.

"I quite agree with you the best car procurable and fully equipped is to be obtained, and I will see this is duly carried out to the minutest detail.

"I will also see that a photo is taken of the car and a sufficient number of copies sent out, so that your readers may have a still further opportunity, over and above the satisfaction of a tangible proof of their generosity, of perhaps adding another contribution to the Society's Funds.

"I now take the opportunity of expressing to you my keen appreciation of the admirable way in which my suggestion has been handled by you; I consider the appeal you issued has been carried through in a most masterly manner which can only reflect in a brilliant degree on the enthusiasm you have roused in the hearts of your readers.

"It is one thing to ask for what you want and to calmly sit down and wait for it to come along, but it is another when you set your mind to establish a record, which you have, and direct the sympathy of your readers into a right and noble channel.

"I am quite certain the British Red Cross Society will appreciate your efforts as highly as I do; and I beg to thank you most sincerely for all that you have done.

"You have been able to show our good old country that, though 6,000 miles separate us from Motherland, we CAN unite and do our little bit, so that in every way we endeavour to render aid to those who are fighting for our King, our Country, and for us, particularly at a moment when every dollar is claimed to soothe the never ending cry, 'For Pity's sake, help us in our hour of need.'

Believe me with my most profound gratitude,

Truly yours,

F. H. CHEVALLIER BOUTELL.

Representative of the British Red Cross Society in Argentina.

NO NEUTRALS!

(To the Editor)

Sir,—I am sending you a copy of the "Sphere" of September 4, which contains a striking article by a correspondent who interviewed General Foch, one of the best French generals. I was particularly struck by the following statement by General Foch which I read after reading your leading article of Sunday in which you expressed the same opinion:—"One must take sides. One cannot be really neutral in this war. Every country is interested in the result, either actively now or later on, when the struggle is decided. One cannot be disinterested; one must be partisan. You must remember that the Germans are not only fighting against an army, they are fighting against nations; trying to destroy their past, their present, even their future."

Yours, etc.

AMERICAN.

ANOTHER AEROPLANE

Funds Urgently Needed

NO. 1. NOW NEARING COMPLETION

The following is an extract from a letter received from the League of the Empire:

London, Sept. 14, 1915.

"We cabled at once to you saying that the aeroplane was most gratefully accepted by H.M. Government, and that an official acceptance would follow. The aeroplane chosen is 'Fighter, Mark I.'

"It was felt better not to purchase any particular machine gun for this aeroplane because it depends so entirely on the special work of the aeroplane what gun or guns it takes up with it on any particular expedition.

"The permission to call the aeroplane 'River Plate' was at once granted, and a brass plate will be placed on it, bearing the name and the donor. The name is always placed on the aeroplanes in this way now because the former way of painting the name on only made an extra mark for the enemy's gunners.

"A very early delivery is expected, possibly in a week, and at most, I believe, in three weeks. We shall therefore be glad to have the name of the lady who should christen it.

"This ceremony will take place at Farnborough."

No. 1, is therefore on the point of being completed and put into commission so that the British Community here can feel that they have added one more unit to the aerial fleet which is operating against the Zeppelins and submarines.

Owing to what were considered by the Committee more pressing appeals in the shape of Motor ambulances and entertainments on behalf of the Red Cross Society, the subscriptions for No. 2, have not been brought prominently before the public, but the collections have been going on steadily and quietly and from the lists published in yesterday's papers, the amount subscribed has already reached $12,000 m/legal. The Committee of the British Society consider that the moment has now arrived when an urgent appeal to the public to subscribe the balance of $14,000 m/l. will meet with an immediate and successful response. As it is intended to stop at No. 2, those who have not subscribed towards No. 1, should take an early opportunity of sending in their contributions.

All subscriptions should be forwarded to the Honorary Treasurer, Mr. W. Watson, Calle Cangallo 536, who will also be pleased to provide collecting lists.

BRAVERY UNDER FIRE

ARGENTINE VOLUNTEER RECOMMENDED FOR MILITARY CROSS.

A cablegram from London announces that Sec.-Lieut. Joe Henry, of the 1st Middlesex Regiment, has been recommended for the Military Cross.

Sec.-Lieut. Henry was born in Buenos Aires twenty years ago, and is a son of Mr. H. Henry, of the firm of Hume Hermanos. He went to France on March 17 with the second draft of the London Scottish, and was present at the battle of Neuve Chapelle. Subsequently he was gazetted to the 1st Battalion of the Middlesex Regiment.

No details are yet available of the precise act—during the recent fighting—for which Sec. Lieut. Henry has earned commendation; but it is known that his battalion lost fifteen of a total of eighteen officers, and that two of the rank and file have been recommended for the Victoria Cross.

BAHIA BLANCA NEWS

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT].

October 10.

Distinguished Visitors.

On October 14, a visit is to be paid here and to Port Militar, by the Ministers of Public Works, Finance and Agriculture (Drs. Moyano, Calderon, and Oliver), after which they are to proceed to Neuquen and Rio Negro in order to visit the irrigation works that are under construction for the Government, the contractors of which are the Southern Railway. The ministers are to be accompanied by several deputies.

Departure of More Italian Reservists.

Some forty more reservists are leaving here to-night by the Pringles train in order to proceed on board the s.s. "Cordoba," on Oct. 14.

Items in Brief.

A resolution has been recently passed by the Intendente here that no limelight or cinematograph apparatus shall be allowed to be put up in the Municipal theatre at any time.

The sale of the camp on the Tres Arroyos line which was announced for next Sunday has now been postponed, as the land has been sold privately for $170 the hectarea.

The wheat market is very quiet again and the prices paid now range about $10.80-90, and for inferior quality there is no demand at all. Oats are selling for $6.90, being dry, clean and with a specific weight of 47 ks. Barley is fetching $6.30-40.

On Friday last the war ships at Port Militar left there on their trip to Port Madryn, on which journey they are to take part in manoeuvres. The trip to Port Madryn is to take twenty days, during which the crews of the ship will be instructed in naval tactics and shooting.

District Notes.

A "remate judicial" took place recently at the estancia of "Los Cerrillos" near to Victoria, and the following prices were obtained: 4400 cows sold by the mob, $37, steers $89, calves $60, Lincoln ewes $9.30, mules $37, and horses $13.

Thanks to the activity of the police the thefts of cattle and sheep in the region of Olavarria have been somewhat lessened lately. Last month whilst out in his district, the sub-comisario with his agents, met a man driving 95 sheep along the road, and as the man's character was not too good, the ownership of these animals was gone into. It was then found that 20 of the sheep, valued at $264, had been stolen from Laprida, and the rest from the estancia of Rocca Hnos. near there a few nights previously. The man was taken to Laprida and afterwards sent on to here to be tried, the sheep being restored to their lawful owners. The mayor-domo of the estancia of Señor Anchorena, has informed the police at Saldungaray that several young calves valued by him at $600, have been stolen out of one of the potreros there, but it is not known who were the thieves.

On October 16, a special train will be run from Olavarria to Azul, as there is to be a Rural Show held at the latter town on this date, as well as a special race meeting in order to celebrate the first anniversary of the foundation of the Jockey Club there.

The Street Pillar Boxes.

Notice has been issued by the postal authorities of the hours for the clearing of the pillar boxes for correspondence in the streets here. Boxes 1, 2, and 3 situated at the corners of calles Chiclana and Alsina, Estomba and Rodeau, and Saavedra and Donado are emptied at 5, 6.30, 9.30 and 10.5 in the mornings, and 12.30, 1.30, and 5.30 in the afternoons, and also on Tuesdays and Fridays they are emptied at 6 p.m. Boxes 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12 and 13, placed in the Southern station, calles G. Paz and San Martin, Brown and Ing. Luiggi, Donado, and Chili, Holdich and Vieytes, Atacama, and Juan Molina, Rondeau and Castelli, Estomba and J. Molina, Alvarado and 19 de Mayo, and in the Pacific station will be cleared at 5 and 9.30 a.m. and 12.30 and 5 p.m. and on Tuesdays and Fridays at 6 p.m.

Mapelli's "Gift."

The gift of the electrical appliances that were to have been presented to the Municipal hospital here by the hypnotist, Señor Mapelli, has now been withdrawn by that gentleman in spite of all the laudable things that have been published about the generous donation in the local papers. The reason given for the withdrawal of the apparatus, after promising it to the hospital, is that there was very little interest taken in it by the medical profession, and the public in general, as on two occasions the performance had to be suspended on account of the smallness of the audience, and the theatre had not always been obtainable in accordance with the arrangements made. In reply to the letter sent, the Intendente informed him that he was quite at liberty to do this, although he had stated both to the public as well as the press that this donation would be made.

Crops Sown.

At the beginning of the season it was thought that there would be more land sown this year than last, but owing to the dry weather this has not been so, and in accordance with a recent statement made out, it appears that 3,746,932 hectareas have been sown this year against 3,874,545 hectareas in 1914. On the different railway lines in this district the following amounts have been sown:

Southern—1,149,830 wheat; 696,875 oats; 42,350 barley; 920 rye; and 540 birdseed.

Pacific—1,139,702 wheat; 167,092 oats; 8,457 barley; 10,045 rye.

Rosario to P. Belgrano — 164,200 wheat; 30,750 oats; 7,086 barley; 200 rye.

Western — 261,150 wheat; 45,070 oats; 1,800 barley; 5,100 rye.

Other parts—12,300 wheat; 3,470 oats.

Totals—2,727,182 hectareas wheat; 943,258 hectareas oats; 59,687 hectareas barley; 16,265 hectareas rye; 540 hectareas birdseed.

In Coronel Suarez, from whence there have been very good reports of the rainfall lately, there are sown in the district 29,000 hectareas of wheat and 16,000 of oats, and in the district of Chasico on the Pacific line, the amount sown is 32,000 hectareas of wheat, 2,500 of oats and 500 of barley. Rain is reported to have fallen in the district of Toay recently, where it was so badly needed.

HOMAGE TO LATE PRESIDENT

DEMONSTRATION AT THE RECOLETA.

On Sunday at 2.30, the Recoleta Cemetery was the scene of an act of homage and respect to the memory of the late President, Dr. Roque Saenz Peña. The celebration was a local one, and entirely simple, being a demonstration of gratitude from the schools of that district, to which the late Chief Magistrate was a benefactor, also the Union Vecinal, the Social Club and other bodies.

Several gentlemen spoke in praise of the lasting benefits which Dr. Saenz Peña conferred upon the nation, and a large number of wreaths were deposited upon the grave by the children of the various schools.

CONCORDIA NEWS

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT].

Oct. 6, 1915.

Red Cross Funds.

The Garden Party given on Saturday by the Women's Diocesan Association in aid of the Red Cross Fund turned out a complete success. The various competitions were well supported. The mixed tennis tournament was won by Miss Ida Birdsall and Mr. Neville; the bridge competition was won by Miss Koncke and Mr. Burgess; the ladies' golf putting was won by Mrs. Sketch and the men's by Mr. Nelson Dickinson. Mrs. Sketch's score was 15 for the course and Mr. Dickinson's 11, which was considered extremely good. In the evening, Mrs. Stuart, at the request of Mr. Sketch, kindly consented to give the prizes. Congratulations are due to the various ladies who looked after the refreshments. As the day was a magnificent one, a great many people turned out and enjoyed the affair, the gardens and lawns being highly appreciated. The receipts in aid of the fund resulted over $150.

Patriotic Dance.

The dance given by the Concordia Dance and Concert Committee in the Argentine Social Club on Saturday night, was well attended. Although the orchestra could not turn up for an hour or so after the appointed time, Mr. Collis filled in the programme with some well executed pieces on the piano. As soon as the band did appear, every one settled down to enjoy the lovely music played. It is satisfactory to report that the takings were greater than expected in spite of counter attractions, and the Committee can be satisfied that their efforts have turned out financially favourably. A meeting will soon be called when a final balance will be struck and the money over forwarded to whatever Patriotic Fund may be decided on by the Committee.

Wedding.

The wedding of Miss Minnie Birdsall and Mr. William Kellard took place on Wednesday night in the Protestant Church, the officiating clergyman being the Rev. M. Bate. The popularity of the happy couple was well demonstrated by the large number present to witness the ceremony, nearly all the British community attending the service. Mr. and Mrs. Kellard leave for Cordoba for the honeymoon on Oct. 7.

PAMPA CENTRAL

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT].

Telen, Sept. 26.

The Drought and Camp Fires.

The drought continues in this district, and the sheep stocks are suffering terribly. The mortality is heavy, and the marking of lambs will not be a 50 per cent. average. Shearing has commenced, but is not yet general. Owing to the dry state of the pasture, camp fires are very frequent, and the loss of live stock in some cases has been most serious. One fire extended over a length of 35 leagues, burning everything in front of it, horses, mules, cattle, sheep and fences. In some instances the fires are started accidentally, but in others they are caused by arrendatarios burning rough camp and the fire getting beyond control.

Much inconvenience is experienced in Colonia Emilio Mitre, owing to the non-residence of the "Juzgado." Although he has an office and a notice on the door giving his daily office hours, he is very seldom in attendance. Many complaints are made, but nothing is done to remedy the inconvenience.

NOTES FROM PARAGUAY

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT].

Locusts.

Asuncion, Oct. 5.

When the fine downpour of rain came last week everyone thought Paraguay was saved; but if it was thought we "had touched bottom" in the way of misfortunes, it was a mistake. The rain was closely followed by clouds of locusts, and they have set to work in earnest; they have not visited Paraguay for seven years—maybe more—and to tell the truth, many have wondered why they did not come to this "garden spot." Not that they were wanted or needed, but simply because there is so much greenstuff for them to eat. Very few of the trees or plants lose their leaves in winter time. The coming of this pest will mean misery and disaster to many a hard working Paraguayan, and foreigner also. The market has had few vegetables for months past. Even mediocre, always plentiful, was getting scarce on account of the drought. Then the locusts come—a sad look-out for Paraguay.

Tennis.

There is no abatement in the enthusiasm for this game, notwithstanding the warm days we have had lately. On the contrary, the courts are more crowded than ever.

Off to the Front.

Last Tuesday's steamer carried another volunteer to the war, Mr. T. Duke. Paraguay will soon not have an English bachelor left.

Concert

The chief social event of last week was a most successful concert given by the "Daughters of Mary," in the theatre on Friday evening.

Visitors.

There have been a number of Americans up here lately. Dr. Albert Hale, for one, and several gentlemen in charge of a motor-truck, which they ran around the streets of Asuncion. The streets were bad enough before, but they have not been improved by this heavy motor.

A Mr. and Mrs. Reed, on their way to the Yguzu Falls, have been staying a week in Asuncion. They have been entertained at tea and dinner by Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Wiley.

